EDITORIAL COMMENT

WHERE DO YOU GET YOUR RELIGION?

Some people get their religion from teachers who are narrow, fanatical, bigoted; others get theirs from books and periodicals that are prejudiced, illogical, intolerant; still others get theirs by hearsay, picking it up from miscellaneous sources; some depend altogether upon what has come down to them from the past as a kind of tradition. All this may be very well in certain cases, but it results too often in a false conception of the religious life and a faulty practice of religious principles. We have an authoritative Book which contains all the essential teachings of a Divine Person, which teachings we may comprehend in every necessary sense through the ever-present help of the Holy Spirit. It is to this Book that we should go for our religious instruction, and it is this Person whom we should take as our teacher, and it is this Spirit upon whom we should rely for guidance in all the difficult ways of life. We may be helped by what men say and do, but we are saved by the power of God. It is from Him that we must get our full knowledge of ultimate truth.

IT BENEFITS THE BUYER.

We were greatly interested recently in reading an account of the workings of the Co-operative Buying Association, organized by the employees of the Custom House in New Orleans. The Association is composed exclusively of employees of the Custom House who take one or more shares of stock at $5 each, thereby having the privilege of buying groceries at the wholesale cost plus the expense of running the store. The saving thus effected ranges from 15 to 40 per cent—worth while in such days as these. It is hoped to add a clothing department in the near future. This is a kind of co-operation that appeals to us—generally it is the seller who receives the benefit.

AN INSTRUMENT OF DEATH.

The automobile is generally thought of as a means of pleasure, but it is altogether too often an instrument of death. Recently published statistics for the city of New Orleans show that 19 people were killed in automobile accidents in 1919, and 29 were seriously injured. The total number of accidents was 317. Over against this record, the police reports show only 37 arrests for violation of traffic regulations. The police authorities attribute the large number of accidents to the increased number of automobiles in the city, and to the growing congestion of traffic in the business section. Others, who are not especially concerned about finding excuses for reckless drivers, suggest that the lack of quick and adequate punishment for the violators of the traffic laws is responsible for the situation. We are inclined to the latter view, though we do not, of course, overlook the fact that the most deplorable accidents are sometimes unavoidable. For ourselves, we always "stop, look, and listen" before daring to cross a street.

A CHRISTMAS GIFT THAT WILL HELP MILLIONS.

On Christmas morning, announcement was made that Mr. John D. Rockefeller had given $100,000,000 for the advancement of medical science and for the better support of college professors. It is easy to say that a man of Mr. Rockefeller's wealth could easily afford to make such a gift, which is true, perhaps, but it does not detract from its value as an expression of a genuine interest in the welfare of humanity and as an example of the generous application of the doctrine of stewardship. Of the amount given, $50,000,000 is to be used to supplement the salaries of professors in colleges that meet certain requirements laid down by the Board which administers other funds given by Mr. Rockefeller to education. We cannot think of any better cause to which the money might be applied—unless it be the support of superannuated ministers. The nation is passing through a critical period in its educational work. We are dependent upon our schools and colleges for a generation of young men and young women qualified for positions of leadership in difficult times. No school is any better than the teachers it employs, and good teachers nowadays cannot be had for a song. We have previously called attention to the acute situation existing in our public schools because of inadequate salaries; there is a real danger of our children's having to be trained by inexperienced and incompetent teachers because we are not willing to pay enough to get better ones. Teaching, as such, is a noble and attractive calling—but men and women cannot afford to enter it with the sure prospect of want staring them in the face. The hope of material reward may not be the highest motive in the world, but it is one of the most powerful, and it actuates some of our greatest men. It is small wonder, therefore, that some of our brightest young people turn from teaching to commercial pursuits. It is true in education as in everything else—we must pay for what we get.

THE PRACTICE OF BROTHERHOOD POSSIBLE NOW.

The doctrine of brotherhood has often been thought of as a kind of impracticable ideal toward which men should occasionally cast their eyes. Its realization is looked upon as a far-off event, too distant to be taken into consideration in the practical affairs of every-day life. Such a view is altogether erroneous. The doctrine of brotherhood is the most practical principle upon which we may rely for happiness and prosperity in this present life, as well as in the life to come. It is the only foundation upon which we may build a civilization that will outlast the changing order of political and industrial and social expediency. It is not an unattainable ideal to mock us by its remoteness and taunt us with its beauty; it is a habit of life that we can practice every day. All we need to do is to begin to live it now.

THE TEST OF ABILITY.

The real test of a man's ability is not in his doing well what somebody else has done or can do, but in his doing that thing just a little better than anybody else has ever done it. The "dead level of mediocrity" is crowded with men who are doing things just as other people do them—no better, no worse—while the summits of the mountains of achievement are occupied by the men who were big enough and strong enough to break away from the commonplace. A little job becomes a great undertaking when the right man gets hold of it. A small country circuit is as fine a field for the development of real ability as is the great city church. We have an idea that the day is not far distant when it will be recognized that our strongest men are those who can take a little field and see a great opportunity in it. No man ever got rich by looking for the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow—but many a farmer has achieved substantial success by tilling the acres around him. Hard work is the alchemist's charm that turns baser metals into gold. Difficulties are simply the whetstones that sharpen the edge of determination. The man who wills is the man who may.

JUST A LITTLE QUICKER.

The newspapers are giving sensational reports of deaths due to the drinking of wood alcohol. According to recent figures, 137 persons have died since July 1 as a result of drinking the deadly poison, and 149 are blind or seriously ill. At first, it was thought that the victims drank the poison knowingly, hoping that they would escape any ill effects, but the present suspicion is that dealers are deliberately supplying a drink that they know will result fatally. We are led to make two remarks: In the first place, wood alcohol is just a little quicker in its action than grain alcohol—the latter will kill in time; and, in the second place, the liquor dealers are running true to form. They have made great boast of their respectability, their willingness to keep the law, and of their rights as reputable citizens of the country—but their main object in life is to make money. They know there are people who have become such slaves to alcohol that they will drink anything that produces an alcoholic effect—and they are willing to supply their demands, even if it does mean a quick and horrible death. Thus again the liquor traffic is made to appear in its true light.

TRY A SMILE.

Things do not always go just as we should like to see them, and then we are likely to complain; people have a strange way of saying and doing unpleasant things, and our tempers become ruffled; our friends sometimes misunderstand us, and we retaliate harshly. Then the whole world seems topsy-turvy, and we make ourselves and those around us miserable. A smile is like the sunshine—it drives away fogs and clouds and shadows. Maybe a smile to-day would help us and others—suppose we try it?

THE HELP OF ALL NEEDED.

To the Methodists of North Mississippi:

As many of you know, the North Mississippi Conference during its recent session at Aberdeen launched a movement to raise an endowment of $250,000, which is to be safely invested, and the interest on which is to be used annually to aid in caring for its superannuated preachers and the widows and orphans of its deceased ministers. This movement will be under the general direction of a committee chosen by the Conference Board of Finance, which committee includes the eight presiding elders of the Conference. Rev. A. C. McCorkle, one of our efficient pastors, who is regarded as specially fitted to lead in this great undertaking, was taken from the regular work, in which his services were much needed, that he might give his entire time to its promotion. The Methodists of North Mississippi have never addressed themselves to a nobler task than this. The circuit riders have long been the distinctive glory of Methodism. Their sacrifices, sufferings, unselfish labors, and magnificent achievements constitute the brightest pages of our church's history. But while they have been the chief builders of our beloved Zion, most of them have been very meagerly supported, and have come to old age poor in material possessions, and often without even the necessaries of life. Dr. Albert Taylor Bledsoe, in one of his illuminating Review articles, observes that, according to one authority, Methodism during the first eighteen years of its existence in America received from England financial assistance amounting to only about $250. If the curtain of the past could be lifted upon the inner lives of the itinerants of that time, what heroic self-denial we should see!

Nor has self-sacrifice yet ceased to be characteristic of Methodist preachers and their families. With the advance of civilization and the coming of a more thickly settled country and better facilities for travel, their hardships are not as great as were those of their predecessors; but thousands of them are yet receiving salaries so small that they and the members of their households have to stint and practice the most rigid economy to get along and keep out of debt. We wonder if our laity has anything like an adequate realization of what an annoying inconvenience and burden it is to have to break up home and pack and move every two or three or four years—especially when the call of the church frequently carries the pastor and his wife and children far into the interior, in slow-moving vehicles, over muddy roads, only to find, upon reaching their destination, a scantily furnished parsonage, with no fuel provided to drive away the biting cold of winter. Nothing but the constraining love of Christ could keep men voluntarily wedded to a calling imposing such exactions.

An examination of our Conference Minutes for the year 1918 (those of the year just passed are not yet available) shows that of the pastors serving the 170 charges of the North Mississippi Conference, 86 received for their work that year less than $1,000. And of these 86, fifty-seven received less than $700; and of these 57, twenty-nine were paid less than $500. Surely, in the face of these figures, it will not be argued that these men (about one-half the active workers of the Conference) can live and put by anything for old age or the days of misfortune. True, some of them received small appropriations from the Conference Board of Missions in addition to the amounts indicated; but these donations were not sufficient to alter the convincing logic of these statistics.

In the year 1918 there were fifty dependents looking to our Conference for financial aid. These included preachers who, by reason of the infirmities of age, were unable to continue longer in the active service; other ministers who, because of ill health, were not in a condition to work, and the widows and children of itinerants who had passed to their eternal reward. Not one of these claimants received more than $300, and most of them received considerably less than that. This, doubtless, is a fair illustration of the record that we have been making.

Several weighty considerations should impel us to carry speedily forward this movement looking to a better condition of things that has been projected by our Conference:

1. Our superannuates and the other claimants upon our beneficence deserve a better support. The service which these veterans have rendered, upon barely living incomes, justly entitles them and those dependent upon them to this. Though no appeal may come from their lips, their manifest needs speak to us more eloquently than words.

2. An adequate superannuate endowment fund would contribute to the efficiency of our ministerial service. It is well known that brethren are often continued in the active work longer than is best either for them or the Master's cause, because to superannuate them under the present conditions has meant to reduce them and their dependent loved ones to a state but little, if any, short of actual want. But with a living support assured, any brother could easily be retired as soon as the best interests of the church might require. That which had made the superannuate relation so much feared and dreaded, would thus be done away with. It would no longer be the bete noire of the itinerant's career.

3. For its own sake, our Conference needs to raise this endowment. There may possibly have been some excuse for not doing more for our retired veterans in the days when the Methodists were a primitive and comparatively poor people; but there is certainly none now. Taken as a whole, the followers of Wesley in America are as well-to-do as the communicants of any other church. No ecclesiasticism in this Southland has a more thrifty membership than our own. Other denominations—the Episcopalians, the Presbyterians, the Baptists, and the Northern Methodists—have the worthy cause of caring for their retired clergymen on their hearts, and are accumulating large sums of money for this purpose. We, too, undoubtedly need to be reaching forth to larger things in this direction. There has been some talk of taking $5,000,000 from the surplus of our Centenary funds and using it as a superannuate endowment. As we see it, there is little profit in such talk. In the first place, such funds would be available only after years of waiting; and, after all, there might be no surplus. To pin our faith to such a hope might prove to be only a delusion. We cannot afford to let the work to help our honored heroes be the tail of anything.

It is high time that we were up and striving to do something definite and adequate toward meeting this exigency. Far too long ours has been a laggard Conference with respect to this sacred duty. If we mistake not, the Louisiana Conference, a much weaker body than ours, is now able to pay each of its superannuates more than $500 per annum. The Mississippi Conference, which is about equal to ours in strength, has made a very creditable beginning in the way of securing an endowment, and for years has been making quarterly payments to its claimants. And other Conferences are well to the front in this belated forward movement. Shall we permit ourselves to dawdle and trail longer? There is not a civilized nation on the earth that would use men in its army at the lowest pay that they could subsist upon, and in old age cast them out unprovided for. Shall Southern Methodism move upon a lower plane of benevolence than the secular governments of the world?

I make bold to affirm that however much we may give to missions, education, church extension, hospitals, and orphanages, we shall not fully have discharged our financial obligations until we have rightly met this appealing claim. Great will be our reproach if we disregard this urgent call, while in this day of costly living those who have spent their strength in behalf of the church of Christ and those near and dear to them are left to feel the chill and pinch of penury. We have been made happy to note that the salaries of many of our active pastors have been commendably advanced, but how much have the allowances of our superannuates been increased?

No one should hesitate to give to this cause for fear that the money secured will not be wisely invested and administered. Every dollar contributed will go into the hands of the bonded treasurer of the Conference Board of Finance. The Committee directing this movement embraces a number of the foremost business men of North Mississippi. On the Executive Committee of three are Hon. H. L. Wilkinson, one of the most successful lawyers and planters in Bolivar County, and Mr. W. T. Reeves, a leading wholesale merchant of Tupelo. When our endowment is secured, if we desire to do so, we can get our General Board of Finance in St. Louis to handle it for us, paying us the yearly interest earned; or, if we prefer, we can turn it over to the General Board of Church Extension as a loan fund, so that while bringing us the annual interest for the retired preachers of our Conference, it would also be helping to build houses of worship for our church all over the land.

While I feel sure that every preacher who can, will count it a privilege to contribute to this endowment fund, it is chiefly upon our laymen that we must rely for the success of this splendid enterprise. It was laymen who evinced the keenest interest in this movement at Aberdeen, and who were most insistent that it should be launched without delay—a fact which was much to their credit, and which gives us courage and inspiration as we set our hands to this seemingly large task.

We urge our pastors to give Brother McCorkle access to their pulpits and their hearty co-operation as he endeavors to carry forward the important work with which he has been entrusted. And let all our people remember him and the cause which he represents in their prayers. Both he and the Executive Committee of the Campaign Directors will be glad at any time to have suggestions concerning this movement and how best to promote it.

May I add, in conclusion, that I have not presumed to write this statement upon my own election, but that I have done so at the instance of the Campaign Directors, who held a meeting at Winona, Miss., on December 13, 1919? However, this is a subject of which my heart is full, and it has given me pleasure to try to complpy with this request of my fellow-workers.

Fraternally yours,

R. A. MEEK,
Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Campaign Directors.

Sardis, Miss., Dec. 22, 1919.

WITHOUT WHOM, NOTHING.

By Rev. S. A. Neblett.

To make effective the missionary enlargement authorized for the next five years by the last General Conference and approved by the church in the Centenary Drive, it is estimated that seven hundred and thirty-five men and women missionaries are needed. For the seven foreign fields in which Southern Methodism is working, three hundred and eighty-seven missionaries are needed.

Men and women might carry on missionary operations, and perhaps evangelize the world, without any organized board to support them—at least, there was some material progress made during the first three centuries of the Christian era without any very extensive organization to finance it. But all the organization and money and equipment and transportation facilities in the world combined are absolutely useless without consecrated men and women. These latter are God's indispensables.

Churches, Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues and individuals have, through the Bureau of Specials, authorized and directed that some or all of the money they subscribed during the Centenary Drive last May be used for the support of one hundred and fifty-four missionaries, and other American workers, distributed among the several fields as follows: Mexico, 26; Cuba, 16; Brazil, 23; Africa, 6; China, 45; Korea, 28; Japan, 10. A considerable number have been taken for the home field, and applications are in for European specials as soon as definite assignment can be made. The figures given above are for assignments made up to November 15.

The situation briefly stated is just this: The call comes from our foreign fields for a stated number of men and women; the church has considered the call, pronounced it timely, and subscribed all the money necessary to enable them to go as planned. The money is being paid in and will be available January 1, 1920. There is no guesswork about any of this. The work is all definitely cut out and waiting. Materials are on the ground—it is not a case of making brick without straw. Where are the men and women workers?

The whole Centenary program depends on them. It will be carried through gloriously if qualified men and women offer themselves right away. It will be hindered, delayed, or defeated, according as workers fail to offer themselves or delay in so doing.

Having had more than fifteen years' experience as a missionary of our church on a foreign field, and having been for nearly two years engaged in the Centenary movement at the home base, I may speak positively concerning this situation without being considered impertinent or presuming. We need at once more than one hundred and fifty of the best prepared men and women, college graduates if possible, to be found in the South, who will turn away right now from whatever the world offers them and say to the Board of Missions: "Here am I. Send me to the Congo, to China, to Cuba, anywhere I can serve best."

Sophomore and junior volunteers will not answer. They will be needed later, and must be cultivated assiduously. Young persons just entering normal school or medical college are not available for 1920. But there are hundreds of young men with their A. B., B. D., Ph. D., etc., some with three or four years' experience in the pastorate, others succeeding as teachers, lawyers, physicians, or in other professions, whom their Lord and their church are calling. Scores of young women who are prepared, capable, and experienced, hold membership in our church. It is up to them to make the next move in the Centenary game, and to make it promptly.

One missionary from each presiding elder's district in 1920 will make the Centenary program a success. Perhaps there are a few districts that have no available man, but they are few. The wise presiding elder, merging the lesser interest of his own district into the larger interest of the whole church, will say to his most promising young preacher: "Have you considered the call to the mission fields? There's an urgent call. Go, and God speed you." The presiding elders can turn the scales and insure victory by encouraging the ones they feel are most efficient at home to let God have a chance at them for a foreign field.

Our college and high school faculties contain young men and women who are exactly qualified for an important place at the front. Mr. College President, be magnanimous, and suffer your faculty to be broken up in order that your brightest young professors may answer the church's call, just as preachers, teachers, lawyers and doctors answered our country's call for welfare workers last year. A word from you may supply the impulse needed. Will you speak it without delay?

Mothers and fathers, now is your chance to consummate a service for the Kingdom you began when you consecrated your babes to God by baptism a quarter of a century ago. If you will tell them what a great life investment is possible to them through service in the mission fields of the church, they will believe you and act accordingly.

REV. JOHN EVANS THOMAS.

By Geo. J. Leftwich.

Rev. John Evans Thomas, pastor for one year of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Aberdeen, Miss., died almost without warning early on Monday morning, November 3, after attending Sunday school and preaching two eloquent sermons and doing other church work on the Sunday preceding. He had written to his wife, who was in the hospital at Greenville, the morning of his death, had done some other office work, and went out, as he told his daughter, to the woodshed to split kindling for the Conference, which was only two weeks and two days ahead, preparation for which he was actively making. Not long afterwards some one spoke to him over the telephone, his daughter went out into the yard to call him, and found him lying on his face expiring.

Brother Thomas was nearly sixty-nine years old and, while one of the most unpretentious of the ministers of the North Mississippi Conference, he was, in many respects, a notable man, and a wonderfully useful and consecrated one, and when I use the last adjective I do not use it in a commonplace way. He had been a minister forty-three years and more; when he began, he was an invalid, yet, from riding the most remote circuits, he had risen to be a leader, filling with great efficiency the most important places, and remaining in old age in great favor and much in demand, and as enthusiastic and diligent in his work as when he began.

He was noted all over the Conference as a financier and for his ability to build churches, take collections, pay debts and help the needy. This accomplishment was due to his system and to his unremitting diligence and toil. His reputation as a financier was so high as to obscure his power as a preacher. But his congregation at Aberdeen immediately discovered that his preaching was of the highest quality. It was not sensational, or noisy, or oratorical, but it was fervently earnest and the preaching that people want, the ungarnished gospel in its application to men's tasks, difficulties, and sins. He taught men daily how to live, and exemplified it not only in his preaching but also in his living. No congregation could hear him for a year and not be greatly benefited. He made no apologies for the sins and shortcomings of his congregation—he told the unadorned truth, not offensively, but plainly. Some of his sayings are worth repeating. Several times during the year, in preaching on common honesty and dishonest gain, he said, "The door to Heaven is too narrow to admit a man with some one else's money in his pocket." One of the best sermons was on child training, and in this high art he told the parents how to behave, and not the children. "Don't lie to your children, or steal from them," he would say. "If you promise them a reward, give it to them, pay the debts you owe them as you would to a stranger. Teach them obedience and when they become adults they will be law-observing." He was a very plain preacher, but, plain as he was, he never wounded or left a sting.

The most outstanding characteristic of the man, after his diligence, was the simplicity of his life. He followed literally the Master's words, "Unless you become as a little child, you shall not enter the kingdom of heaven." He trusted God as simply and asked for all he received as confidently as any little child approached his mother. If a member of his congregation was ill, he called him by name and asked God to bring him back to health. If he wanted money for the orphans, he prayed for it and got it. If there was alienation between his members, he prayed for reconciliation and he talked to God about it. This child-likeness followed him everywhere. He sincerely wept with those in sorrow, and rejoiced in tears with those that rejoiced.

His industry was unusual. He was a deep and constant student of the Bible, and read other books, but not widely. He digressed little into literary fields, but a Scripture text served him for every point of an argument. With all of this, he found time to visit all over his field. Near nightfall, the only difference in his coming in from his work and the coming of the section hand or of any other laborer was that the latter frequently had on overalls and the pastor came wearing the garb of a business man. He came with tired feet and every mark of a well-spent day, but entered his home in gratitude and joy.

Speaking of the system with which he labored, the writer was discussing casually marriage fees, about which he had many amusing things to say. Soon thereafter he renewed the subject and said, "I have married as many people as most ministers and in my book I have set down the names of every one of them, the date and place of marriage, and the fee I received." He then gave the sum total of all the fees he had received during his ministry, which amounted to an average of $48 or $49 per year. He seemed to have listed likewise his converts. This detail he borrowed from his father, who before him was a successful minister, all of which goes to show the system and diligence that made his life a marked success.

On Sunday afternoon before his death, the writer called on him to discuss a Conference detail in which he had been asked to serve. The preacher digressed into his history and told of his natural aversion to the ministry and his years of resistance to the call. He told of his wrestling with God as did Jacob at Jabbok, and at last of his absolute surrender to God's will and of his unalloyed happiness thereafter. This conversation and his sermon Sunday night, the text of which was, "The Place of Many Mansions," were prophetic of the end. As I arose to leave he, with great exultation, said, "My report will show 100 per cent in the Centenary Collections, and everything must be 100 per cent. Every subscriber to the Centenary funds has paid or made provisions for payment, except one member who is sick, and I have raised his installment by contributions from others." And so with exultation he clapped his hands as a lad when entering a ball game, and repeated, "My report will show 100 per cent. The reporter had asked me to say something of my work for publication; I will give him a few lines, but I never blow my own horn. I never tell what I have done." This itself, if spoken in public, would have been boasting, but no one but the writer was present, and it illustrates another great quality he possessed in a notable degree, that of modesty and humility. I would much regret to speak these things now that he is gone but for the fact that those that loved him bore such messages to him daily and he rejoiced in the commendation of his brethren and friends. And so he died in as perfect peace as earth affords to the faithful servant.

TURN TO HIM.

Turn your eyes from that barren sea to him who stands upon the shore; he shall yet make you a fisher of men. Turn your eyes from that bleak, dark sea of wasted effort, where you have fared so ill; it is always dark till Jesus comes, it is always light when he has come. There is a new day breaking for the churches—a day of widespread evangelistic triumph that shall eclipse all the greatest triumphs of the past, if we will but go back to Christ's school, and learn of him how to save the people. And to each of us he says today, "I am the living bread; I am the bread of life come down from heaven. If any man eat of this bread, he shall live forevermore. Come and dine." Will you come?—W. J. Dawson.

TO MRS. ROBERT KEMP.

Do i remember? Rather, can I ever forget Canton, with her large oaks, broad streets; her thoughtful, intelligent people? Many things conspire to make my four years as pastor one of the greenest spots in memory. No pastor ever served a kinder, more considerate flock. It was my great privilege to fill the pulpit there a few weeks ago; but twenty-six years had wrought marked changes. The beautiful memorial windows are still in place, but the old chandelier, with its oil bowls, has given place to a beautiful set of well arranged electric globes; the same comfortable pews, but that bright red carpet has been replaced with an olive green; the little organ, now used for Sunday school purposes, is in its place as of yore, but a larger one has been installed in the opposite corner; the choir, while more in number, is, in its personnel, a new body. How vividly did I recall those faces and voices of that other day with those gifted granddaughters of the saintly Wiggins directing in the song!

While only a few familiar faces appeared in the audience, it was a delight to have so many greet me upon whom I had laid hands in their dedication to our Lord, or had known in the Sunday school life. Changes? Yes, and sad, but the same spirit, the same church. The little parsonage, which stood hard by and which gave shelter and comfort to the little tribe, is no more, having burned some years ago.

Do I remember? What fortunate pastor of that day could forget the Kemps? To recall a single pleasant association in the church life of then is to dwell with pleasure upon the associations in the homes of Robt. and Ridge Kemp; two truer men never upheld the hands and cheered the spirits of a pastor.

Neither can I, nor do I wish, ever to forget that invalid member who proved such a blessing to her pastor. To this day, the oft-selected song, "I need Thee every hour," has an added charm and meaning. And the memorable experience when Brother Peebles, moved by the Holy Spirit, brought a hush and a consciousness of the presence of the Lord in the midst, and yet not a response: and from that service interest waned! The Spirit came. He was rejected, and came not again! The incident was spoken of for many days.

Do I remember? It would be to acknowledge myself the basest ingrate, ever to forget that scene in the pulpit that Sabbath morning, when I awoke from the faint to find Robert Kemp, with others, steadying my steps to my home, and then to have them say, "The church is closed against you—you must rest." How it all came about, I never learned, but the next day a well-filled purse was handed me, with further injunction, "Go elsewhere, stay as long as you need, and what more is necessary, call on us." Can I forget such kindness? No, nor can I forget how, in those weeks of tedium and delirium, my thoughts, my dreams, my fancies centered in the little church that was thinking of and praying for the absent pastor. No, my dear sister, such things can not be forgotten.

My brethren, say that I am a "worn-out preacher," but my eyes, with help of glasses, still read the finest print; my ears are quick to the usual sounds; my voice still does me service and gives me cheer in song, as when used for the "invalid;" my feet are still strong to carry me wherever I choose; my library is still my delight; my scribblings for the press, both secular and ecclesiastical, are accepted; my natural strength is, of necessity, abated—after a service of 46 years it must follow—but I beg of you, do not think of your former pastor other than as when we worked together in the little white church on the corner.

I sorrow to note the decline in your eyesight and shall not forget you as I shall ask of you to remember me, As of yore,

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

THE PROHIBITION DRIVE.

The Anti-Saloon League of America is arranging to put on a drive in every State in the Union. It will be put on in Mississippi, January 16-23. This date has been selected to celebrate the day on which the amendment to the Federal Constitution was ratified by the requisite number of States to make it a part of the Constitution, and also because on this day the United States of America will become constitutionally bone dry.

The purpose for which this drive is launched is to raise funds for the enforcement of our splendid laws, both Federal and State. The movement is unanimously endorsed by the Board of Trustees of the Mississippi Anti-Saloon League. The State committee for this drive is composed of some of the most trusted men and women in the State. Rev. A. F. Watkins, D.D., President of Millsaps College, is president, and Hon. Z. D. Davis, President of the Capital National Bank, Jackson, is treasurer.

The headquarters committee of the League is composed of Rev. J. M. Morse, presiding elder of the Jackson District, president; Hon. W. M. Buie, capitalist, secretary; Thad B. Lampton, vice president of the Capital National Bank; Hon. H. V. Watkins, prominent attorney; Hon. T. M. Hederman, business manager, Clarion-Ledger; Rev. H. M. King, pastor of the Second Baptist Church, Jackson, and S. J. Taylor, Ex-Mayor. This Board will determine and say where and how all funds shall be used. It would be difficult to effect any arrangement by which the funds would be safer or more wisely expended.

A few of our prohibitionists, though the best of men, but who have not given much thought to the question, are feeling that the conflict is over and have about settled down in ease, to rest on their oars and to enjoy their laurels. It is true that, after a long-drawn-out, stubborn conflict, we have won the first phase of the contention, and have fixed in our statutes, both State and Federal, splendid laws. But simply to secure these laws and let them lie dead on the books, does not compass the situation.

Having wrought well in our legislature, it is now up to us to see that this legislation shall bring to our people the largest measure of practical blessing. This can only be effected by the fullest possible enforcement of our laws. These laws do not enforce themselves automatically any more than they made themselves. Neither can we hold our own without going forward. There can be no cessation of activities without real loss. Grant H. Hudson truthfully says: "Our country did not GO dry, it was PUT dry; it will not STAY dry, it must be KEPT dry."

The Federal Government has given Mississippi a Prohibition Commissioner with several deputies and has made an appropriation; but, unless the people of our State co-operate by putting up some money also, satisfactory law-enforcement cannot be accomplished. This Commissioner is Major W. Calvin Wells, of Jackson, who laid down a lucrative law practice to answer the call of his country in the late world war. He was sent overseas at once and remained there until a few months ago, serving his country with distinction. We are sure he will serve it as well here as a leader in the fight against a more formidable foe than Germany. The Federal Government expects us to do something for ourselves—it expects us to take the initiative. Many an anxious heart has yearned for an opportunity to do something to annihilate liquor, but has not found it. This occasion furnishes every man, woman and child a chance to help lift the load, by promptly and cheerfully handing to those who are sent out to solicit in the drive all they can to make our country really dry.

Mr. F. Kramer, Chief Federal Prohibition Officer, says: "The matter of enforcing the law will be primarily in the hands of the local authorities, municipal, county and State. This must ever be kept in mind and is vital if we reach the results which we ought to reach. The local authorities ought to be jealous of this right and zealous in the performance of their duties, and in most cases they will be. It is only where they fail to act at all, or where they act in a careless and indifferent way, that the organization now being completed will exercise its right and take up the duties of enforcing the laws. But when such conditions exist the organization will not be slow or hesitant in acting or in assuming the rights and privileges placed upon it under the law.

"The highest success will be attained only if the great mass of law-abiding people make their influence and power felt. They should stand solidly back of these officials who do their duty under the law. They should lend their influence and support to every agency of the country, State and Nation, which has to do with the matter of enforcing the laws. Obedience to law should be rendered from every pulpit, taught in every school room, and urged from every platform.

"I have sometimes felt that there is one danger confronting these people who are in favor of having the law enforced. It seems that our people are not given to maintaining a continued effort and secure positions of much importance and strategic advantage. When these things are secured, they then are apt to rest upon their oars and are in great danger of losing what they have gained. They will form fine organizations working. The battle for prohibition is not won. It is still on. It is true we have secured advantageous ground, positions of great strategic importance, but these must be held and advanced positions taken. The danger here suggested can, to a great extent, be minimized by men in such organizations as that which is here represented."

General N. B. Forrest, grandson of the gallant General of Confederate fame of the same name, is State Director for the January drive. He is urging every minister in the State to present the question of continued prohibition on the 4th day of January at one of his appointments, with special reference to the drive, January 16-23. We have gone too far to stop or turn back. Too much money and energy have been spent in the fight for it to be lost by relaxing our efforts at this stage. You have seen a team strain every muscle till the blood vessels seemed ready to burst, to reach the top of the hill, and when the top had been almost gained with just a little more effort all would have gone over the top and victory would have been secured.

It would be positively calamitous for prohibitionists to stop giving their money now. We must continue just a while longer to protect what we have already given. A landlord advanced money to his tenant to make a crop. Just before the cultivation was completed, he decided the requests were too large, and cut off advances. The work ceased; the crop was a failure, and what had been advanced was largely lost. Continuing a few days longer would have insured a good crop, saved all money advanced, and given a handsome profit. We are at this fork of the road. Which prong shall we take? Many of us feel that upon this decision rest momentous, pivotal issues.

Earnestly,

T. J. BAILEY,
Superintendent, Anti-Saloon League.

THE HOLY SCRIPTURES—OLD AND NEW.

By Payton A. Sowell.

Our greatest emphasis of thought and word should be put upon the merits of the Holy Scriptures—pausing on Holy.

Our instruction is that God has spoken to man. The race cannot lose its interest in the Early Garden, where, in the cool of the day, God spake to Adam; neither can the tragedy on the mountain, as the knife was uplifted and God said, "Abraham, stay thy hand," vanish while earth has a father left.

With the longevity that seems to have existed before the flood, an oral record of long-past events seems a possibility. Without written facts, it is, and has for ages been, about impossible to have history. Among the marvels, is the possibility to transmit and leave in this written form the thoughts and plans of God. Human language was made for man, often for narrow communities of men, assuming more the form of a dialect. It is a great task to empty an idea from a mere human mind into a word; yet, in the ages of its making, the Holy Scriptures have been put to the ordeal of bringing into the histories of those distinct periods the will of God in the languages of the peoples of those times.

Considered from their earthlly side, it is astounding to realize to what extreme tests they have been subjected.

These Holy Scriptures have taken on titles allying them with time, mere circumstance, and human names. There can be no stronger evidence of this feature than is seen in the names of the earliest, and, if such can be, the most essential books, such as Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy. There seems to have been no hesitancy in allowing some of these books to be called after persons—persons who are known only because their names appear as the captlon of these books. Does it not occur to us that it was stooping low on the human side to name these books—Jonah? Habakkuk? Ezra? Joel? Joshua? Samuel?—and at the same time, in no sense abate their claim of being Holy Scriptures? Few books, indeed, have outlived their authors. It is self-evident, these Holy Scriptures have not depended on their human side for their merit or their life.

More—these Holy Scriptures appear fragmentary. In a few instances not over two or three pages of printed matter—yet their claim is of Divine origin, and of a divinely purposed unity. Because they seem fragments of far divided ages and countries, these fragments, like material particles, are wonderful in themselves and constitute one planet.

True it is, if this human side were all the grounds for the claim of Holy Scriptures, they must fail. However, it is also very true that they reach us because of this lowly line of contact. This human side is the lower end of the ladder that stood by the pillow of stono on which Jacob's head lay, while his dream revealed the top of the ladder leaning against God's throne, and helped him to the vislon of ascending and descending angels.

Further, these Holy Scriptures, on their human side, subject themselves to human accommodations. During the history of their existence, men—unknown men, and, so far as we know, men without divine authority—have cut these Holy Scriptures into chapters and verses, for human accommodation, purely. And with the passing ages, as dialects and languages have multiplied, they have allowed themselves translated into any or all these.

And from time to time the language in which they were first written has been critically dissected, and examined in all its verbs, participles and nouns. Throughout all these long and severo tests, in no sense did these Holy Scriptures abate their high claim to their origin and authorship.

At last, the hardest, if possible, of tests came, and even their most ardent admirers drew a line through the centuries and the Holy Scriptures themselves and said, "All these writings whose origin antedated the coming of Jesus, are Old Scriptures, and those subsequent, are New Scriptures." Perhaps only one people calling them thus receive only the Old as the Testament of God. Yet all who accept both allow them to be thus considered. The Holy Scriptures constitute the Will of God—not an Old Will and a New.

Reading the Gospels and Epistles, the Acts and Revelations, with eyes capable of being opened, it is easy to see that while there is no special pleading to prove the Unity of the Holy Scripturos, the whole matter is self-evident. Jesus set His seal of estimate on the Holy Scriptures—loved them, obeyed and quoted them in discourse and doctrine.

Passing by, for sake of time and space, mere reference, allusion and proof of statoment, and considering only those instances in which the language, in whole verse or paragraphs, has been brought over from the earlier written books, and incorporated and made a part of the later written, we are greatly impressed.

Twenty-seven of these later writings, or books, have incorporated at least ninety-one verses or paragraphs into their very body, and forming their existence. At least three whole chapters, of 30 verses to the chapter of the earlier, are a part of the later writings. These Holy Scriptures are of equal origin, and authority. The author, or authors, of Romans, Corinthians, Ephesians, Galations and Hebrews really build their great messages around the earlier writings.

On the old Tennessee farm, when I was a boy, I went to the "June apple tree" to get the "red, ripe June apple," which often hung on the top twig of the tree. Country boy as I was, I knew there could be no "juicy, red apple" without the tree. I knew from the roots to the "red apple" there was unity. Long ago some cruel hand destroyed the tree; now, no one seeks or tastes "red Junes."

When we read and feast on the later (we call the New Testament) writings, it is well to remember that thero is but one Holy Scripture: from Genesis to Revelation.

OPENING THE QUESTION.

By Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

An editorial in The New Orleans Christian Advocate of the 18th of December issue opens a question that, to my mind, deserves careful study from more than one angle. It is concerning the circulation of the church paper. Is there a positive need for the Conference organ in our church work? Does the present church paper fill the real need of the average congregation or Methodist home? Have we a business-like policy of presenting our ministry by the circulation of church papers?

I will answer these questions briefly, hoping only to raise the question rather than settle it. Is there a positive need of the Conference organ in our church work? When there is a lack of preaching in a community, some one gets busy and sees to it that a preacher is secured. He fills a want. When a schoolhouse burns, a new one is erected and in the meantime a hall is rented. The public wants the public school. When a bridge on some highway washes out, a new one is built or the end of complaint is never heard. When the Conference organ falls to show up, the preachers get in the air, but the congregation has nothing to say. The Conference organ is a fine medium of social gossip among the preachers and about the preachers to the faithful, and affords relief to those of us who simply must write, but the rank and file of our people do not read it, do not take it, do not want it and it fills no placo in their lives. Why? Because it is not a working manual tor the worker. It is not a home paper dealing in matters of common interest among the rank and file of people. It deals in abstract subjects, theologically put, and aside from the editorials might as well never arrive.

Does the present church paper fill the real need of the average congregation or church home? (I am not talking about the New Orleans Christian Advocate, but the church paper problem as a whole.) My answer is, No. The average church paper is never picked up by the children. About the only people who read it are those who are above the average in faithfulness in church circles already. It takes grace to stick to it faithfully and read the church papers. If you do not believe it, just pay no attention to your list and see how soon the circulation in your congregation hits the bottom. The paper that will fill the bill is one that makes itself wanted. Now as to the business-like policy of church papers. This is no place to mince words. Brother Carley wonders why, with the powerful membership in Mississippi and Louisiana, the New Orleans Christian Advocate has less than 8,000 subscribers. Why? Becauso Methodism simply uses its church paper as a self-supporting agency, forced to exist by the narrow margin of its paid circulation and its advertising income. Its editor, who gets less by $1,000 a year than a pulpit would net him, is forced to use his columns to boost his own paper. The business manager is not paid salary enough to warrant his devoting his time to the biggest job the business manager ought to have—that of circulating the paper. So the business policy comes back to the pastor and says, "You put on a drive and bring up the circulation of the Advocate."

Then the circulation of the Advocate depends upon the pastor. The pastor has so many things on him right now that if he represented all the things he is expected to represent, he could not make in a year's time the whole circuit of all his families in behalf of each cause. The pastor can do a little. He is to be complimented that he has done so well. But the circulating of the church paper must cease to be a financial adventuro and become a missionary adventure. I am in favor of a missionary appropriation for the salary of a manager who will stay in the field and superintend circulating the paper.

Now for the saying of several things real quick. Our church paper should be a journal of Methodist propaganda. It should be radically doctrinal. It should have in it hot articles that will make the reader get up and shout over the fact that he is a Methodist and not a Baptist, or Presbyterian, or Catholic. I do not mean that it should be controversial, but it should be a Methodist publication. It should be Southern to the core. It should be spiritual and evangelistic. It should gossip a little about the preachers, providing they have done something besides go to New Orleans and visit the office. It should be a history of the works of our people and a handbook for the workers in our churches. It should be kept within reach of all the people and its life should be assured by the money we raise for missions.

"FROM EVERLASTING TO EVERLASTING"

There is something calming in the very saying or hearing of this phrase. We who are so often fevered, and so constantly distracted, by irritating and absorbing contacts with the world, need every now and then to sit down under the shadow of great rock, or by the shore of life's limitless sea, that our littleness may be temporarily forgotten in its greatness, and our narrowness rebuked by its breadth. There are a thousand things daily occurring calculated to make us nervous, and therefore something must somewhere be found to restore us to normal. We should be brave, and in order to be brave we must be cool and calm. The psychology of courage, on which some are essaying to write, is not complete without a reference to the divine factor in experience, which is not mere fate but "Father." Pedantic phrases yield little for the heart our help must come from a personal God. What is "from everlasting to everlasting" is the mercy of the Lord, whose righteousness and love reach even unto children's children; who from heaven beholds the earth, hearing the groaning of the prisoner, regarding the prayer of the destitute, and not despising their prayer. It is only when thus we convert faith into personal terms, and when we nestle down in the arms of everlasting Love Divine, that a hush falls upon our childish cries a calm steals over our heart, and a balm like that of Gilead is spread upon our now unruffled, but once furrowed, brow. Life needs its personal touch, and not merely its great factors. Not just highness will do, even in a God, for what our spirits crave is a timeless, tireless love, the pressure upon us of a palpitating personality, like unto our own, yet also transcending our weakness and pettiness. "From everlasting to everlasting" what? God is Christ, and through Christ the promise of fullest, freest life forever. —Zion's Herald.

"THE GREATER SAN FRANCISCO" TABERNACLES.

My Dear Brother Carley: Through the New Orleans Christian Advocate, I am writing to thank the brethren, ministers and laymen, of the Louisiana Conference for their generous subscription to the fund for the erection of the "Redwood" tabernacles in "Greater San Francisco." At Ruston, I was given $137.85 in cash, and $215 in subscriptions, to be paid January 1, 1920, or so soon thereafter as convenient. To this is to be added $113 contributed by the church at Mansfield, making a total from Louisiana of $465.85.

I am glad to be able to inform the brethren that the first of our proposed tabernacles is well under way toward completion. It will be ready for use about January 15, next. The cost, unfurnished, will approximate two thousand dollars. It is truly a fragrant house, beautiful in simplicity, but shaped to use and honor. The plan of these houses shows extreme dimensions of 54 x 40 feet. Each will contain a comfortably seated auditorium, rooms for primary and graded Sunday school work, and a simple but effective arrangement for social work. The first of these buildings has been provided for by the brethren of the North Alabama and the Upper South Carolina Conferences. The second, which I hope to begin about January 1, is to be built with the contributions which I received in Louisiana and Texas, about $2,000 in cash and subscriptions. A third tabernacle has been mainly provided for by the gifts of the brethren of the North Arkansas and Memphis Conferences. These will be three of the half dozen such tabernacles which I hope to build within the next year. This is the greatest mission field in America. I am trusting the Head of the church and those friends who believe in me and my work to furnish the means. Those who have studied our plan believe it to be an epoch-making one. These tabernacles are to be located in greatly neglected sections of these mighty modern cities. For instance, the one now being erected is located in a three-hundred block of the San Francisco Bay District where there is now no church of any kind whatsoever. The plan is to put two or three of these tabernacles under the care of one "circuit" pastor, thus applying the old-time circuit rider method of evangelism to the spiritual problems of a great city, in this case, a group of cities for "Greater San Francisco" is a term which stands for half a dozen cities with more than a million people, two-thirds of whom are untouched by the churches. Our local Southern Methodism is struggling with its share of these great needs, but, unaided, it cannot meet a tithe of the demand. The names of those who have helped me in this work, as also those who may do so, will remain a fragrance in these romantic lands. It is hoped and believed that each of these tabernacles will, in a few years, become strong, live churches. The possibility is inspiring.

CONCERNING THE CENTENARY WORK IN THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the Pastor and All Other Members of Each Local Church Centenary Cabinet in the Mississippi Conference:

You deserve much of the credit for making possible the success of the "Eight Day Drive," and I now appeal to you to make it possible to collect the pledges that were made, for unless they are collected, it would have been better for the subscriber and the Centenary that they had not been made. However, we must have no other thought in our minds but that they are to be collected. I would suggest that each local church cabinet (see Standard Plan for those who compose it) have a meeting as early as possible, have the local church treasurer report to the meeting all who have not made their first year payments, and plan to collect it, using the same workers that helped in the "Eight Day Drive," if you can get them. At the same time collect the second year payment if possible, which will be due January 1, 1920 (unless otherwise indicated on subscription card). It is very important that this be done right away, and any help that I can render will be gladly done, though it is impossible for me to see all of you. I must depend upon you to begin this work at once, for the pledges should be collected as they become due.

Many of the local treasurers have failed to send a list of their subscribers, showing the amount of each subscription, to the Conference Centenary Treasurer, T. B. Lampton, Jackson, Miss. This is very important, because the cards might get lost, or destroyed by fire, and we would not have a record of them. I wish that each pastor would see that his treasurer does this right away, if he has not already done so, and where possible use a typewriter, keeping a copy for himself and sending a copy to Mr. Lampton.

The statistical reports of the pastors to the Annual Conference showed something like $40,000 more had been paid than the treasurer has a record of in his office, which means that some of the treasurers are either depositing their collections in their own name, or are not notifying Mr. Lampton when they make the deposit, or are sending direct to John E. Edgerton, or that they have the money on hand. In every case, it should have attention by the pastor to see that the treasurers are handling it according to the plan.

My office will be Meridian, Rooms 304-305 Cochran Building; I will be glad to see you any time that you come; if I am out, whoever has charge of the office will give you any information concerning the Centenary.

I hope to have the pleasure of meeting many of you during the year, and my desire and prayer is that the Lord will use each of us for the ongoing of His Kingdom as He may desire, and that we shall be willing to follow His leadership. It is my purpose to do my very best, and I ask for your co-operation and especially your prayers for a successful year's work. Yours to serve,

W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Missionary Secretary.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE CHAIRMAN OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD.

Dear Brethren: There are twenty-five millions of unchurched people in the South, and Louisiana has her full share. What are we going to do about it? Those who have reached the age of thirty years and are not members of the church are not apt to become so. Work upon them is largely wasted. But work among children is always fruitful. The only way the world will ever be Christianized is through the children. The church that cares for its children has a future; the church that does not, will be a failure.

Measured by this criterion, has our church been a success or a failure? While we may not have had the success we ought to have had, we can thank God that we have not yet proved to be a total failure. But our interest in our Sunday schools is not at white heat, to say the least. At stations and on small circuits we have some fairly good schools, but on the large circuits the schools are generally poor and many of the churches have no schools at all. The pastors, on the constant go from appointment to appointment, scarcely ever even attend Sunday school. They are usually men from the country and have little conception of the up-to-date school. They have never seen one. Those of them that have theological training are not given Sunday school training at the seminary. In the Conference course, little is said about the Sunday school. So how can our preachers place the true value upon the Sunday school? As I see it, the whole plan of our church work should be changed as it relates to the Sunday school. From a state of indifference, we must be transformed into a state of earnest activity—into a state of holy and efficient zeal.

But let not the laity lay the flattering unction to their souls that the preachers are solely to blame. The preachers, as our leaders, must lead us, but we must closely and efficiently follow. The Sunday school should be the main field of lay endeavor.

What are we going to do about it? First, we must have efficient field workers. Brother Early has wisely planned our work and diligently endeavored to work the plan. But he can do little without the active co-operation of pulpit and pew. We must loyally back him up in the district organizations he has planned. We must back him up with our work as well as with our money. We must see that he has good and efficient helpers and the means to pay them well.

This brings us to the question of finances. We have nearly starved our schools to death. Financial emphasis has been laid upon nearly everything else, but never upon the support of our schools. Not only have we failed to provide money to secure much needed help for our Field Secretary, but we are paying him far too little. We can not expect to hold experienced, qualified men in this position unless we pay them attractive salaries. The Bishop and his cabinet will hardly allow us to keep a man at a starvation salary, when there are other places calling for him at a decent living wage. So, I hope we may find it possible to increase Brother Early's salary for next year, as well as to provide some additional help.

Another feature of this question comes up here, and that is, why should we have to run on borrowed money nearly, or quite, all the year? Is there not some way for us to get out of this unbusiness-like method? Can we not secure enough money during the early part of next year so that the money we receive at Conference will remain in the treasury to begin the following year's work?

Brethren, we have heretofore played at this business. We have allowed our children to grow up without the pale of the church and then attempted to save them in the annual protracted meeting, whereas they should have grown up in the church, the revival thus fulfilling its proper function of reviving the spirit and implanting the true knowledge of Christ in the heart, at least as to our own children.

"He who knows and knows not that he knows is asleep; wake him!" "Awake, awake; put on thy strength, O Zion."

Respectfully submitted,

W. S. HOLMES, Chairman.

GIVING THE VINEYARD UNTO OTHERS.

In the familiar parable of the husbandmen and the vineyard—a plantation with respect to which every care was taken to render it fruitful and efficient," since it was hedged, digged, towered, and rented out—the malevolence of the rentees is shown by the fact that they rejected the messengers of the proprietor, even killing his beloved son. Then the significant question is asked, What shall therefore the lord of the plantation do? "He will come and destroy the husbandmen, and will give the vineyard unto others." These men were really self-destructionists; they lost their chance, while they lost themselves. They forfeited their economic opportunity, and the result of their failure to measure up to their vocation was that the vineyard was given unto others. It will always be so while the world lasts. It may be admitted that at times and in certain places an industrious Naboth who minds his own business and is content in his lot is ousted unscrupulously from his holding by some usurper or monopolist, but more often perhaps it happens that men do not improve as they might their business, education, or social opportunities, and so, by the operation of irresistible economic laws, by the pressure of public opinion, or by the direct judgment of God, they find that their vineyard is given one day unto others. The aim of every good and able man ought therefore to be not only to find an opening for work but also to retain the confidence of his superiors, or to keep in the best trim for his special work, so that none shall take his crown, or divest him of his heavenly heritage, his prospects of earthly success and celestial felicity.—Zion's Herald.

The Home Circle

THE LOCK ON THE PENNY BANK.

I know two boys, named Joe and Frank,
  Each has a little penny bank.
Joe's bank is made of shining tin,
  The pennies clink when they slide in.
Frank's bank is just a wooden box
  Tied up with string; it has no locks,
And yet his money grows and grows.
  Well, how is that, do you supposo?
Joe whirls and twirls his bank about,
  And shakes the shining pennies out.
He never has a cent to spare,
  His money seems to melt in air.
But Frank's store has a magic way
  Of growing bigger day by day.
The reason is, it's really Frank
  Who saves the money, not the bank!
For what can matter, bank or box,
  When self-denial guards the locks?

THE TOM-CAT'S CHRISTMAS.

Venita R. Dudgeon.

Tom was a handsome tiger cat and much lovod member of the Pushington family. He felt keenly the press of holiday preparations which were going on in all parts of the house. You see, he always received his full share of petting, but tho day before Christmas was—well, you can guess how he felt.

Out on the front porch, the fragrant Christmas tree had just been set up. The glistening balls, tho candles and a host of shiny things lay on the floor ready to be hung on the tree. The porch door was open a tiny crack, and, though busy, we noticed Tom clawing at the door till he opened it about a foot and began rolling one of the brightest balls around on the hardwood floor. Before we knew it, Tom had rolled the ball through the door, and down it went, bump, bump, and then burst like an electric bulb in a thousand pieces! Poor Tom was so frightened that he scampered off into the newly-fallen snow, and we saw nothing of him for an hour or two.

Tom came out of hiding in the evening. With wondering eyes he watched us play games and even listened quietly to the stories that grandma told us.

Christmas morning dawned bright, crisp, snowy, and, in this house, somewhat noisy with very proper glee. Presents were plenty and much time was spent in opening parcels and looking at each others' gifts. Every one found two or threo presents. There were no presents for Tom, though, not even a loving pat and stroke! Why didn't we think of the loving little playfellow? Indeed, Tom was sad in the midst of all this festive buzz. There wasn't even a string dangling for Tom to snatch at or chase.

While near the tree, looking up in wonder, Tom noticed a little cotton Santa all shiny and smiling down at him from a low branch of the tree. Suddenly he reached up once—then a second time, and caught the cotton Santa by the toe—then set both claws determinedly into Santa's feet and pulled as hard as he could. Without warning the tree came tumbling over—click-click-click went some of the little bulbs—not as loud as it was startling. We sprang to catch the tree beforo it struck some one. A moment more and Mr. Tom-cat would have been hurt, and maybe some one else. The boys caught the tree half way to the floor, but it had hit the top of a chair, knocking a heap of lovely trinkets to bits.

What do you suppose Tom did? He disappeared as if by magic. Poor Tom, where was he? We called and called, but no Tom. Was he, this time, aware of the extent of his mischief? We all saw him jump at the innocent Santa, never for a moment thinking he was so strong. It was all so sudden that no one could believe that our Tom was the cause.

In time Tom showed up and we all looked and commented this time. Here he came laboring across the center of the room, dragging the cotton Santa Claus. Of all the funny sights! We felt almost like spanking this unusual tom-cat. Think of him pulling our Christmas tree over! Now here he was, with supreme indifference, playing with Santa himself. He never even looked up at us till Gracey burst out, as if inspired: "I know what he means; Tom never received any present." Then she told what he had done with the ball the day before and how he caught at ends of everything, but we were too busy to play. We all looked sheepishly at each other and then realized our precious pet had been shamefully neglected.

Early next day the children took Tom to a store and bought a lovely collar with a tiny bell on it. For a week they gave him cream or very rich milk to drink, and did all they could to "make up."

My, but Tom was happy and purred his gratitude! Every Christmas Tom is to have a present, and never again will be have to chase the ends of decorations. He will have his very own little ball and will keep it moving, too.

Let us remember our faithful friends at Christmas, oven the pussy. If it weren't for Tom, our candy and cake might all be eaten by the mice!—Our Dumb Animals.

"I'M PRETTY LITTLE, BUT I'LL TRY."

She was only seven years old, Eileen Martin, the section foreman's daughter, as she stood reaching up to a telephone at the little town in California one Saturday, telling the agent at the nearest station that a rail was broken. Child-like, she knew the semaphore signals, had come to the track to see the Overland Limited train whirl by, and had watched the long finger drop, letting the train into the block.

"I'm pretty little, but I'll try," she said, when the station agent asked her if she could not stop the train that was past him, and started out with her sister of fourteen, who had just appeared. They ran down the track, stopped the train, and saved a wreck. The alert attention which knew the semaphore signal, the quick wit which understood what a broken rail meant, the decision and initiative which alone sought the telephone, the courage with which she and her sister started up the track, waving their aprons to stop the big Overland Limited as it bore down upon them—these are the qualities which through life bring self-help, help for others, success and happiness.

A NEW GAME.

It was Maida's turn to invent a new game, an exchange tells us. She looked at Mother Floss and smiled at the three darling kittens.

"I know," she cried, and ran out to the kitchen. "Father," she asked eagerly, "may I take one of your woolen mittens?"

The mitten was a blue one. Maida slipped it on Walter's hand and tied a silk handkerchief over his eyes.

"You must stand in the middle of the ring," she said, "and turn about three times. The children may change places while you twirl, but when you stop, no one must move."

Walter whirled about like a top. The children quickly changed places with each other, until Maida raised her hand.

"Now," she prompted, "hold up the mitten and walk toward somebody and say, 'What naughty kitten has lost his mitten?' Then slip it on his hand and say, 'Was it you, sir?' And the child must answer, 'Not I, sir.' If you can guess who it is, he must take your place in the middle of the ring, but if not, you must take the mitten back and try again."

Walter laughed and said that was easy, but he put the mitten on three times before he guessed the right child. Can you do better than that?—The Presbyterian Standard.

THE NEED.

They tell us there are a million folk in the palaces and hovels of New York that never cross the threshold of a church—Catholic or Protestant—and forty million in the land. Verily the church is encamped on the edge of a dark continent of worldliness and selfishness and pleasure and sin. Through the air comes the old, sweet, searching command, shivering through us like a trumpet call, "O to die for men's souls! And live to win their lives! Here and now let us forswoar ease." Ease will come yonder. Here and now let us, perchance, postpone culture—there will be time for that there. One passion ours—to spread the evangel. One purpose—to gather in our multitude out of the wilderness and lead them toward the shining city. Enough for us that the broken-hearted and sinful we have shown the path that leads to the Christ, who is indeed the heart of Christianity and religion—a great, dear Person, standing with outstretched hands.—Newell Dwight Hillis.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:

Louisiana Conference—Rev. J. M. Henry, D. D., Rev. J. F. Foster, Rev. S. J. Davies.

Mississippi Conference—Rev. C. W. Crisler, Rev. J. T. Leggett, Rev. J. R. Jones.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN.

In October last, when the Publishing Committee of the Advocate met in annual meeting, stern facts faced us. We found that the increased and ever-increasing cost of paper, together with the increased cost of labor, called for one of two things, namely, an increased circulating of the paper or an increase in the cost of the paper to the individual subscribers.

Your committee was face to face with the fact that more money was necessary for running expenses, and we had but two ways of obtaining these funds, viz., increasing the cost of the paper from $1.50 to $2 per year, or gaining some four thousand or more new subscribers. We feared the former might restrict the usefulness of the paper, decreasing the number to whom it would carry its message, and, therefore, we chose the other plan of raising the necessary money with which to meet this increased cost of producing the paper. We also hoped that, with the increased circulation, funds would warrant a better grade of paper, and thus improve the appearance of our Conference organ.

Each of the patronizing Conferences was asked to put on a campaign to end on March 15. I understand that the district board of stewards in each Conference will allot to each charge a minimum number of subscribers for the pastor to secure before the above date.

Your number, brethren, will include all renewals, as well as new subscriptions.

Let the elders, district boards of stewards and pastors push this claim and secure at least the number allotted to each charge.

This is important, brethren, for unless we succeed in this undertaking we may be forced to other plans next year, if not sooner.

Cordially yours,

JNO. F. FOSTER.

Chairman of Publishing Committee.

THE METHODIST QUARTERLY REVIEW.

The January, 1920, number of the Review has reached our table. We have not yet had time to read it, but we could not resist the temptation to glance through its pages. It is worth reading—we are sure of that—and we anticipate much pleasure and profit from its perusal. It is evidently up to the high standard Dr. Thomas has maintained since he became its editor. It deserves a much wider circulation than it has.

A GREAT MOVEMENT IN NORTH MISSISSIPPI

We desire to call special attention to the article by Dr. R. A. Meek, on page 2 of this issue of the Advocate, concerning the movement to secure an endowment fund of $250,000 for the benefit of the superannuate preachers and the dependent widows and orphans of preachers of the North Mississippi Conference. We cannot hope to add anything to the convincing statement of Dr. Meek, so far as the arguments in favor of such movement are concerned, but we do want to emphasize as strongly as we can the importance of carrying the movement to a successful conclusion at the earliest practicable moment.

There is coming to be a more or less well defined feeling that there is a present-day tendency in our church to display very great interest in those activities that are somewhat remote from our every-day interests, probably on the assumption that the things near at hand will, of course, receive their due share of attention, and to give less heed to vital matters that lie at our very doors. Whether there is any real basis for this feeling or not, we must admit that we have failed to accomplish some of the things that are fundamentally important. We would not utter the slightest word that would suggest to anybody that we are in favor of retrenchment in our great world-wide program, or that we are in favor of a provincial point of view; we simply want to emphasize as forcibly as possible the truth that all growth, all development, is from within, outward. If we fail to do our duty at home, it is certain that we shall ultimately fail everywhere else.

We do not hesitate to affirm that one of the tasks to which we should give immediate and earnest attention is the providing of an adequate support for those servants of the church, comparatively few in number, who, having given their all to the propagation of the Kingdom of God on earth, now in weakness and old age have not where to lay their heads. If they had been engaged in a gainful occupation during the days of their strength, we might reasonably say that they themselves should have thought of the future and made provision for their later needs. But they were not engaged in making money. No Methodist preacher worthy of the name ever went into a community with the thought of making a profit out of his ministry; he went to spend and be spent in spiritual service. From the very nature of the case, it was impossible for him even to hope to lay up treasures upon earth. By day and by night he was at the service of the people among whom he labored, striving by all the means in his power to turn their thoughts heavenward. He took nothing material out of those communities—but he left there spiritual values which God alone can estimate.

It is unthinkable that we should continue to allow these men, these servants of God, to suffer for the ordinary comforts of life in their old age. It is sadly true that we have done so in the past. Some of them are suffering this winter for lack of food and fuel and clothing. They are not our charges—we are in debt to them, and we should begin to pay what we owe. We are beginning, and, by the grace of God, our whole church is going to do its full duty toward them.

This is a great movement the North Mississippi Conference has undertaken, and we are confident that it will be pushed to a successful conclusion. It is in behalf of a noble cause, it is projected upon safe business principles, it is under the direction of competent leaders, and it makes its appeal to a loyal and liberal constituency—it cannot fail. We shall not be surprised to learn that the large-hearted laymen of that Conference are making munificent contributions to this altogether praiseworthy fund. It is a way they have in North Mississippi.

THE FIRST QUARTERLY CONFERENCE—QUESTION 3.

Question 3, to be asked at the first quarterly conference, is as follows: What amount has been estimated by the Board of Stewards for the support of the preacher in charge (and his assistant) for the present year, and how has it been apportioned to the Churches?

Always an important question, it is almost tragically so this year. To leave the answer to the spur of the moment, when the conference is in session, will be almost inexcusable. It should be carefully considered by the stewards in the light of the present high cost of living, and a sum fixed that will be at least measurably in keeping with the ability of the congregation to pay. It is a fact that a dollar has little more than half the purchasing power it possessed three or four years ago. In other words, a charge that paid a salary of a thousand dollars four years ago would be paying not more than six hundred dollars in purchasing power if it keeps the salary at the same figure this year. Only those charges which paid an appreciable surplus above a comfortable living in former years should even consider a like amount now—and such charges are few and far between. The only fair thing to do is to make the preacher's salary in keeping with conditions to-day. This will mean an increase in practically every case.

DEATH OF REV. J. D. NEWSOM.

It is with very great sorrow that we chronicle the death of Rev. J. D. Newsom, a superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, at his home in Meridian, Miss., on December 18, after a lingering illness of more than four months. As was to be expected, his end was peace. Brother Newsom's name stood at the head of the chronological roll of his Conference, the date of his admission being 1848. It was not our privilege to know him personally, but we can imagine something of the labors and sacrifices, joys and triumphs that were crowded into those long years of service in the Kingdom of God. Our sincere sympathy goes out to his devoted wife and to all those who have been made to sorrow by his passing away. We hope to have a suitable memoir for publication in due time.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"We are comfortably house in our new home at Benton, Miss., where we were cordially received by the good people," writes Rev. J. B. King.

Rev. H. B. Vandenburg has been appointed to the Standard and Olla charge since the adjournment of the recent session of the Louisiana Conference.

The American Bible Society supplied 6,500,000 volumes of the Scriptures to the military forces of the United States and other belligerents in the world war.

Sister T. S. Randle writes us that her grandson, Thomas, will soon leave for Cuba on the U. S. S. Utah; his term of service in the navy will expire in seven months. She asks the readers of the Advocate to join her in prayer for his safe return.

The editor makes grateful acknowledgement of the many Christmas greetings he has received from friends throughout Louisiana and Mississippi. They have cheered his heart more than he can say. He hopes that each one who so kindly and so cordially thought of him at this season will take this note as a personal expression of appreciation.

The address of Dr. Theodore Copeland, who has recently entered the evangelistic field, is 1000 Haines Street, Dallas, Texas. Dr. Copeland will doubtless be kept busy throughout the year in assisting his brethren in their revival campaigns, a work into which he has thrown his whole life. He is pleasantly remembered by many friends in Louisiana and Mississippi, where he formerly held pastorates.

Brother J. E. Williams, an active layman of Bunkie, La., was a visitor to New Orleans last week. We ran across him while he was taking lunch with Rev. J. G. Snelling and Rev. F. M. Freeman—good company to be in. It was refreshing to listen to his quaint comments upon various and sundry happenings of the present day, and to watch his play of irrepressible humor in dealing even with the waiters in a New Orleans restaurant. We actually saw one of them smile.

"I am delighted with my charge," writes Rev. I. T. Reames from Vivian, La.

Rev. P. H. Howse has been cordially received by the good people of Prentiss, Miss. He finds his hands and his heart full of the work.

The Interchurch World Movement of North America will hold a great World Survey Conference at Atlantic City, N. J., January 7-10.

We thank Rev. C. T. Floyd for an invitation to visit him and his choice flock at Byhalia, Miss. He reports a good beginning for the new Conference year.

Brother D. O. Summer, who lives at Tuscaloosa, Ala., but who holds his church membership at Newton, Miss., has been a reader of the Advocate since 1875.

According to an exchange, the $50,000 publishing plant established by our church in Juiz de Fora, Brazil, will do printing for all the Protestant missions in Brazil.

We understand that our church at Lake Charles, La., has increased its pastor's salary from $2000 a year to $3600, and that First Church, Shreveport, has fixed $6000 as the salary for this year.

Dr. Kogoro Eusaki is the new bishop elected at the General Conference of the Japanese Church. Before the unification of Methodism in Japan, he was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Lady Astor, a woman of American birth, was recently elected to membership in the British House of Commons. She is the first woman to receive such recognition in the political life of England.

Rev. S. Curtis Yates has entered joyfully upon his work at Artesia, Miss. He was royally received by a committee at the station and escorted to the parsonage, where a delightful welcome was extended. The prospect for the year is fine.

Dr. W. A. Shelton, of the faculty of Emory University, has been selected as a member of a company of distinguished scholars to make explorations in Egypt, especially along the Nile. A great honor has come to him and to the University.

The Christian Guardian, official organ of the Methodist Church of Canada, has just celebrated its ninetieth anniversary. This periodical is one of the really great religious journals of America. We extend hearty congratulations and good wishes.

Bishop A. P. Camphor, colored, missionary bishop of the M. E. Church for Africa, died at his home in Orange, N. J., on December 9. He was born in Jefferson Parish, La., August 9, 1865. He was looked upon as one of the great religious leaders of his race.

The contributions of our church at Sardis, Miss., for all purposes last year, amounted to an average of $30 per member. Ninety-two per cent of the membership of the church contributed to its support. Rev. E. G. Mohler is the pastor of this wide-awake congregation.

The annual report of the treasurer of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church shows the largest receipts in the history of that denomination, $5,526,819.50, an increase of $3,146,472.52 over a year ago. The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society raised $2,006,370.68 in addition.

"The Wayfarer," the great spectacular pageant that attracted so much attention at the Centenary Celebration in Columbus, Ohio, last June, is being presented in Madison Square Garden, New York, under the auspices of the Interchurch World Movement. It is reported that immense crowds are viewing it.

According to an exchange, the church preferences of the members of the Mississippi Legislature, which will meet on January 6, are as follows: Baptist, 76; Methodist, 58; Presbyterian, 28; Christian, 8; Episcopalian, 8; Cumberland Presbyterian, 2; Jewish, 1; Roman Catholic, 1; no preference, 6.

Rev. H. N. McKibben is beginning his second year's pastorate at Lambert, Miss., with bright prospects. Plans are being completed for a new church at Marks, and there is some talk of a new building at Lambert. The pastor and his family were the recipients of many kindnesses during the Christmas season.

According to the latest number of the Centenary Record, the North Mississippi Conference is 22nd in percentage of payment of the first year's pledge, her total payment amounting to $74,081.70, on an amount due of $178,200, or 42 per cent; the Louisiana Conference is 24th on the list, having paid $65,520.93 of $158,600 due, or 41 per cent; the Mississippi Conference is 30th on the list, having paid $67,476.14 of $191,000 due, or 35 per cent. The Missouri Conference is at the head of the list, with 85 per cent paid, and the Northwest Texas Conference is at the bottom, with 10 per cent paid.

Dr. S. A. Steel, of the "Pelican Pines," Mansfield, La., has a series of lectures on the Bible which, to judge by the various titles, would be a valuable help in getting people to read the Scriptures if they could hear the series in its entirety. Some of the titles are as follows: "A Bird's-Eye View of the Holy Land of Scripture;" "The Wonders of the Gate of Entrance;" "In the Psalm Country;" "One of the Green Pastures;" "Why We Have Four Gospels." We have not been asked to say so, but we presume the Doctor would be glad to correspond with any of the brethren concerning the delivery of these lectures.

We learn from the Lincoln County Times, of Brookhaven, Miss., that the committee appointed by the Mississippi Conference to secure a location for the hospital enterprised by that body, met at Brookhaven on December 20. Three propositions were submitted, as follows: Jackson offered a site and $25,000 in cash; Hattiesburg offered a sanitarium already in operation, and a cash donation; Brookhaven offered $50,000 in cash and ten acres of land conveniently located. After discussion, the committee decided to postpone the selection of the site for ten days, with the understanding that revised propositions would be made by at least some of the towns interested.

Rev. Robert Randle, one of the oldest members of the Louisiana Conference, now on the roll of the superannuates, has made a remarkable record. During a ministry of fifty years, he has missed his appointments only fourteen Sundays on account of illness. For twelve years, he was a presiding elder, during which time he failed to reach only twenty of his quarterly conference appointments. For forty-three years, he has kept a complete record of his ministerial work—a storehouse of treasure for some future historian. He never had a vacation during his active ministry. While visiting his daughter, Mrs. R. C. Root, during the Christmas season, he honored the Advocate office with a call.

Dr. Henry Beach Carre, who was given leave of absence by Vanderbilt University to engage in Y. M. C. A. work in Europe during the war, has returned to this country, reaching New York on Christmas day. In addition to his service with the Y. M. C. A., Dr. Carre was actively engaged in temperance work while abroad. He was secretary of the committee that presented resolutions to the Peace Conference concerning international agreements for the prohibition of the liquor traffic, and was greatly in demand for public addresses. He has spoken on this subject in France, England, Scotland, Ireland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, and Lithuania. He is expected to be in New Orleans the latter part of this week for a few days' visit to his mother and other members of his family.

ADD THREE MORE.

We are glad to be able to announce that three more churches have accepted our Special Proposition to put the Advocate into every home represented in their memberships. Rev. P. H. Fontaine, of Eunice, La., while in the city for the holidays, dropped by the office to say that he had made arrangements to put the paper into every Methodist home at Eunice. A note from Brother W. T. Reeves, of Tupelo, Miss., informs us that Tupelo is to be counted on the Proposition, and Rev. J. E. Stephens, of New Albany, Miss., writes that the Advocate will go into every Methodist home in his charge as soon as he can make out the list. We also have information to the effect that other charges are preparing to do likewise.

The list now stands as follows:

Bernice, La., Rev. W. A. Manguin, pastor.
Baton Rouge, La., First Church, Rev. N. E. Joyner, pastor.
Ruston, La., Trinity, Dr. R. H. Wynn, pastor.
Holly Springs, Miss., Rev. W. R. Lott, pastor.
Franklinton, La., Rev. J. B. Fulton, pastor.
Eunice, La., Rev. P. H. Fontaine, pastor.
Tupelo, Miss., Rev. J. A. Hall, pastor.

PASTORS WHO WIN.

By Bishop Stuntz.

The pastors who succeed in this historic year of evangelism will win because:

1. They give evangelism the right of way. They will be men who create the atmosphere in which success is easily possible. They will concentrate. Conversation in the homes and offices and on the farms will be skillfully and with set purpose turned to soul-winning. Preaching will drive steadily yet wisely at the same point. There will be no series of sermons on the labor question or Babylonian monuments. They will "have nothing to do but to save souls."

2. They subsoil deeply before dreaming of harvest. They will recognize that the deeps must be broken up by dealing plainly with the great doctrines of sin and the new birth and the witness of the Spirit and the baptism of power. Even the Master saw little hope for the good seed which sprang up quickly when it "had not much earth."

3. They pray much and call others to prayer. "This kind goeth not forth" any other way. Here the rule applies, "Ask, and ye shall receive." No encouragement is held out to the man who is not sufficiently interested to ask, to seek, to knock—to persist until his forthright vehemence gets audience with Him who said, "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst." No great spiritual awakening ever came without intercessory prayer.

4. They organize all the forces for personal work. In some pastorates every unconverted man, woman and child in the constituency has already been located and allotted to some one person to be cultivated with a view to winning that soul for Christ.

5. They honor the Word of God. In all their preaching and all their personal work the Word of God bulks largely. They have discovered that it is the Word that is "the Sword of the Spirit."

6. They expect results in the regular services. In fact, the best "special" meetings are those which were brought about by the rising tide of evangelistic power in the regular services.

Brother pastor, why not win? And why not win gloriously?—Central Christian Advocate.

Certainly in our own little sphere it is not the most active people to whom we owe the most. It is the lives like the stars, which simply pour down on us the calm light of their bright and faithful being, up to which we look, and out of which we gather the deepest calm and courage.—Phillips Brooks.

AT THE DAMASCUS GATE.

During several hours of each day, week in and week out, no matter what the weather, a young Armenian girl in an old worn jacket stands at the gate of Damascus, and searches the faces of the passersby, with sorrowful, bewildered eyes.

She never speaks, and seldom moves, as she keeps her daily vigil. If some one pauses to speak to her, hope kindles for a moment in her eyes, and dies away again, when she finds that it is only for a casual greeting. Weariness is stamped on her face as night approaches, but she is never too tired to reman until twilight at the Damascus gate.

She has become a familiar figure of tragedy in that ancient city of tragedy, where many have come to know her story. The towns-people call her "Andzanot," which is Armenian for "Unknown," as do also the other girls at the Near East Relief orphanage where she lives. What her other name is no one knows, not even she, herself.

The shock of her deportation and of the terrible experiences that followed it in a Turkish harem have caused her to lose her memory. She was brought to the Near East Relief orphanage with scores of other girls released from captivity, a victim of aphasia. She spoke the Armenian tongue, but she could not tell her name, or where her home had been, or whether her parents were living.

For most of the other girls, the old life was gone, as completely as if it had never been. Their homes were destroyed, their relatives killed, nothing remained to them but memories. Andzanot had not even these. Her only memory was the black horror of those years of deportation.

One thing only seemed to be a link with her former life. That was an old white dress, badly worn, which she had brought with her, not the garment she had worn in the harem, but perhaps the one she had been wearing at her home when the Turks seized her. Of all her former life, that old white dress was the one thing she remembered. Sometimes when she looked at it, faint echoes of the forgotten past seemed to come to her, and her eyes would light up, as she mentioned some irrelevent detail of former days.

At the orphanage, she wears a neat blue-and-white gingham, like the other girls. But she always puts on the old white dress before she creeps away to the Damascus gate, to gaze at the crowds with troubled eyes. It is her hope that perhaps some member of her family or some of her former neighbors returning from deportation, may see her there, and that she will be no longer unknown. A patient little figure of sorrow, she stands there, waiting.

"When they come, they will know me by my dress, even if they do not look at my face," she says.—Near East Relief.

REJOICE EVERMORE.

There are dark days, but a smile will brighten any of them. There are sad days, but a song will cheer the saddest. There are days of disaster, but a cheerful faith will make them days of promise. There is a lot of religion in that simple refrain, "Pack up your troubles in your old kit bag, and smile, smile, smile." Crying never set a broken leg; wailing never raised the dead; fretting never recovered a lost dollar. The world loves the man of good cheer; the world is hungry for a smile. And even when our own troubles are at their worst, we may possibly help some one who is worse off than we. There is a lot of trouble in the world, but there is more joy than trouble; and even at its worst this old world is always open heavenwards. There is always a sky—and the Eternal Father. Why shouldn't we rejoice evermore?

1800 EGGS 112 HENS

Mrs. Harper writes: "I wouldn't be without "TWO for ONE" for the world; my 112 hens layed 1800 eggs in one month."

World's Greatest Egg Producer

"TWO for ONE" is the marvel of all egg tonics. It is the most remarkable producer of eggs ever known to the poultry world. "TWO for ONE" is making records every day in egg production that were never before believed possible. Flock owners all over the country are amazed with the results. The most experienced poultry experts say they have never seen the like of it.

"TWO for ONE" is not a mere food. It is an egg tonic in the truest sense of the term—a scientific preparation in concentrated tablet form—the result of scientific research and experiment. Every factor entering into the matter of egg production was scientifically studied.

As a result you have in "TWO for ONE" a tonic that conditions the hen for the utmost in laying capacity—that builds muscle and bone—that stimulates active functioning of the hen's reproducitve organs—that insures fertile eggs and 100% hatchings—that makes the laggard lay and increases the production of active layers. A tonic that gets more eggs for you winter and summer than you ever thought posssible.

$5000 Egg Laying Contest

Enter our $5000.00 egg laying contest. It's free to all users of "TWO for ONE." You not only double your egg production but you can win one of the big cash prizes we are giving every month. Full particulars in every box of "TWO for ONE."

Money-Back Guarantee

Don't take our word for it. Every box of "TWO for ONE" is sold under the distinct guarantee that if you are not entirely satisfied you get your money back. Take advantage of this offer and send for a box of "TWO for ONE" today.

Only $1.00 a box, or, our special offer of $2.00 for large box containing as much as three $1.00 boxes — enough for an entire season. This costs you 1-15 of a cent a day, per hen, or less than 1c a dozen for the additional eggs you will receive from your flock.

Kinsella Co., 2913 LeMoyne Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen: I want to increase the egg-laying ability of my hens, make more money out of my chickens and take advantage of the high prices that will be paid during the coming fall and winter. So please find enclosed $ ..... for a box of "TWO for ONE" as checked below:

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

A Happy New Year shall be the lot of all who stay close to God. Such an experience does not come as the result of a mere wish, however sincere the wish may be.

Team work is fine, well-worked-out plans are valuable, a keen intellect is superb, but after all, these and everything else, are of little worth unless God is in all and above all.

Let us begin the new year on our knees and continue in this attitude before God at the beginning of each day, so the promise of the Father may be fulfilled in us.

Several schools have promised to make the campaign for new members as soon as the holiday season is over. The earlier this is done, the better it will be for those inside and for those outside the school.

Many of the church buildings are already overcrowded. The Home Department will accommodate all that cannot get into the building. We could easily enroll a thousand members in this department in a few days. The Cradle Roll is of more value than many good men realize.

We ought to bring four districts to the third rank standard during the year. The hardest thing we shall have to do to accomplish this will be to get forty per cent of the schools to reach the third rank standard for the local school. This is the task of the district secretary with the help of all the district superintendents, local superintendents, preachers, teachers, presiding elders, Conference superintendents, field secretary and the General Board. It is a big task, but we have a bigger force to do the work. More than this, we have the pledge of Him who has all power in heaven and earth to work through us.

SOME THINGS UNCLE BILLY SAID AT THE TEACHER'S MEETING.

"I know two Methodist preachers that's pretty much alike—though one's a big man an' t'other's a small-sized feller. One of 'em sawed a limb off'n a tree b'ween hisself an' the tree trunk, an' was considerable messed up—both inside an' out—when he an' the sawed-off limb fell to the ground. The other one 'lowed his Sunday school to close up for the winter just 'cause the superintendent, who was a oldish sort o' man, didn't want to come out in bad weather."

"I'd like to meet the feller who first said that education was teachin' folks how 'to live externally, internally, an' eternally, 'cause I 'spect he's a pretty level-headed chap."

"Yes, Parson Abbott, that's all right 'bout veneratin' the Bible, an' I agrees with you; but we must remember that there's somethin' more'n just teachin' an' learnin' it—it must be translated into American life if it's to serve its highest end in this country."

"Let's join the Membership Campaign."

WHITE CHRISTMAS—TUPELO METHODIST CHURCH.

The celebration of White Christmas by our church and Sunday school on Sunday, the 22d inst., was beautiful, inspiring and helpful.

The decorations beautifully harmonized with the day and the spirit manifested. Never has self been so absolutely relegated to the background as on this day; the spirit of helpfulness and brotherly love, as portrayed in the voluntary offerings to our orphans, local charity and the starving Armenian children was, indeed, an inspiration.

The imprint upon the minds and hearts of the children and young people superinduced by such a spirit of absolute unselfishness and brotherly love, will ever live and bear fruit.

Total offerings for the day approximate $900.

This church, dear Mr. Editor, has accepted your proposition to put the Advocate in every Methodist home in Tupelo, and will send in list sometime in January.

W. T. REEVES.

FROM NEW ALBANY, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We have received seven members since Conference. The people have welcomed us very cordially for the year. The stewards have made a substantial increase in the pastor's salary. Our new elder, Rev. W. W. Mitchell, has been with us and preached two good sermons. We had a good quarterly conference.

Sunday, December 21, we had our every-member canvass for Conference assessments and we are over the top by about a hundred dollars; don't know yet just what we will be assessed for this year. You could not get the New Albany Methodists to do anything else but raise these claims the very first of the year.

By the kindness of a good Baptist deacon, there is a fine turkey at the Methodist preacher's house for Christmas.

As soon as I can get a complete list ready, every Methodist family in this church will get the Advocate. We are looking for a good year in the good town of New Albany.

J. E. STEPHENS.

New Albany, Miss., Dec. 23, 1919.

CHRISTMAS AT LAKE CHARLES, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: On last Sunday night we had such a profitable and happy time, I thought that I would let you and your good readers know of it.

One of the most impressive and appealing exercises ever witnessed by a Lake Charles audience was enjoyed by those who attended the First Methodist Church, Sunday evening. The auditorium was overtaxed, and the folding doors were opened and chairs placed in the primary room for the late comers; in the aisles, and in the space between the pews and the chancel rail, were placed primary chairs for the little ones.

The subject for the evening was the one used by the Sunday school for several years, "White Gifts," and the decorations were very effective in carrying out the theme, with a background of white and with green here and there to help. The simplicity of it made the effect very striking. Holly, with its bright red berries, was very much in evidence, with a wainscoting of palmetto. For the higher and hanging effect, the ever-appreciated, graceful bamboo vine was used. The last touch to the chancel and choir rails was that of Spanish moss covered with mica snow, which sparkled at every angle. We heard many expressions of appreciation of the beauty and effectiveness of the decorations.

The program was well planned, and was executed in all points smoothly and effectively. After a few words of introduction by the pastor, Rev. W. W. Holmes, a quartette was sung, "Holy Night, Silent Night," and prayer was offered by Rev. H. W. Bowman, resident presiding elder. That wonderful old Christmas hymn, "Joy to the World," which has brought us the message through so many years, was sung by the congregation.

The next number was a duet, "There's a Song in the Air, There's a Star in the Sky," sung by Miss Evelyn Price and Mr. M. L. Zook, which was followed by a beautiful and touching recital of Van Dyke's wonderful story.

Foley's Honey and Tar COMPOUND

IS A TIME-TRIED REMEDY that can be relied upon to get rid of coughs and colds that lead to serious illness if neglected.

Every User a Friend

"The only remedy we ever use for coughs and colds is Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. It has been our standby for years, and it never fails us."—T. H. Foley, Marquette, Mich.

"I surely know the worth of Foley's Honey and Tar, as I have taken it with good results. Also have sold hundreds of bottles."—A. L. Stansbury, Parkersburg, W. Va.

DO YOU NEED A KIDNEY MEDICINE?

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything, but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, it may be found just the medicine you need. Swamp-Root makes friends quickly because its mild and immediate effect is soon realized in most cases. It is a gentle healing herbal compound—a physician's prescription which has proved its great value in thousands of the most distressing cases according to reliable testimony.

At druggists in large and medium size bottles.

You may have a sample size bottle of this always reliable preparation by Parcel Post, also pamphlet telling about it. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents. Also mention the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Cuts and Bruises,

burns, stings, sores, boils and the numerous other mishaps amount to little. If left alone, however, and if aided by the careless touch of a dirty hand, an ugly sore will result and frequently blood poison. It is dangerous. Don't trifle. Apply Gray's Ointment immediately. It will instantly soothe the wound, cleanse the sore, kill the germs and put it on a steady road to recovery. Keep it on your shelf for every emergency. Its constant use for a hundred years has made it a family word in every household. Ask your druggist. If he can't supply you send his name to W. F. Gray & Co., 800 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn., and you will receive a liberal sample free.

14 HENS LAY 13 EGGS A DAY. EASILY DONE

Mr. Moore's Hens Lay When Eggs are Scarce. Here's the Plan.

"I had been getting 2 or 3 eggs a day from 15 hens. Then I commenced putting Don Sung in the feed, and am getting 11 to 13 eggs a day, with one hen setting. Don Sung is the best thing I ever found for making hens lay."—E. L. Moore, 518 Clayborn St., Danville, Va.

Mr. Moore used 50 cents worth of Don Sung in January. Figure his profit with eggs selling at around 70 cents a dozen. And this is no better than Don Sung is doing for thousands of others. Accept our offer just as Mr. Moore did:

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 462 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.—Adv

Buy a bottle of Renwar, and forget about that rheumatism. Renwar is an old well-established remedy. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and has thousands of friends. President L. A. Bauman of Varley & Bauman Company, Nashville, says, "Renwar entirely relieved me of my rheumatism." For sale by druggists. Price 50 cents. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. If your druggist doesn't carry Renwar in stock, tell him to order it for you from Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.—Adv.

A NATURAL STRENGTHENER.

The value of iron in medicine has long been known, but never more appreciated than today.

People are learning that in Peptiron—a real iron tonic—this most useful metal is so happily combined that it is acceptable to all, even those who, for some reason or other, have been unable to take it in the past.

Peptiron is an agreeable, easily assimilated, non-constipating preparation of iron, nux, pepsin, and other tonics and digestives, and is giving great satisfaction.

In cases where blood-cleansing and liver-stimulating as well as nerve-strengthening are needed, Peptiron is very effective and economically supplemented with Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills. These three medicines form the Triple Combination Treatment to which the C. I. Hood Co. is now calling attention as especially beneficial to sufferers from impure blood, weak, unstrung nerves, torpid and sluggish liver, or a generally run-down condition.—Adv.

300 EGGS A DAY

"Since using 'TWO for ONE' I get 250 to 300 eggs a day instead of 25 or 30" writes J. C. Hoff of Indiana.

This wonderful new egg producer has made thousands of dollars profit for poultry raisers all over the U. S. Now is the time to increase your egg supply when eggs are selling at $1.00 a dozen. Give your hens "TWO for ONE," the scientific tonic that makes layers and real money-makers out of every single solitary hen you own. Send $1.00 to Kinsella Co., 2911 Le Moyne Bldg., Chicago, for small box of our Special Offer of $2.00 for large box containing three times the quantity of the $1.00 size—a full season's supply. We guarantee to return your money if not satisfied. Enter our FREE $5,000.00 egg-laying contest; full particulars in each box of "TWO for ONE."

Christmas At Lake Charles

"The Other Wise Man," by Mrs. A. E. Price. For many years Mrs. Price has taught the Beginners' Class, and has used her talent of story-telling to impress upon the baby minds the wonderful truths of Christ; and last night to that large audience of "grown-up children" she brought the sweet story of the Wise Man who spent his life seeking for the King in a manner that left a lasting impression upon the hearts of her hearers.

The Christmas anthem which followed the story and was splendidly rendered, breathed the spirit of joy and worship over the coming of the Savior, whose birth we now celebrate. This anthem, as all of the other music, showed forth the loving and faithful service of those whose share it is to furnish the music for our church services.

In line with the heart of the message for the evening, "White Gifts for the King," and to tell how we may serve him by serving the "Least of these," Mr. Floyd Andrus read that beautiful poem, "Others," which is more than a poem—it is a prayer.

The pastor asked the Sunday school superintendent if there were any gifts from the Sunday school. In answer, the superintendent replied that, as formerly, the Sunday school had gifts of substance for the needy in our midst, and also money for the Armenian and Syrian orphans. The superintendent called upon the Cradle Roll, which was responded to by Mrs. R. L. Hale, superintendent, and gifts were presented by a bevy of dear little tots, many too small to reach their gifts of substance to the white baskets provided, and there were so many that the parcels, all fresh and white, had to be placed upon the floor.

The Beginners' Department was responded to by Mrs. A. E. Price, with many gifts of substance and money. The Primary Department was represented by Mrs. W. W. Holmes, and the children brought similar gifts. Miss Sara Gaunt was spokesman for the Juniors, and the Intermediates were represented by Mrs. S. A. Mayo, each department bringing its white gifts and money. One class had purchased and dressed a beautiful doll for a little girl that would not otherwise have had such a gift.

The Senior and Young People made response through Mr. Floyd Andrus, and brought forward their gifts of nuts and candy for needy children. The Men's Bible Class was represented by Mr. R. P. Howell. One week ago, when the pastor told this class that the United Charities wanted 70 pairs of stockings for needy children, and asked the class how many they would provide, the hearty and unanimous response of the class was: "We will provide them all." So last night 76 pairs were presented, as well as a cash offering for the Armenians.

The Busy Women's Class was answered for by the teacher, Mrs. A. M. Mayo, with gifts, as the others, and, in addition, specially prepared baskets for special families of the church. The Women's Missionary Society was represented by Mrs. S. A. Mayo, president, with similar gifts and four special baskets.

The Epworth League, as its share, provided 25 baskets, which were presented by the President, J. Bryant Horne. These baskets are to be filled and presented as love gifts, which will be distributed Wednesday night, when the Leaguers will serenade the "shut-ins" of the church.

Thus it will be seen that all departments of the church had an active part in the exercises and offering. Then the congregation and friends present were given an opportunity to have part in the cash offering, and from almost every pew the men, women, boys, and girls came flocking to the chancel to deposit their free-will offering to so needy and worthy a cause.

This was a very fitting and most happy closing of a day long to be remembered by many. At the morning service, after a forceful sermon by the pastor, two persons united with this church. And there are several boys and girls in the Sunday school who have offered themselves for membership, and there are several church members who offered to take special work in the Sunday school. As a closing musical number, Mrs. S. A. Mayo sang, very tenderly and sweetly, "He Gave Himself for Me," and the pastor then asked all those present, remembering this precious gift that the Savior made, to give their hearts to Him in loving surrender, and to give Him their lives in loving service.

This was, by far, the most beautiful and effective Christmas service ever held in this church, and its impression will live in the hearts of those who attended. The cash offering for the Armenian and Syrian orphans amounted to $120.15, and the offering of goods, provisions and clothing, after a careful sorting and classifying, was as follows:

Seventy-six paids of stockings and other clothing, 15 doz. oranges, 20 doz. apples, 36 pounds of nuts, 18 pounds of candy, 75 cans of fruits and vegetables, 26 pounds of rice, 18 pounds of potatoes, 20 jars home-made preserves, six pounds of sugar, 10 packages of oatmeal, six pounds of coffee and various other articles of food.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine; it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

THE SPHERE OF WOMAN.

[illegible] with [illegible] woman's sphere [illegible] as though it had a limit. There is not a place on earth or heaven. There is not a task to mankind given. There is not a pleasing or a woe. LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Social Service At Lake Charles, La.

The Social Service Department of the Woman's Missionary Society of Lake Charles, La., has established a Community Club for the colored women of the city. Mrs. W. W. Holmes, who is State Superintendent of Social Service, also has charge of the local Social Service work, and it was under her excellent leadership that this work was inaugurated. In October several members of the Missionary Society went to the C. M. E. Church, where about forty colored women had congregated. Mrs. Holmes explained to them the object of the meeting, and they chose at this time a President and Secretary for their society. A short program was given.

At the November meeting, an excellent program was rendered. Some of the best numbers were: A Bible talk, by Mrs. A. E. Price; a story told to the children by Mrs. R. L. Hale, and a solo, by Mrs. Seaman A. Mayo. Three excellent speeches were given by three of the teachers of the colored schools of the city. These women are intelligent, earnest, and very desirous of helping their race. Their speeches were practical to the point, and well expressed.

At the December meeting, there were sixty women and six men present, while fifty-five children and the grown people, too, listened to Mrs. Holmes tell two beautiful stories. Each meeting shows an increase in interest as well as in membership. The programs planned are attractive, and as practical and helpful as possible.

There are no rules, because all of the colored churches, except two, and their schools were destroyed in the storm of August 6, 1918. They need all they can collect for these, but we are planning to help equip the playgrounds when their fine, modern, brick school is built, for which the city has already issued bonds, and the work begun.

When we see the eager response to the little we have already done, we are thankful that it was put into the heart of the women on our State Executive Board to ask us to do this form of Social Service.

What Paine College Does.

[illegible] gentleman, a cultured Methodist, [illegible] of Augusta, Ga., was visiting [illegible] relatives in the western [illegible] of the State. It was a rural district [illegible] and a gentleman, who was a [illegible], said to her one day:

"There is a colored woman in this community who is doing a wonderful work. She is the teacher of the public school, but she doesn't stop with merely teaching books. She teaches the children to be neat and industrious and shows them how to work intelligently. She has been a constant visitor in the homes of her race, and soon the grown folks began to have better homes, better cooking, and a better life generally. In fact, the colored people of my plantation have improved remarkably since she came here. They work much more efficiently, and I have far less trouble in managing my farm. And it is due to that colored teacher."

"Now, she claims to be a graduate of a 'school' down at Augusta called Paine College. Do you know if there is such a school there?"

This gentleman was not a member of the church, and naturally did not know of this school, whose usefulness is so widespread. So the Augusta lady replied:

"Yes, indeed. That is the institution which our Southern Methodist Church maintains for the colored people, and it is located in the city of Augusta. The woman's missionary societies help to support that work, too. We have over three hundred students there and several of the teachers are Southern white people. But I had no idea that we were helping you to run your plantation."

The above is but one of many illustrations of the helpful and growing influence of Paine College. This institution is aiding greatly in the moral and material upbuilding of our Southland. Our newspapers rarely get such stories as the above, for race riots and lynchings are much more dramatic news stories. Nevertheless, real progress is being made by patient toil and high purpose, in spite of these occasional tragedies.

When the Southern people understand the true nature of the work being done at Paine College they give their hearty support to this cause. Our friends are steadily growing in number and interest.—Selected.

Logtown Makes Good First Year Record.

During the month of February 1919, there was organized the first Woman's Missionary Society in the history of Logtown Methodist Church. The meetings have been well attended throughout the year. The society has done unusually good work for its first year.

At the home of Mrs. John Barker on December 17, we held our last meeting for the year. An excellent program was enjoyed by each one present. The beautiful Christmas readings, stories, and songs were beautifully given by some of the members. All are ready for a greater year's work for missions.

A NEW USE FOR OLD MAGAZINES.

Every mission school ought to have as a part of its equipment a large collection of pictures to be used as illustrative material in teaching. The pictures needed in "visual instruction" are, for the most part, not the set pictures that must be bought, but the life-like, illuminating illustrations found in endless variety in books, magazines, advertisements and elsewhere, all about us.

Your co-operation in collecting such material is invited by the Kwansei Gakuin, the Union Methodist College of fifteen hundred young men at Kobe, Japan. Pictures in old books and magazines that you often throw away would be of great value there. Perhaps you might be able to interest some of your friends in helping forward this collection. LET GOD SHOW THE WAY.

By "Uncle Bill."

Sometimes the way seems dreary,
And alone you seem to stand;
Sometimes your heart grows weary—
Then reach up and take God's hand.
Forget all just a moment,
Only that God reigns on high,
And that Christ's great atonement
Was for such as you and I.

Though clouds have risen and darkened
Each step of the way you've trod,
'Twas when you had not hearkened
To the just commands of God.
Go, brother, and trust Him fully,
Both in shadow and the light,
And He will show you truly
The way that is best and right.

LOOKING FOR A MAN'S WORK.

"Man I am grown, a man's work must I do," said Gareth, in Tennyson's well-known tale; and there is a similar spirit abroad amongst young men to-day. In summoning men to the work of the ministry we must be sure to make it clear that it is really "a man's work." Our young men are not degenerate, and they are not afraid of hard work, but they require to be convinced that it is indeed a man's work to which they are being summoned. To those of us who have been brought up in Methodist parsonages, or in close proximity to them, the work of the ministry may appeal as one of the loftiest callings, one of the grandest tasks, to which a man can devote himself. But we cannot afford to ignore the fact that it does not so appear to many of our young men. To them is still present the old idea, found in not a few communions, that the work of the ministry is really not a task for a sturdy man, but rather the job of a pale-faced scholar or a physical weakling. That this is a mistake we do not need to show in this article, but we must point out that it exists and has to be faced.

And it is well to face some other facts. There are churches where the preacher will have to preach to possibly a dozen people, while within almost a stone's throw two or three other men are doing just the same thing. Candidly, we confess that this does not impress us as a man's job; and the sooner a change is effected the better it will be for all concerned. To ask a young man to devote his strength and energy to such a task, and call him a home missionary, seems rather an unreasonable thing, and we do not wonder young men, looking around for a truly "man's job," refuse to consider such a task.

And if the ministry is presented as mainly the oversight of prayer meetings and similar gatherings, the visitation of a few sick folk, and attendance at innumerable "talk-fests," it will not attract a good many of our young men. Those of us who attend the prayer meetings know that in most cases, not in all, they are but sparsely attended, and that by elderly people. To ask a young man to consider this as the chief thing in his life's work is asking something which will not appeal to a large number of Christian young men. The young man must see some future ahead of him, some prospect of growth, some big thing that appeals to him as really worth the doing. Does the Christian ministry offer this? We believe it does. But does it so appeal to our young men? We are not so sure of this.—Christian Guardian.

GIVE GOD THE GLORY.

We have been very greatly impressed by the statement of Marshal Foch in connection with the victory of the Allies that turned the tide of conflict in the war with the Central Powers. He says: "Without pretense that a miracle intervenod when, in a historic moment, clear-sightedness is given to a man, and that subsequently he finds that clarity of vision has determined movements big with consequences in this formidable way, it is my belief that clearness of percepton—and I think I had it at the Marne, at the Yser and on March 26—comes from a Providential source, in the hands of which one is an instrument, and that a victorious decision is brought from on high by a superior and divine will." It is one of the glories of our religion that it teaches that God cares and that he helps his people in time of need; it is one of the joys of experience to be able to say that God indeed has made himself felt in personal life and in historic movements. In spite of what some men say and think, we are glad that Marshal Foch publicly and reverently ascribes to God the glory for his own marvelous achievements. What a tragedy to think we ourselves are sufficient for all things!

INCLUDING HANGERS-ON.

According to newspaper reports, the attendanco at the opening of the racing season at the Fair Grounds in New Orleans on New Year's Day was nearly 12,000. The paid admissions numbered 8,800; the complimentary list, which includes "the horsemen, trainers and those directly connected with racing" makes up the total. In other words, racing has brought to the city this year approximately 3,500 people whose living depends upon a "sport" the mainstay of which is gambling. It may be a "great asset to the city," as its friends claim, but we cannot believe that any financial gain can offset the moral blight inflicted upon thousands of men and women by such "sport." The racing contingent is not made up of altruists—it expects to carry away more money than it leaves. So, even from the financial standpoint, racing is a poor investment for a city, to say nothing of the moral corruption involved. We hope to see a moral sentiment developed throughout Louisiana that will make impossible the infliction of such a curse upon any community within its borders.

THE RECORD GROWS WORSE.

Tho Department of Records and Research of Tuskegee Institute, which has come to be looked upon as the authoritative source for such information, issued on January 1 its annual report of lynchings in 1919. The record shows that there were 82 lynchings in that year, 18 more than in 1918. Of these, 77 were in the South, and 5 in the North and West. Of those lynched, 75 were Negroes, and 7 were whites. One of those put to death was a negro woman. By States, the record is as follows: Alabama, 7; Arkansas, 12; Colorado, 2; Florida, 5; Georgia, 21; Louisiana, 7; Mississippi, 12; Missouri, 2; Nebraska, 1; North Carolina, 3; South Carolina, 1; Tennessee, 1; Texas, 4; Washington, 1; West Virginia, 2; Kansas, 1. In noting the increase over 1918, we must take into consideration the fact that industrial and social conditions have been more unsettled in recent months than during any previous period of our history. This, however, is no excuse for a condition that is a reproach to Christian civilization. We must preserve the sanctity of our laws by unswerving insistence upon their orderly administration, or suffer the inevitable penalty of an unsafe land in which to live. All good people must join hands in the effort to insure every citizen a fair trial before the properly constituted courts of the land, no matter what the charge may be. Lynch law is the destroyer of public safety—not its guardian.

A MENACE TO AMERICA.

The arrest of nearly four thousand anarchists and radical agitators by agents of the Department of justice on the night of January 2 was a startling revelation to multitudes of people in our country of the extent to which treasonable propaganda has been carried on in many of our great centers of population. We have known all along that disgruntled and disloyal foreigners were inveighing against the Government; but most of us had not realized that there was such definite organization to overthrow our established institutions and set up alien forms. The purpose of the arrests was to furnish the Department of Labor the names of the most dangerous of these agitators, that they might be deported from our shores in accordance with recently enacted legislation. We are glad that the Department of Justice has acted promptly and vigorously. America has been a hospitable home for thousands of immigrants from less favored countries; but she cannot afford to harbor a horde of ruthless enemies. After deporting those already here, we should guard more carefully than ever before our shores against undesirable immigrants. There is a grain of comfort in the fact that the South seems to be, thus far, comparatively free of these violent agitators—there were 18 arrests in Baltimore, 20 in Louisville, and 5 in Jacksonville.

WE HOPE FOR THE BEST.

The National Council of English Teachers has instituted a "Good English Week," to be observed in public and private schools throughout the United States. The idea is to bring about a concentrated effort toward arousing public sentiment to the need, possibility and means of improving the speaking voice and raising the standard of usage in daily life. We know that improvement is needed, and we hope the "Week" will help. At the very least, most of us could eliminate one slang expression and be the better for it.

A BRUTAL EXPERIMENT.

According to press dispatches, the sheriff of Cook County, Illinois, recently tried an experiment in psychology which, if the reports are correct, should subject him to the loss of his office and criminal prosecution, if there is any law that could be made to cover the case. In carrying out the experiment, he compelled 200 prisoners to witness the hanging of a convicted murderer. In defense of his action, he issued the following statement: "In my opinion, the modern coddling of criminals by well-meaning but misguidod, sympathetic, theoretical reformers and self-constituted organizations is one of the greatest causes of the present crime wave in this city. * * The reformers are constantly advocating the adoption and enactment of laws which are for the purpose of alleviating the punishment of the criminal, forgetting and losing entire sight of the protection that law-abiding and peacable citizens are entitled to as against these human parasites." Even it we were to admit the sheriff's charges, which we emphatically do not, we should still hold him in execration for forcing men, criminals though they were, to witness one of the most horrible sights imaginable, for the sake of observing the effect it would have on their minds—and hearts. We hope tho people of Chicago will see to it that no further experiments of this kind are performed, even if it takes a new sheriff to insure against it.

THE CENSUS.

The taking of the fourteenth decennial census is under way. An army of 85,000 enumerators began work on January 2, and the work is expected to be completed in about two weeks, though the figures showing the total population of the country will not be available until some time in April. The count, it is estimated, will show a population of between 107,000,000 and 112,000,000. In addition to the enumeration of persons, the census will include data on farms, manufactures, forests, oil production, and other matters of national importance. Doubtless the enumerators will have the usual number of exasperating as well as amusing situations to deal with, but people generally will recognize the official nature of their inquiries and help them expedite their work. If the Government finds it worth while to make this exhaustive survey every ten years, surely the church would find it profitable to make an equally careful survey of its field once in awhile. We are glad that such work has actually been undertaken and is now being carried forward.

VALUABLE TESTIMONY.

The house surgeon of the Charity Hospital, New Orleans, is reported to have said recently, in connection with the number of accidents reported on New Year's Eve: "Prohibition has improved conditions wonderfully. Accidents are not only reduced in number, but in seriousness." We hope the anti-prohibitionists who insist that alcohol is man's chief blessing will properly consider this bit of valuable testimony by a competent witness.

"ONCE."

I once was lost. The fog of doubt
Hid rock and shoal from me—
But there came One whose pierced hand
Cleared all the gloom from sea and land,
"I am the Way," said He.

I once was blind. I drifted wild
On Life's dark, wreck-strewn sea,
Until One came who raised His hand
And Darkness fled at His command.
"I am the Light," said He.

I was a-hungered. I was faint
As Hagar's weary child.
One spread a feast and bade me sup;
He broke the bread and blessed the cup.
"I am thy Bread," He smiled.

I was athirst. I long had quaffed
The poisoned well of sin.
It failed to satisfy; but One
Brought healing waters. God's dear Son,
Let living waters in.

I once was sad. There came to me
A Man of gentle mien,
And as I wept His tears joined mine,
And soon my grief was joy divine.
My loss became my gain.

He is my All. My soul to Him
Doth all its tribute bring.
Each day I praise Him for His grace,
I long to see Him face to face.
And hail my Heavenly King.

THE SILVER RULE FOR THIS DAY.

By Byron H. Stauffer.

The Silver Rule was thus phrased by Emanuel Kant: "Act so that the maxim of thy will can at the same time hold good as a principle of universal legislation." Can we find this rule in the Bible? Turn to the Sermon on the Mount: "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father." They also! Do as you would have all men do.

Example is the thing. Personal responsibility is a Christian thought. I knew a man, the blatant infidel of a small community, who was constantly letting his church-going neighbors know how much was expected of them in the way of moral rectitude and square dealing. One day, when he was using very objectionable language on the steps of the post-office in the presence of men, old and young, I said to him: "I am surprised, sir, that you, an infidel, should use such language." His startled look was worth seeing. Then he waxed indignant and said: "I'm none of your hypocrite Christians, anyhow." Which meant that he didn't owe the world anything in the way of example. He had nothing to be consistent with. The moment a man feels that he owes his fellows a good example he assumes a Christian attitude. It is religious to ask: "If everybody does what I am about to do, will the world be happier or more miserable?"

Take the matter of personal conduct. Out of forty passengers on a street car one man was loudly whistling. There he sat, telling us that it was a long way to Tipperary. It made me nervous. Then I wondered whether I was getting peevish. I recalled that out in the country yesterday I had whistled uproariously. And yet it was manifest that it wasn't quite the thing for that man to occupy the center of that stage. Wherein was he wrong? What was the difference between his whistling there and my whistling in the suburbs? Why, this: If everybody in the street car imitated him, what a bedlam! But if the three men in the square mile in the country should all whistle at once, no one would be disturbed. So there is where our Silver Rule comes in, even in this trifling matter.

At every service one or more will be sure to leave during the last hymn. It may be that an occasional one must catch a train or keep an engagement. The others leave to avoid the crowded aisles. It is a slow job, this snail-stepping up to the door among the throng. And yet if those folks should just think one moment how it would look if the whole congregation made a rush for the door when the last tune was raised, they would see the selfishness of their act and stop doing it. But here is an invalid. He finds it difficult to attend church, and yet how he loves to go. So he slips in a bit late and leaves right after the sermon. Now our Silver Rule permits it, for if only those with feeble frame or runaway heart leave before the benediction, little harm can result.

There is the man who spits on the side-walk. He knows he is not tubercular, so where's the harm? Yet if he is told that he might after all be carrying the germs of disease, and at any rate some people who surely do will follow his example, he will stop his foul habit and obey the Silver Rule.

It is vicious to claim an exemption which all cannot claim. A man never goes with me on a camping trip twice who will not do his part of the chores, making the beds, carrying the water, cutting the wood. Suppose every camper shirked his part of the work. We are all fellow campers on this earthly journey. There are chores to be done, children to teach in religion and morals, churches to support with money and talent. Man outside the church, I ask you—if everybody did as you are doing, would we have a church or a Sunday school? But you say the church has outlived its usefulness. Very well, are you helping in establishing something better? So here is the place to apply the Silver Rule.

The Silver Rule is pre-eminently for commercial dealings. Whether you are rich or poor, employee or employer, borrower or lender, the rule applies in your case. Therein is its beauty. Ruskin defined a just act as one which, if all men should do likewise, will bring happiness to the majority. It has somewhat of the heroism of the soldier and the sailor about it. Suppose your city were besieged, or smitten by an earthquake. Food being scarce, you go to the distributors and seek by some special influence to secure an adequate allowance. What would an honest official say to you? Why, that if you get more than your share, some one else will have to go hungry. Hold to that a moment. Is not that a pretty good question to ask? What is my share? Taking into account intrinsic merit, capital invested, time devoted, skill acquired, what is my share? In profit and dividends, salary or wages, what is my share? Would that some of our many commissions could figure it out and impose its findings upon society; wouldn't that settle all our problems? If too much is paid in wages, the proprietor must suffer. If too little is paid to the toiler, poverty, vice and degradation will come. What if every man acted as I do; would it mean an earthly heaven or hell?

If all men reasoned as I do, what about the result? That is more important than you may at first blush imagine. Think what untold miseries the world has suffered because a piece of false logic was thrown into the German mind. The mediaeval mind accepted the autocratic church, and when men claimed the right to think for themselves they were put to the torture. * * *

Now the true Christian is responsible for his data and his logic. He ought to be able, since he is standing before his God, to render a catholic verdict, a decision which would be right in Germany or in France, among Conservatives or Liberals, a judgment righteous whether his own goods are in the balance or no. You say that is too much to expect. But the day must come when men will be fair with one another. That will usher in the day of the Lord.—The Christian Guardian.

"JUST ONE THING AFTER ANOTHER."

Dear Brother Carley: In my communication to the Advocate of November 27, I alluded briefly to the loss of members in many sections of our church and the widening gap between the church membership and the number in the Sunday school. And matters grow worse. The indications are that we will close the year with a slight loss. It is worse in the Methodist Episcopal Church than with us. The decrease in that body has reached 62,000, with more Conferences to hear from. Our Northern brethren, as I gather from Zion's Herald, feel humiliated, but not discouraged. The editor intimates that, in view of the great success of the Centenary movement, on which attention was centered, the overlooking of spiritual interests was natural. That looks like excusing oneself for negligence. Attention to the Centenary work may explain, but does not excuse our failure to reach our average annual increase in church membership; but it does not explain the loss last year of more than one hundred thousand Sunday school workers and scholars. What the explanation is, I do not know. They can be explained in part. For example: The statistics from one Conference showed no figures of any kind from ten charges. The figures of another Conference fell under the notice of a careful calculator. The loss of membership was so astounding that he was induced to make a count on his own motion. The count was a small fraction of the loss indicated by the official figures. Somebody had made a mistake.

The St. Louis Advocate of recent date carries an editorial paragraph of more than ordinary worth. It was on the abuse of the hour of worship with special reference to the interruption of the regular services by uninvited and unexpected strangers. All town and city pastors have more or less experience with traveling agents who come upon them late in the week, or on Sunday, after they have carefully prepared for the Sabbath, and ask for the use "of the eleven o'clock hour, or the evening hour if more agreeable." Some are considerate enough to write in advance and make an appointment. No man has the right thus to impose upon a preacher and his congregation—and should not be allowed to do it. This does not apply to regularly appointed representatives of the church. They have a right to our pulpits. The pastor should open the way for them and help them. But even they should not take a congregation by surprise. He is an exceptional man who can take a pastor's place on the Sabbath without doing harm.

I had been imposed on a few times in my early ministry before I made out a program. I determined that, if my congregation was to be bored, I would do the boring myself. I did a full share of poor preaching, and when I made an unusually sorry effort, and the people got tired and sleepy, they were not disappointed. If a stranger took my place, they expected something good. If he did not meet expectation, they felt bored and blamed me for allowing him to experiment on them. My method was as follows: If a stranger came on a mission, I first bored him (it is a terrible trial to a man to hear another man talk when he is anxious to do the talking himself); then I made an appointment for him at some hour in the week. In that case the congregation was his, not mine, and if those who came to hear were bored, it was their own fault. Of course I varied from my rule a few times. Only a few times did I ever take another pastor's place.

One Sunday afternoon a stranger put in his appearance at the parsonage. I had never seen him, but had heard of him. I knew him instantly. I knew his mission, but did not invite him to "occupy." I made an appointment for him to address the public Monday evening. About twenty of the faithful came to the meeting. The preacher was long, gangling, slow of motion, and the slowest man in speech I had ever heard. Among the hearers was "Aunt Henny," our only colored member—black and fat—always on hand, always had something to say to the preacher, and seldom failed to give him "a quarter." Sometimes "Aunt Henny" was a little free in her speech. On this occasion she waited at the door as usual, and when the preacher came near she said, "Well, I must shake hands with you. Did I ever see you befo'?" The preacher, in the slowest manner imaginable replied: "I don't know whether you ever did or not." Then came the knock-down blow: "You talked so much like a man asleep, I wondered whether I ever had seed you. You takes yer time, honey, you don't hurry, you don't." The preacher was short on answer. He simply said: "That's a compliment. "Aunt Henny" was not the only one disappointed.

Speaking of representatives of the church, agents, secretaries, etc., calls to mind some things said during the present round of Conferonces. At the South Georgia Conference, Dr. Bascom Anthony said: "Our Conference Boards are getting too autocratic, and I am getting tired of it." I have heard something like that before: "Government by secretaries." I do not know Dr. Anthony's particular grievance, but I think he is a little too strong in his charge. I know no board that assumes to be a law unto itself. Some things appear to many of us strange and unnecessary, but back of the things is the authority of the General Conference. The law concerning evangelism is one of the things. Some of us think that law is unnecessary, inasmuch as the General Conference cannot enact a law on evangelism, prescribing times, places, methods of work, etc., adapted to the varied conditions of our wide-extended connection. This the General Conference never proposed. And even if it did, it leaves presiding elders and preachers in charge free to avail themselves of the help of the Committee on Evangelism or not, as they may elect, for this committee intervenes and helps only "when needed." And who but the presiding elders and preachers in charge can say when the help of the Committee is needed? If under the operation of the law a preacher's work is a failure, let us not blame him, nor the Conference Committee, nor the Board of Home Missions which directs the work. Blame the General Conference which made the law. If it proves to be a hindrance rather than a help, we can repeal it.

The above thoughts bring to mind the fact that leaders in our evangelistic work are constantly increasing. Twenty-five years ago there were not more than ten men among us known as evangelists. Sam Jones was the first outstanding one among Southern Methodists. To-day evangelists are numbered by the score, and the stock is improving—probably due to the fact that the church in a sense has made of them "a separate order." And a great responsibility rests on them as representatives of the church as well as preachers. They have an open field and should be abundantly useful.

By the way, I see that our old friend and fellow-laborer, Brother Theo. Copeland, has entered the field. While I was editor of the Advocate and he pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, he came often to the office and we had many heart-to-heart talks. He greatly endeared himself to me, and ever since I have kept my eye on him with peculiar interest. He has made good in all the charges served by him, and I doubt not he will succeed as an evangelist. He does not enter the field as a novice. He has had much experience as a revivalist, having frequently traveled long distances to assist the brethren. Great success has crowned his efforts. He has located in Dallas, Texas. I heartily commend him to our brethren in Louisiana and Mississippi. JNO. W. BOSWELL.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Life consists of the old and the new. Longfellow wrote: "Look not mournfully to the Past, it comes not back again; wisely improve the Present; it is thine; go forth to meet the shadowy Future, without fear and with a manly heart." A new appointment is mine and yours—new people, new opportunities, new duties, new privileges, new experiences. May we not meet these with renewed courage, determination, vigor and faith? Don't sulk, don't nag, don't grumble, promise but little—unfulfilled promises have wrecked many fulsome preachers. God does the promising—you do the preaching. Be sure you are preaching the gospel, not talking about it, analyzing it, dissecting it, but declaring it as an accredited messenger of heaven—an ambassador of Christ. Paul preached it, though in bonds; you and I are not in bonds unless we forge our own fetters.

Why so fearfully alarmed about moving? It is the fashion of this age. Everything and everybody are moving—Galileo found out, some time ago that the world moves, and now the whole business is on wheels. "Move on," is the battle cry. Wake up, rub your eyes, get a new vision, or the procession will pass you by. Methodist preachers have more moving forces behind them than any body of men I know—bishops, presiding elders, boards of stewards, congregations, connectional boards, not to mention disgruntled members, and the brother's own inclinations. If some ingenious engineer could harness all this power, Archimedes with his lever would have to take a back seat—he would be superannuated. No wonder we move; the wonder is, we stay at all. "Rolling stones gather no moss," but who wants moss? Even the long Spanish moss is used only to make cushions, etc., and many cushions on chairs and lounges are a delusion and a snare. Methodism means movement—forward movement, looking the world in the face and sounding no retreat.

The Book of Discipline has suffered no little at the hands of its revisers, yet it contains much worthy of earnest, diligent study. It should more clearly state in whom certain powers of church polity are vested—some things are hazy, some contradictory. But the duties of the preacher in charge are clearly and fully defined. Every presiding elder should read them carefully. This will help him to know where he stands and help him to ward off some officious, pretentious intruders. If you don't keep off the crows, you will raise but little corn. The world is full of ecclesiastical crows looking for some poor man's corn patch. Selah. The primary meaning of "discipline" is mental or moral training. As a verb, it means "to train to obedience or efficiency." The idea of punisment is secondary. Our little book clearly has for its title the primary meaning—"Study to show thyself a workman approved."

After Christmas, D. V., I may wave another signal. Now to all who like my style and thought, may the joy of the Christ be yours.

A PLEA FOR HELP.

Away back yonder, when I first entered the field of pedagogy in a very rural community and had to "hear" lessons numbering from 30 to 40 per day, in my mind came some sort of a glimmer of present-day consolidated schools and the boon it would be to both teacher and pupil.

And being born and bred in the country, in the home of a country preacher, I, early in life, began to see the need of church-directed activities of children and young people; and again came a glimmer of some sort of plan whereby I might invest my life in helping to solve the problem of the non-church-going country populace.

Later, I entered the ministry of the M. E. Church, South, and found in its Publishing House such books and pamphlets as, I thought, stressed the activities of the Sunday school and advocated the building of church houses so constructed and equipped as to care for the "whole man." Needless to say, I reveled in such literature, for I thought I had seen the need of it so sorely all through these years. I went from one country "charge" to another, preaching, praying, prizing, blasting, attacking sin in both high and low places, realizing that not by might nor by power but by the Spirit of the Lord I should conquer.

Finally, I came to one circuit whose circumference from parsonage to the six churches was 40 miles, and which had in its boundary an ideal place for such a churchhouse. Their old building had been there for many a year, as its dilapidated condition mutely testified. Our nearest church was 8 miles; the others nearer were 2, Baptist and Christian, whose combined membership did not equal ours; no resident pastor of any denomination; 90 per cent of our members owned their own farms; an 8-acre plot of ground; a 2-teacher school which might easily grow into a consolidated school; a congregation of from 100 to 400, and unlimited possibilities for a Sunday school. I, in the simplicity of my soul, thinking I was following the teaching of my adopted church, set about to build such a house. I found some devoted and true men and women who were eager to follow in such an undertaking and who pledged of their means to build—one man giving every fourth dollar. We decided to use the rocks from the surrounding hillsides and the sand from the neighboring valleys to erect a concrete church. Last winter we began work, hauled rock and spent days breaking same — we used sledge hammers and elbow power. Bad weather set in and nothing more could be done until better weather.

After many weeks—and every adverse thing Sanballat and his crowd could say—we began again, got the foundation laid and enough concrete blocks to carry us to the main floor windows (we are putting in a 9-foot basement to be used as a community room). When our Conference, the North Mississippi, met at Aberdeen, with high hopes we started on our journey, laid our plans and request before the Mission Board, which enthusiastically took us up, gave us help and proposed to make it possible financially for us to stay there, giving full time to the place. Then, with the presiding elder's permission, to Bishop Kilgo we went, asking for more time for this place, to be met with the statements, "I couldn't do that if I wanted to." "We have no law in our church for such." "We have no literature along those lines."

So, alas for my life-time longings! for the precious hours given to the reading of the following and such like, "The Building of the Church." "The Church of the Open Country." "The Superintendent and His Work," "Conservation of National Ideals," "The Evolution of the Country Community." Of course these must go from my library, and I want some brother to tell me what I must read in order to reconstruct, or to construct a system of thought that would make me valuable as a country preacher? 213 BARONNE ST., NEW ORLEANS

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By S. A. Steel.

Well, Carley, I had all that trouble moving my books to Camp Idlewild for nothing. It proved too damp, and a kind lady offering me a deserted nagro cabin, I had to move them all again. I have them now safely housed in this cabin, not a library finished in maple, but rough and unceiled, and with cracks gaping wide on every side; but under a good roof. There is a massive oak just at the front steps, so I have named my humble study, "The Oak." I would be glad to think the tree is a symbol of my life and my work—deep-rooted, solid, firm in fibre, with wide-spreading limbs, typical of the liberal sweep of thought, and with towering crest, the emblem of noble aspiration. My cabin study is on the brow of a high hill, which is also suggestive; and while within a ten-minute walk of town, is remote, difficult of access, retired, and half-hidden by dense pine thickets.

Do you know that while I was straining at those heavy boxes of books I thought as follows: If Bishop Kilgo could see me doing this Samson stunt, he would say to himself, "We must have been mistaken about Steel's being a 'worn-out' man!" On one occasion during the siege of Richmond, Grant sent a flag of truce to Lee, asking a suspension of firing to bury his dead. He told the officer who carried the message to give General Lee his compliments, and tell him that he was so well acquainted with what was going on in his line, that he knew what he had for dinner every day. General Lee told the officer to return his compliments to General Grant, and to say to him that he was mistaken about knowing what he had for dinner; for if he knew, he would send him a part of his dinner, unless he had greatly changed from the Grant he knew before the war. So I thought if Bishop Kilgo is the same man he used to be before he fell under the influence of these Pelican P. E.'s, he would give me a lift on these boxes. But there he sits in his Piedmont mansion, in robe and slippers, while I tug and strain; and I'll give it up if he don't look as old as I do. Well, I've made up my mind that next time I "jine" the itinerancy I mean to head for the episcopacy from the word Go!

My cabin has a big, old-fashioned wood fireplace. Sister Steel burns gas in her room, and it is mighty handy on a cold morning; but she can't punch her fire. I can punch mine, and do, and as the sparks fly up the chimney it seems that in some mysterious manner thoughts steal into the mind. Did you ever sit in a big rocker, punch the fire, watch the sparks, and think? I was doing this the other day, and this line of thought came to me: The whole trouble of the world is due to the fact that we leave God out. We leave him out of business. A merchant seldom thinks of God as his partner; more likely, thinks you are off if you say he ought to take God in with him. We leave him out of society. The best church members have dances in their homes, and card parties, and serve wines on their tables. Think of inviting God to be at a dance! We think Mansfield is above the average in the moral character of its people; but God is not in the social life of the community. We leave God out of our education. The public schools formally exclude him, and it is to be feared he receives scant attention in many church schools. We leave him out of politics, both local, national, and international. Bishop Atkins told the Memphis Conference that preachers superannuate themselves because they cease to study, read up, and keep fresh, and in touch with the times. It was a big dig in the ribs for a fellow who had just been labeled a "superannuate" by the piney woods P. E's. I don't know whether Brother Jim would consider the Yale Review "up to date" reading or not, but I can assure him it is tough reading. I have just read the January number. It has a great deal to say, by eminent writers, about the problems of both national and world politics; and God is not in all their thoughts. We leave him out of our homes. Only here and there can you find a family altar.

So there is no mystery, Carley, about the abnormal condition of the world. It will never be better till we put God where he ought to be in every sphere of life. I am sure the erection of the family altar would be the shortest way to the objective of our hope. The Christian home is the sheet anchor of our civilization. I mean the "Christian" home, where God is worshiped morning and evening. The business man, the woman in her social relations, the educator, the public official, who goes forth to the day's activities from a home where genuine worship has given the keynote of the program, is not likely to go far astray. The most important thing we have to do is to rehabilitate the "derelict American home."

I see the venerable Tom Holloman has a new set of false teeth, and pokes his fun at my sound ones. Sour grapes, Tom, sour grapes! Well, it is the only thing false one ever knew about Tom. He's a sly scamp, however. I always will believe that it was this same Tom Holloman, bent on fun, who slyly pinned a white handkerchief to Dr. Wiley's coat-tail, and then, innocent as a saint, joined in the hilarious laughter and shouts about a flag of truce, as the dignified President of the College crossed the lawn, all unconscious that apparently his shirt-tail was fluttering to the breeze, and wondering what occasioned the uproarious mirth!

Much obliged for your dollar for my book, Carley. Now read it when it comes. I won't care if you jump on it, and "stamp the feathers off" it, for then somebody else will be sure to want it. If I don't get enough dollars before the bill comes, I'll feel like Jiggs always does about meeting Maggie after a visit to Dinty Moore's joint. A Presbyterian brother took ten copies on the faith that it will be worth reading, and paid in advance. He's elected.

"The Oak."

MEETING OF PREACHERS AND LAYMEN AT HOLLY SPRINGS, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: As secretary of the Holly Springs District Preachers' and Laymen's Meeting held in Holly Springs, December 15-17, I am sending you a copy of some resolutions which were unanimously adopted at the meeting and if you will allow, I will give you a very short sketch of what we did at our meeting.

It was practically a preachers' meeting exclusively, save when the district stewards met with us the last day. The time did not drag, nor was there any semblance of formality. Our presiding elder led us in a heart-to-heart discussion of the every-day problems which are peculiarly ours. Our individual method of private devotion; of reading the Bible; our home devotion; studying the Bible for sermonizing; building sermons; pulpit manners as to detail; methods of filing; good books we had read recently; how to make pastoral visits, are some of the subjects we discussed informally.

Rev. B. P. Jaco was with us and gave us a great sermon at the evening hour, on the 16th. One layman said to me that it would stand out in his mind as one of three the greatest sermons he had ever heard. Brother L. P. Wasson enforced on our minds and hearts at the Wednesday evening hour the necessity of being true witnesses for the Master.

There was good spirit and every preacher and layman, we believe, went away benefited and resolved to be a more efficient and faithful servant of the Lord. W. R. LOTT, Secretary.

Resolutions.

Realizing the need for a revival in our church and having a vital interest in the advancement of the Kingdom of God through our church, we look with favor and deep interest upon the proposal for a church-wide effort in evangelism during the coming Conference year. We are heartily in sympathy with, and endorse the spirit which inspires, and long to see great results in the church by a co-operative effort on the part of all pastors and laymen to bring men to a saving knowledge of the gospel of Christ.

It is well understood that the pastor is the logical and designated leader in his own charge; but we are convinced that if the pastor in every charge is praying to God for leadership and exhorting his people to consecration and activity, much more will be accomplished.

Feeling that some concerted, detailed plan should be agreed upon among us as preachers of this district, we recommend the following:

1. That as early as possible a religious census be taken in every charge.

2. That we study evangelistic literature sent to us by the Centenary Evangelistic Committee and as far as practicable use such suggestions as are made therein. We urge especially that pastors study carefully the Standard Plan for the Evangelistic Campaign.

3. That we take the laymen of our charge into our confidence and through them seek to carry the spirit of the campaign to every individual.

4. That we endorse the Standard Evangelistic Campaign for Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues and urge every pastor to carry them out as far as is practicable in his local organization.

5. That we as pastors "tarry till we be endued with power," and that we constantly sound the clear note of evangelism by preaching the fundamentals of our faith, calling men to repentance and confession of Jesus Christ, and that we look forward to and prepare for a thorough and specific evangelistic campaign in every charge during the year.

6. That the pastor appoint at once the Disciplinary evangelistic committee, and that regular meetings of that committee be held, and that work be pushed from the beginning of the year.

7. That we look to our presiding elder as the evangelistic leader of the district and pledge ourselves to co-operate heartily with him to make this a great and telling year in the salvation of souls.

EPWORTH LEAGUE EVANGELISTIC SURVEY, FEBRUARY 8-15, 1920.

The purpose of the Epworth League Evangelistic Survey is to discover the young people holding membership in our church who are not at work, and to discover the young people outside the church for whom our church is responsible. This survey will be of no value unless we carefully and prayerfully make use of the information revealed by the survey. If we secure the name of a young person who is a member of the church but not at work, of what value is this information unless we persuade that one to become active in the work of the Kingdom? Or, if we secure the name of a young person outside the church for whom our church is responsible, of what value is it unless we persuade that one to become an active Christian?

It is estimated that there are approximately five hundred thousand young persons between sixteen and thirty years of age holding membership in our church but not actively engaged in any form of church work. The majority of these young people are in churches where there are no Epworth Leagues. Out of the nineteen thousand and seven hundred churches in Southern Methodism, only four thousand have this organization which is for the development of the spiritual life of the young and their employment in the work of the church.

According to an estimate made by the Survey Department of the Centenary, our church is responsible for the evangelization of some two million people who are in the territory served by our church. Of this number, probably six hundred and fifty thousand are between sixteen and thirty years of age.

If the Epworth League fulfills its mission, it must serve these one million young people who are either outside the church, or in the church but inactive. Through the Epworth League survey we should discover them, and then by means of personal work and other evangelistic methods enlist them in the work of the Kingdom.

An appeal is therefore made to all pastors and Leaguers to discover, win and train this mighty army of young people for service in the church.

"MULE MANICURISTS."

By Rev. Geo. H. Thompson.

Others may say as good things as Bishop Candler, but none say them like the wise Bishop. When he presided over the Mississippi Conference which was held in Meridian some years ago, he said something like the following: "I want to admonish you preachers that you can not do all the good things that need to be done. I doubt not that there are a great many mules in the country that need their tails sheared, but I would not advise you to go into the mule-tail shearing business." The point is plain, and the lesson is obvious, but I fear that we are metaphorically manicuring the mules' narratives.

All members of an Annual Conference have professed a divine call to the ministry of the Word, and have accepted authority to preach the Word, and to administer the sacraments. I have been told that about five hundred men holding Annual Conference connection, and on the effective list, in the Methodist Church, South, are at present detached from the work of the itinerant ministry, many of them holding positions not connected with our church, while pastoral charges are left without pastors, and others are served by incompetent supplies. May we not subject ourselves to the charge of experimenting with untrained men in the shepherding of souls to see if they are fit to hold a professorship or a secretaryship in the Grand Order of Mule Manicurists?

Some of our most useful men are devoting themselves wholly to revival meeting work, and we have come to call these evangelists. We need them, and they are doing a great work. But we have need to fear that we may debase this position to the point of destroying its usefulness by making of it a "pocket," into which men are put who never held a revival meeting. We have Conference evangelists, district evangelists, singing evangelists, and I am listening for some brother to ask for a position as whistling evangelist. He will be sure to get it, if he is hard to handle by the bishop's cabinet.

Pastors never had so many calls to serve tables for organizations as now. Hardly a day passes that some appeal does not come through the mails to help some semi-benevolent institution with appeals for time or money. These institutions seem to be multiplying with greater rapidity than the famous "Pigs Is Pigs." So many are rushing in to "take care of the poor" that one wonders if there will be enough of the poor to go around. The interest of the really poor will be conserved by abolishing certain "charitable" institutions that administer on an eighty-five per cent commission basis. These institutions have about as much love for the church as a barber has for a Bolshevik, except when they can use the pastors in making financial drives. If the drive needs to be made, let the church make it; then the needy will get one hundred cents out of each dollar contributed, and the church will appear as the real helper and benefactor.

Are we not in danger of overmuch caring for the poor? The most difficult money that I have ever tried to administer has been for the poor. Deserving poor will suffer in silence, while the "professional" is ever before you with fathomless needs. Whoever fosters parasitism does himself nor his fellow-man any real good. Some religionists seem to disagree emphatically with Paul when he said, "And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not love, it profiteth me nothing." They have told us that death on the battle-field might purchase salvation. They have tried to measure the Salvation Army as a religious institution by the giving of doughnuts. When I am called on to see God through the hole of a doughnut, I don't look. We may worship God with them, but He does not show Himself through them.

The early church soon learned that it was not well for the teachers to leave the ministry of the Word to serve tables, and laymen were chosen for this purpose. Methodism saw the wisdom of this arrangement, and chose stewards for that work. The draft made on our pastors for this kind of work to-day, does not come from the church, but from these hybrid institutions that are without pride of descent and much hope in posterity. It is an important part of a pastor's work to convince the world that "man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Lazarus in rags, covered with sores and begging for crumbs, was valuable enough when he died for God to give him angels for pallbearers, and to give him a bed in Abraham's bosom; while the rich man, with all his fine dressing and high feeding, was so worthless that God threw him into His junk-pile.

Man is to be made free through knowing the truth, and not through soup and doughnuts. Emancipation of the world through preaching Christ is the task to which the preacher is called. I am sure angels would not mind the task. Is not there need enough for this in the smallest charge to demand all of a pastor's time and powers? If not, and you have time to shear mules' tails, I would advise that you secure a position in the public school as teacher, or a clerkship for some merchant, that you might furnish the wife and children better food and more clothes, rather than divide your time and powers in the interest of some move that is chiefly concerned about what they can get out of you and the church.

In to-morrow's mail you will get a letter, the first paragraph of which will be a sort of Hoyt's German Cologne spray. It will remind you how busy a man you are, and that you are so influential in your community that your influence is absolutely essential to the success of the contemplated enterprise. The next paragraph will tell you that there is to be held on the Pinnacle of Distinction, at a very early date, a grand rally of the Grand Order of Mule Manicurists, at which will appear with great inspiration The Most High Headknocker of World-Wide Mule Manicurists; that it will be a treat too rare for you to miss, and, rather than to fail in having your presence and help, that your expenses will be paid. All of this to get you there, so that they can send you back home to collect money enough to pay your expenses, and the expenses of all the state officers of the Grand Order of Mule Manicurists. If you go, do not expect me—I will not be there.

Now, Mr. Editor, my digestion is good, and to date no complaint has been made against my gall, but I am not hunting any mules to manicure. If this paper is not good for anything else, it will be good to start your kindling to burning.

OLD SHARON.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D. D.

To many of your readers, the above heading will mean nothing, but believing there are a few remaining who will appreciate, I write for them. This historic place, once a center of education and culture, is known to few of the present generation. Since the writer first knew it, fifty years ago, its decline is evident. Madison College, a two-story brick building, with wooden structure for preparatories, has declined to community high school. Connected with this institution are the names of Thornton, Pugh, Hunnicutt, H. F. Johnson and Chas. B. Galloway. It was while at the head of Madison College that Dr. Johnson was elected to the presidency of Whitworth, which he placed, by his energy and culture, upon the high level which it has since maintained, and from which so many young women have gone to bless the State and church. It was the writer's great privilege to be under him, and he owes to him a better knowledge of the English grammar than to all others who had preceded him. As a youth, I recall him as a master of our mother tongue.

As an institution granting diplomas to young women, Sharon Female College had a longer life educating the girls from the several neighboring counties.

Associated with the town life were the names of Montgomery and Wiggins, prominent members of the Mississippi Conference, the latter of whom is the first minister whose text and discourse I recall, though but a child of 7 years.

A recent visit to the community revealed the relentless and ruthless marks of years. It is now a straggling village, the old male college being used as the building for the community day school, the female college leaving no trace and the site being occupied by a private residence.

The large old church has been replaced by a smaller structure, the well-kept, nearby cemetery has grown larger, with many stones bearing names now forgotten by the present generation. Here lived Grandma Boll, who lived beyond her 98th year.

Here to-day lives one of God's choicest saints, Mrs. Margaret Muse (the first person upon whom my hands were laid in baptism), "Miss Dink" to everybody for a long time, then "Auntie Dink," and now, in a mellowing old age, "Mother Dink" to all who come; crippled with paralysis, she ministers to all.

Sitting with Bible of large print on the table at hand, studying its meaning, she rejoices in its precious truths. I found the New Orleans and Nashville Advocates in the home, which are passed on to others when read.

But lest I yield to the temptation to go beyond your limit in these reminiscences, I close.

TRACT REVIEW.

Reply of Rev. Isaiah Watson, Pastor of Emanuel Baptist Church, Baton Rouge, La., to "Nine Reasons Why I Am Not a Baptist," by Rev. P. O. Lowrey of Louisiana Conference M. E. Church, South; $2.25 per dozen; $15.00 per hundred.

Mr. Lowrey has the following friendly remark on Mr. Watson's reply to his tract:

"Pleasant Hill, La., Dec. 13, 1919.

Rev. Isaiah Watson,
Baton Rouge, La.

Dear Sir and Brother:

I am in receipt of a copy of your reply to my "Why I Am Not a Baptist," and suppose I am under obligation to you for sending me the booklet. I thank you for the same.

In reply I think that you have done just what would have been expected of one holding your views of the Baptist as being the only church of Christ, and I am sure you will find many readers of what you have had to say.

If you advertise in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, I am sure you will sell lots of your booklets to those who have read mine.

Fraternally yours,
P. O. LOWREY."

There is greater assurance of the reality of our possession of eternal life when once the heart has been given to Christ than there is of the reality of our possession of earthly property. Earthly possessions depend upon the integrity of men, but our possession of eternal life depends on the integrity of God.—Faris.

EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN

Crowning Glory of the Centenary

PRIOR TO THE CAMPAIGN EACH CHURCH SHOULD MAKE A SURVEY IN ORDER TO MEASURE ITS EVANGELISTIC OPPORTUNITY AND RESPONSIBILITY.

Why This Survey?

I. It Is in Keeping with Modern Efficiency.
It is not enough to open the meeting and preach to those who chance to come. We must survey the field and locate the persons to be reached.

II. It Is in Keeping with the Command of Our Lord.
He said "preach the gospel to every creature"—not just to those who attend public preaching. The only way to find "every creature" is to make a survey.

III. It Will Discover Unidentified Methodists.
Thousands are lost to the Church by failure to take membership with them when removing to another community. Through a survey these may be reached and restored to membership before they drift too far from the Church.

IV. It Will Reveal Potential Methodists.
No Church can face its Lord and say it has done the best it could until every one who would be a member of that Church, if converted, has been approached personally concerning his surrender to Christ.

V. It Will Afford Approach to Those Who Have No Church Preference.
The only way to discover the nonchurch population is by a survey. In this way we shall be able to do our best to reach and save those who are indifferent toward all denominations.

The success of the Evangelistic Campaign depends largely upon an Accurate Survey. Every Methodist may have a part in this work. Co-operate with your Pastor. Make the Survey. Do it now.

WHAT MAKES GRANDMA CROSS.

My mamma's gone away to-day,
And grandma's cross;
My mamma told me to be good.
I've tried to help just all I could
And haven't done a thing that should Make grandma cross.

I cleared away the breakfast things,
Quick as a fly;
The gravy spilled a little mite,
Although I hugged the platter tight.
But, if I was an "awful sight,"
I didn't cry.

I went upstairs to make the beds
And dust around;
I filled the bathtub to the brim,
So Jack Tar could learn to swim—
And then I jumped in after him
Before he drowned.

I really thought the parlor should
Be dusted, too;
An angel fell down on his face
And hit a Royal Worcester vase—
I put the pieces back in place
With Stickum's glue.

I've been as good as good can be—
But grandma's cross;
I've swept, I've ironed all my clothes,
I've washed the windows with the hose.
What in the world do you suppose
Makes grandma cross?

THE RED-HEADED BOY.

"There's that awful red-headed boy in a fight!" The sharp voice belonged to the sharp-faced teacher of the fifth grade, who happened to be on duty at the noon recess. She hurried to the struggling boys, and with the assistance of another teacher managed to pull them apart.

"Young man," she addressed the owner of the red hair, "this is not the first fight you've had on these grounds, but I certainly hope it will be the last." She marched the panting boys to the principal's office.

In the meantime a red head had appeared at an upstairs window; one glance from a pair of intelligent brown eyes took in the situation, and the head disappeared.

"Yes, I saw him, with my own eyes, rush at the other boy, grab him by the collar and fling him down!" The sharp voice was pitched so as to enter the principal's ear and penetrate to his rather kind heart, arousing it to execute a righteous judgment on the red-headed culprit.

"Be seated, boys. What grade are you in?" The red-headed boy looked up.

"Indeed, I'm sorry to say he is still in mine!" The sharp voice had emphasized "still."

"Did you attack this boy first?"

"With my hands, yes, sir."

"Why do you say 'with your hands'?"

"Because he attacked me first, with his tongue."

The principal looked at the other boy, who grinned and flushed.

There was a tap on the door. "Come in!" called the principal; and a tall young woman with red hair and brown eyes entered. She looked sympathetically into the eyes of both boys, causing them both to blush with shame.

The red-headed boy blushed because he remembered the fight he had the previous year; and how this red-headed teacher from another grade had walked all the way home with him; and how she had told him that God had made both their heads red; how He had numbered each of those red hairs; how that it did not just happen to be red, but that God had permitted it to be that color; and that it was wrong to fight about it, because it was like reproaching his Heavenly Father for making it red.

"Have a seat, Miss McClain; I'm glad you have come. Now," to the black, drooping head, "how did you attack him first with your tongue?"

Both boys' faces got redder. After an embarrassing silence, the red head was thrown back, and a pair of honest blue eyes looked at the principal.

"He don't want to tell you, because Miss McClain is here. Please, Miss McClain, go out! Then you can come back when we holler, 'Come.'"

The blue eyes looked beseechingly into the brown eyes. The principal raised his eyebrows; the thin lips of the sharp-faced teacher curled contemptuously; Miss McClain laughed merrily.

"Excuse me, Professor; but perhaps you don't understand. Why, it's something about red heads. You see, Pat is so sensitive on the subject that he can't realize that I'm not at all so. Don't mind me, Ernest, just speak the truth"; but the boy only looked more ashamed of himself.

Miss McClain smiled knowingly at the principal. "He called him a red-headed, freckled-faced Irishman, I expect. Was that it, Pat?"

"Ask him." Pat Dillon nodded his red head toward Ernest's black one.

Ernest raised his black eyes, full of tears of shame, to his teacher's intellectual face; and the look in her eyes brought him to his feet.

"Professor," he stammered. "I—that's exactly what I said, only—that wasn't all. I said that his mother nearly whipped him last night because she saw a light through the transom and thought he was still reading after she had told him to put out his light and go to bed, but she found it was only the light from his head. I—I didn't know how low down it was, until—until Miss McClain came in."

Miss McClain's eyes regarded him. She was proud of her pupil.

Pat was on his feet before Ernest had finished. "It was my fault! I promised Miss McClain last year that I would stop and spell 'God made it red' before I fought about it; and I forgot today; but it is the first red-headed fight I've had since I promised her," and they all believed it.

The principal rose and shook hands with the boys.

"Now shake hands with each other—that's right. Pat, my boy, I believe this is to be your last fight on account of your hair. Now, I want you to study your hardest, so I can promote you to Miss McClain's room. I think there you would soon learn to appreciate red hair."

Pat Dillon was promoted at Christmas, and from the day he entered Miss McClain's room—and looked into her eyes—he became a different boy. He was from the beginning her messenger, because, when she looked up to select some one, a pair of eager blue eyes begged to be of service.

The principal watched with interest the development of the red-headed boy by the tactful, intelligent, red-headed teacher.

"Miss McClain has the best-behaved grade in school. I've taught it twice," declared one senior to another whom she met in the hall, on her way to fill Miss McClain's vacant seat.

"I'm certainly glad to hear it, for I'm awfully nervous about teaching boys and girls of from ten to thirteen; they are simply at an abominable age! I'm not surprised that she has these violent headaches come on suddenly."

"Don't you worry. If you want any information, just ask that red-headed boy; he's a treasure."

The nervous senior found the report to be true, and everything had gone on smoothly until the arithmetic class was called, and eight pupils were at the board, when suddenly the fire alarm rang.

"The fire drill!" exclaimed the senior, excitedly.

"Fire, fire, fire!" shouted a voice in the street below.

The senior sprang from her seat and rushed from the platform. Pat raced down the aisle, caught her in his arms and carried her back to Miss McClain's desk.

Interest in Pat's maneuvers had saved the grade from panic.

Holding the struggling, half-hysterical senior, Pat gave the necessary number of sharp, commanding taps. The grade responded mechanically; but when the little girl who led the line looked into the smoky hall, and saw white-faced teachers struggling desperately to control themselves, and the crooked line of crying girls and excited boys, she hesitated.

"Ernest, lead the line!" commanded Pat, "and every one hold on to the one in front!"

From the foot of the stairs the principal saw Miss McClain's grade holding their lawful place next the wall. A line too compact to be broken, they came on past him, and in their rear came a red-headed boy, dragging an unconscious senior.

In the morning paper was the principal's account of how Pat Dillon, in the absence of his teacher, had preserved the honor of the sixth grade. Miss McClain read it, and was proud of her red-headed boy.—Christian Instructor.

Life is like the summer's day; and in the first fresh morning we do not realize the noonday heat, and at noon we do not think of the shadows lengthening across the plain, and of the setting sun, and of the advancing night.—Canon Liddon.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as prompt as a written receipt. When renewal is made if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks notify us and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to Lock Box 51, Canal Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of blank ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page. Leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page. Do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No alteration will be made in mailed manuscripts.

Editorial

CONCERNING THE SPECIAL PROPOSITION

We are delighted with the response we are receiving to our Special Proposition to send the Advocate one year for one dollar where the paper is sent to every home represented in the membership of a church. As we stated clearly when the Proposition was first made, there is no margin of profit in that price under present conditions; the sole object in view was to enable the Advocate to do as much good as possible by reason of its wide circulation in given communities.

In order to protect ourselves against actual loss, we are compelled to add another condition with reference to churches that have a small membership. The proposition as restated is as follows: WHERE THE ADVOCATE IS SENT INTO EVERY HOME REPRESENTED IN THE MEMBERSHIP OF A CHURCH, WE WILL SEND THE PAPER ONE YEAR FOR ONE DOLLAR, PROVIDED THE NUMBER IS NOT LESS THAN TWENTY-FIVE.

The Proposition—as this restates it—applies to individual churches composing a circuit, as well as to small stations. It would be manifestly impossible for us to send the paper for one dollar in cases where the entire membership embraces just a few families.

In all cases except those covered by the terms of the Special Proposition the subscription price is $2.00 a year. We have no club offer. We can no longer make it the dollar rate, no matter what the size of the club may be. The ENTIRE MEMBERSHIP must get the paper for the reduced price to apply.

We must insist also upon the condition that the entire list, accompanied by cash or its equivalent, must be sent in one time. In every case let the names and the cash come together.

We are on the way to our goal of a minimum subscription list of 70,000 by March 31, 1920; everybody will help, we shall go beyond it. We are counting on the hearty co-operation of all our people in Louisiana and Mississippi.

DEFINITE WORK FOR 1920

In considering the work that lies before us for the year 1920 we believe it will be well to be clear in mind the definite undertakings that will engage our attention during the months immediately ahead of us. The Bishops have assumed official oversight of our Conferences with the purpose in mind of making certain outstanding achievements the goal of our endeavor for the year. Our Conferences have also adopted certain definite tasks as their contribution to the general program for the year's activities.

First of all, we are committed to a year of special evangelistic endeavor. The time has come when we need to lay emphasis upon the fact that the church of God is the one divinely established agency for the salvation of the world. Its supreme mission is the proclamation of the gospel of Jesus Christ in order that men may be turned from their sins into the way of everlasting life. We need to remember that salvation is a personal experience not a social process, and that this personal experience is entered into by men and women who are made to realize their personal responsibility to God for the lives they live and the characters they establish. While we may believe that the world is growing better in a general way all the time the fact that countless thousands of souls are going to destruction every year is enough to send us to our knees in prayer for an endowment of power that will enable us to be the means of saving some who otherwise would be lost. We thank God for what the church has accomplished in the past; but we stand face to face today with the fact that its membership if not actually growing smaller is making slow increase, and that the currents of evil are sweeping multitudes of people to a hopeless doom. We must have a revival.

It is the fact we are concerned about, and not the method. This is no time for the forces of the Kingdom of God to expend or waste their energies in the mere incidentals of a great campaign against the entrenched forces of wickedness. Our hearts are as one in the desire to see men saved from their sins, and there is no difference of opinion as to the need and nature of the work to be done. In all our Conferences in every district and in every pastoral charge an evangelistic campaign is to be waged this year that should result in such a spiritual awakening as the church has not seen in many a day. Above all things Methodism in Louisiana and in Mississippi should arouse itself this year to the fighting of personal foes in village and hamlet and town that will grow into a mighty blaze of spiritual fervor that will bring the light of salvation to multiplied thousands who are now living in spiritual darkness. In our preaching services, in our prayer meetings, in our Sunday schools, in our Epworth Leagues, in our Missionary Societies, in our gatherings of every kind, we should bend our energies to the accomplishment of the task to which we feel the Spirit of God is peculiarly calling us in this day—a genuine revival of religion among all the people.

In addition to the evangelistic work which our Conferences have undertaken, educational interests which should be benefited and materially strengthened. In the North Mississippi Conference these interests center in Millsaps College and in Grenada Female College; in the Mississippi Conference in addition to Millsaps College, Whitworth Female College, Brookhaven Female College and Mississippi Conference Female College and the Summer School, and the Shelton Normal School are the institutions which are working for the permanent establishment of Christian education. Centenary College and Centenary Female College constitute the opportunities for a Methodist work in the field of religious education. We must not forget the interests of Methodism in the city of New Orleans, but we call attention at this time to the fact that it is time for a great forward movement in the educational activities of these institutions. We must have a larger equipment and a more adequate endowment for the work they are doing. We must have a larger number of consecrated men and women who will give themselves to the work of these institutions as teachers. We must have a more liberal support from the Christian people of our territory. We must put our educational institutions upon a solid foundation.

There are also several benevolent enterprises of great worth in which all our Conferences are engaged. The North Mississippi Conference has a part in the establishment of the Methodist Hospital in Memphis which bids fair to become one of the great institutions of its kind in the South. The same Conference also has enterprised this year to undertake to raise $250,000 as a Superannuate Endowment Fund—a movement which ought to commend itself to the liberal and enthusiastic support of its entire membership, both clerical and lay. In addition in connection with the Mississippi Conference it maintains the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson which is doing a work of incalculable value.

The Mississippi Conference in addition to its interest in the orphanage at Jackson and a constantly growing interest in the support of its superannuates has undertaken the establishment of a hospital at Hattiesburg an enterprise which will require large financial support for its equipment and maintenance.

The Louisiana Conference is engaged in working out a plan whereby the orphanage at Ruston may be enlarged and equipped to enable it to meet efficiently the increasing demands upon it. Already much has been accomplished in the way of raising funds, though the necessary amount is not yet in hand. It is hoped that the work can be completed this year.

It is easy to see from this brief survey, which is not intended to be an exhaustive statement as to all the splendid movements under way by Methodism in Louisiana and Mississippi, that our church in these two States is alive and aggressive and that it will not have to go far afield in order to find ample room for its spiritual energies, its consecrated talents and its financial resources. When we have had further consideration the fact that the second payment on the Centenary subscriptions is to be made this year we realize that we have before us a year of opportunity filled with tasks that will challenge the best there is in us. We shall not fail, however; the glory of achievement will be ours when we have completed our allotted task and the joy of duty well performed will be ours as we labor day by day. [illegible] McComb [illegible] with a call on [illegible]

[illegible] issue of December 31, gives [illegible] editorial review of Bishop [illegible] new book, "Does God Care?" [illegible] Gulfport District, [illegible] will make his home with his son, [illegible] Meridian, Miss., there being [illegible]

Rev. W. W. Murray writes that he has completed one round on his new charge, the Adams circuit, Mississippi Conference, and that all the indications point to a good year.

Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, the inimitable George, pastor of First Church, Shreveport, La., addressed the Rotary Club of New Orleans, by special invitation, on Tuesday of this week.

John D. Rockefeller has given $2,000,000 to the mission work of the Northern Baptist Church—$1,000,000 to the Home Mission Society and $1,000,000 to the Foreign Mission Society.

We are authorized by the presiding elder of the Meridian District, Mississippi Conference, to say that Rev. C. A. Massey has been appointed to serve the Waynesboro circuit as a supply.

The Southern Presbyterian Church has planned to raise $4,000,000 for its Progressive Program in 1920, and to launch a $40,000,000 campaign, to extend over a five-year period, in the near future.

Dr. S. A. Steel will go to Beaumont, Texas, to deliver his course of lectures on the Bible. He has been engaged for five protracted meetings during the spring, and has the prospect of a busy year.

Rev. R. F. Harrell, of Waterproof, La., was in New Orleans last week in company with parishioners who had come to the city for medical treatment. We appreciate his call at the Advocate office.

Dr. U. G. Foote, pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, is the new president of the Ministerial Union, an organization of the Protestant ministers of the city, for 1920. He was installed at the meeting last Monday.

Rev. Claude P. Jones is very happy in his new work at Fayette, Miss. He and his family have been cordially received, the pastor's salary has been substantially increased, and the outlook is bright for the new year.

Rev. Julian S. Duncan has been graciously received by the good people of Robinsonville, Miss. One of the beautiful things of the itinerancy is the unfailing kindness of the people called Methodists to their preachers.

We agree with Brother M. K. Scruggs, of Shaw, Miss., that the conditions confronting the world to-day are such as to require the best statesmanship, re-enforced by the earnest co-operation and prayers of all Christian people.

We learn from a press dispatch that Hattiesburg has been selected as the location for the hospital to be established by the Mississippi Conference. The exact site will be chosen at a meeting of the committee on January 13.

Rev. C. C. Evans begins the new year happily at Canton, Miss. The splendid people of that city have shown in many ways their appreciation of their faithful pastor, one evident token being a substantial increase in the salary for 1920.

According to Zion's Herald, two of the largest Presbyterian pulpits in New York are occupied by Baptist ministers. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick is at the First Presbyterian Church, while Dr. A. C. Dixon has become one of the pastors of the Marble Collegiate Church.

Rev. E. C. Driskell writes that everything goes well on the Greenwood Springs charge, North Mississippi Conference. His plans for the year include an intensive campaign in behalf of the Advocate, in which we feel sure he will have the hearty co-operation of his loyal people.

Rev. R. A. Clark, one of the new presiding elders of the Memphis Conference, with his family spent the Christmas holidays at Pontotoc, Miss., visiting relatives. Brother Clark has many friends in the North Mississippi Conference, of which body he was formerly a member.

We learn from the Magnolia Gazette of December 31, that the salary of the pastor at Magnolia, Miss., has been increased by $300 over that of last year, making it $1800 for 1920. The first quarterly conference, held by the presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Leggett, was the occasion of a delightful social gathering at the parsonage. Rev. J. Early Gray is the efficient pastor.

The Laymen's Missionary Movement of the Southern Baptist Convention purposes to devote its activities to four main lines of work in the future: a better support for pastors, development of the practice of tithing, a movement to induce laymen to bequeath at least one-tenth of their estates to the work of the church, and a campaign to increase church attendance.

Rev. R. P. Neblett is evidently in high favor with the good people of Como, Miss. He and his wife were the recipients of many favors during the Christmas holidays. Among the gifts were three turkeys—think of it, three turkeys! (We saw a tag on a medium-sized gobbler at a New Orleans market the other day, informing the public that the price was only $15.80.)

Rev. E. B Sharp, of Inverness, Miss., in commenting on the fine record of the church at Sardis in contributing an average of $30 per member last year, remarks that his own charge contributed an average of $45 per member, and that a new church is being enterprised for this year. He is firmly of the opinion that he serves the best charge in the North Mississippi Conference. We do not wonder that he is in love with his people.

The editor acknowledges with thanks, the receipt of a complimentary copy of a beautiful song, "My Guiding Star," the words of which were written by Miss Eddie Bentley. Miss Bentley is the principal of the Walter C. Flower School, of New Orleans, and one of the most active and efficient members of the Carrollton Avenue Church. The music was composed by Prof. Henry Wehrman, and the song is published by the L. Grunewald Company.

We are glad to learn that there is a general disposition on the part of official boards to increase the salaries of the preachers for the new year. In the Meridian District, Mississippi Conference, the five charges which have reported their assessments thus far show a total increase of $2850. Including the increase in the presiding elder's salary, the gain over last year is $3700. We hope the reproach that the ministry is the most poorly paid calling in the world will soon be removed.

At the recent meeting of the preachers of the Sardis District, in connection with the district stewards, the fact was brought out that that district was second in the North Mississippi Conference in the amount raised for Conference collections, the Winona District being first. The salaries of all pastors and of the presiding elder were also paid in full in the Sardis District. The prospects are bright for another splendid year under the leadership of Dr. R. A. Meek, the presiding elder.

Though the first sailing of steamers taking delegates to the World's Sunday School Convention in Japan will not take place until next August, 236 persons have already applied for credentials as delegates. Pennsylvania leads in the number of applications, with 66. Since only about 1000 reservations can be made on the Pacific steamers for the Convention, it is important that all who wish to attend the gathering should communicate at once with the World's Sunday School Association, 216 Metropolitan Tower, New York City.

The Methodist parsonage at Kosclusko, Miss., recently received a tremendous "pounding" for the third time successively, the third being the heaviest of them all. Two big turkeys were a part of the bombardment. An invitation to help "carve" one of them has made the editor wonder if he still retains anything of that almost-forgotten art. A $300 increase of salary has gladdened the pastor's heart, and a visit by the new presiding elder, Rev. R. O. Brown, has delighted and encouraged both preacher and people. We almost forgot to say that Rev. E. H. Cunningham is beginning his third year as pastor of this delightful charge.

AN IMPORTANT ITEM OF BUSINESS.

We earnestly ask our subscribers to read the following statement, and to act in accordance with the suggestions contained therein. The matter referred to does not amount to very much so far as the individual subscriber is concerned, but in the aggregate it means a considerable sum of money each year to the Advocate. We are facing rising costs every day in publishing the paper, and we are compelled to conserve our resources in every possible way. The statement is as follows:

Remittances for single subscriptions, when made by the subscribers themselves, should be in the form of New Orleans or New York exchange, post office or express money order, registered letter, or one-cent or two-cent stamps. If remittance is made by check on a bank outside of New Orleans, add 10 cents for cost of collection. Preachers and agents, when remitting for others, are not expected to pay the cost of remittance, but they are requested to send New Orleans or New York exchange or postage stamps, when convenient. The above applies to amounts of less than $3.00; we do not object to paying exchange on $3.00 or more.

The reason for the above request is very plain; The subscription price of $1.50 a year is as low as safe business management can possibly make it; a check on an out-of-town bank is worth only $1.40 to us, since all New Orleans banks charge for collecting such checks; to send the Advocate a year for $1.40 is, therefore, to get less than its minimum price.

We feel sure that our friends will gladly cooperate with us in this apparently small matter, yet one that is important to us.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: As you know, I was appointed Conference evangelist at the last session of the North Mississippi Conference. I have served as pastor in said Conference for the past eight years; in this time I have made a special study of the evangelistic work and have had splendid success as pastor-evangelist. I feel that I am now appointed to the work that the Lord wants me to do.

I am situated so I can give my entire time to the work. I can stay with you until the victory is won. Don't worry about the financial side—we will let that take care of itself.

Remember, I will go anywhere the Lord directs. My address is Myrtle, Miss. I have quite a number of engagements already. Get busy and let's make 1920 a revival year for our Lord.

Yours for the lost,

GEO. A. BAKER.

SAD NEWS.

Dear Brother Carley: The many friends of Dr. T. C. Wier, in point of service the oldest member of the North Mississippi Conference, will regret to learn of his recent bereavement in the death of his son, Mr. William Benson Wier, of Little Rock, Ark. Mr. Wier died at his home in Little Rock on last Monday night and was buried here in Starkville on Wednesday morning, the last day of the year, 1919. Mr. Wier was a life-long Methodist.

Wonderful Egg Producer

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," and you will be amazed and delighted with results.

If you send $1.00 to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 3251 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, today he will send you two large size $1.00 packages of "More Eggs"—one package being absolutely free on the special limited offer he is making now. The Million Dollar Merchants Bank of Kansas City, Mo., guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request. So there is no risk. Send a dollar today on this package offer. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

"BEST MEDICINE FOR WOMEN"

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did For Ohio Woman.

Portsmouth, Ohio.—"I suffered from irregularities, pains in my side and was so weak at times I could hardly get around to do my work, and as I had four in my family and three boarders it made it very hard for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me. I took it and it has restored my health. It is certainly the best medicine for woman's ailments I ever saw."—Mrs. SARA SHAW, R. No. 1, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Mrs. Shaw proved the merit of this medicine and wrote this letter in order that other suffering women may find relief as she did.

Women who are suffering as she was should not drag along from day to day without giving this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial. For special advice in regard to such ailments write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its forty years experience is at your service.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

JACKSON DISTRICT STEWARDS' MEETING.

The Distrlet Steward's meeting of the Jackson District was held at Capitol Street Church, this clty, on Tuesday, December 30, at 10:30 a.m. There was the largest attendance and representation from all of the churches in the district at this meetlng that we have ever had, and, all in all, it was a very successful meeting.

Aftor organization and appointment of committees, a general discussion was had, including reports from the different charges. Addresses were made by Rev. M. M. Black concerning the work of the Board of Missions, and Rov. J. C. Chambers, the Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, followed by a very interesting and encouraging report from Rev. B. F. Lewis concerning his work at the Orphans' Home. The meeting then adjourned to the Edwards Hotel for lunch at 12:30 as guest of the Capitol Street Church, and 40 were served at a very entertaining luncheon.

During the luncheon, the different committees made their reports, and an appeal was made by Layman C. L. Ray for a subserption towards a cash New Year's offering to the Conference claimants residing in this District, and a purse of approximately $200 was made up within a very few minutes.

Also another appeal was made in the interest of the superannuated preachers by Layman James Simrall, Pocahontas, Miss. He made a proposition that tho District Stewards obligato themselves to double the assessment on the Jackson District for this causo. His proposition was unanimously aeccpted, whieh means that he, with the assistance of our presiding elder, and others who will be ealled in to help him, will undertake to ralse during 1920 approximately $4000 over our assessment, same to be added to the Endowment Fund for this cause.

We feel gratified that this action was taken, and feel that due mention of the matter should be made in the columns of the Advocate.

Yours very truly,
M. S. ENOCHS, Secretary.
Jackson, Miss., Jan. 1, 1920.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitlous and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enrlching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetitc, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

Drugs Excite Your Kidneys, Use Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand tho vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervesecut lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—Adv.

FROM VARDAMAN, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: As you see, I have been returned to the Vardaman charge, Aberdeen District, North Mississippi Conference. I have preached at all of my churches, and have been kindly received. We moved into our new parsonage on the 18th of December. We hope soon to hold services in our new church at Loyd. This past year has been a great year with us, building parsonage and one church, preaching, visiting, marrying the living—10 couples—and burying tho dead. Our people die well. We hope and pray that this Conference year will be among our best years. Pray for us.

BEAUTIFUL 1920 SCRIPTURE TEXT CALENDAR FREE

The Georgia-Alabama Business College, Macon, Ga., is sending out absolutely free of charge a lovely Scripture text calendar for the year 1920. This calendar is illustrated with extremely beautiful color scriptural illustrations. Each monthly page carries one of these Scripture illustrations, such as "Jesus Blessing the Children," "The Star of Bethlehem," "Jesus Stilling the Tempest," "Christ and the Holy Women." There are twelve of these monthly page illustrations in full color, besides the full page illustration on the cover of the calendar. Every Christian worker should have one of these calendars. Each day in the month is shown in large figures and immediately under the figures is given the text for the day, except on Sundays. Each Sunday date gives the subject for the Sunday School lesson, Scripture reading and Golden Text. On the back of the calendar is given the standard time for each of the twelve divisions, and also is carried a 200 Year Reference Calendar, which enables one to select one of seven calendars for use in each of 200 years from 1800 to 2002. The price of these calendars is 30c and they are very cheap at the price, but they are being sent absolutely free to Christian workers, the only return courtesy that is asked being the sending to Georgia-Alabama Business College of the name and address of some prospective student who desires to take a business course in bookkeeping, shorthand, typewriting, commercial English, etc. Write at once and get your calendar, giving the name of some prospective business student. In writing mention this paper.—Adv.

LONELY HEARTS.

By Willie Conger Page.

Do you know that many hearts to-day
Are lonely and yearning for solace and cheer?
Don't wait till they go, before the kind word you say;
Spill the ointment and spiknard while still they are here—
Send the roses to-day.

Do you know that often hearts that are dear,
Are starving for love we forget to express?
O, hasten the message of comfort to bear,
Speak the soft word that will comfort and bless—
Tell them you love them to-day.

Got 117 Eggs Instead of 3

SAYS ONE SUBSCRIBER.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. A scientific tonic has been discovered that revtializes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs," and you will be amazed and delighted with results.

If you send $1.00 to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 3231 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, today he will send you two large size $1.00 packages of "More Eggs"—one package being absolutely free on the special limited offer he is making now. The Million Dollar Merchants Bank of Kansas City, Mo., guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request. So there is no risk. Send a dollar today on this free package offer. Proof by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

Sprains! Rub Pains and Swelling Away

Don't Suffer! Go About Your Duties—Relief Comes the Moment You Apply "St. Jacobs Liniment."

Don't stay crippled! Rub this soothing, penetrating liniment right into the sprain, ache or strain, and out comes pain, soreness, stiffness and swelling. Nothing else penetrates, heals and strengthens the injured muscles, nerves, tendons and ligaments so promptly. It doesn't burn or discolor the skin and can not cause injury. Don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle from any drug store now—limber up! Rub the misery right out. A moment after "St. Jacobs Liniment" is applied you can not feel the slightest pain or soreness, and you can go about your regular duties.

"St. Jacobs Liniment" conquors pain. It has been used effectively for sprains, strains, soreness and stiffness for 60 years—six gold medal awards.—Adv.

75 HENS LAY 40 EGGS A DAY, INSTEAD OF 4

The Same Plan Mr. Schlenvogt Uses in Winter, Should Work for Others.

"We had a bad winter here, and lots of our chickens were dying. We were getting 2 to 4 eggs a day. Then we read about Don Sung and tried it in January, and our 75 hens started laying 30 to 40 eggs a day."—Wm. H. Schlenvogt, Box 319, Mott, No. Dak.

Figure that out. About 3 dozen extra eggs each day, at 50 cents a dozen, made about $45 per month extra income. Don Sung for his 75 chickens cost Mr. Schlenvogt about $2 a month. Here's the same offer he accepted, and it's open to you:

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 462 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.—Adv.

Cured Her Fits.

Mrs. Paul Gram, residing at 916 Fourth Street, Milwaukee, Wisc., recently gave out the following statement: "I had suffered with Fits (Epilepsy) for over 14 years. Doctors and medicine did me no good. It seemed that I was beyond all hope of relief, when at last I secured a preparation that cured me sound and well. Over 10 years have passed and the attacks have not returned. I wish every one who suffers from this terrible disease would write to R. P. N. Lepso, 196 Island Avenue, Milwaukee, Wisc., and ask for a bottle of the same kind of medicine which he gave me. He has generously promised to send it postpaid, free to any one who writes him."—Adv.

300 EGGS A DAY

"Since using 'TWO for ONE' I get 250 to 300 eggs a day instead of 25 or 30" writes J. C. Hoff of Indiana.

This wonderful new egg producer has made thousands of dollars profit for poultry raisers all over the U. S. Now is the time to increase your egg supply when eggs are selling at $1.00 a dozen. Give your hens "TWO for ONE," the scientific tonic that makes layers and real money-makers out of every single solitary hen you own. Send $1.00 to Kinsella Co., 2911 Le Moyne Bldg., Chicago, for small box of our Special Offer of $2.00 for large box containing three times the quantity of the $1.00 size—a full season's supply. We guarantee to return your money if not satisfied. Enter our FREE $5,000.00 egg-laying contest; full particulars in each box of "TWO for ONE."—Adv.

Foley's Honey and Tar
COMPOUND

IT IS JUST WHAT CHILDREN ought to have for feverish colds, coughs, "snuffles," and that tight, wheezing breathing. It stops croup, too. It eases and checks whooping cough, measles cough and bronchial coughs.

Every User a Friend

"My little girl had been having the croup every few nights, so I began giving her a few drops of Foley's Honey and Tar every two or three hours. That night she slept well, never coughed any, and next day her cold was gone."—Mrs. R. M. Earley, Stanford, Ky.

"My three children had a very severe attack of whooping cough. The first few doses of Foley's Honey and Tar gave them great relief, and it did them good."—Mrs. E. C. Hostler, Grand Island, Neb.

Foley's Honey and Tar has been used for more than thirty years in thousands of homes for relief from coughs, colds, spasmodic croup, tickling throat, hoarseness, whooping cough, bronchial coughs and the coughs that follow influenza or la grippe.

Woman's Missionary Society

All communications for this Department should be sent to Mrs. J. G. Snelling, 4721 Prytania St., New Orleans, La.

LETTER FROM THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL TO THE AUXILIARY MEMBERS.

Dear Sisters:

The Woman's Missionary Council has for many years been slowly but surely leading its constituency to a recognition of its stewardship and its responsibility for a share in the salvation of the whole world. It has earnestly endeavored to lead each individual and auxiliary to embrace every missionary, every mission, and every land in their thinking, in their prayers, and in their giving.

It has sought to make the "Go ye into all the world" a real and personal marching order to each one. In this effort, it has gradually but constantly encouraged the budget plan, which includes all the work, in order that every one may have the privilege of sharing in the glory of every soul saved through our ministry throughout the world.

To this end, it has more and more discouraged the concentration of thought and giving upon any one object, and has urged the broad cultivation of mind and spirit that it believed would make for the largest and broadest development of life.

Since the work has grown so large and diversified in its parts, it now seems well to remind ourselves and our constituency of these principles upon which we have long builded.

In entering the great Centenary Movement and work of our church, we have urged this method, and constantly has the word gone out from the Council and its Centenary Secretary that the Woman's Missionary Society is not in this movement as an organization as are the Sunday school and Epworth League.

The entire church, as individual members, is giving to the Centenary Fund of the Board of Missions. As a section of the Board of Missions, the Woman's Work will receive its quota of the great sum asked for.

The Centenary "Askings" from the field, as printed, will show to us where and how these sums are to be applied when the amounts have been collected. They are a detailed and comprehensive statement of the needs and increase of the work in all our fields for the next five years. The women may share in interest and giving to each of these enterprises as individual members of the church through their Centenary offerings, but not as auxiliary members. All funds raised by auxiliaries are needed and shall be used for the support of the work of the Council as already enterprised.

MISS BELLE H. BENNETT.
MRS. FITZGERALD S. PARKER.

A DAY OF PRAYER.

The Council of Women for Home Missions and the Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions will co-operate by holding a day of prayer. The date set is February 20, 1920. A joint program has been prepared, and women's missionary societies of all denominations are urged to observe this day unitedly.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Letters from Louisiana Superintendents Study and Publicity.

Mrs. T. D. Lipscomb has been elected superintendent of study and publicity by the Young People, who have just organized. They selected for their study, "Women of Ancient Israel." A public service is planned for an early date, which will include the unfurling of a Christmas flag, short talks on Service, with a pantomime, "Will there be any stars in my crown?"

Every one of them seems to be so interested and willing to do anything required of them. They have chosen sewing as one of their activities.

The president is a splendid girl, 17 years old, who will finish high school this year, and who has already answered the call to special service. There are nine members in the group.

Mrs. Lipscomb is teacher of Bible study class in the adult auxiliary. They have completed study of the Gospel of Matthew, and are beginning the study of Mark.

Mrs. J. L. Brock, of Franklinton, La., reports the completion of "Adventures in Faith in Foreign Lands," and that very deep interest was manifested. They will, of course, take up a new book at once.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

For The Glad New Year.

"Forgetting these things which are behind, and reaching unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

"Speak a little more kindly than the year before,
Pray a little oftener, love a little more,
Cling a little closer to the Father's love,

The first of December there was sent to each auxiliary a circular letter, the purpose of which was to spur the entire Conference on to higher, greater attempts during the fourth quarter. It is too soon now to predict what will be the outcome of the year's work; and even if that were possible, there would be no force to determine whether our simple message to you in any way influenced the result. But it was a pleasure to communicate with you and in a certain sense to take stock of the Conference work.

Among the facts gained by your officers in sending out letters to all is a knowledge of the inaccuracy of our mailing list, no matter how efficient our system. Some letters were returned as "unclaimed," yet this has been the mailing list for the entire year. The only way for us to get the correct list of officers of your auxiliary is to have this list sent to the proper officers; if you fail to inform us, there is nothing left for us to do except continue to send to the last name furnished us. This may seem to be "much-ado-about-nothing;" yet upon this very item of business management of the auxiliary depends the efficiency of the auxiliary in keeping up with the latest literature and plans. December is the month for the election of officers, which was probably attended to in your last business meeting. Without fail, when you read this, sit down immediately and send the list of your officers to your District Secretary and to the Conference Corresponding Secretary. The success of next year depends upon this.

May I give you a sketch of one auxiliary in the Conference which should be for all an inspiration to lend greater energy to the cause than ever before? Its president, Mrs. M. C. Baker, now in her seventy-fifth year, has been serving in that capacity for twenty-four years. The auxiliary is Tranquil, in a rural church. Over thirty years ago this society was organized; to-day its membership is only seven, but when the personnel is considered it is marvelously large—three elderly single women, one of whom is in her eighty-seventh year, three married women and one widow. In the face of being ten and fifteen miles apart, it has continued to live. Its record is worthy of emulation, especially by those auxiliaries which may give way before the least discouragement and cease to exist.

The new year is here, the time for the forming of new resolutions. Individually each of us will do this; but this year let each auxiliary look forward to the clean white sheet upon which it is to write its 1920 record. Even if "the moving finger writes and having writ moves on" is the inexorable decree of the passing hours of the year, it is posible to make of it a written record in which no change will be necessary to win the commendation "well done." Fix your policy for the year, aim high; the high aim even unachieved has for its reward a noble effort made. As go the auxiliaries, so goes the Conference.

With greetings of the season,
MRS. J. W. CONGER.
Vaiden, Miss., Dec. 16, 1919.

Letters That Inspire Confidence

I wish very much that every reader of this paper could spend sufficient time in my office to read the thousands of letters which I have received from all parts of the country. I have printed several hundreds of them in a booklet, but I wish you could see the originals, for I would like to have you realize the wonderful results which they report in the relief of dyspepsia, indigestion, persistent headaches, rheumatism, kidney, bladder and liver diseases, uric acid poisoning and other curable conditions due to impure blood.

Before my own health was restored by Shivar Mineral Water and I purchased this Spring, and before I received all these letters from sufferers, I didn't take very much stock in advertisements like this. I therefore cannot blame you if you doubt, but, my friend, I am absolutely convinced that the Shivar Spring is the greatest restorative mineral spring ever discovered, not excepting the famous Spas of Europe. I have shipped this water to thousands of sufferers in all parts of the United States and they almost invariably report either permanent restoration or beneficial results. That is why I make the offer contained in the following letter. Sign it now and mail it.

Shivar Spring,
Box 17L, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:—I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give it a fair trial in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and, if I report no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

HAVE YOU SCROFULA?

Now Said to Be as Often Acquired as Inherited.

It is generally and chiefly indicated by eruptions and sores, but in many cases it enlarges the glands of the neck, affects the internal organs, especially the lungs, and if neglected may develop into consumption.

It causes many troubles, and is aggravated by impure air, unwholesome food, bad water, too much heat or cold, and want of proper exercise.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the medicine that has been used with so much satisfaction by three generations, is wonderfully successful in the treatment of scrofula. Give it a trial.

If a cathartic or laxative is needed, take Hood's Pills,—there is nothing better for biliousness or constipation.

WOMEN WHO SUFFER AT HOME

Jackson, Miss.:—"My trouble was feminine weakness. I suffered misery at times and was weak most all of the time.

I was reading in a newspaper about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and I saw that I could order one of Dr. Pierce's books, the Common Sense Medical Adviser, from him, so I did, and I found my complaint was woman's trouble. I started on the 'Favorite Prescription' and am glad to say it did me all the good in the world. I had three doctors; they all said that I would have to be operated upon, but after using the 'Prescription' I began to feel better. I have now taken three bottles and feel fine. Am glad to recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines."—Mrs. Pearly Holt, 934 Deer Park St.

Baton Rouge, La.:—"Going thru middle life I was afflicted with heat flashes and dizzy spells. Some friends of mine advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and I was mighty glad I took their advice for it gave me more comfort and relief than any medicine I had ever taken. I came thru the change in excellent health, the heat flashes and dizzy spells left me at once. I cannot praise 'Favorite Prescription' too highly for the good it did me at that critical time and I will always recommend this medicine with the utmost pleasure."—Mrs. N. B. Richardson, 155 St. Napoleon.

New Orleans, La.:—"I can highly recommend Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets as a safe and reliable home treatment for sluggish liver, constipation and sick headaches. I have used these 'Pellets' in my home for a great many years—have given them to my young children with most satisfactory results."—Mrs. B. Leimbuhler, 707 Independence St.

FROM HAYNESVILLE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Praise God for his rich blessings to us all! In him we move and have our being We are indebted to him for his matchless love to us. All glory to his name for another Christmas, with all its memories. Nineteen hundred years ago this world was in darkness; now his love has gone abroad and has shed its light east and west, north and south, until it shines like the noonday sun from shore to shore. We are surrounded by every evidence of his love, and peace and sunshine are ours to enjoy. Oh, how we lift up our hearts in devotion to him with thankfulness for his church! God bless it evermore with his Holy Spirit.

We arrived safely on the new work, and were received by the people with love, and every possible courtesy was shown by them toward us. I am indeed glad that it was the providence of God, and the will of the Conference to send me this way.

The Epworth League is wide-awake to the needs of the church that come in its line of service. It put itself on the map Christmas Eve by carrying to all the shut-ins of the town a nice box filled with candy, nuts, cakes, oranges, apples, and many other things too numerous to mention. They made themselves very conspicuous at the parsonage by bringing a large box and leaving it at the disposal of Mrs. Dring, and making her welcome to all of its contents, which consisted of table linens, bed linens, and canned goods of every kind needed in the pantry, to supply us for quite a while. Then there were nuts, candy, oranges, apples, bananas, with lots of other nice things. Now, this Christmas gift was made possible through the following members of the church: Mrs. M. O. Brown, J. T. Waller, S. J. Beene, D. C. Baucum, L. C. Dawson, Cora Baucum, W. L. Beene, J. C. Sherman, J. O. Roberts, A. H. Miller, J. R. Bevell, R. A. Baucum, Miss Meda Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, and the following brethren: J. A. Lowe, W. E. Browning, Perry Baucum, Clyde Miller, and Grady Seagers, with several others that failed to give their names. Now, with this splendid spirit, I am sure that by spring time we will have everything moving on nicely.

The Woman's Missionary Society is taking care of that part of the work that is assigned to them. They have placed several articles in the parsonage, that were greatly needed.

The board of stewards are on the job. Great men they are, full to overflowing with the love of God, and anxious to assist the pastor in every way that they can. God bless their hearts, they are men of value to the great cause we espouse.

Now, in closing, I wish to say that I will be ready to turn this charge over to some of the good brethren as soon as my four years are out.

With best wishes to you and a happy New Year, I am

Fraternally,
J. F. DRING, Pastor.

Haynesville, La., Dec. 26, 1919.

Unimpeachable—If you were to see the unequalled volume of unimpeachable testimony in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla, you would upbraid yourself for so long delaying to take this effective medicine for that blood disease from which you are suffering.—Adv.

FROM QUITMAN, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a line to say that we are greatly encouraged over the outlook at Quitman this year. Brother Henry A. Wood, our new and greatly beloved pastor, came to us with his heart aflame with holy zeal for the Master, and I believe was sent to us in answer to effectual and fervent prayer. We are looking for an old-time Holy Ghost revival in our midst, and our prayers ascend daily to this end. We ask the prayers of the saints everywhere that we may have the desire of our hearts in the near future. Surely the time is ripe, and the church here yearns for great things.

We have increased our pastor's salary 150 per cent over and above what it was last year, and hope to exceed this when the smoke of final victory shall have cleared away. We earnestly solicit your prayers.

Yours for a genuine revival,
JOHN W. McNEAL.

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

PEACE.

On Saturday, January 10, at 4:16 o'clock in the afternoon, the Treaty of Versailles was ratified by Germany and the nations opposed to her in the late war — except the United States — and peace was declared to exist from that moment. Thus has come to an end the bitterest struggle in the history of humanity. The defeated German people have accepted all the conditions imposed by the victorious Allies, and have agreed to do everything in their power to carry out the provisions of the treaty of peace. All Europe faces a critical economic and social situation, and everything possible will be done by all the nations involved in the conflict to hasten the return of normal conditions. It is to be regretted that the United States was not in position to sign the treaty at this time. The actual effect of her failure to do so, however, is not likely to be seriously embarrassing. While technically we are still at war, as a matter of fact commercial relations are being resumed, and we are beginning to transact business as upon a peace footing. The United States occupies such a peculiar position in relation to the nations of Europe—being separated from them by thousands of miles of water—that its failure to ratify the treaty thus far is not to be thought of as involving the same difficulties as would have resulted from a similar failure of any other of the great powers. We do not profess to be able to predict what the final action of the Senate will be, but we feel reasonably sure that the treaty will ultimately be ratified with such interpretative reservations as will guarantee the complete sovereignty of the United States in vital matters affecting its own welfare. The other nations of the world can expect nothing more, and our own people will be satisfied with nothing less. Such reservations will not prevent the active participation of the United States in the League of Nations, and, perhaps, they will hasten the effective functioning of such a necessary organization. In the meantime, we rejoice that peace has come after weary years of war.

THE REVIVAL ITSELF.

We have heard and read of various "signs" of the coming revival, in various places. We rejoice in the appearance of these "signs"—but we confess we becoming eager to see the revival itself. We are not concerned about an emotional outburst that will subside as quickly as it arose, perhaps, but we are anxious to see the people of whole communities searching their own hearts to discover and supply their own spiritual needs and, having supplied them, earnestly seeking to bring their friends and neighbors into a personal experience of saving grace. God's Spirit does not work according to seasons and places; He is ever with us to give us the desires of our hearts in spiritual things. We may wait for the multiplication of "signs" before we press forward to the full enjoyment of "a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord"—but why should we wait? We may have the revival now if we will.

THE BEST BOOK FOR THE NEW YEAR.

We do not always know just what is the best book to read on this or that or the other subject; but we are never in doubt when it comes to the matter of personal benefit and spiritual enlightenment: the Bible is in a class by itself. We have not read it in the past as much as we should have done, perhaps, but we can take it up this year with the determination to give it a fair chance to shape our characters and enrich our lives. We shall be in good company in so doing; it is the "best seller" in the world, and thousands of thoughtful men and women are studying its pages carefully and prayerfully day by day. We shall read other books, of course—but the Bible is the best book to keep always by us throughout this new year.

NEAR EAST RELIEF.

It is impossible for us who are so far away even to imagine the suffering of the people of Armenia, who have endured cruelties at the hands of the Turks that make our blood run cold. But we can understand the meaning of the message that comes to us from the Near East Relief, formerly known as the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief, that 750,000 people in the Caucasus are in danger of starvation. Herbert Hoover says that if America does its best, it is possible to save 500,000 of these. The thought that even 200,000 must starve to death is heartrending; but we must do what we can. The Sunday schools of our church contributed last year approximately $90,000 for this work. The Committee is asking our schools for not less than $125,000 this year, an appeal which has been heartily endorsed by our General Sunday School Board. We hope that our schools will not fail to do their full share in helping so worthy a cause.

HELPING SOME.

That the United States has more than an academic interest in the welfare of European countries is demonstrated by the figures in the annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury showing the amount of the loans already made to those countries. The figures are as follows: Belgium, $343,445,000; Czecho-Slovakia, $55,330,000; France, $3,047,974,777; Great Britain, $4,377,000,000; Greece, $48,236,629; Italy, $1,620,922,872; Liberia, $5,000,000; Rumania, $25,000,000; Russia, $187,729,750; Serbia, $26,780,465. We do not at all discount the altruistic spirit of the American people, but it is easy to see that merely material considerations make it obligatory upon us to do everything possible for the speedy rehabilitation of those war-ravaged regions. They are our debtors in these enormous sums, and their ability to pay their debts is dependent upon their own material prosperity. There can be no doubt but that the help of the United States was essential in winning the war—help that was promptly and generously given—but we have not yet finished our task. Selfish interests, to say nothing of patriotism and altruism, demand that we continue to extend a helping hand to the nations across the sea.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION.

Friday, January 16, 1920, will go down as a memorable day in the history of moral reforms, for on that day national prohibition will become effective in the United States through the operation of the Constitutional amendment. As we think about it, it is difficult to realize that such a wonderful consummation of the hopes and prayers and efforts of devoted men and women is at hand. In the beginning of the prohibition movement, those who espoused it were looked upon as cranks and fanatics—harmless to be sure, but pestiferous disturbers of the peace. They were laughed at more than they were opposed. But they were animated by a high ideal, and they labored with a tireless determination to bring about the end for which they were willing to give their lives. Recruits began to join their ranks and, as the economic effects of alcohol came to be understood, powerful business and industrial interests began to lend encouragement. The moral issue was never lost sight of, but the evident loss of industrial efficiency as a result of intemperance became a powerful factor in creating sentiment against the liquor traffic. The evident determination, too, of the liquor forces to ignore all restrictive regulations and to control local and national legislation for their own purposes, showed the danger of permitting the traffic to flourish any longer. The Anti-Saloon League, a non-partisan organization whose sole aim was the destruction of the age-long curse of alcohol, mobilized the forces opposed to it, and, in co-operation with other organizations, carried the fight to a successful issue. Conditions brought about by the war also hastened the necessary legislation. Already its beneficial effects are being felt, and there can be no doubt but that the world has been made permanently better by the elimination of the liquor traffic in the greatest nation on the face of the earth. We give thanks to Almighty God for what has been accomplished, and continue to pray, with renewed faith, for the coming of His Kingdom on earth.

THE BOY SCOUTS.

The Boy Scouts of America and there are 361,226 of them—are pledged "to do a good turn daily." We cannot say how many of them actually live up to their profession, but we know that some of them do. The other day, we were standing in a crowded car going uptown. Every seat was occupied—a good many of them by men. Near the front of the car, two Boy Scouts—manly-looking young fellows in their attractive uniforms—noticed two women standing near them. Without a moment's hesitation, they arose from their seats, courteously raised their caps and with a chivalry suggestive of other days motioned the ladies to the vacant places. We do not know whether anybody else noticed their act or not — but it gave us pleasant reflections for the remainder of our journey. "Do a good turn daily"—what a splendid motto! Some of us who are not Boy Scouts might adopt it with profit.

MY NEW YEAR PRAYER.

To worship God with bowed and reverent head;
To eat with thankfulness my daily bread;
To guard the cleanness of my thoughts, and keep
My body strong to serve; to work—not weep—
When argosies, whose bottoms hold my hopes,
Are lost; to build new ships from sea-soaked ropes
And battered planks and drifting wreckage—launch
In these new ventures and fresh hopes; to staunch
The bleeding heart of pain; to comfort those Whose joy of life is darkened by the woes
That somber sorrow sheds; to shun all strife
For self and place; to consecrate my life
To noble deeds; to live and love; to bear
Some brother's load—this is my New Year's prayer.

—Bishop William P. Eveland.

THE HIGH COST OF LIFE

By Ernest A. Miller.

The high cost of living is everybody's subject in this day. We cannot forget it though we would. In order to stretch a fair salary over the bare necessities of life one has to keep his mind on it. And this everlasting concentration on bread, and clothing, and rent is not good for the soul. Gaining the whole world and losing your life is not the temptation now. To gain a mere livelihood and keep your soul is a task for a strong man. The high cost of living and the high cost of life go along together. Such commodities as honesty, integrity, virtue, fair dealing, a good conscience, etc., are obtained and retained by greater sacrince and expenditure in hard times than in good times. Right here is the nightmare of these high cost times. Everything has gone up. When we pay the inevitable high price for some necessity we hope we can balance up by paying a moderate price for some other necessity. But we are always doomed to disappointment. The high cost germ has infected everything. Therefore, it is harder to preserve our souls than ever before.

However, there is nothing new about this. The highest life has always been purchased at the greatest price. This is one of the supreme lessons of the Matchless Teacher. For instance, at one time a great multitude sought Him for life in a desert place apart. They were willing to do without bread for the Bread of Life. Jesus said, "I have compassion on the multitude because they continue with me now three days, and have nothing to eat." They were suffering a real physical lack, and this word of the Master assigns the reason for the lack, "because they continue with me now three days." It is a superb example of the high cost of life. It is not ancient history, but thoroughly contemporaneous. They are very many who stay with Jesus to-day and suffer hunger.

Think of the young man who continues in school. He is tempted with many offers of high wages. The only saving grace in the midst of the high cost stress is that wages are high. The laboring man is not feeling the pinch like the clerk or the man on salary. The bright young man can make big money in the shops. But Jesus would continue in school. "And Jesus himself, when he began to teach, was about thirty years of age." Not only does the young man forfeit good wages in continuing to prepare himself for higher humanity service, but he exposes himself to many physical hardships for the present. Sometimes he literally has nothing to eat.

Then there is the man who continues in his high calling during the times of stress. He may be a teacher or a preacher. He could make more money in other places. It seems quite easy to justify oneself in making the jump. Many are yielding to the material and economic pressure. But it is to be feared that they are forsaking their Captain. Jesus could have made a name and rich gain for Himself. He had the qualifications. But He was true to His high calling, though sometimes He had not where to lay his head. We read in John's gospel: "Jesus therefore perceiving that they were about to come and take him by force, to make him king, withdrew again into the mountain himself alone." Making a life was infinitely more important than making a living to the great Master of us all.

Every man has his battles for the integrity of his life. Very often during these hard times they run into long campaigns. In a time of high spiritual tide he has espoused the ideals of Jesus. But the spiritual tide has gone down, and the material tides have risen. He is committed to issues of purity, justice and service. But circumstances are changed. The urgency of the ideals is still upon him, but he never expected to fight so many devils. Others around him are making gain because they are not tied to the principles of God. What will he do? What did Jesus do? "Then was Jesus led up of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil. And when he had fasted forty days and forty nights he afterward hungered. And the tempter came and said unto him * * * Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve. Then the devil leaveth him; and, behold, angels came and ministered unto him."

There are some good folks who cannot stand the pressure. They quit. They go away from Jesus. They will not pay the price of life. Judas is a type of such. He joined himself to Christ with the best of intentions. I have no doubt that at the beginning he thought nothing could move him. But times grew hard. He thought he saw a chance to make some money. "And he went away, and communed with the chief priests and captains, how he might deliver him unto them. And they were glad, and covenanted to give him money." "He then having received the sop went out straightway; and it was night." The biography of the traitor had better be finished: "Then Judas, who betrayed him, when he saw that he was condemned, repented himself, and brought back the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders, saying, 'I have sinned in that I betrayed innocent blood.' But they said 'What is that to us? See thou to it.' And he cast down the pieces of silver into the sanctuary, and departed; and he went away and hanged himself." Truly what is a man profited if he makes a little money and loses his life?

Those who tarried with Jesus for three days had wonderful compensation though they had nothing to eat. They received new life. Jesus imparted Himself to them. He said, "I have compassion on the multitude." That means an interchange of life. He took their sufferings, and they received His abundant life. And notice, they were fed. "And they ate and were filled." Good folks do not get things cheaper than others, but they have faith in God. They know that God has made ample provision for His children; they believe in the ultimate proprietorship of God. They have bread to eat that the world knows not of. They have faith. "Now faith means we are confident of what we hope for, convinced of what we do not see." The sharpest prick in the high cost of living comes through fear, a tortured wonder for the future. But the true Christian leaves the future in the hands of a kind and strong God.

Is it a margin you want? A bank balance? Turn again to the story of those who continued with Christ. "And they took up of broken pieces that remained seven baskets." They had something left over for a rainy day and for others. And it was a clean balance. The surplus of the untrue is a stench to God. Like the manna stored away through fear, it breeds worms and becomes foul. If the books of earth do not record the saving of the faithful, certain it is that the books of heaven do. Eternal life will justify its greatest cost.—Christian Guardian.

THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE: SHALL IT LIVE OR DIE?

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

Shall the Anti-Saloon League of America continue to live or shall it die?. Why was the League founded? Has it accomplished the purpose of its founding? Is there sufficient reason to justify its continued existence and activity?

The League was founded twenty-six years ago. It announced as its platform: "The Saloon (The Beverage Liquor Traffic) must go." It announced as its program: "Agitation, Legislation, Law Enforcement." It announced as its medium of activity: "The Church in Action Against the Saloon." It announced as great Facts: the Saloon is a Public Nuisance; the Liquor Traffic is the enemy of the economic, social, political and moral life of the nation; the people are responsible for the evils of the Liquor Traffic as long as it operates under the protection of the law; the Christian citizenship of the nation is responsible for the Legalized Liquor Traffic till that Christian citizenship has put forth its best efforts to destroy it. It announced as civic duties: This Public Nuisance must be abated; the Manufacture and Sale of Intoxicating Liquors must be branded as a Crime, and the Manufacturer and the Seller must be branded as Outlaws.

Judge League By Its Record.

With such a Platform, Program, Principles, and Methods, the Anti-Saloon League, by the testimony of friend and foe alike, has developed the greatest, most efficient organization in the nation with the exception of the Christian church. The League has covered every State in the Union with its organization, and thirty-four States are under State-wide Prohibition to-day, altogether apart from Federal law. When the League had developed strength in a sufficient number of States, it began its work in the halls of Congress. In the winter of 1913 it secured the passage of the Webb-Kenyon Law, and later its pasage over the veto of President Taft. In November, 1913, at the Columbus Conference, it appealed for a dry nation by 1920. The vote in the House of Representatives in December, 1914, showed a majority in favor of the submission of the Federal Prohibition Amendment. Then came the passage of the Reed Bone-Dry Law, the District of Columbia Prohibition Law, Prohibition for the Army and Navy during the war, the adoption of the resolution for the submission of the Federal Prohibition Amendment, the ratification of the amendment by the legislatures of forty-five States, the passage of the War-Time Prohibition Bill, and finally the passage of the Federal Law Enforcement Code, followed by its repassage over the veto of President Wilson. Other minor prohibition legislation has also been adopted in the meanwhile. While other organizations, notably the W. C. T. U., have been of great aid, yet, its enemies themselves being judges, the leadership and the methods of the Anti-Saloon League have been exceedingly efficient in securing these truly great results.

Enemies Say "Die."

Having succeeded in branding the Beverage Liquor Traffic as an outlaw wherever the Stars and Stripes float to-day, is not the work of the League at an end? Can there be sufficient justification for its further activities? The enemies of the League are unanimous in their expression of opinion. The "wet" press, led by papers like the New York World, the Richmond Times-Dispatch, the Montgomery Advertiser, declare the continuation of the League is simply an effort to furnish high-salaried positions for men who are now out of a job, and who are not willing to work, or who are so incompetent that they cannot make a living if separated from "their fat salaries." Temperance people are gravely advised to refuse to respond to the appeals of the League representatives for further funds, and yet these same papers declare the League leaders to be such efficient lobbyists that they can control Congress, and, if so, could easily command far greater salaries than they have ever received. From an experience of over thirty years in fighting the liquor traffic, I have learned never to follow the advice of the "wet" newspapers. Indeed, it is usually safe to find out what they want you to do, and then to do the opposite.

Why Should League Live?

But there are good prohibitionists who have said to me: "Why should the Anti-Saloon League continue its existence? It has accomplished what it set out to do. Now it can disband." Others have inquired why a campaign was being carried on for money, now that Federal Prohibition has been adopted.

To these genuine friends of prohibition, I will reply briefly.

Desperate, Defiant Outlaw.

It is true that the Liquor Traffic has been branded as an outlaw, but it is an insolent, defiant, desperate outlaw. If the Traffic had surrendered, if it had openly admitted its criminality, and had declared its purpose to give up the fight and to cease from sin, the Prohibition forces might begin to demobilize. But no government demobilizes its army until the enemy ceases to fight. The Liquor Traffic has not only not declared its intention to repent and to cease from sin, but it has insolently and defiantly declared that it has not repented, that it will do everything possible to nullify the law, and that it will elect a Congress that will weaken the Enforcement Code. In New Jersey the governor declares that he will make that State as "wet as the Atlantic Ocean." In Massachusetts a four per cent beer law has been passed in flagrant violation of the Constitution. Rhode Island has appropriated money to overthrow the Eighteenth Amendment in the courts. In other sections, especially in cities with large foreign populations, the "wet" press practically incite to lawlessness, and the representatives of the Traffic have proclaimed their purpose to spend barrels of money to break down the law. The purpose of the adoption of the Federal Prohibition Amendment was to compel the "wet" centers to respect the rights of "dry" communities and States, and to remove the protection of the Federal government from an infamous traffic. The declared policy of the Liquor Traffic is to prevent the accomplishment of that purpose by systematic, persistent, insolent law violation.

Nation-Wide Law Enforcement.

In reply to this defiant threat of nullification and active lawlessness, the Anti-Saloon League has launched a great campaign for Law Enforcement. The League is not surprised at the uproarious defiance of the Liquor Traffic. The League from the beginning has had as its program—First, Agitation; Second, Legislation; Third, Law Enforcement. The first two steps in the program have been taken.

Prohibition Legislation, while not yet absolutely perfect, is fairly satisfactory. But the League has realized from the beginning that the warfare would not be ended by the passage of legislation, but that the same forces which secured the desired legislation must also secure effective Law Enforcement. To accomplish this purpose, the leadership of the League, under which the prohibition forces have won such splendid victories, is now calling for a five-year enlistment of influence and of money.

Great Educative Program.

A great educative program has been fully outlined, which has as its basal principle the carrying of the truth concerning the effects of alcohol, and the benefits of prohibition to the people in the centers which are hostile to prohibition, including the foreign population, and especially to the younger people. This educative campaign must be carried on in the usual thorough Anti-Saloon League style. It will call for tens of millions of pages of literature prepared by skilled writers and the ablest cartoonists; the manufacture of thousands of stereopticon slides; the preparation of striking posters; the employment of able lecturers and effective platform speakers; the compilation of the latest facts as to the Liquor Traffic and Prohibition and the publication of those facts in a form suitable for reading rooms, libraries and class rooms. State and National organizations must be maintained to carry on this educative program, and to assist as heretofore in the cultivation and maintenance of a strong Prohibition and Law Enforcement sentiment, until the strength of the Outlawed Traffic has been effectually broken down.

Call To World Leadership.

But not only is the continued existence of the Anti-Saloon League demanded to secure the full fruitage of the great victories which have been won at such a cost, but the League is called upon to lead in the great conflict which has already begun for World Prohibition. When the World League Against Alcoholism was organized in Washington City, June 6, 1919, there were delegates present from thirteen countries. These delegates were a unit in their appeal to the Anti-Saloon League of America to take the lead in the great world conflict. It is the glory of our country that the nations of the earth are turning anxiously, expectantly, hopefully to us for help, for co-operation, for leadership. Our position as a nation is unique in the world's history. I cannot understand how any man can talk a "little Americanism," which would block the opportunity, aye repudiate the responsibility, which in the Providence of God has come to us, for moral as well as financial and commercial leadership. And this is true of Prohibition. It is not proposed, as the enemy has falsely declared, that the Anti-Saloon League shall go into foreign countries and attempt to thrust Prohibition down the throats of the people. No, the Anti-Saloon League is responding to a distinct call from Prohibition workers in other countries to develop a great World Program and to come to those countries as a witness, to testify Why and How the United States Adopted Prohibition.

Great Missionary Enterprise.

This is truly a great missionary enterprise, and it must be carried on in the missionary spirit. If we believe Prohibition is a benefit to society, we must give testimony everywhere in every possible way to Prohibition truth. The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, at its recent session in Baltimore adopted unanimously the following resolution:

"Resolved, We rejoice in the steady growth of the World Movement against Alcoholism. The labors of every Mission Board are hampered and oftentimes nullified by the operations of the liquor traffic. The workers for World Prohibition are the most efficient allies of the missionaries. The United States as the first great prohibition nation of the world should of necessity take a leading part in extending the frontiers of sobriety. The greatest contribution which we can make to World Prohibition is the effective enforcement of our nation-wide prohibition law. We pledge to prohibition workers in other countries of the world our hearty co-operation with them in every proper way to free their own people from the curse of the liquor traffic, and especially will we aid them by endeavoring to prove that nation-wide prohibition can be enforced in our own great country."

Increased Effectiveness of Missionaries.

The great Mission Boards of the United States have just raised hundreds of millions of dollars for their work. That work has no greater enemy than the Liquor Traffic. The adoption of Prohibition will protect and increase the effectiveness of the investment of the Mission Boards. Moreover, the effectiveness and the permanence of our own Prohibition laws will necessarily be affected by the habits of the countries with which we have social and commercial relations. For our own good as well as the good of Europe, the Orient, Mexico, Cuba, South America, South Africa and Australia we must bear witness to the evils of the Liquor Traffic and the good effects of Prohibition.

But if this work is to be done, it must be done thoroughly. If the Anti-Saloon League of America accepts World Leadership, it must lead. And if it leads, it must do its world-wide work in the same thorough fashion in which it has done its nation-wide work. It must carry to every nation its testimony for Prohibition, by printed page, cartoon, poster, in every language, and by trained workers and speakers who will be veritable apostles of Prohibition Truth.

Shall the Anti-Saloon League Live or Shall It Die? Shall it gradually dwindle away, or shall it enter upon a broader field of usefulness than it has had in the past and shall its splendid organization and its efficient methods be instrumental in belting the globe with Prohibition truth?

Surely there can be but one answer. The League must live and respond to the call for World Leadership. And its friends will put into the treasury of the League the $25,000,000 which is necessary to carry on effectively the campaign for Law Enforcement and World-Wide Prohibition. This campaign has already begun and in eight Southern States the appeal for co-operation and support will be made during the week of January 16-23. These States have been leaders in the prohibition movement, and it is believed that they will maintain their past record. The amount expected from each State has been apportioned to the counties, cities, and towns, and opportunity will be presented to all to contribute. Our prohibition people can easily furnish the entire amount asked, and thus give to the League the necessary funds to work as efficiently in the future as it has done in the past.

OUR COUNTRY'S NEED.

The need of our country is not to lift marble to the fortieth story of some new office buildings, but to lift the level of character; not to whiten the seas with the sails of our commerce, but to develop those simple fidelities and homely virtues which are the chief defense of nations.

When Tennyson wrote "The Crossing of the Bar," he did more for civilization than if he had built any ocean liner or man-of-war.

Thomas Stevenson did much for England when he built the lighthouses which send their radiance each night over the tossing waters of the Channel.

But we owe far more to his son, Robert Louis Stevenson, because he taught us how to kindle a light within, how to keep the soul serene and steadfast in the face of pain and death.

When Millet seized his brush and painted the "Angelus" on the bit of canvas that cost him three francs, he did more for labor and the laboring man than if he had seized a spade and worked for fifty years in the fields of France.

Not the men who add to our quantity of materials, but the men who deepen the quality of our living, are the real benefactors and educators of the world.—Dr. William Herbert Perry Faunce.

THE OPEN DOOR.

By Alice Gorton Wynn.

A little bird had flown into the church
One Sabbath day;
To find an exit he began a search,
But saw no way;
Baffled, afraid, yet soaring high, aloof—
He beat his puny wings against the roof.
"Dear bird, why waste your strength and bruise your head—Can't you see the open door?" I said,
"Fly lower down."

Unsatisfied, my weary longing soul
By night and day
Had sought that peace which leads to Heaven as goal,
But missed the way.
The birdie's futile, frantic strokes and fear
Showed me myself, gave me the message clear:
"O heart, why pain and struggles any more?
Look! See the blessed Christ, the Open Door!
Get lower down."

THE SENATE AND THE PEACE TREATY.

By John W. Kyle.

On page five of the Advocate of December 25, 1919, is printed a letter from T. M. Evans of Gulfport, Miss., on the "New Congress and the Peace Treaty." In the name of "fairness" and for the enlightenment of Southern Methodists Mr. Evans has, unintentionally of course, been guilty of serious misrepresentation of the subject he undertakes to discuss. In his letter, dated Dec. 16, 1919, he says: "Now as a matter of fact the U. S. Senate has never voted on the question of ratifying or rejecting the peace treaty at any time."

The Congressional Record of November 19, 1919, page 9321, shows that a vote was taken on the following resolution submitted by Senator Underwood of Alabama:

"Resolved: (Two-thirds of the senators present concurring therein) That the Senate do advise and consent to the ratification of the treaty of peace with Germany concluded at Versailles on the 28th day of June, 1919."

The resolution was rejected by a vote of 38 for to 53 against. (See page 9321, Congressional Record, 66th Congress.)

Mr. Evans further says: "The Senate of the United States must either approve or disapprove, but has no power whatever to negotiate a treaty or to amend a treaty." It is not quite clear whether he used the word "amend" in its technical sense, or whether he would include in that term reservations also. But when he adds that "the Senate must approve or reject it as submitted," he clearly denies the right of the Senate either to amend the treaty or to attach reservations.

The right of the Senate to amend a treaty submitted by the President, or to attach reservations to its resolution of ratification has become so firmly established as a principle of constitutional law in this country, that it is surprising to learn that any one writing for the benefit of the public would deny it. As early as 1795 the Senate in disposing of Jay's treaty with England suspended the operation of the 12th article of the treaty as proposed by the President. With this reservation and a recommendation of further friendly negotiation on the matter of impressment, the Senate advised the President to sign. (See McMaster's Hist. of the people of U. S., Vol. II, page 215.) President Jackson specifically recognized the right of the Senate to alter or modify a proposed treaty. In submitting the Gadsden Treaty to the Senate in 1854, President Pierce recommended that the Senate adopt certain amendments before ratifying it. Scores of treaties have been amended and ratified during the past half century. Washington accepted the amendment or reservation to the Jay treaty without a word of comment, and from that day to this the Senate has amended treaties or attached reservations to their resolutions of ratification; and foreign governments, recognizing the nature of our constitutional requirements and the propriety of the Senate's action, have accepted the amendments or reservations.

When the Anglo-American Arbitration Treaty was before the Senate in 1912, having been negotiated and submitted by President Taft, Democratic senators supported and succeeded in having adopted a series of amendments or reservations proposed by Senator Bacon of Georgia, and no senator was more insistent that changes in the treaty be made than the present distinguished leader of the administration forces, Mr. Hitchcock. In a speech delivered in the Senate on January 4, 1912, Mr. Hitchcock said:

"I am in favor of the pending treaty, provided the last portion of article three, which empowers the high joint commission to supersede the Senate of the United States in the interpretation of treaties, is stricken out; and I also favor some declaration in the resolution of ratification that we except specifically from future arbitration such questions as involve our permanent national policies or such questions as relate purely to matters of American Government."

The present Democratic leader then favored both amendments and reservations, and his views at that time were in line with the views of the Senate when they voted down the Underwood resolution on November 19, 1919.

Happily, however, the readers of the Advocate do not need to rely upon my statements or upon the statements of Mr. Evans. Nor do they need to rely entirely upon reputable historians like McMaster, or upon party leaders like Senator Hitchcock, whose views on constitutional law and practical statesmanship vary according to the political affiliations of the President who has negotiated the particular treaty under consideration. On this proposition we have a direct adjudication in a unanimous decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Haver vs. Yaker, 9 Wallace, pp. 34 and 35, in which Mr. Justice Davis in delivering the opinion of the court, said:

"In this country, a treaty is something more than a contract, for the Federal Constitution declares it to be the law of the land. If so, before it can become a law, the Senate, in whom rests the authority to ratify it, must agree to it. But the Senate are not required to adopt or reject it as a whole, but may modify or amend it, as was done with the treaty under consideration."

This letter is written not for the purpose of provoking newspaper controversy, least of all through the columns of a church paper; but for the purpose of preventing the dissemination of misinformation through such a paper. The Constitution provides that a treaty shall be made only with the approval of two-thirds of the Senate. According to the vote taken on November 19, scarcely more than one-third approve of the proposed treaty with Germany in its present form.

WHY A SURVEY PRIOR TO THE REVIVAL

One feature of the Standard Plan for the Revival this year is a survey of the local community prior to the beginning of the revival campaign. It is hardly possible to over-emphasize the value of the survey. Many successful evangelistic pastors have been doing this for years. After one has tried it out, he is reluctant to begin a meeting without having first made the survey. The survey reveals the evangelistic opportunity and responsibility of the church. Just to open the meeting and preach to those who chance to come is not modern efficiency, nor is it in keeping with the command of our Lord. He said, "Preach the Gospel to every creature." He never did say preach only to those who attend public preaching. One of the best ways to find every creature is to make a survey.

This survey will discover the unidentified Methodists living in that community. This number is legion. We have an unpardonably large leakage here. We receive a large number of people into the church from year to year, but the net increase is distressingly small. Why? We lose many thousands who move from one place to another and do not take their membership with them. Their names are finally disposed of in some way at the home church. According to the typical surveys made, there are more than three hundred thousand Southern Methodists living in communities with their membership elsewhere. These three hundred thousand will be located, visited and urged to move their membership to the place where they live. If we make the surveys annually (and it is hoped that they will prove so helpful that we shall do so from this time forward), we shall discover these people before they drift too far from the church to be reached and restored to church membership. In the work this year, we shall find that those who have lived in a given community with membership elsewhere but a short time will be the easiest to get to transfer their membership. Those who have been long in a community with membership elsewhere will be the hardest ones to get transferred. Having dealt with thousands of such cases, I know whereof I speak. If the surveys are put on according to the plan, and followed up according to the plan, we ought to reach a quarter of a million of these unidentified Methodists in the pre-Easter campaign. Is it not worth while to put on a campaign even if we make no effort for those outside this class? Saving to the church three hundred thousand who might otherwise be lost to the church is a most commendable work.

The survey will also discover an astonishingly large number of people who would be Methodists if converted. Every church knows of a certain few, husbands or wives in the church, children or parents in the church, and a few other notable ones, but no church without a survey can measure its opportunity or responsibility. Instead of a desultory and haphazard way of doing this, the survey will enable the leaders to plan to have Christ presented to each of these possible Methodists. No church can face its Lord and say it has done the best it could until every one who would be a member of that church if converted has been approached personally and as frequently as seems necessary concerning his surrender to Christ. Hence no church can ever tell when it has done its duty until it has surveyed the field and located the persons to be reached. Let no church, whatever be the hindrances, fail to make the survey. Fight the world, the flesh and the devil and make the survey in spite of all opposers on earth or in hell.

No church has discharged its duty when it shall have looked up every unidentified Methodist, and presented Christ to every unsaved person expressing a preference for the Methodist Church. There is a large and, I think, an ever-increasing number of people who have no church preference. This multitude is the common responsibility of all the churches. While those who are by birth and training Baptists will most likely be reached in a Baptist campaign (for the unsaved have their prejudices quite as definitely defined as the Christians), yet there are many who have been reared in homes without any religious prejudices. Many are indifferent toward all denominations. The church must break in on this non-church population. The only way to discover it is by a survey. Who knows that these people have no church choice until the matter is put up to them? and when is it ever put up to them except in taking surveys? Our plan contemplates that we shall do our best to reach and save all those who have no church preference. We are perfectly willing to help Baptists and Presbyterians and others to reach and save their unsaved constituency. But our plan does not contemplate our entering those homes in search of their people. We would be misunderstood.

Our plan contemplates our reaching all our unidentified Methodists, all potential Methodists and all who have no church preferences. We feel compelled to go after every one of these. This we can do to the best advantage only after an accurate survey, has been made. Make the Survey. MAKE THE SURVEY. DO IT NOW.

O. E. GODDARD.

A FORWARD MOVEMENT.

In accord with a plan for a forward movement undertaken by the Board of Missions of the North Mississippi Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at its recent session in Aberdeen, a committee has been appointed by Dr. R. A. Meek, presiding elder of the Sardis District, to map out a plan for his district.

The Board of Missions desires to have an "Every-Member Canvass" made of the rural territory which might be aided in securing funds for local church work. In co-operation with the pastors, speakers will be sent to each church in the charge on a given Sunday, and the system of extension and forward movement explained.

The Committee for the Sardis District is composed of Rev. E. G. Mohler, Sardis, Chairman; Rev. R. P. Neblett, Como, Secretary; Rev. A. T. McIlwain, Senatobia, and Rev. Melville Johnson, Batesville, in charge of the Speakers' Bureau. This committee met in the Methodist Church, at Como, January 5, and arranged for the following dates to meet the pastors and official members of their charges, that an "Advance Conference" might be held: Arkabutla, at Strayhorn, Thursday, January 8; Sardis Circuit, at Sardis, Monday, January 12; Horn Lake, Thursday, January 15; Cockrum, Friday, January 16; Tyro, Tuesday, February 3; Courtland, Thursday, February 5; Eureka, Tuesday, February 10; Oakland, Thursday, February 12; Tipo, Tuesday, February 17.

On these dates, a group of workers will be present to complete definite plans for the special services in each church on the charges named, on a given Sunday, and secure the co-operation of every official that the pastor's salary and benevolences of that local church be presented and provided for.

It is confidently expected that these "Conferences" will be able to arrange for a service in each church on the Arkabutla charge, Sunday, January 18; Sardis Circuit, Horn Lake, and Cockrum charges, Sunday, January 25; Tyro and Courtland, Sunday, February 15; Eureka and Oakland, Sunday, February 22; and Tipo-Oakgrove, Sunday, February 29.

Let daily intercession be made that God may further the interests of his kingdom and strengthen the cause by co-operation of both pastor and people. R. P. NEBLETT, Secretary.

Como, Miss., January 6, 1920.

THE UNIVERSAL DEBT.

Robert E. Eleazer.

"I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the barbarians, both to the wise and the unwise. So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the Gospel to you that are in Rome also.". Thus wrote St. Paul in the opening paragraphs of his letter to the Romans.

His meaning should be evident enough when the two sentences are taken together. There was a time when the writer wondered what the apostle meant by his acknowledgment of universal debt. His debt to God I could understand; his desire, as a follower of Christ, to preach the Gospel to the Romans, I could appreciate; but in what sense did he owe it to them to do so?

One day the explanation dawned upon me with the greatest clearness. To be in debt to one is to have in my possession that which belongs to him. St. Paul had the Gospel—the knowledge of Christ, and of God's love as revealed through him. It belonged not to St. Paul only, but equally to the Greeks, the Romans and all the rest. So long as St. Paul had it and they had it not, he was in their debt; and he could pay the debt in no way except by doing his utmost to share with them the common heritage of a Father's love.

The lesson is for us no less than for St. Paul. Indeed, it is an open question if our obligation is not greater. Certainly our knowledge of humanity's need and our opportunity to answer it have been vastly increased through the ages. Exploration, literature, the means of instant communication and quick transportation have brought the ends of the earth within easy reach. We have but to stretch forth our hands to touch with Christ-like ministry the African, the Chinese, the Turk, the Patagonian. If St. Paul felt himself a universal debtor, then you nad I must be either pitifully uninformed or strangely lacking in social consciousness if we can be content to live out our lives in our own little circle of intimate contacts, indifferent to the untaught millions whose God-meant heritage we hold as a selfish possession. Rather let us daily acknowledge our debt and shape our lives accordingly.

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT OF MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

My Dear Brethren: A new era has opened for Millsaps College. With the growth of the institution and the increase of its facilities for instruction, we are getting larger ideas of our responsibilities in the field of education. No longer may we rest content in simply providing instruction for those who have the means to come to our College.

Our first obligation is to serve in every possible way the ministers of our denomination. How may we best do this? Already we have plans on foot for fulfilling this obligation and will inform you as to the nature of these plans as they are developed.

In the first place, we want to improve the efficiency of our library service and place the books of our splendid collection subject to the call of our preachers.

Package collections of five volumes each will be lent to any preacher for the payment of the postage. A list of our package collections will soon be placed in your hands. Separate volumes may also be had on the same terms upon request. We desire to provide you with the books you want.

Outside of the Bible, what is the most helpful book you have ever read? Give us the title of it and the name of its author. We want other ministers to have the benefit of your reading experience. Give this information in the blank spaces below.

Further information concerning the books that are available and the terms on which they may be borrowed will reach you in the course of the next week or so.

Write to us and suggest any way in which we may be of service to you, but please fill in the blanks below and return to us at your earliest convenience. Cordially and sincerely yours,

TRACT REVIEW.

Reply of Rev. Isaiah Watson, Pastor of Emanuel Baptist Church, Baton Rouge, La., to "Nine Reasons Why I Am Not a Baptist," by Rev. P. O. Lowrey of Louisiana Conference M. E. Church, South; $2.25 per dozen; $15.00 per hundred.

Mr. Lowrey has the following friendly remark on Mr. Watson's reply to his tract:

"Pleasant Hill, La., Dec. 13, 1919.

Rev. Isaiah Watson.
Baton Rouge, La.

Dear Sir and Brother:

I am in receipt of a copy of your reply to my "Why I Am Not a Baptist," and suppose I am under obligation to you for sending me the booklet. I thank you for the same.

In reply I think that you have done just what would have been expected of one holding your views of the Baptist as being the only church of Christ, and I am sure you will find many readers of what you have had to say.

If you advertise in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, I am sure you will sell lots of your booklets to those who have read mine.

Fraternally yours,

P. O. LOWREY."

AS IT NOW STANDS.

From time to time, we have given the list of the churches which have accepted the "Every Family" offer of the Advocate. Since the last announcement, there have been several additions to the list. It now stands as follows:

Bernice, La., Rev. W. A. Mangum, pastor.
Baton Rouge, La., First Church, Rev. N. E. Joyner, pastor.
Ruston, La., Trinity, Dr. R. H. Wynn, pastor.
Holly Springs, Miss., Rev. W. R. Lott, pastor.
Franklinton, La., Rev. J. B. Fulton, pastor.
Eunice, La., Rev. P. H. Fontaine, pastor.
Tupelo, Miss., Rev. J. A. Hall, pastor.
New Albany, Miss. Rev. J. E. Stephens, pastor.
Robinsonville, Miss., Rev. Julian S. Duncan, pastor.
Pontotoc, Miss., Rev. H. P. Lewis, pastor.
Sumrall, Miss., Rev. H. Mellard, pastor.
Epworth, New Orleans, Rev. J. E. Selfe, pastor.
St. Joseph, La., Rev. R. F. Harrell, pastor.
Pass Christian, Miss., Rev. J. L. Sutton, pastor.

We have information from several other churches to the effect that they, too, will accept the offer, though we are not yet in position to make the announcement. In all the above cases, we have been officially notified of the action taken.

We are glad to see that there is such a hearty response to this offer, and we sincerely trust that the wisdom of making it will be vindicated by the benefit received by all the interests of the church. We wish to emphasize the fact, however, that we are expecting the bulk of our increased subscription list to come from the many charges in our three Conferences which will find it impracticable to accept the Special Proposition. From every pastoral charge in Louisiana and Mississippi, we should receive at least the quota of new subscriptions assigned by Conference action, by March 15. In many cases, the number should be in excess of that quota.

We do not base the claims of the Advocate upon any other grounds than its worth as the organ of the church—but if our friends knew how desperately we are fighting against the rising tide of high costs in the business management of the paper, we believe they would hasten their efforts to help us by a largely increased number of subscribers. We are doing the best we can, but we frankly confess that we need help.

ARE YOU SAFEGUARDED WITH A THOROUGHLY RELIABLE INSURANCE POLICY?

Write me for particulars about a policy in the Lamar Life Insurance Company. Rates as low as any; a home company, sound and reliable, and the promptest of them all in paying death claims.

T. W. ADAMS, Agent,
Superannuated member, Mississippi Conference,
Brookhaven, Miss.

FOCAL DATES IN THE EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN.

February 8-15—League Survey.
February 13—Day for prayer and fasting.
February 15—Survey begins in local churches.
February 29—Survey completed.
March 21—Revival campaign begins. Sermon on Family Altars.
March 28—Sermon on Stewardship and Tithing.
April 4—Easter Sunday. Reception of Members. Life Service sermon in the evening.

NOTICE.

I want a helper in my work; not a singer for evangelistic service, but a business agent, who will look after handling my Bible Lectures, making dates, attending to the advertising, and so on. I have more than I can do. It would be pleasant and useful work for the right person. Let me hear from you if you want the place.

S. A. STEEL,
Mansfield, La.

One of the nearest and simplest of duties is the perception of others' points of view, of sympathy, in no limited sense; and that sympathy we can gain only through looking at humanity in its wholeness.—Selected.

A HIGH CLASS INVESTMENT.

In Flanders Fields thousands of little wooden crosses mark the graves of brave men who have simply done their duty—who freely gave their lives that the world might be better. They want no monument of stone, no edifice erected in their honor. The Master's "Well done, thou good and faithful servant" is a far greater reward. The memory of their deeds is their everlasting monument.

There is a way in which you can build a monument as unselfish as the crosses of the hero dead and as lasting as their memory; a way that will be of benefit to you and to your church and to its people.

To all of us it is not given to lay down our lives for humanity, but to each one of us is given the opportunity to strengthen the kingdom of God on earth—to aid our fellow-men.

The Board of Church Extension through its Annuity Bonds furnishes a means, for those who are not able to get along without the income from their property, to contribute to the Loan Fund Capital. This Fund is used to advance money to struggling congregations to assist them in building their churches or parsonages. They in turn will repay the loan when they are firmly established and it will go out again and again to help in some other community. Thus its good work goes on forever.

Any person may turn into the Treasury of the Board any amount of money and receive from the Board in return an ANNUITY BOND for this amount (copy of which is affixed to this booklet). This bond obligates the Board to pay to the Investor, or to such other person or persons as may be designated, during the life of the donor or designated persons, annually the sum of an agreed per cent (between 5 per cent and 10 per cent according to age and number of beneficiaries) of the amount invested, provided that upon the death of the beneficiaries the payment of interest shall cease and the principal thus invested shall become the absolute property of the Board.

The benefits of such an agreement are obvious. Not only is the one who receives the income benefited because he receives a much higher assured return than he could expect from any other safe investment, but because through the use of the capital the Church is enabled to spread its influence toward the betterment of mankind.

Then, too, you have the satisfaction of seeing the result of your own investments. You see your money aiding in building churches for struggling but promising congregations, and being returned in installments go out to build again and again.

Further, the Annuity Bond is so planned that any one, no matter what their walk in life, may participate in this great work. Bonds may be procured for ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS ($100.00) as well as those for any larger amount. A perusal of the attached fac-simile of the bond will show you how thoroughly it protects you or your beneficiaries.

The honor of a great church and the total assets of the Board of Church Extension make your investment safe. The income is fixed, is certain, is generous, and it continues as long as you or your beneficiaries may live. The Bond and the income are free from taxation.

Now is the time to subscribe for this bond while the question is fresh in your mind. Some struggling congregation will be without their needed church if you and others wait until tomorrow to subscribe for your Anuity Bond.

Shall you hesitate to "carry on" the glorious work of your church—to "do your bit" to aid in the advancement of Christianity by assisting to spread the ever widening circle of gospel influence?

AN APPEAL is made to every benevolent person of means who loves our Church! Here is a place for your investment of funds you wish in the end to devote wholly to God's work.

MAKING THE CHURCH PAPER READABLE.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Aside from the fact that people are none too eager to read religious literature in general, it seems to us that there are three reasons why our church papers are not more readable to the masses of the people.

1. In the first place, we believe that there is too little from the people at large and too much editorial writing and syndicated "canned goods" matter appearing in our church papers. While, of course, the editors should have their say, and their personality should largely determine the policy and style of the paper, at the same time there is such a sameness in any one person's style, even in that of our most noted editors, that variety must come mostly from infusing different personalities into the periodicals that would seek for a large constituency of readers. However important may be the subject upon which an editor may write, his regular readers can almost tell before they have read him about what he is going to say—they have learned his style, his views, and his spirit already. And as to the "canned goods," it is too seldom that a voice from the dead arouses much interest in the living; and however important may be the quotation, or the syndicated article, like other second-hand things, it is considered too cheap for live folks to take time to read. But when a reader sees the name of some live person under the heading of a live subject, he "sits up and takes notice;" he wants to know what such a writer has to say. When, therefore, our church papers can secure the writings from large numbers of their constituency, and will give them liberty in expressing their views on the vital subjects of the day, such a periodical will never have to depend alone or largely upon the church loyalty of its constituents for keeping up its subscription list. When we have, on various occasions, heard all types of laymen express themselves as to their ideals of the ministry, revivals, church finance, the Sunday services, prevailing social virtues or vices, and many other subjects upon which laymen think and are interested in, we have wondered why the church editors did not spend more time in enlisting the talents and influence of these men, and less in writing monotonous editorials that but few, if any, of their subscribers would read. And many of our best preachers but rarely, if ever, give their thoughts to the church press. And it would seem that any preacher would have some thoughts and convictions that he would owe to a larger hearing than to his own congregation. Are these preachers' talents buried because of a general disinclination to write, or because they "have not been asked"—as was the old maid's reason for not getting married? If our church editors have ever done much, or anything, to pass on the thought productions of such men, we have never heard of it. We know, at least, that but few have ever asked us to write for our church papers, and would judge that we were no exception to the general rule.

2. And again, there is so much editorial censorship over the contributions to our church papers that the individuality of the writer is so cramped or devitalized that there is oftentimes but little life left in what they say. Our editors seem to be so afraid that the dignity of their already too lifeless sheets will be so insulted that the "teeth" of their contributors' writings must be pulled before they can appear in their pages. Until the sanctimonious tone is given to the style, and all matter that might offend a bishop, or some church official who has a say in managing the affairs of the church is expurgated, our editors seem to be afraid of offending with radicalism the dignity of their too long-faced periodicals. And hence to us it is not, after all, so surprising that so few will venture to offer their thoughts to the church press. And as long as contributors are held under such censorship there will never be any great demand for our church papers. When people read, they want to read the thoughts of the writer, and not the thoughts of an editor, and one, too, who may himself be afraid to think until he knows how some one above him thinks.

As an illustration of this ideal in journalism, the Texas Christian Advocate under the late G. C. Rankin, who followed this policy, was read far and near. Many members of the Texas State Legislature, for instance, subscribed to and were constant readers of this paper, because they had learned to expect through its contributed and editorial writings a fearless setting forth of the social, political, and moral ideals for which the church stands, and to us there is no wonder that under such a medium as this organ afforded, the Methodist Church in Texas should have taken such high rank among the Christian churches of the South. Would that there were many G. C. Rankins, and many such sheets as was the Texas Christian Advocate under his far-seeing management! Dignity is all right in its place, but the most dignified thing in the world is a corpse.

By the way, how many of the State politicians or the famous "New Orleans Ring," about which we hear so much in Louisiana politics, has ever heard of or cared whether there be such a paper as the New Orleans Christian Advocate? How many Roman Catholic leaders have ever—clandestinely it might be—subscribed for and read our Conference organ to see what we thought of and were doing to overthrow the corrupt practices of this Christo-pagan ecclesiastical machine? Or how many leaders of the Baptist "one true church" close communion organization have subscribed for and read our Advocate to see what we were teaching our people as to their growing to be a more obnoxious and bigoted church organization? The same might be asked as to our message to the sinner, or to the saint; or as to our views of the labor and all moral and social questions. And this one thing is certain, until we put before the world in our church press something that has more life in it than a fearful, palefaced corpse, we will always have to be boosting its subscription list by an appeal to church loyalty.

3. And again, before people will seek, in large numbers, to read our papers, they must be launched on a broad and democratic policy. The reason why an ecclesiasticism has never, or rarely, been reformed, is because those in authority have shut off open and frank discussion, and when the readers of a paper learn that a paper is so partisan that only the side of those in authority on any subject can get a hearing, they are ready to turn to the secular press—the forum of the common people—for their reading.

An editor is supposed to run a paper for the whole church, and not just an organ of expression of a certain faction of the church, though that faction may consist of "the chief priests and scribes and pharisees;" and when independent Christians find that such is not the case, it should not be considered at all surprising that they care but little for reading such a one-sided sheet. The right of presenting both sides of every question is all that makes any civil, social, commercial, or religious thing safe, and this the most of the reading world knows, and when they discover a one-sided, partisan paper, they are quick to find a supply of reading more to their liking. There are scores and hundreds of Methodists to-day who refuse to support our own New Orleans Advocate because of its past one-sided record in lambasting "the holiness cranks," the church unionists, the supporters of Vanderbilt University, and in shutting off fair discussion on various questions where the editors have differed from the would-be contributors.

These are some of the things that we have observed as a pastor and reader of our church papers, and while the ideal is easier to write about than it is to attain as an editorial fact, still we believe that a church paper may be made so live and aggressive that "the common people" will read it "gladly."

And while the editor of the New Orleans Advocate is trying to give us a paper that is worth reading, let us as his co-workers give him a chance to introduce his paper to the general membership of our churches by sending him a subscription from every family represented on our church rolls; and then, if he can't "put up the fodder," he and the people for it.

The Home Circle

DILLY.

No wonder she was called Dilly. Such a bit of a girl was altogether too small for grandma's quaint old Quaker name, Diligence.

And no wonder she was sober; for she and mother and little Don had all been invited to spend New Year's with Grandma Diligence. Then Don had been taken with the croup. He was better, but still too croupy to go out of doors.

"Dilly," exclaimed mother, suddenly, "there's no reason why you shouldn't go by yourself. You know what train to take as well as mother does, and grandpa will meet you."

"O mother," said Dilly, "could I really, truly go? Without you?"

"Of course," said mother. "Don's all right, now. And you're a big girl. Run along quick and get ready. Mother'll pack your satchel."

Dilly fairly danced into her dainty little clothes. "There will be turkey, you know," she said to herself, "and maybe plum pudding. And anyway there'll be ice cream."

At last Dilly was ready. She kissed Don. Then she kissed mother. "I wish you were going, too," she said a little wistfully. "Maybe grandpa and grandma won't be glad to see just me."

"Oh, but they will be, little daughter," said mother. "Now run along. There's just a half-hour to train time. Be sure to have grandpa or some one put you on the right train Friday. Or stay over Sunday if you like, Dilly. We'll be all right."

"I'll see, mother," said Dilly, feeling very important indeed. "Good-by." The door banged gaily. Dilly was off.

From the window mother and Don watched her. "Why, she's coming back," exclaimed mother. "Forgotten something, Dilly?"

"I didn't tell Tinker I was going," said Dilly, "and he might feel hurt. Good-by, Tinker," she crooned to the big, sleepy yellow cat in the chair. "I'm so sorry I can't take you. But you see there's Duke. And some way dogs don't like you."

"Run along, dear," said mother.

"There's time to kiss Don again," said Dilly, hugging him, "and you, too, mother. Are you almost quite sure you can spare me?"

"Oh, yes, Dilly," said mother, cheerily. "Now be off."

"She's coming back—Dilly is," said Don the next minute.

"I just came back to say," panted Dilly, "I think—I won't—stay over Sunday."

"Just as you like, Dilly," said mother.

"You might miss me, you know, mother," Dilly's hand was on the door-knob.

"Of course mother'll miss you," said mother, smiling; "but she'll think what a good time you're having. Now, Dilly, do run along, and, when you get to the corner, if there isn't much time, you better take a car."

"Good-by, mother," called Dilly. Then she went slowly down the walk. She turned and blew a kiss to Don. Then she ran off as fast as her two little plump legs would take her.

Out of sight of home Dilly's run became a hippity-hop. Her hippity-hop became a walk. At the first corner she paused. "I wonder," she said to herself, "which way I'd better go. This way is longer; but I like it best, and I guess there's time enough."

For several minutes Dilly walked briskly, then her footsteps began to lag. "Mother's going to miss you awfully," said a little thought.

Just as that thought spoke, Dilly came to the last corner. She looked at the big clock. "I've ten minutes yet," she said. "I guess I won't take a car."

It was a long street, and some way Dilly couldn't hurry. Her thoughts talked among themselves. "Who'll do the errands?" said one anxiously. "But there'll be turkey, you know," suggested another, "and the loveliest ice-cream and little nut cakes."

"Who'll 'muse Don, I'd just like to know?" asked a thought. "But you'll have the wishbone," said another gaily, "'cause you'll be the littlest girl there."

"It will be only to-day and to-morrow," said a thought way in the back part of Dilly's head, "then you'll be coming back."

"But there'll be two whole long nights," said another very loud.

Dilly's feet came to a sudden stop. She looked in at the window of the big candy store. Afterwards the sight of that window made a queer burning in her eyes and a queer smarting at her throat.

"If you don't hurry, you'll miss the train," said a big thought.

That started Dilly along. But her feet went more and more slowly. Cars whizzed by—gongs clanging. Hacks rattled past. People with satchels jostled her. Dilly had a queer breathless feeling. The satchel was heavy. She set it down. She leaned against a doorway to rest. Then a thought, which had been trying to get a word in for ever so long, spoke right out. "Why not miss the train?" it said boldly.

Dilly picked up the satchel. She took as many as ten quick steps. Then she began to lag again. Slower—slower—slower, her feet dragged heavily along. Sometimes they scarcely went at all. You wouldn't believe such speedy little feet could go so slowly and stumblingly. Then suddenly, across the clear frosty air came a long shill whistle, a deafening rush and roar. The train was coming.

"Run!" called several thoughts. But Dilly walked slowly along. Grasping her satchel tight, she went into the waiting-room.

A string of people hurried through the gate. They were coming in, not going out.

Dilly took a long breath. "Please," she said to the man at the gate, "has my train gone?"

Every one knew Dilly. "Just gone, Dilly," he said soberly. "Were you goin' to your grandpa's? Well, now that's too bad."

Fifteen minutes later Dilly dashed into mother's arms.

"O mother," she cried, "O mother, I missed my train."

"Missed the train?" repeated mother. "But, Dilly, how could you?"

"You see, mother," said Dilly, "some of me wanted to go, and some of me wanted to stay with you; and my feet wouldn't hurry. O mother, can't you think how it was?"

Mother laugh I a little but s e hugg I Dilly close. "Mother knows," she, of c selected.

AN EMERGENCY CASE.

"Why has that case no door that can be opened?" asked a boy of the conductor of a train, pointing to a case covered with glass, which contained a wrench and a hedge hammer. "Suppose you would have need for one of those tools on account of some little mishap on your run today?"

"I could get 'em," replied the conductor.

"But of what possible use can they be?" asked the puzzled boy.

"Look at that box," replied the man: "'In case of emergency, break the glass,' it reads. And that's just the reason the case has no door. If it had one, the chances are that every man in the train crew who thought he had a use for one of those tools would borrow it, and likely not return it. That is an emergency case, and will stay there until the box is used or is a wreck; then we'll need the tools, and we'll find them there without fail."

"It seems to me rather useless to have those fine safety tools locked up waiting for a wreck before they can be used," the lad persisted.

"Just the reverse," smiled the conductor. "Did you see the word 'emergency?' That means when we've had a wreck and the passengers are pinned under the coach, we'll have tools with which to get them out." The man mused a moment while he observed the changing expression on the boy's face.

"Here's something else for you to think about," resumed the conductor. "You ought to have an emergency case, and I'm going to tell you what to put in it—some money you've earned and saved, some plans for the future, a good bit of energy, and a liberal amount of time. Put these things in your emergency case and be sure to have a glass front so that you can see what you have there, then keep them till a great big emergency comes. When it does come, smash the glass and use your emergency stores. Lots of people use up everything they have, and when the emergency comes, there is nothing to fall back on."—Selected.

DIRECTIONS

All [illegible] should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

[illegible] subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The printed label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. We acknowledge change of date after three or four weeks. Notify us if you do not get it.

[illegible] to the editor should be addressed to him personally. Write on only one side of the paper. If you have a typewriter, [illegible] use a good quality of [illegible] Double space. Leave a margin at least two inches wide at the left hand side of the page. Do not fold the sheet. Keep the lines together. Take care to [illegible] write proper names correctly and legibly. Use [illegible] pencil if you can get it—[illegible] interlineation will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

LET EVERYBODY JOIN IN THE CAMPAIGN.

From the very nature of the case, it is not likely that it will be possible for every church to accept the Special Proposition to put the Advocate into every home represented in its membership. In fact, under present conditions we are sure there are many cases where it would be impracticable to undertake it. We ourselves have served pastorates where it would have been out of the question to do so unless some individual had offered to defray all the expenses involved out of his own pocket (and we do not recall at the present moment any such generous individual to whom we might have appealed).

It is possible, however, for every church in our three Conferences which does not accept the Special Proposition, to increase largely its present number of subscribers, and we earnestly appeal to every pastor in our patronizing territory to enter whole heartedly into the campaign to raise our subscription list to a minimum of 10,000 by March 1. The goal can be reached—of that we have not the slightest doubt. We do not underestimate the difficulties that will be encountered, but we know what ought to be done can be done when we go about the task energetically and determinedly; and we believe that the official organ of the church ought to be going into at least 10,000 homes every week. We venture to make the following suggestions as to putting on the campaign:

1. Take up the work of securing subscriptions in a very definite way. A mere suggestion that such and such a thing ought to be done sometimes brings results, but the only sure way to accomplish what is desired is to go about it definitely. Fix a time, adopt practical methods, and go to work—and the thing is already half done.

2. Present the claims of the Advocate upon its merits. We are not so presumptuous as to imagine that we are getting out an ideal paper in any respect, mechanically or editorially, but we do not hesitate to say that it is worth the full price of $1.50 a year to every member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Louisiana and Mississippi. We are willing for it to be measured by any just standard that may be chosen in substantiation of this claim; measured by ordinary commercial standards, it is worth a good deal more than its subscription price. While we believe that the appeal to church loyalty for the support of the institutions of the church is a legitimate appeal, we do not base our appeal for a larger circulation on that ground. Our people need the paper for the information and inspiration that may come to them through reading it, the church needs it for the promotion and maintenance of its work—and it is worth every cent it costs.

3. In starting the campaign a good place to begin is with the official board. Every member of the church ought to read the Advocate regularly—and it is hard to understand how any official member of the church can be willing to do without it. The welfare of our work as a whole is dependent largely upon the intelligent interest taken in it by those who sustain official relation to it. It seems to us that an official without the church paper is very much like a child in school without his books.

4. Give special attention to the securing of renewals. This is really as important as securing new subscriptions from a business point of view, especially when a name has to be dropped that is in arrears. It is a most distressing experience, in revising the subscription lists, to have to drop name after name of those who have failed to note the date of expiration on their labels and have neglected to respond to our reminders that their accounts are due.

5. Do not postpone this important matter any longer than is absolutely necessary. The year's work is before us, and large plans are to be undertaken and carried out. It is worth while for our people to get in touch with the larger work of the church in the first month of the new year.

Let everybody join in this campaign, that it may be carried to a successful conclusion as soon as possible. We are facing increasing costs of production every day. The print paper market is almost utterly demoralized, and the leading newspapers throughout the country are having a hard time to provide for their needs. Practically all of them have increased their subscription price and many of them have been forced to decrease their size. We are trying to avoid such measures—and we can do it with the immediate, hearty co-operation of our constituency. We are confident that we shall receive it. Let the subscriptions begin to come in.

WHERE DO PREACHERS COME FROM?

Most of our people have high ideals for the ministry, and most of our congregations have very definite ideas as to the kind of man they want as their preacher. Probably every presiding elder goes to Conference with a complete set of specifications of "the kind of man we must have" in such and such a place—and the bishop very likely has duplicate copies.

We do not blame an official board for using every legitimate means for securing the type of man that it feels is especially qualified for its particular church, and we do not wonder that our people generally have a considerable amount of curiosity concerning their new pastor. It is human nature for all of us to want the best that is to be had.

But we sometmes wonder if our congregations think there is a kind of emergency corps of picked men which may be drawn upon to supply the peculiar needs of a given situation. The facts would seem to indicate that they do. If so, where do they think they come from?

If some of our churches do not like the kind of preacher that has been assigned them from year to year, it might be a good idea for them to undertake to develop one themselves that would meet their special requirements. Most of them have been depending upon some other congregation to supply the men who were to do their preaching. Their own young men have grown up in the church, they know its needs, its opportunities, its type of people, and some of them might reasonably be expected to be called to do the things that their own fathers and mothers and friends say ought to be done. And yet there are scores of congregations that, from the time of their organization to this good hour, have not furnished a single member of an Annual Conference, or a candidate for the ministry. Their sole dependence has been upon other congregations.

Apart from the general question of ministerial supply as a whole, here is a matter that ought to be taken seriously into consideration by our individual churches. It is a dangerous process to be forever receiving and never giving out. In spiritual things at least it is the way of death. Has a church the right to claim the services of a minister, year after year, furnished by some other congregation when it never furnishes one for other churches from its own membership? We ask the question merely to give point to the situation as it actually exists.

We believe the time has come for our church membership as a whole to turn to prayer and to other practical ways of recruiting the ranks of the ministry from the thousands of young men who are growing up in our congregations all over the land. This may well be a part of the great evangelistic campaign upon which we have entered—it ought to be a part of it. We need more home-made preachers.

DEATH OF A NOBLE WOMAN.

We have received the following note from Dr. R. H. Wynn, pastor of Trinity Church, Ruston, La.: "Sister Victoria White, widow of Rev. T. B. White for many years an honored member of the Louisiana Conference, passed away this morning, January 5, at her home in Ruston, and will be buried tomorrow, the services to be conducted by Dr. J. M. Henry, Brother Vaughan and myself. Sister White has for many years been an efficient member and worker in our church here, and she will be greatly missed."

We extend sincere sympathy to the surviving members of Sister White's family. It was our great privilege to be a guest in the home of Dr. S. L. White, son of the deceased, at the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, and in that way we came to know something of the beautiful character of his now sainted mother. She exemplified the highest type of Christian womanhood.

ANOTHER NOBLE WOMAN GOES TO HER REWARD.

Just before going to press this week, we received the following note from Rev. W. Winans Drake, pastor of Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, La.: "Sister Liverman, widow of the late Rev. G. M. Liverman, of the Louisiana Conference, died at Bernice, La., on Wednesday, January 7, and was buried Friday, January 9, at Keachie, La. The funeral was held, the writer officiating, in the Methodist church in Keachie, which was built many years ago by Brother Liverman, and in which she and Brother Liverman were married. She leaves three children—Mrs. Van Sant, of Bernice; Mrs. Joplin, of Texarkana, and Mr. Linus Liverman, of Stonewall." The Advocate joins with the family and friends of the deceased in the sorrow caused by her death; but the sorrow is not as of those who have no hope. "Methodist people die well."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rayne Memorial Church, of this city, has increased its pastor's salary $600 above that of last year, making it now $1200.

Rev. C. T. Noble, the well known blind preacher of the Mississippi Conference, is serving the Carriere and mission charge this year.

Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, who became famous as the author of "In His Steps," became editor of the Christian Herald on January 1.

Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook has completed the first round of appointments on the Montrose charge, and he finds the outlook encouraging for the year.

Rev. K. W. Dodson, of Minden, La., informs us, in a business note, that the work of the church is progressing satisfactorily in that beautiful North Louisiana town.

"The good people of Tutwiler and Glenmora are treating us nicely, and we are expecting a good year in our church work," writes Rev. W. N. Dodds from Tutwiler, Miss.

Rev. J. S. Rutledge, of Denham Springs, La., is busily engaged in the work of his charge. By the why, his initials are J. S., not J. F., as some of his correspondents address him.

Rev. G. C. Gregory, of Mt. Pleasant, Miss., is greatly encouraged by the splendid outlook for the year's work.

Dr. Theodore Copeland, who is now devoting all his time to evangelistic work, is engaged in a great union revival meeting at Lindsay, Okla.

Revival meetings in our colleges continue to be exceedingly fruitful in conversions, in securing volunteers for missionary work, and in developing the spirit of stewardship.

We are glad to learn that the health of Rev. J. W. Price, a superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, is much improved of late. He makes his home at Greenwood, Miss.

The annual Parish Convention of the Orleans-Jefferson Sunday School Association will be held at Prytania Street Presbyterian Church, this city, February 6-8.

Rev. S. W. Johnson, of Magee, Miss., writes that he finds his work growing more pleasant each day. He is keeping the interests of the Advocate constantly in mind, for which we thank him.

Mrs. S. D. Love, of Memphis, Tenn., has been receiving the Advocate since 1865. She is an invalid now, and she looks forward to its coming with interest, as to a visit from an old friend.

Brother G. R. Ellis, of Seminary, Miss., has been a reader of the Advocate for about forty years. We appreciate very greatly his kindly expressions concerning its value as an organ of the church.

Mrs. S. R. Bennett, of McCall Creek, Miss., one of the oldest subscriber to the Advocate on our records, passed to her reward on August 2, 1919. The paper now goes to her daughter, Mrs. Pearl Mullins, but in her mother's name.

Rev. E. D. Simpson, recently transferred from the North Mississippi Conference to the Mississippi, has entered hopefully upon his work at Bay Springs, Miss. A fine daughter made her arrival in the home at Louisville, Miss., on December 28.

Brother T. A. Wafer, of Coushatta, La., is another one of the "Old Guard." He is now 66 years old, and he has been reading the Advocate from his boyhood. As might be expected, he is a loyal supporter of his pastor, of whom he speaks most kindly.

It is with great sorrow that we announce the death of Ralph Aubrey, the youngest child of Brother and Sister D. A. McIntosh, active and influential members of our church at Collins, Miss. We extend sincere sympathy to the bereaved parents.

Brother P. B. Jones, although he has removed from Olive Branch, Miss., to Memphis, Tenn., still retains his love for his native State and for the Advocate. He speaks of the Advocate as his "home paper," and directs that it be sent to him at his new address.

Rev. H. W. Jamieson, secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association at Tulane University, was scheduled to preach at Felicity Church last Sunday. He had just returned from the great Student Volunteer Convention, held at Des Moines, Iowa, recently.

Dr. D. R. Anderson, for ten years professor of history in Richmond College, has been elected president of Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Lynchburg, Va., to succeed Dr. W. A. Webb, recently deceased. Dr. Anderson will assume his new duties on April 1.

Rev. J. B. Cain, of the Mississippi Conference, is registered in the Graduate School of Emory University, working for the Master of Arts degree, which he will probably received by next September. He will return to the pastorate at the next session of his Conference.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley, of Felicty Church, New Orleans, and Rev. Leon I. McCain, of Hammond, La., exchanged pulpits on the first Sunday of the year. Not having heard anything to the contrary, we presume the arrangement was "agreeable to all concerned."

The Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, is forging ahead in the matter of ministerial support. Gulfport, Columbia, Moss Point, and Logtown have increased their assessments substantially, and other churches will follow. Rev. W. M. Sullivan is the new presiding elder.

Brother J. G. Hancock, of Good Pine, La., in a business note to the Advocate, takes occasion to speak very highly of his new pastor, Rev. A. M. Shaw, and of the outlook for the year's work in his community. We join him in the prayer that the work of the Lord may be made to prosper.

We regret very much to announce that there will be no Methodist Handbook for 1920. Dr. T. N. Ivey has rendered a very great service to the church by preparing this Volume in the past. The excessive cost of publication is the reason for its failure to appear this year. We are sorry.

Rev. C. E. Downer writes from Seminary, Miss., that the prospects are good for the year's work on that charge. The pastor and his family were given a great "pounding" recently, which, paradoxical as it may seem, they enjoyed greatly. It was also the occasion of a delightful social gathering.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Geo. L. Briggs, of San Antonio, Texas, on January 11. Mrs. Briggs is the youngest daughter of Rev. R. A. Davis, one of the honored superannuates of the Louisiana Conference, who is spending the winter in New Orleans with another daughter, Mrs. R. S. Crichlow.

Brother D. W. Heidelberg, of Shubuta, Miss., has made it a custom for several years to give a year's subscription to the Advocate to the member of his Sunday school class having the best attendance record. The prize was won this year by Brother J. E. Rainwater. A second prize, an eight months' subscription, was won by Brother J. W. Braswell.

The Baptists made a notable record in Louisiana and Mississippi in their "Seventy-five Million Campaign." The quota in Louisiana was $3,325,000; the amount pledged, on Jan. 1, was $2,810,000. The quota in Mississippi was $3,500,000; the amount pledged, on Jan. 1, was $1,000,000. We are glad to be informed that payments are coming in very satisfactorily.

First Church, Columbus, Miss., has entered upon the work of the new year energetically and enthusiastically. The congregations are large, all the machinery of the church is in good working order, and the pastor's salary has been increased to $3000 an increase of $1000 over last year. Rev. J. H. Felts is the popular and successful leader of this fine organization.

We were in error last week in stating that Dr. Geo. S. Sexton of Shreveport, La., had addressed the Rotary Club of this city on Tuesday. He was scheduled to do so, and we understood that the program had been carried out. We learned later, however, that he had been compelled to cancel the engagement at the last minute on account of illness—not serious, we trust.

According to an exchange, Mrs. F. D. Leete, wife of Bishopp F. D. Leete, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is the lay delegate from the Georgia Conference of that denomination to the General Conference, which will meet in Des Moines, Iowa, this spring. Mrs. Leete will be privileged to sit in the Committee on Episcopacy, and will, therefore, have the opportunity of discussing officially the character of her distinguished husband.

A regular church organization was effected in the chapel of the Candler School of Theology, Emory University, on last Sunday, after a sermon by Bishop Candler. This new church has been established for the convenience of the University family and for the people living nearby. Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb, who went to the University from Mississippi recently as professor of the English Bible and University pastor, is giving full proof of his ministry in his new field.

The following increases have been made for ministerial support in the Winona District, North Mississippi Conference, at the places noted: Winona station, $200; Carrollton circuit, $450; Greenwood, $600; Ita Bena, $400; Moorehead, $550; Sunflower circuit, $400; Indianola, $400; Belzoni, $700; Ruleville, $1000; Drew, $350. This is, indeed, a most encouraging indication of a new order of things in the support of the ministry. Rev. S. L. Pope is the new presiding elder of the District.

Dr. T. C. Wier, one of the great men of the North Mississippi Conference, recently passed his ninety-second birthday at the home of his daughter in Muskogee, Oklahoma. It will give great pleasure to his many frends to know that he was strong enough to mingle wth relatives and friends on that eventful day. Two of his sons are members of the board of stewards of our church at Starkville, Miss., of which church Dr. Wier was pastor for several years. We announced last week the sad news of the recent death of one of his sons in Little Rock, Ark.

We have previously made mention of the fine financial showing of Sardis and of Inverness, both of the North Mississippi Conference, in the matter of per capita contributions to the work of the church last year; now comes Rev. L. W. Cain, of the Minter City and Philipp charge, of the same conference, with the statement that his churches contributed an average of $81.53 per member. Who can beat that? Brother Cain says also that he received not only a fine turkey for Christmas, but also a dressed porker, weighing more than 100 pounds. He has the palm thus far.

The following is a recent message from Bishop Lambuth concerning our work in the East: "The Centenary Oriental fields grow apace. Our best men and women in Japan, Korea, and China have been appointed leaders. Revival fires have already broken out in Korea, and the reports are thrilling. Those who suffer most have most to give. Several new centers have been selected in Japan, and a big building program is on. In China, the Centenary offices have been opened in Shanghai. I believe our mission churches have entered on a new era. Now is the time to go forward."

BOARD OF EDUCATION TO MEET.

The Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference is hereby called to meet in Winona, Miss., on Friday, February 6, at 1 o'clock p.m., for the transaction of important business. It is hoped that there will be a good attendance of the members of the Board. R. A. MEEK, President.
L. P. WASSON, Secretary.

MY THANKSGIVING.

For the joy of work; for the chance to hit hard, when necessary; for the goodness and the grit of the fellow who may disagree with me; for the test that shows whereln I may grow stronger; for the thought that "each new day may be as the beginning of life;" for the power of Christ, whom I serve; for the final victory which I know shall be mine.—Charles Stelzle.

We are all so constituted that the love of happiness is both a necessity of our nature and a positive duty. There is no truer index of character than the kind of object or pursuit that affords us our intensest pleasure.—Thain Davidson.

LILLIE L. STEWART was born on January 8, 1881. She was married to S. E. King. She died, February 5, 1919, at her home in Louisiana. On November 15, 1919, her body was brought to her childhood home at Coalville and laid to rest, Rev. L. Fayard conducting the services. Lillie was a good Christian girl, joining the church at the age of 16 at Old Palmer Camp Ground. Thereafter, she was always ready and willing to do anything for the Master. She leaves an aged father, mother, five sisters, four brothers, husband and four dear children to mourn their loss. We miss her so much, but our loss is Heaven's gain. L. FAYARD.

Biloxi, Miss., Dec. 31, 1919.

On June 22 1919, an angel of God came to Mathiston, Miss., and took little LOUISE, the infant daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Murff. Louise was born in Iuka, Miss., May 27, 1918. She had lived long enough for all who knew her to love her. Just a short while before she was taken ill, she, with her parents, visited their old home at Iuka, Miss. Every one seemed so happy to see her. In her face there was an expression that spelled for the future, love, joy, kindness, and character. When her kindred and friends told her good-bye, little did they think that the next time they saw her she would be pale and cold. But her Father in Heaven thought this flower was too good for earth, and called her home. She was laid to rest in the cemetery at Salem, services being conducted by the writer. The mound over her body was hid from view by sweet flowers that silently spoke of the love in which she was held. I would say to her parents and kindred "Weep not; Louise is not dead, but sleeping."

God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to take from our midst our friend and brother, P. M. (Martin) McCLANAHAN. Brother McClanahan, with his wife and children, moved to Bossier City, the first of 1919 from Atkins, La. Brother McClanahan united with the Methodist Church some five or six years ago, and was as true a Christian as I ever met. He was ever ready to fill any place in the church he was asked to fill. He was steward, trustee and secretary and treasurer of our Missionary Centenary work. He was faithful, dependable and earnest. He enjoyed church work and endeared himself to all the people here in Bossier City. I had the pleasure of receiving Brother and Sister McClanahan, then three sons, viz., Martin, J. T., and Hillier, and their little daughter, Narcissa, into the church during the year 1919. Brother McClanahan had an attack of the influenza and he never seemed to get over it. Our heartfelt sympathy is extended the family, and we pray the Heavenly Father tenderly to watch over them.

MRS. B. E. MEIGS—AN APPRECIATION.

It was the good fortune of the writer to assist Rev. B. E. Meigs, in a meeting in Monticello, Miss., in July, 1918. The days and nights spent there will linger as a never-fading memory. Besides the enjoyment and fellowship in other homes, and the spiritual uplift experienced during the meeting, I came from Monticello having my life permanently enriched by reason of my stay in the parsonage home. Mrs. Meigs presided over a well-ordered household. I was not long in discovering that, though frail in body, she presented a commendably high ideal to both husband and children. She required obedience of her children, which they willingly yielded. It was beautiful and heart-enlivening to observe the system, the order, the method, of all domestic affairs, from family prayer throughout the diversificd interests of the home life. The children manifested, through the teachings of their mother, a spirit of deference, a spirit of respect, a spirit of reverence, which is sadly absent in so many youths of our land.

To her husband she was a helpmeet and an inspiration. With him she had taken up the study of the New Testament in the Greek. I could not but admire her and esteem her praiseworthy desire for such a course. She was heroic in her laudable ambition to acquire the unusual.

She has now passed over into the invisible realm, still to prosecute the study of the wonders of God's amazing love. May the inspiration of her gentle life flame the holy zeal in children and loved ones!

ENJOYMENT VS. MISERY.

I was oxpress agent at Shubuta from 1865 until 1871, and I have been observing the express office at Christmas times for forty years. This has been different from any Christmas I ever experienced before. The crates of oysters and boxes of fruit took the place of tho customary "jug"; hundreds of children received oranges, apples, nuts, candy, toys and presents this year that never before had anything like this at Christmas time, for all the spare money went into "the jug."

The station agent says that he delivered moro fruit from one car this time than he ever delivered before during the month of December. The streets were crowded on Christmas Eve, but no drunkenness was to be seen, and not a single arrest for any kind of crime.

One old man told a gentleman here that he had been fighting probibition for forty years, but he was now converted to prohibition; he could not get liquor, and he saw that abstinence was far bettor, and he claimed that he would now walk to Meridian if necessary to vote for prohibition. Men often say to me, "I have boycotted you in business, abused you on account of your stand against the liquor traffic, but now I see you were right and I was wrong"; "I have been trying to drink the wet States dry, but the law has made a teetotaler of me, and I would never be a slave to the habit again." I hear many such testimonies in favor of prohibition from former antis.

Prohibitionists are jubilant over the recent victory in Congress in the enactment of the new wartime and Federal amendment, and the Prohibition Code over tho veto of the President, signifying the wonderful momentum gained by the temperance movement in the United States. The laws must be enforced; the officers must not lie down on their jobs; the citizens must back them up witb their moral support, and inform them of law violators, both in illicit manufacture and sale. America will have constitutional prohibition after January 16; but now we must be foreign missionaries for the temperance cause. There are fields of conflict abroad which are asking for re-enforcements from America, and America must enter the world-wide fight against alcohol. As long as alcohol remains a power in the world, it will be a menace to dry America. The United States stands in the most critical position of its history now as a world power; political dangers and social disorders we can plainly see ahead, and America's wealth makes us take a place in the world to-day that is full of danger. Let all join in the drive of the Anti-Saloon League, and help remove the menace of alcohol from our doors.

BUCATUNNA ON THE MAP.

If only a very casual observer will glance at the map of Mississippi, he will discover that the Indians, who once chased the bear and deer through the primeval forests and interminable canebreaks, have left their impress upon the topography of the State and a memory of their euphonious language in the names of the beautiful streams flowing between the hills of Mississippi and across her valleys. Leisurely meandering through the borders of Wayne County is the picturesque stream called Bucatunna, charming the ear when spoken with the soft intonations of the Indian vocabulary. Not far from this stream, and taking its name from it, located on the M. and O. R. R., 63 miles south of Meridian, one of the most prosperous cities, and 71 miles north of Mobile, Alabama, is the hustling town of Bucatunna, with its two churches, stores, veneer mill, box factory, and other enterprises. Toward the north are the towns of Winchester and Chicora, the latter being a mill town of approximately a thousand population; on the south, beautiful for situation, is the town of State Line, with its remarkably magnificent and stately oaks, splendid homes, and refined, intelligent people. Fortunate, indeed, is the preacher who is appointed pastor of these four towns, the Methodist population of which is a royal people.

Some years ago, while the Mississippi Conference was in session, the presiding bishop and his cabinet were, as usual, arranging the appointments of the preachers. One of the presiding elders said: "Bishop, put Brother A. down for Bucatunna." "Buck-a-what?" said the bishop. "Bucatunna," answered tho presiding elder. "I'll not do anything of the kind—there is no such place on the map," replied the bishop. "Yes, Bishop," said the presiding elder, "it is a town down in Wayne County on the M. & O. R. R., and I want Brother A. assigned there." "All right," said the bishop, "write it down that way, but when the appointments are read you will have to call it—I'll not do it." So, true to his word, when the bishop came to Bucatunna in reading the list of appointments he paused and, turning to the presiding elder, said, "Now, you call that," and the presiding elder had to call out, "Bucatunna, Brother A.—"

At the last session of the Mississippi Conference Bishop Kilgo did not refuse to call Bucatunna, nor did he hesitate to read my name in connection therewith. So, on Thursday of the second week after the adjournment of Conference, we started for Bucatunna, but when we arrived in Meridian we learned that the recent floods had washed away the railroads and no trains were running south out of Meridian and no one knew when they would run; however, fortunately for us, we had many acquaintances and friends in Meridian who hospitably threw tho doors of their homes open to us till our departure on the following Monday. Upon our arrival in Bucatunna, although the people had but short notice of our coming, we were met at the depot and escorted to the parsonage, where we found a fire kindled on the hearth and supper on the table awaiting us. The next day the people filled our pantry with good things. A day or two later, on going to the post office, I took from my box a post card directing me to call at the express office for a package, which I did, thinking I would put tho package in my pocket and walk off with it; but when the agent pointed to it, I discovered a box of such proportions—or dimensions, if you please—I saw at once I would have to substitute the dray for my pocket. The contents of that box were something wonderful—apples, oranges, nuts, butter, pork, dressed chickens (note the plural), and other things too numerous to tabulate. Suffice it to say that it was a Christmas box from the church at State Line.

So, Mr. Editor, in closing, I shall have to insist upon it that you announce to the reading public, whatever a bishop may think about it, that Bucatunna, including the other towns mentioned herein, is certainly ON THE MAP. JOHN W. RAMSEY.

Bucatunna, Miss., Jan. 1, 1920.

Recipe For Gray Hair

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ½ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded, gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Mrs. J. Christman Proved That Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a Remedy for this Trouble.

Binghamton, N. Y.—"I was in a very nervous condition for over a year, my mind was gloomy, could see no light on anything, could not work and could not have anyone to see me. Doctor's medicine did not help me and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended. I took it and am now well. I recommend it to all afflicted with nervous prostration."—Mrs. J. CHRISTMAN, 193 Oak Street, Binghamton, New York.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from nervous prostration, displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion and dizziness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard remedy for female ills.

If there are any complications about which you need advice write in confidence to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Sage Tea Darkens Hair to Any Shade

Don't Stay Gray! Here's an Old-Time Recipe that Anybody Can Apply.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.—Adv.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H.B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Several schools have already made the canvass for new members, but a great many more will have to do the same thing if we get back the hundreds we have lost.

The man who procrastinates and procrastinates is as truly serving the devil as the poor fellow who gets drunk on wood alcohol. What wait I for?

The man who believes in seeking and saving the lost will show his faith by his works. He will also welcome all the help he can get—and the best of us need a great deal of help.

The schools at Hernando, Sardis, and Como have started on the Third Rank Standard and expect to have every one of the ten points in operation by the first of May. This is a big program, but when we face it squarely it is little enough for any intelligent people to undertake.

The preachers of the Sardis District held a two days' meeting recently, led by Dr. Meek, the presiding elder. Every preacher is in earnest about seeking the power of the Holy Spirit. When we put away all self-seeking, the way will be opened for the Spirit to come upon us. Self is the enemy we must utterly slay before there shall be a great awakening. I believe our men will pay the price.

FROM PURVIS, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I will celebrate the new year by writing the Advocate a note. You see that I am at Purvis, where I least expected to be. But how little we know where God will send us, when we say, "We'll go where you want us to go." But he always sends us where we can do the most for him. You may not believe that, but I do. I don't always see it; but faith is believing what we can't see. But what about Purvis.

Well, Purvis is a station—(I guess it is)—I preach here every Sunday, twice, except the third Sunday, when I preach here only once. But I have five appointments in the surrounding country. So, you see, I have a station and also a country charge. Do you think I'll have anything to do this year besides fish in Black Creek? This country is filling up with real home-makers from Alabama and Tennessee. Over five hundred have settled here, bought land and built homes, during last year, and still they come. I think there is the finest prospect here for me to do the best year's work of my life, that exists in any charge I know in the Mississippi Conference. The stewards have agreed to relieve me of all financial responsibility for church claims, and turn me loose to preach, pray, visit and do the work of a pastor. They have also raised the salary to a sufficient amount for our support, and supply all the accessories and gasoline for my Ford. So, you see, I have this fine town church (I mean people, not the building, while the building is good) and this nice parsonage, plus the privileges of preaching to these fine country people, these fine young people of these consolidated schools and agricultural high school, and of riding over the fine roads, eating good country dinners and having some samples of the farm products put in my car for home use.

We are planning and praying for a great revival all over this work.

W. M. WILLIAMS.

January 1, 1920.

GOLDEN CIRCUIT.

After "many trials and tribulations," occasioned by unfavorable weather and impassable roads, we got moved to Golden, and I have made one round. Golden circuit is composed of 5 churches—Dennis, Belmont, Golden, Patterson's Chapel, and Bethel. Four of the five appointments are on the railroad and pike road, and all of them convenient and accessible, the most distant point being only six miles from the parsonage. The people here have shown us many kindnesses since we arrived, and I am convinced that some of God's own people are to be found on this charge.

My duties as a member of the Mississippi Legislature will call me to Jackson on January 5, but I shall visit home as often as possible during the session, and when it is over, I expect to be at home and "on the job" for the remainder of the year.

Our first quarterly conference is to meet at Golden, February 27.

W. T. BAZZEL, P. C.

$1.00 BRINGS $200.00.

Sterling, Kansas.—Mr. A. S. Thode writes: "I never used 'More Eggs' Tonic until last December; then just used one $1 package and have sold over $200 worth of eggs from forty-four hens. 'More Eggs' Tonic did it."

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. "More Eggs" is a scientific tonic that revitalizes the flock and makes the hens lay all the time. "More Eggs" will double the production of eggs. Poultry raisers everywhere are making big profits by giving their hens "More Eggs." The results of a few cents' worth will amaze you.

If you send $1.00 to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 3251 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, today he will send you two large size $1.00 packages of "More Eggs"—one package being absolutely free on the special limited offer he is making now. The Million Dollar Merchants Bank of Kansas City, Mo., guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request. So there is no risk. Send a dollar today on this free package offer. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

FROM THE NEBO CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: I am writing just a few lines from the Nebo charge. Upon our arrival at the parsonage, we were met by several of the ladies and two of our laymen, Brother Joe Garrett and Brother W. E. Youngblood. Brother Garrett is one of our old Confederate soldiers; he also is a true soldier of the Cross. Two of the ladies who came to meet their new pastor were his daughters, Mrs. Lola Gibson and Mrs. Dawkins. The other ladies that met us were Mrs. Walter Youngblood and Mrs. Thomas Youngblood. These ladies, with others, had prepared dinner at their home and brought it along and served it for us, and, upon leaving, they left us enough for the pantry to last us some time. And the backbone and spare-ribs are still coming.

I feel that I have the prayers and co-operation of the good people on the Nebo charge, and this being true I am praying for, hoping and expecting a genuine Holy Ghost revival on the charge.

C. H. HERRING, P. C.

Perth, Miss.

The Inward Effects of humors are worse than the outward. They endanger the whole system. Hood's Sarsaparilla eradicates all humors, cures all their inward and outward effects. It is the great alterative and tonic, whose merit has been everywhere established.—Adv.

NOTES FROM GREENVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: The new year has opened most happily for us. Our congregations are larger than usual, the Sunday school is having the largest attendance in the history of the church, and the interest generally is at high tide. The first year I was pastor here, one hundred were received into the church. The past year, we made it one hundred and two. Twelve have joined since Conference. Last Sunday, one of our Sunday school classes assumed the support of a $100 special. The school is carrying another special of $140. Last year, this congregation raised $9500, and more than $4000 of this amount was for various home and foreign missionary enterprises. We hope to make this the best year of the three.

E. S. LEWIS.

FROM VARDAMAN, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: The year 1919 has come and gone. The last night, our people here in Vardaman serenaded us with various kinds of rattling, noisy things. After the noise had ceased, the band of men, women, boys, girls and children went up and down the street in a joyful way, laughing and talking of the way they had treated us. And a treat it was, of groceries enough to last us for some time. And still the pounding comes, even cake with money in it; either is good, but both together are better.

Brother Carley, as you see, I am entering upon my third year on the Vardaman charge, Aberdeen District, North Mississippi Conference. Pray that this may be my best.

R. T. NOLEN, P. C.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the checks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

Uric Acid in Meat Clogs the Kidneys

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

BEAUTIFUL 1920 SCRIPTURE TEXT CALENDAR FREE

The Georgia-Alabama Business College, Macon, Ga., is sending out absolutely free of charge a lovely Scripture text calendar for the year 1920. This calendar is illustrated with extremely beautiful color scriptural illustrations. Each monthly page carries one of these Scripture illustrations, such as "Jesus Blessing the Children," "The Star of Bethlehem," "Jesus Stilling the Tempest," "Christ and the Holy Women." There are twelve of these monthly page illustrations in full color, besides the full page illustration on the cover of the calendar. Every Christian worker should have one of these calendars. Each day in the month is shown in large figures and immediately under the figures is given the text for the day, except on Sundays. Each Sunday date gives the subject for the Sunday School lesson, Scripture reading and Golden Text. On the back of the calendar is given the standard time for each of the twelve divisions, and also is carried a 200 Year Reference Calendar, which enables one to select one of seven calendars for use in each of 200 years from 1800 to 2002. The price of these calendars is 30c and they are very cheap at the price, but they are being sent absolutely free to Christian workers, the only return courtesy that is asked being the sending to Georgia-Alabama Business College of the name and address of some prospective student who desires to take a business course in bookkeeping, shorthand, typewriting, commercial English, etc. Write at once and get your calendar, giving the name of some prospective business student. In writing mention this paper.—Advertisement.

First Week, 5 Eggs; Second, 72; Third, 104

Hens Showed Steady Egg Gain for Mrs. Pierce in Winter Weather.

"The week before we tried Don Sung, we got 5 eggs, from 50 hens. The next week, from a 50 cent package of Don Sung, we got 72 eggs, and the next week 104. Some of our hens are mere pullets and Don Sung has started them laying."—Mrs. B. F. Pierce, R. F. D. 1, Butler, Tenn.

Mrs. Pierce selected a severe time for her test—the middle of January. Yet she started getting the eggs promptly. Your hens can lay well, in cold weather, and we'll prove it. Here's our offer:

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 462 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.—Adv.

FROM TROUT AND GOOD PINE.

To all the brethren of the Louisiana Conference who have, by letter, card, or otherwise, made haste to bid me welcome to the land of the "Pelican Pines," I wish to express my hearty thanks. The Advocate and its editor I greet most cordially.

We have been here a month, and, in spite of the inconvenlences incident to moving and readjustment, the time has been passed most happily. The good people of Trout and Good Pine have made us feel at home, and, regardless of denominational affiliations, have given us a Christian and brotherly welcome. We feel that a golden opportunity is before us here. The Christian people seem anxious to work, and willing to follow leadership: we are looking to Christ to lead, and are expecting a golden harvest.

A. M. SHAW.

FROM IUKA CIRCUIT.

Dear Brother Carley: Please allow me to say that we have been cordially received for our second year's work. Things seem to be moving the right way, although the weather and the roads have been very bad. I feel this will be the better year of the two. We have a fine people to serve. Many of them were thoughtful of us during the holidays, and opened their hearts to us. I think I have some churches that will take advantage of the Special Proposition of the Advocate. I mean to look after its interests soon.

Wishing you a happy New Year, I am, Your brother in Christ,

W. T. PHILLIPS.

FROM SHELBY, MISS.

New Year's greetings, Mr. Editor, and good wishes for the dear old Advocate! An extra day of blessings and fortune attend you both in 1920.

The Conference year and the new year have begun auspiciously for us in the Shelby charge. Our first quarterly conference was held three weeks after Annual Conference. Our official board, with its usual 100 per cent efficiency, had ready at that time, and paid in full all assessments and claims for the first quarter. The pastor's salary had been substantially increased at the close of the Conference year.

Our alert and faithful presiding elder, Rev. V. C. Curtis, was with us, and preached with convincing power on the "Presence and Reality of the Holy Spirit." All hearts were stirred with genuine revival fires. At the close of the service, by unanimous consent all present covenanted together to live in more vital touch with the Master and to seek a greater infilling of the Spirit's power.

The blessed Christmastide brought its message of good-will and cheer into our hearts this year in fullest measure. Countless manifestations of love and appreciation from our splendid people found their way into our parsonage home. The Christmas shower burst upon us on Saturday, December 20, when the Woman's Missionary Society "rained" upon us a "good-will pantry shower." Everything good in the edible line was included, from the daily necessities to the delicacies and luxuries of life. The age of miracles is not past, Brother Carley, as was proved on that date, when a Methodist parsonage pantry suffered an overflow! Thank God for our generous, warm-hearted, Christian women! They always excel in good works. This first downpour was but the beginning of a "showery" season which continued until New Year, every day making its contributions to our stock and store of material comforts. But, best of all, was the fine spirit of friendship, good-will and Christlain love which pervaded all hearts, and which filled to overflowing with gratitude and joy those of the pastor and his wife. Such kindly ministrations from one's parishioners are a mighty challenge to the best that is in a man; a summons "to spend and be spent" in the blessed work of the Master, and in joyful service to his people.

We are praying for a great revival in 1920. Already we are making preparations to receive a great and gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit's power, in and for the Shelby charge.

Pray for us, and come to see us, Mr. Editor.

Cordially yours,

J. M. Wyatt.

Eggs Paid the Pastor.

Mrs. Lena McBroom, Woodbury, Tenn., writes "I've got more eggs than I ever did in my life, paid my debts, clothed the children in new dresses, and I paid my pastor his dues. I have money to spare now. 'More Eggs' is the remedy for me. I sold 42 1-2 dozen eggs last week, set four dozen, ate some and had 1 1-2 dozen left."

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, discovered the wonderful tonic, "More Eggs," that revitalizes the flock and makes the hens work all the time. You need this great egg producer. It means big egg profits for you. Don't delay.

If you send $1.00 to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 8251 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, today he will send you two large size $1.00 packages of "More Eggs"—one package being absolutely free on the special limited offer he is making now. The Million Dollar Merchants Bank of Kansas City, Mo., guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request. So there is no risk. Send a dollar today on this free package offer. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune ont of poultry.—Adv.

A Gentle Reminder.

Janet, aged nine, was taken by her mother to lunch at the house of a friend.

The hostess was of the talkative variety, and, in her enjoyment of certain interesting little incidents she was relating, quite forgot to give Janet anything in the shape of food.

After a lapse of several minutes Janet could endure this situation no longer. So, raising her plate as high as she could, she demanded in a shrill voice:

"Anybody here want a clean plate?"—Everybody's Magazine.

A COATED TONGUE? WHAT IT MEANS

A bad breath, coated tongue, bad taste in the mouth, languor and debility, are usually signs that the liver is out of order. Prof. Hemmeter says: "The liver is an organ secondary in importance only to the heart."

We can manufacture poisons within our own bodies which are as deadly as a snake's venom.

The liver acts as a guard over our well-being, sifting out the cinders and ashes from the general circulation.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are made of May-apple, leaves of aloe and jalap, first put into ready-to-use form by Doctor Pierce, nearly fifty years ago, and sold for 25 cents by all druggists as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

New Orleans, La.:—"When I was quite a young girl I was troubled a great deal with sluggish liver and sick headaches. My mother used several of Dr. Pierce's remedies and she gave me the 'Pleasant Pellets' until they eventually cured me of all liver trouble and headaches. For quite a number of years I have had no return of these ailments, but have been in a perfectly healthy and regular condition. I am, therefore, most enthusiastic in my praise of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets."—Mrs. T. Schneider, 707 Independence St.

AN IDEAL MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Mrs. Joseph M. Plant.

An ideal missionary society has for its bone and brawn a perfect organization, as given us in the constitution and by-laws, consisting of ten officers.

These officers, when elected, are elected to perform certain duties, to take charge of definite work. They will at once put themselves in touch with their corresponding officers in the Conference and learn all they can about their respective offices. No officer need ever say she does not know what to do or how to go about it, so long as she may communicate with her corresponding officer higher up, and get from her the best of suggestions and a wealth of adaptable literature.

The officers of an ideal missionary society would report fully, accurately, and on time.

Officers in an ideal society would be women suited to their offices. The president should be a godly woman, able to lead in prayer. She should be tactful, quick to see the point, forgetting herself in her desire to serve God's cause, and with a degree of executive ability. She ought to be informed on missionary work and endeavor.

A woman who realizes the thrilling responsibility of training the young people in Christian service, who has not forgotten when she was past their age, and remembers how plastic their hearts are in God's hands, is the woman for the superintendent of young people's work.

A woman who loves children, not sentimentally, but understandingly, is the woman for the superintendent of children's work.

The treasurer ought to be a born manager, with marvelous tact and judgment.

The corresponding secretary should be a woman whose life is wonderfully attuned to God's ways, in order that she may teach stewardship and tithing.

These ideal officers would want an ideal meeting at a definite time and place. Such a meeting would be well attended, new members coming in at almost every meeting.

Nothing alive is at a standstill, and an ideal society would be a growing society in membership and average attendance. New members would be given something to do, and the terms used, such as Home Base, Woman's Council, Pledge, would be explained again and again, for most of these mean little to new members and, of course, an ideal new member would want to know.

Another requisite of an ideal society would be the way in which it handled its finances. Business methods would be applied to the collection and disbursement of the moneys. At the first meeting in January each year, a budget would be made, saying how much the society would pay on the pledge, the Scarritt fund, how the local and incidental fund would be raised and, of course, including the twenty-five cents a month dues from each member.

This society would increase its offering each year on the pledge and aim high for a special, either a scholarship, Bible woman, or missionary; in other words, to enlarge worship through giving.

An ideal missionary society would be a studying society; first and best, in mission study classes, in groups of ten or twelve, under separate leaders; then, by means of attractive meetings, with varied programs, and using as many as possible of the women to take part during the year.

There should be at least one Missionary Voice program during the year, also one temperance program. The quarterly social service program ought not to be neglected. Definite Bible study would be done either in connection with mission study classes or in groups.

An ideal society would co-operate with the pastor in the uplift of the community, and with other organizations for the good of the town or section. It would keep the parsonage comfortable for the pastor and family, and look after the beauty and adornment of the church itself. It would visit the sick, shut-ins, and strangers in the church, and through its local committee care for the poor of the church.

An ideal society would know the conditions in the local jail or county farm, and seek to help in any possible way. In short, the ideal society has Jesus as its pattern, who came not to be ministered unto but to minister, and of whom it is said he went about doing good.

But the most glorious fact about an ideal society would be that it is a praying society, praying by covenant, or in groups or circles at the different homes, and training women to lead in prayer.

An ideal society would pray for definite objects each month, certain fields and workers, and observe the Week of Prayer and Self-Denial in the fall.

The secret of an ideal missionary society is partnership with God on the part of a group of women to carry forward God's plan for the world in God's way.—Missionary Voice.

RESOLUTIONS CONCERNING SPECIALS.

In accordance with the Council policy of granting in occasional instances the taking of special objects of support by individuals, auxiliaries, districts, or conferences, the Executive Committee of the Council recommends:

1. That all money collected for specials shall be used for those objects directly authorized by the Council.

In case any individual, auxiliary, district, or conference desires to direct an offering to some particular activity in Council work, arrangements to that end shall first be made with the Executive Secretary in charge of the field in which the activity is located.

2. That since confusion has arisen in some places in regard to the offerings made through the Centenary, a clear statement be made by the Council concerning the Centenary offerings and the Council funds as follows:

Because of the absolute necessity for using all regular Council funds for the Council work, no auxiliary shall turn any of its funds to a Centenary special. Neither shall any auxiliary join with other organizations of the church in taking a Centenary special for support.

Co-Operative Home Not Ford Car.

Any Ford dealer will tell you that a Ford automobile will run on gasoline, but if you do not happen to have that, coal oil will do as well, and if no coal oil is at hand, soapsuds will do the work, and you'll never know the difference.

And so the impression seems to be that good, substantial food for our girls in the Co-Operative Home is well and good if it happens to be provided, but if not convenient, they will work as long and hard on a few (very few) sweets, and when that sort of thing gives out, the Corinth air is good and wholesome enough to keep them going at a merry clip.

Now Corinth air is good, and we've no idea of disputing it, but the trouble about it is that it makes one ravenously hungry—like the good old mountain air.

Sweets are fine, one might say almost indispensable in a young girl's life. It would not make them mad to have a little bon-bon howl on the center table in their own cozy rooms every day; let them come and continue to come, but please, please do not give them the overworked "shortage" on muscle-giving, blood-giving, energy-giving substantials.

A few lovely boxes have been received. Start off the new year right and everybody send at least one full and juicy box to these splendid young women. We say we are making life easier for them. Let's do it!

IS THIS YOUR CASE?

What You Should Do—Most Successful and Economical Treatment.

Do you have a feeling of general weakness day in and out? Is your appetite poor? Does your food fail to strengthen you and your sleep to refresh? Do you find it hard to do or to bear what should be easy? Have your ordinary duties and cares become great tasks and burdens?

If so, take Hood's Sarsaparilla—this great medicine revitalizes the blood, gives vigor and tone to all the organs and functions, and is unequalled for those who are in any degree debilitated or run down. Do not delay treatment—begin it today.

To rouse the torpid liver and regulate the bowels take Hood's Pills. They are purely vegetable.

Don't Drug Kidneys Rub Backache Away

Kidneys cause backache? No! They have no nerves, therefore cannot cause pain. Listen. Your backache is caused by lumbago, sciatica or a strain, and the quickest relief is soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Liniment." Rub it right on the ache or tender spot, and instantly the pain, soreness, stiffness and lameness disappears. Don't stay crippled! Get a small trial bottle of "St. Jacobs Liniment" from your druggist and limber up. A moment after it is applied you'll wonder what became of the backache, sciatica or lumbago pain. "St. Jacob's Liniment" stops any pain at once. It is harmless and doesn't burn or discolor the skin.

It's the only application to rub on a weak, lame or painful back, or for lumbago, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, sprains or a strain.

FROM BOSSIER CITY, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: It has been some time since I had anything to say through the Adocvate about our work in the Bossier City-Lake End charge. There were no changes made in the charge at this session of our Conference, but during the winter months I have only two preaching places, viz., Bossiier City and Powhattan. These two places are wide-awake, and I feel that we shall have a good year.

I began planning in the latter part of the summer and the early fall to have a revival meeting in our church at Bossier City during the Christmas holidays, and enlisted the interest and prayers of our people, and when I report to you the meeting was a success, I am stating it mildly. Rev. J. V. Bennett, one of the Mississippi Conference evangelists, did the preaching and I want to tell you it was good. We had seven additions to the church by profession of faith, the entire membership was strengthened, and the community was greatly helped. There is a better feeling among our people than there has been since I have been here. The determination on the part of our people to erect a Methodist church and parsonage in the near future is one of the direct results of the meeting. I am confident I shall be able to report at our next Conference, "A church and parsonage built this year, Bishop."

The people are lovely to us, Brother Carley. They show their appreciation in a great many ways. The pounding received during the Christmas holidays was great. The prospects of an increase in salary during this year are good. These and numerous other things bring us very near the people.

We shall have our first quarterly conference on the fourth Sunday in this month, with our new elder, Brother Carter, presiding.

Trusting you have had a good Christmas, and wishing for you and yours much success and happiness this year, I am your brother,

J. M. BOYKIN.

FROM PASCAGOLUA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I am writing to say that Pascagoula, Miss., is still on the map. We arrived here on December 19, and were met by a number of the good Methodist men and women at the train. From there we made our way to the parsonage, where we found a warm supper awaiting us. The people have treated us royally, and have shown themselves very much interested in our welfare and comfort.

Last evening was a great occasion. The people planned a New Year's pounding for the parsonage; so, about dark, the goodies began to come in, and by nine o'clock the dining table was heaped up with everything that would tempt a Methodist preacher's appetite. After the simple refreshments were served, and the crowd had gone home, this preacher and his family went to the dining room and took inventory, as a result of which it was very hard for us to go to sleep. It reminded me of the days of childhood, when we were looking for Santa Claus—there were so many good things to think about that sleep seemed afar off. But we finally got off to sleep, and to-day we have just been over-worked—but I can assure you we have proved ourselves faithful in our undertaking.

We have a great people at Pascagoula, and there is a great field here. I have never found a more willing people to co-operate and to try to do their very best. We are already planning big things for this year. Pray that the Lord may put His impress upon the life of this city through the influence of our consecrated people here. A happy New Year to you.

Your brother in Christ,

J. H. MOORE, P. C.

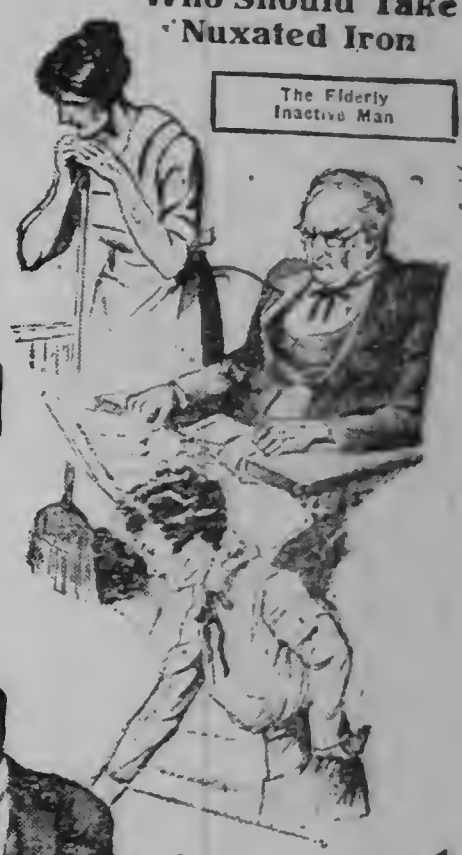
IS YOUR BLOOD HUNGRY FOR IRON?

Modern Methods of Cooking and Living Have Made An Alarming Increase in Iron Deficiency in Blood of American Men and Women

NUXATED IRON Helps Make Red Blood

The Kind That Puts Roses Into the Cheeks of Women and Force Strength and Courage Into Veins of Men.



Who Should Take Nuxated Iron

"Is your blood starving for want of iron? Iron is red blood food. If you were to go without eating until you became weak, thin and emaciated, you could not do a more serious harm to yourself than when you let your blood literally go hungry for want of iron—iron that gives it strength and power to change food into living tissue," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital.

"Modern methods of cooking and the rapid pace at which people of this country live has made such an alarming increase in iron deficiency in the blood of American men and women that I have often marveled at the large number of people who lack iron in the blood—and who never suspect the cause of their weak, nervous, run-down state. But in my opinion, you can't make strong, sturdy men and women by feeding them on metallic iron. The old forms of metallic iron must go through a digestive process to transform them into organic iron — Nuxated Iron—before they are to be taken up and assimilated by the human system. Notwithstanding all that has been said and written on this subject by well-known physicians, thousands of people still insist in dosing themselves with metallic iron simply, I suppose, because it costs a few cents less. I strongly advise readers in all cases to get a physician's prescription for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—or if you don't want to go to this trouble, then purchase only Nuxated Iron in its original packages and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the packages. If you have taken preparations such as Nux and Iron and other similar iron products and failed to get results, remember that organic iron must be assimilated or it will do you no good. Nuxated Iron is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make you constipated or upset the stomach. Two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks is said to work wonders in many cases. See how much you benefit after the first few days' treatment. Numerous people who have taken Nuxated Iron have written us that all the while they were taking it they felt as strong and endurance as they ever did in their lives, after taking iron in the proper form.

50 Eggs a Day

"Before using 'More Eggs' tonic, I was getting only 12 eggs a day and now get 50," writes Mrs. Myrtle Ice of Boston, Ky.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. "More Eggs" is a scientific tonic that revitalizes the flock and makes the hens lay all the time. "More Eggs" will double the production of eggs. Poultry raisers everywhere are making big profits by giving their hens "More Eggs." The results of a few cents' worth will amaze you.

If you send $1.00 to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 3251 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, today he will send you two large size $1.00 packages of "More Eggs"—one package being absolutely free on the special limited offer he is making now. The Million Dollar Merchants Bank of Kansas City, Mo., guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request. So there is no risk. Send a dollar today on this free package offer. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

MORE SERIOUS THAN IT SEEMS.

The National Retail Clothiers' Association has issued a bulletin, according to press reports, to the effect that by spring an ordinary suit of clothes will cost $60, and by June the same suit will cost $100. The reason assigned for the high prices is that some garment makers are drawing $125 a week for forty-four hours' work. The comforting assurance is added that it will be two years before prices come down. We are just wondering how some of us can make our last summer's clothes do service for two years more. We are willing to do almost anything that is honest and honorable to bring about an immediate reduction in present prices, but to have to wait two long years—whew! We trust the situation is not as serious to our readers as it appears to us.

A TIMELY WARNING.

Sir Oliver Lodge, the noted British scientist and prominent exponent of Spiritualism, has recently advised persons of weak minds to keep away from "ouija boards." He based his warning on the fear that constant experimenting with the board would affect the mentality of all but strong-minded persons. We presume his warning is timely—the trouble is that those who are so weak minded as to have faith in the "ouija board" are too weak-minded to be profited thereby.

PROHIBITION IN FACT.

Our country is now under constitutional prohibition as provided by the Eighteenth Amendment. It is a consummation that has been devoutly prayed for and worked for through many long and weary years. We cannot refrain from an expression of gratitude to Almighty God for the accomplishment of what has seemed at times an impossible task. But we must not rest in the feeling that what we have labored for is now perfected. We have the law, but we must secure its enforcement. We must not doubt that selfish, mercenary, conscienceless interests will do all in their power to nullify the Amendment and make a farce of the law. Already we have seen that powerful combinations of liquor dealers and their bibulous sympathizers have expressed their contempt for the Amendment and their determination to make it a dead letter. It is the duty of every law-abiding citizen in the land to see to it that the law is enforced. The anti-prohibitionists, happily growing fewer as the benefits of prohibition become more and more evident, will endeavor in every possible way to obstruct the officials in the discharge of their duty. We need to let these officials know that they have our hearty support and co-operation in their efforts to carry out the provisions of the law they are charged to enforce. They must realize that in expecting them to do their full duty, we are willing to assist them to the extent of our ability. Prohibition is now written into the organic law of the land; we must see to it that it is prohibition in fact, as well as in law.

POOR LOGIC.

A recent writer has suggested that the cost of women's clothes may be reduced considerably if the predictions of a fashionable male milliner and dressmaker of New York are correct. This gentleman, lately returned from Paris, says that the newest modes being sent to this country from France include no stockings, extremely short skirts, no sleeves, sandals. The inference is, the clothes will cost less because there will be less of them. The logic would seem to be false, however, since the rule in the fashionable world seems to be, "the fewer the clothes, the higher the cost." Anyway, we are in favor of more clothes, no matter what the cost.

"CONSCIENCE DOTH MAKE COWARDS."

Dispatches from abroad indicate that the ex-Kaiser is almost in a state of collapse because of the terror with which he views the determination of certain European statesmen to bring him before an international tribunal for trial. We do not know to what extent his state of mind is due to the pangs of conscience, but we can very well imagine that he is the most miserable man on the face of the earth because of the evil he has wrought in a peaceful world. We do not attribute to him the sole responsibility for the terrible catastrophe that almost overwhelmed humanity, but his soul must be writhing under a burden of guilt that only infinite grace could find pardon for. Well may he fear to face a tribunal of men; when he thinks of the judgment bar of God, the hills and the mountains piled upon him should seem as a feather's weight. For that matter, every sinner should writhe in agony under the lashings of an angry conscience.

MAKE IT UNNECESSARY.

There is a growing disposition on the part of those who are opposed to the operation of lynch law to press for the enactment of Federal legislation that will provide punishment for mobs. We can only be ashamed of the record that has been made in this country within the past twelve months of illegal, and, in many cases, barbarous executions. The conscience of the nation is becoming aroused, and we may expect more and more the Christian people of the land to demand sufficient measures for the orderly enforcement of law. The tragedy of the whole situation lies in the fact that it should have reached the point where legislation is needed to correct it. It is not too late for us to make unnecessary and stringent Federal laws, but we may rest assured that such laws will be enacted sooner or later if we do not develop a public sentiment that will be strong enough to inspire adequate protection against mob violence for all those who are accused of crime. Law-abiding people cannot afford to countenance by word or act law-deriding men who undertake to administer justice by monumental injustice. The mob must go.

TOO HOLY TO WORK.

We read an amusing story the other day of a traveler in the East who asked his dragoman as to the occupation of a noted Moslem saint. The dragoman, with an air of pity for such colossal ignorance, replied, "He do nothing; he very holy man." Idleness may be the Eastern ideal of holiness, but it is out of keeping with the Christian's conception of perfection. "By their fruits ye shall know them," applies to saints as well as sinners. One of the severest condemnations the Lord ever uttered was of a man who had failed to make use of some money that had been entrusted to his management. A holy man will not do some things that he sees others doing, but he will manage to keep himself pretty busy. If he does not, the devil is likely to steal away some of his saintliness.

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE RAILROADS.

Opinion as to the success of the Government control of the railroads of the country depends upon the point of view. As a war measure, to secure indispensable service in military operations, there can be no doubt but that the action was an unqualified success; as a means of giving the general public better service, however, there is room for serious doubt. It may be that the experiment has not been tried for a sufficient length of time to enable the public to reach a just conclusion. In this connection, it is interesting to learn that the government deficit from railroad operation for the month of November is approximately $61,500,000, according to figures made public by the Bureau of Railway Economics on January 2. At any rate, the operation of the railroads has not been a brilliant financial success.

THE VALUE OF PUBLICITY.

Mr. William J. Bryan, who, despite his failure to be elected to the presidency of the United States, is still one of the most influential figures in public life, was one of the principal speakers at the Jackson Day banquet at the meeting of the Democratic National Committee at Washington on January 8. Apart from the political significance of his remarks, we wish to call attention to one proposition he made as a definite suggestion for party action. It is as follows: "We need above all other things just now a national publication not a newspaper, but a publication—under bipartisan control, furnished to all who desire it at a nominal cost, a publication which will present to the people the issues upon which they must act, with editorials presenting the arguments for and against the actions proposed, so that every citizen may intelligently exercise the duties of citizenship and give to his government the benefit of his judgment and conscience." This statement of Mr. Bryan's is simply a recognition of the fact that the intelligent exercise of the duties of citizenship is dependent upon information. We hold that the same thing is true with reference to church membership. If the church is to have the full benefit of "the judgment and conscience" of its members, it must see to it that they read its literature.

STANDING AT THE PORTAL

Standing at the portal
Of the opening year,
Words of comfort meet us,
Hushing every fear;
Spoken through the silence
By our Father's voice,
Tender, strong, and faithful,
Making us rejoice:

"I, the Lord, am with thee;
Be thou not afraid!
I will keep and strengthen;
Be thou not dismayed!
Yea, I will uphold thee
With my own right hand;
Thou art called and chosen
In my sight to stand."

For the year before us,
O, what rich supplies!
For the poor and needy
Living streams shall rise,
For the sad and sinful
Shall His grace abound;
For the faint and feeble
Perfect strength be found.

He will never fail us,
He will not forsake;
His eternal covenant
He will never break!
Resting on his promise,
What have we to fear?
God is all-sufficient
For the coming year.

—Frances Havergal.

THE CHURCH IN THE DAYS AHEAD.

By S. Parkes Cadman, D.D.

This country was not made by statesmen. It was made by prophets of God. It was John Wesley's circuit riders and those of Asbury who turned mob leaders into class leaders and recreated the State. When you preach patriotism, it has a very useful place, but there is only one eternal institution on this earth and that is the Christian church in its holiness and its brotherhood of those who love Christ. That church is the home of the soul, it is the house of God, it is the body of Christ, and the bride of Christ and the everlasting visible witness of God's saving power. That is the doctrine which the church ought to be preaching more and which we hear very little of in these times.

The church was never meant to be solely the center of preaching. Preachers must have a keen sympathy with the idea that a man has to stand up twice every Sunday whether he has anything to say or not. Preaching is in itself a sacrament and whenever a man stands up, whether he has anything to say or not, his words are peculiarly holy because he is preaching. The value of preaching depends upon the man who is doing it, upon what he puts into it, and the spiritual fervor which he imparts to his message. But the church was never meant to be solely a theater for orators. Preaching is not the only avenue by which we win the souls of men to God. There is another avenue, and that is symbolism. You have not reached the possibilities of your church when you have gone through the movements of an annual camp meeting. That is a very good thing in its way. But there are loftier expressions to which the church must aspire.

Sometimes I walk down the broad, lighted ways of New York City. Sometimes along by the Metropolitan Opera House I hear pouring through the doors the splendid strains of almost perfect music. And I realize that in that city, with one or two exceptions, religion is crowded off the thoroughfare. She is not pre-eminent as she is in some cities. There is no church spire except one that lifts above the vision. The rest of all the skyline belongs to commerce, science, and trade. But what were science, commerce, and trade as compared with the church and the will of God when war fell on this world? The last four years have shown to us and to millions outside of the church that all our gains are but passing show unless they are rooted in everlasting righteousness and the protective power of God. These things have been demonstrated. So I am anxious that we should use symbolism more than we have.

The Priority of the Church.

Now it seems to me we have got to insist, as I have already said, not only upon symbolism and an increased ideal of what preaching means, but we must insist upon the priority of the church. Some years ago I went to Washington to a Sunday school convention of the world. Mr. Meyer of London presided. In the afternoon a certain politician had visited the convention, which nearly overcame Mr. Meyer. He didn't know him as some of us do. He took fifteen minutes to tell us how grateful we ought to be for a visit from that politician. He went on to expatiate upon this business. I had to follow him. All I could do was to say that instead of our thanking the politician for coming there, he ought to thank us for letting him in. We are not lackeys of the State. We are not flunkies put on corners to keep down rioters. We are absolutely independent of these things and when a man goes into the Christian pulpit to represent the gospel of Christ and the prophets of God he stands upon the bones of the mighty who have created the organic forces out of which civilization has arisen. Upon those lines we must reconstruct the church.

Providential Position of Methodism.

Further, I believe that Methodism is better adapted for the crystallization of these ideas than any other Protestant denomination. Everything in the Methodist Church depends upon your experience. If you feel all right you are all right. That is what the Methodist Church says. John Wesley never had a creed. He said, "You must accept this glorious Book as the guide of your teaching and the experience of your lives and conduct. If any man love the Lord Jesus Christ, let him give his hand to me," said Wesley, " for his heart is of my heart." He was a broad and inclusive figure, and although a characteristically eighteenth century man, for his time he was remarkable.

I sometimes regard Methodism as the most providential product of the whole period of human history since the apostles. You did not come out of a quarrel with another body or out of a political division, as came the churches of the Reformation. You were virgin in your origination. And everything was located in the actual fact of a converted heart's experience. Upon that Wesley rested supreme weight as he had a right to do. At the same time, had it not been that he linked up those great passional forces with his educational and religious efforts, there would have been a speedy lapse of Methodism. What is there of Methodism left? Millions in the United States and thirty millions throughout the world, all due to the churchmanship and statesmanship of John Wesley, not simply as a revivalist, but as a great organizer. That is what I have often said to other churches, that if we are to have a nucleus for the growth of Protestant forces we will have to find it in some such church as the Methodist.

I want a church, which is a great, living, visible, august combination, spiritualized from pole to pole, worthy of our victorious Lord.

That is what we want to-day. And without that you send out your young man, your young preacher, into villages and communities and give him solemn words which have no meaning. You tell the young preacher he is there simply to be fed and clothed, and if men want him they will call for him. What sort of a doctrine is that? How does that become the teaching that they who build not upon our Christ shall be ground to powder?

Moral Backbone.

Then, in order to build a Christian church we must strengthen and stabilize its moral teaching. There has been a great amount of sentimentalism talked about the love of God. The love of God has backbone in it. By the love of God you mean the righteousness of God. Love in the mouth of St. John is the same as righteousness in the mouth of Isaiah. Love, wherever it is pure and true, seeks the highest good of the object it loves. That is God's love, and as we keep after it and even partially possess it, we shall find the expression of that love, not in morbid sentimentalism, but in the moralizing of society. And there come times when the church must be something more than a witness of the love of God. The great and mighty men of the church have made emperors crawl. Would to God there had been a bishop big enough to make William Hohenzollern crawl when he was an emperor. That doesn't suit the men who grab all the power.

I am only pleading for the preacher's rights and dignities as the servant of the living God. And unless somebody utters that plea, unless the preacher knows that there is something more to preaching than being endorsed by the official board, and that is the endorsement of his own conscience in the sight of God, then he is not worthy of his high calling in Christ Jesus.

Those are the things which will reconstruct the church, when they are reincarnated in our individuality and when we have a leadership worthy of the name, as we ought to have.

A New Church Consciousness.

The Church of Rome takes care of its priorities. We throw them away to the winds and where are we? For example, in New York to-day there are a million so-called Protestants. They are not even decent pagans. They go nowhere to church and make no contribution to any part of the church. They come into New York from every part of this country and if they had church letters they are never presented. On Sundays the sons of class leaders and deacons and elders are among the automobile riders, and if they ever come out at all, you have to dig them out from under a pile of filthy Sunday newspapers. When they come to church they walk in as though they were bestowing a compliment on Almighty God by being there. We cannot have a church that way even though you raise ten million times ten million. There has got to be a new church consciousness. It will not be in this generation, but it has got to come. Methodism is the only church among the Protestant churches which has harnessed individualism to the good of the collective whole.—Exchange.

SPIRITUALISM.

By Rev. Frank B. Hill.

In starting my pastoral visiting in one part of my new charge, at the second house I visited, I found a widow who had lost a son, a soldier boy, over in France. It was not until after I had left the house, that I learned that this good woman, for she is a good woman, was receiving occasionally a letter, as she supposed from her dead son, through a medium in the North, for which of course she was paying. I knew that Spiritualism was very rife in England at present, but did not expect it to be brought so near home as in a country place like this. We are face to face with a tidal wave of Spiritualism which has followed the Great War. It is not a new thing. Like some other theories, it reminds me of a girl grown up, who one day bethinks herself of her discarded dolls, and dresses them up in new clothes—the same dolls, made new by changing the clothes.

Spiritualism flourished in the seventies, but when, between 1880 and 1897, the Society of Psychical Research was founded in England, Spiritualism weakened. The thousands of bereaved homes made desolate by the war have given it a new soil. Any grain of comfort has been eagerly seized upon by many persons, who —without uncharitableness – may be termed weak-minded, unstable.

It has been strengthened to-day by such eminent persons as Sir Oliver Lodge—who, by the way, is on his way to this country to lecture—Sir Conan Doyle, and Sir W. F. Barrett. Miss Stoddart, who has given us some good theological books and one on Socialism, has just issued a timely book on Spiritualism, and it is from a review of this book that I am culling some thoughts, which I trust will help the brethren. The review is in the British Weekly.

The simplest phase of the subject, viz., table-turning, is easily disarmed. Even Sir O. Lodge, eleven years ago, thought it most likely that the table movements were an extension of the ordinary power of the organism through which they were produced, not producing any conviction of the communication by spirits. Mediums are essential to the believer in Spiritualism. The supposition is that the medium is controlled by a spirit. The dead speak to the inquirer through the control and through the medium. Everything depends on the character of the medium. The result is, that there is an immoral trade of fraudulent mediumship, and paid professionalism. Exposures are too numerous to mention. There are very few mediums, male or female, of approved standing or character. They are men and women, for the most part superstitious, ungrammatical, gaining their livelihood by preying on a susceptible public, creating a false belief in their supernatural powers. Sir Wm. Barrett believed that the messages "spring from, and are invariably influenced by the medium's own sub-conscious life."

But what is the relation of Spiritualism to Christianity? Miss Stoddart has joined with others in repudiating the idea that any medium can receive communications from another world, and the further suggestion that these communications are sent by evil spirits. We are of those who fully believe in the everlasting conflict of our Lord and Satan, and in the activities of evil spirits.

We accept St. Paul's words, "Put on God's armor, so as to be able to stand against the stratagems of the devil; struggling not with flesh and blood, but with the angelic rulers, the angelic authorities, the potentates of the dark present, the spiritual forces of evil in the heavenly sphere." But there is not a shadow of evidence that they express themselves to the phenomena of Spiritualism.

As a rule, Spiritualism destroys Christianity. It demands that it should be remodeled out of existence. But it is true that to the average Spiritualist our Lord is a medium and not a mediator, and therewith the connection with the living church is broken. We have a better teaching than this. We believe "that the God of peace, who brought from the dead our Lord Jesus Christ, that great Shepherd of the sheep, made Him a Bishop of souls." Our dead are in Christ's keeping, and of all that the Father has given Him, He will lose none. So we live, walking softly it may be after our bereavement, and feel in dying what was said by a great writer nearing his end: "I feel as one who is waiting—and waited for."

What is the attitude and duty of the Christian church? Possibly Robert Chambers was right when he said, "We shall have to widen our ideas of the extent and character of what is natural." There may be something in telepathy. The Christian church has the glorious truth of our inheritance in Christ—the glory, the honor, the immortality on the other side of death. Let her preach that doctrine. Wise were Lightfoot's words, corroborated by Tennyson, that the great teaching of the New Testament is the teaching of the future life. Let the church's message be the message calling their people to trust and wait for the reunion with the longed-for and lost—for the time when "the light of the sun shall be sevenfold, as the light of seven days, in the day that the Lord bindeth up the breach of His people, and healeth the stroke of their wound."

IS THERE NO REMEDY?

By Chaplain Johns, of the Louisiana State Penitentiary.

Mr. Editor: Lacking a few days, I have been Chaplain of the Louisiana State Penitentiary for twelve years.

I have seen thousands come into imprisonment, leaving dear ones behind, oftentimes children to grow up in ignorance and neglect. Men and women have come here, never again to see the faces of father or mother; and sometimes both parents have died while the "boy" or the "girl" was in prison. It is common for the father to get news of the death of a child, the wife, or dear relative. And sometimes the prisoner dies here and is buried in the prison graveyard.

In the course of human events, with the laws defied, these people are sent here to serve time for misdeeds. It is a great waste. Can it ever be stopped? Not entirely, of course; but can this waste be reduced to those who "just must" come to prison?

I have wondered if a campaign can be put on to warn all people, white and black, could a few be prevented from coming?

Recently a white man came here for life, leaving behind a wife and seven children, all in poverty. A colored man came with a term sentence, leaving ten children behind! Sometimes it is an invalid wife or aged parents. Charitable institutions do all they can, but suffering is inevitable.

I should be glad for Christian people to write to me personally and let us devise some plans of prevention.

A Prison Sunday in every church in Louisiana, with the editors of all papers, both religious and secular, offering to print such articles as I might be able to send, might give some information to the people to start a movement of reaction to prevent crime.

People must be warned. They must be told the truth that certain ways of living will result in trouble. This must be preached in every church, published in every paper, scattered in tract form, and occasionally addresses made by prison reformers to awaken the people.

Had I the means, I would throw myself into this work at once.

HERE AND THERE AND MANY THINGS.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D. D.

When I put the hood over the typewriter on November 1, I did not think that so many weeks would pass before looking upon its face again, and during these weeks I've been "here and there and yonder, upstairs and downstairs," like Mother Goose's gander. The annual conclave has come and gone, and, lest I forget, I want to tip my hat right here to Herbert Watkins and all concerned for the best home in Meridian. If Henry Lewis ever gets anything better in the future, I require of him to report immediately and tell how he worked the rabbit foot. That trip to Memphis gave me almost a case of flu, which made the home-life comforts the more appreciated. Of course the other boys all had comfortable quarters, for Central and Fifth Street did themselves proud in entertaining.

Finding myself, like Othello, without an occupation, the weeks have been spent helping the young people enjoy the Christmas season, and in miscellaneous reading, from which many thoughts have grown. Your New Year's issue of the Advocate was doubly interesting because of your editorial on "A Great Movement in North Mississippi," based upon Dr. Meek's article telling of the movement in the North Mississippi Conference to raise an Endowment Fund in that Conference in the interest of their superannuated members. That communication of the Doctor's is up to high-water mark, and equal to any of his best editorial efforts (and all are agreed that they were of high order).

The secular press has been full of reports of "bonuses" given by banks and other corporations to their employees, and the church papers have seemed to vie with each other in reporting raise of salaries to pastors and presiding elders. Mr. Rockefeller has given $10,000,000 to care for superannuated professors, and $2,000,000 to the missionary movements of his church, but we have looked in vain to see any special thought for the aged ministry of the Baptist Church, than whom there are not a more self-sacrificing set of men in our land. From the days of Roger Williams they have been among the pioneers, giving themselves to the cause of Church and State without stint. Talking with a superannuate, enfeebled by age and hard work, living in a community of costly churches, well paid pastors, and in a section to which he had given the strength of his best manhood, he told me that his receipts from his Conference Board for the year had been $300: and that, too, in a section where the automobile is so universal a possession that even among the colored population the horse and buggy is almost a rarity. I said, "Here is truly one of Dr. Ivey's forgotten men, in the midst of greatest abundance, living on the crumbs which fall from those to whom his long, active life has been given." Yet his contentment, his real happiness, as he talked of his life in the service of his church was an inspiration. Living on a pittance while others were reaping the rich harvest of his sowing! A hero? Yes, of saintliest character. Just before we parted, he asked that we pray together, saying, "I'm living just outside the door, ready to enter when my Lord shall call."

This world, he cries, is not my place—I seek my place in heaven."

No foot of land did he possess, no cottage in the wilderness, but he was reading his title clear to his mansion in the sky.

January comes in clear and cold, hindering all kinds of work, more especially that of the church. The people everywhere are moving like a restless tide; or, rather, I might compare them to bees in August. If by this running to and fro knowledge shall be increased, it is well; otherwise it is but the rolling stone which gathers no moss.

AN EXCELLENT MOTTO.

Two days before his forty-seventh birthday, the last night before his death, in the last entry Arnold of Rugby ever made in his journal, were these words: "Above all, let me mind my own personal work—to keep myself pure and zealous and believing—laboring to do God's will, yet not anxious that it should be done by me rather than by others, if God disapproves of my doing it."—Exchange.

WINTER'S RECOMPENSE.

By Ulysses Grant Foote.

My heart seems fain of tented fields of corn!
It leaps to meet the voice of winds that sing
'Mid walnut trees, or mourn with pines for spring.
The deep, dark sky, star-eyed, awaits the morn
To grace its lifted brow when day is born.
The old fence-row, snow-railed, has harboring
For wild-eyed hares and chipmunk's burrowing;
While hooded hay-mow groups the meads adorn.

There comes a face from out that Long Ago,
When snow-drifts billowed o'er the garden fence;
It comes a smiling up the stairway height
Unto my childhood's bed with candle glow....
Now Mem'ry smiles and hath a recompense....
My blanket well is tucked....a kiss...."Good Night."

JUST ONE THING AFTER ANOTHER.

By Gulliver.

After weeks and months of silence—so far as the readers of the New Orleans Advocate are concerned—I break forth again with just one thing after another, which, by the way, is the natural order of things as they appear on this mundane shore. Every cause has a corresponding effect, and said effect becomes, in turn, another cause, and thus the whole chain of human events proceed.

But one—nay the whole bunch—can not always forecast the future, even though he use as wisely as possible the precedents of the gone-by time. "The best laid schemes of mice and men gang oft a-glee." So wrote Burns, and such is the truth, the history of the past confirming same. Still, there are prophets who claim to have scanned the whole circumference of men and things, and profess to tell us just how it is going to be. And what complicates matters is, that they proceed to establish their propositions by "many infalliable proofs." We who occupy a lower round and are not possessed of the far-flung vision, may shake our doubting heads, but the seers have the argument on us.

Apropos of this are some sage and, apparently, sane pre-war prophecies which were delivered by some of our wisest and best thinkers. Take, as one instance, Kipling's "Peace of Dives." Now Kipling is a real poet, and as such is supposed—and properly so—to see farther than those of us who remain at the base of Parnassus. That poem is not only one of the best of imaginative productions, but is chock-full of philosophy as well. By the argument of the poem the writer proves that the several nations of the earth are so inter-related that war is just naturally—because it is so industrially and commercially—an impossible event.

Another instance of mistaken calculations by big men, is that of one of our foremost preachers and educators who, in a series of lectures to a certain student body, which was afterwards publish in book-form, proves, without the possibility of a doubt, that the growth of international industrialism and commercialism is such that the great masses of the people will just not go to war, and the financiers, whose business relations are international, will not put up the money. The argument looked "good" to me. But, I must confess that while reading these prose and poetic presentations of incontrovertible arguments to prove war impossible, my mind reverted to a sermon preached in 1852, by F. W. Robertson, in which he called attention to the prevailing idea that war was then impossible, and then invited his hearers to listen to the muffled tramp of the nations on their way to a great Armageddon in which the whole world should be engaged first and last. When he made the prophecy, there was not a cloud in the sky, nor was there for several years afterwards, so far as even the wisest of us could see. But the cloud was rising when Robertson spoke, and long after the greatest of preachers since St. Paul had slept with his fathers; the storm broke on us with fury not precedented. Is it not true? I am more and more impressed with the idea that the only true revealer of things as they were, are, and shall be, is an old Book that most everybody has and few bodies read. A careful study of that Volume will not only keep us watching and discerning "the sign of the times," but will keep us sane! Some, who have read it partially and with a certain theory in mind, have made some huge mistakes and tumbled some people into trouble. Take the several prophecies about the end of the world. Many times has this end been thoroughly figured out, even to the day and the hour. But the end is not yet.

If such prophets had only listened to the Lord they would have known that they could not know, since, according to him, even the angels in heaven did not know. The recent big scare about the world's coming to an end on the 17th of December, is another instance of the ignorance of those who pretended to know—and from a scientific standpoint. It is all one. Nobody knows, and the best way is to go along and do the duties of the hour and the day and let the Lord come when he will. It matters nothing to me whether I meet him in the final earth catastrophe, or even as my father and my mother met him long years ago. Every eye shall see him first and last, and the main point is to be ready, whether he come in the first, second, third or last watch. Keep the lamps trimmed and burning, for the Bride-groom will come and, whatever the seeming, "will not tarry."

The resolutions passed at the North Mississippi Conference meant something. The great evangelistic general movement is all right if it be in accordance with God's will and time. Pentecost will direct us here. But Pentecost with its preparedness and sacrifice is too poky for some of our modern churches and evangelists—too much "tarrying" and praying and "waiting for the promise of the Father." A new doctrine is to be preached (or, rather, no doctrine at all) and new methods are to be employed. The church has already been hurt by the use of these modern substitutes for the ancient, God-directed method. Every "protracted meeting" has come to be called a "revival;" and while I do not wish to set myself up as a judge, I have been unfortunate in following up what was given out as "a great revival," in which the Rev. Joshua Joker "got off" so many good things about the "booze heads," the dancing sisters, the card-players, etc. The reaction is disastrous. Fact is, the dancer, the drunkard, the gambler and the wife-beater have been worked overtime in some of our sermons. Selfishness, of whatever seeming, is the real root of all our troubles, and it is at this enemy, in whatever guise, that the gospel gun should be directed. In the last analysis, it may be said that "there is no sin but selfishness, and there is no law but love." Pope says:

"Some first for wits, and then for poets passed.

Is it not true? Anybody can find fault—anybody can criticize, and the sorriest Job's comforter one finds in the Forum is the man who swaggeringly says, "I told you so." Still, this is a free country, and a man may, without offense, animadvert to some things without appearing just a "plain fool." Allow me, therefore, gentle reader, to say that our wise ones made a big mistake when they got up the budget for the Centenary, by not including the Superannuate Fund. I can raise more money with less trouble for that interest than for any other of our connectional causes. But not only as a matter of policy ought this fund to have been included, but as a matter of right. Our old men are suffering and dying all the time. The help that comes later will come too late for many of them. But I shall not branch out here; for when I get to thinking on this subject, and consider how shamefully the church has dealt with the men who have made the church possible, I get hot under the collar, and I do not wish to get that way.

But here is the end of my paper, and it may be, the end of your patience as well. Perhaps I had best ring off for the present, with the notice that sooner or later I shall break out again.

THREE WAYS.

By Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook.

I have found from a close study of God's own holy Word that there are three ways we may tell the world of the wonderful love of Jesus. We may do it by contributing of our means through the mission boards of the militant church, to help support consecrated men and women who are telling the story of God's love to the benighted ones in heathen lands. I deem it a real blessing to be able to earn money to help give the whole Gospel to the people of the whole world. How God has honored us in making us workers together with Him! May he teach us to live for the things which are really worth while, instead of wasting our lives in pursuit of those things which perish with the using.

Then we may ask God to give us words divinely appointed to tell those around us, in the power of the Holy Spirit, this blessed truth. God plainly and emphatically declares in Ezekiel, that if watchmen do not warn the hell-bound devotees of the death penalty of sin, they will not repent, and the watchman must perish with them. You may talk love alone to sinners until they are love-sick, but this pleasing aspect of redemption alone will never convert them. Both life and death must be set before them, the reward of the righteous and the punishment of the wicked. Love is influential after conversion.

But the most effective way we can make known His great love, is by abiding in Jesus moment by moment and trusting Him to live His life in us. If we do this, He will put His love in our hearts for those around us, and this love of His will be the great magnet in us to draw others to Him. Such disciples, because of the Spirit of God, and by reason of their being distributors of His energy, create their own atmosphere, carry it with them, shed it abroad, and are both themselves superior to Satanic influences and drive his forces away from others. May they not be compared to that insect, which, having occasion to go beneath the water, takes down with it as it dives a bubble of air; and thus surrounded by its own native atmosphere, defies and survives what would otherwise be fatal conditions? This is "dwelling in the secret place of the Most High;" this is "abiding in Christ;" this is walking in the comfort of the Holy Spirit. "Help us to follow that we may lead.

"Lord, speak to me, that I may speak
In living echoes of Thy tone;
As Thou hast sought, so let me seek
Thy erring children, lost and lone.

O, lead me, Lord, that I may lead
The wandering and the wavering feet;
O, feed me, Lord, that I may feed
Thy hungering ones with manna sweet.

O, strengthen me, that while I stand
Firm on the Rock and strong in Thee,
I may stretch out a loving hand
To wrestlers with the troubled sea.

O, teach me, Lord, that I may teach
The precious things Thou dost impart;
And wing my words, that they may reach
The hidden depths of many a heart.

O, fill me with Thy fullness, Lord,
Until my very heart o'erflow
In kindling thought and glowing word,
Thy love to tell, Thy praise to show."

NOTICE.

I want a helper in my work; not a singer for evangelistic service, but a business agent, who will look after handling my Bible Lectures, making dates, attending to the advertising, and so on. I have more than I can do. It would be pleasant and useful work for the right person. Let me hear from you if you want the place.

S. A. STEEL,
Mansfield, La.

IF I WERE A PREACHER.

By A. A. Clark.

If I were the preacher, I am sure that I would soon be wishing I had an easier job.

I am certain of one thing, that I would be wishing that I had a better brand of laymen to work with than the writer of this article.

I have often thought that the situation between the preacher and the laymen is like the ancient joke about the Pilgrim Fathers. It is to the effect that the Pilgrim mothers had a very much harder time than the Pilgrim Fathers, because they had to endure the Pilgrim Fathers as well.

A minister has to contend not only with the actual handicaps of his work, but frequently has to contend with the laymen as well.

I have been familiar with the work of quite a number of churches, and the more I see the accomplishments of preachers with inadequate equipment, large numbers of indifferent members, and meager salaries, the more I marvel at their great achievements.

"Sell Your Hammer."

I hesitate to write on this subject lest anything I say be construed as a wholesale criticism of the ministry. I have no desire to sit in the seat of the scornful about any phase of the work of the church, or to take the smallest part in an anvil chorus on the work of the ministry. I venture to say that I could successfully defend the proposition that no company of men are rendering in a high character of service, variety, or of more lasting value to the country than the preachers. For a good many years my advice has been, in the every-day language of the street, to the critics of the preachers, "Sell your hammer and get a horn."

The few things that I say I would like to do if I were a preacher are merely some things that I have seen scores and scores of preachers do, and my statement amounts to saying that I would like to be like them.

The First Job.

First of all, if I were a preacher, I believe I would preach. That is so obvious that it sounds foolish, but it is not as foolish as it sounds. I am old-fashioned enough to believe that the preacher's chief excuse for asking men to listen to him is that he is a messenger of the "good news" of Jesus Christ.

He may also be a learned essayist — many preachers are. Or he may be an authority on the labor question, or the immigration question. He may be a shrewd commenter on current events; but these things are incidental to his main business, and when the preacher regards them as his principal job he loses power.

If I were a preacher I would try to make everything carry this message, "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Now, that does not mean that I would keep harping on one single note like a man tuning a piano until the congregation gets nervous prostration.

A preacher can asphyxiate any church in America in six months by wearing threadbare one little section of truth. The gospel runs the whole octave of human life. Nothing human is foreign to it, but I would like to make all the different streams run into one river.

To use a crude illustration, I have a friend who is a traveling salesman. He does lots of other things. He has a family and a garden. He can talk baseball, politics, and once in a while he can venture an opinion on music, though he never puts very far out to sea on this subject. But no matter what he talks about, he always sells goods. He does not come back from a trip with nothing but the memory of a few pleasant conversations to show for it. Now, sometimes I believe the preacher does come back from a trip without having sold very many goods. He is in great danger of becoming so many other things that preaching is only one of his side lines. He is an engineer, advertising man, and also sometimes a good deal of an errand boy.

Especially to-day is there tremendous need of a preacher to be an ambassador of God. There are lots of things to talk about, but there is one message that in its various forms is needed more than anything else, that "if any man is in Jesus, he is a new preacher."

Every-Day Speech.

If I were a preacher I would try to talk every-day language. I do not mean that I would use slang. Slang in the pulpit is a pitiable, impertinent substitute for ideals.

Whenever a preacher uses slang in the pulpit I would like to get up and go out. Sometimes I do. But there is a great danger in the other extreme. Sometimes the preacher's message is wrapped up in barbed-wire entanglements of speech foreign to every-day life. We hear a good deal of discussion that certain dead languages ought to be studied in college. We ought to remember that the deadest of all dead languages is dead English, and we might say to the preacher, "The goblins will catch you if you don't watch out."

Visiting once in a church, I heard something like this, "If the church is to function effectively, the norm of its accomplishments must be the cultivation of the expressional activities of the adolescent." Now, that may mean something. I can not say. But nine men out of ten do not know what it means, and ten men out of ten do not care. A sermon that is heavily loaded with such words as function, analytic, consequential, apocalyptic, and others of the same six-syllabic family is bound to strike on the rocks before it comes home to port. The message of Jesus Christ is all bound up in a straight-jacket.

If I were a preacher I would try to tear off the bandages and let the message run in plain English words so direct and familiar that no one could miss its meaning.

Using the Men.

I would try to use the men in my church as much as possible. Being a layman myself, I know what stubborn, cantankerous creatures they frequently are, and I admit that it is a hard job to get men moving and to keep them moving. I do not mean that ministers are not to-day making spiritual use of the laymen, but there is a big field of opportunity. A preacher who can get twenty men to work with him multiplies himself. Many a minister wears his life out trying to do more than any one man can do, when some of the things he does could be done by other men. Sometimes the preacher acts as though he were Robinson Crusoe stranded on a desert island, with no one around who could do anything. Particularly now in the Methodist Church, with this great evangelistic campaign on us, I would like to line up every last man possible for evangelistic work.

In using men I would begin with my official board. I would not let an official meeting degenerate into simply a discussion of repairs and janitors' wages. I would plan co-operatively with the board for definite instruction and inspiration looking toward leadership.

Yesterday vs. To-morrow.

I would put my major effort into the development of all the latent possibilities in the young folk. The old folk have done their best or their worst for the Kingdom—their comfort should not be disturbed unnecessarily. But the rising generation needs adroit leadership if they are to possess the land.

Religious Education or Pious Pastime.

I would contrive by hook or crook to make the Sunday school feed the church rather than have it set as a separate or competing organization, as it too frequently does. I would try hard for a grip on teachers and officers and lead them to see the possibilities of real education in the realm of religion and the inutility of overloading the young mind with Hebrew legend and history.

The Fight for an Open Mind.

I would do forty things to keep the hinges of my mind from becoming rusty. For instance, I would read the best papers of other denominations; this to broaden and humanize my circle and help me minimize the cant and jargon of my own sect.

If a college or university were within hailing distance I would, every year or two take a course in something economics, sociology, psychology just to keep fresh and up to date in the world of thought, that world where things have their beginnings. I would not want to be the last man to hear of the new vital things and bring them to my people.

I would play golf or tennis or have some other such hobby, and whatever the game or hobby, I would play it well.

And unless I had such confidence in my calling and message that not all the lame laymen in the Conference could shake, I would quit and go back to the farm or forward to life insurance.

A Wide World-View.

If I were a preacher I would try to keep some open windows in my church and in my sermon, out of which a man could see a good slice of the world. Nothing puts more enthusiasm into the average man than to feel that he is part of a tremendous church that is going into all the world, righting wrongs and lifting burdens. Men are lifted out of indifference by getting the vision of Christianity in earnest and on a big scale.

The common type of ingrowing religion which never comes outside of the little circle of one small neighborhood has not much thrill for the average man. If a man can feel that the church is actually doing what it is supposed to do to "save the world," he is ready to jump at the chance to help it. Western Christian Advocate.

NOW CONCERNING THE MATERIALS FOR THE SURVEY.

By O. E. Goddard.

Necessary supplies for making the surveys previous to the Evangelistic Campaign either have been or will be sent to the pastors. These supplies consist of book of surveys, standard plan for revivals, blanks for making surveys, cards on which to tabulate the results of the surveys, posters for hanging up in churches, leaflets and pamphlets. If the supply of blanks or cards is not sufficient, more may be had by ordering from my office. If more of the leaflets or pamphlets are desired, they, too, can be had by ordering. We do not want to burden the pastors with unnecessary amount of literature, nor do we desire to leave anything undone that we can do to help him in preparing for the revival.

These materials are sent early that the pastors may have ample time to familiarize themselves with all the suggestions contained therein. From the first deliverance up to this hour the Joint Committee on Evangelism has been offering such helps as it has, but has never arbitrarily demanded that anyone follow our suggestions. The suggestions have come from men who have had some success in soul-winning and they have been willing to impart such help as they could to all who desire the help. Such has been the attitude of the Committee since the day it was organized and such it will be until the campaign culminates.

TRACT REVIEW.

Reply of Rev. Isaiah Watson, Pastor of Emanuel Baptist Church, Baton Rouge, La., to "Nine Reasons Why I Am Not a Baptist," by Rev. P. O. Lowrey of Louisiana Conference M. E. Church, South; $2.25 per dozen; $15.00 per hundred.

Mr. Lowrey has the following friendly remark on Mr. Watson's reply to his tract:

"Pleasant Hill, La., Dec. 13, 1919.

Rev. Isaiah Watson,
Baton Rouge, La.

Dear Sir and Brother:

I am in receipt of a copy of your reply to my "Why I Am—Not a Baptist," and suppose I am under obligation to you for sending me the booklet. I thank you for the same.

In reply I think that you have done just what would have been expected of one holding your views of the Baptist as being the only church of Christ, and I am sure you will find many readers of what you have had to say.

If you advertise in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, I am sure you will sell lots of your booklets to those who have read mine.

Fraternally yours,
P. O. LOWREY."

For copies address Rev. Isaiah Watson, Baton Rouge, La.

There is only one way to heaven, and if you will not walk in it, you will be lost. Selected

TAKE CARE OF THE INNER MAN.

Splendor from within! It is the only thing which makes the real and lasting splendor without. Trust that inevitable law of self-expression. Be, not seem! Be to seem! Be beautiful, and you will by and by seem so. Carve the face from within, not dress it from without. Within lies the robing-room, the sculptor's work-shop. For whoever would be fairer, illumination must begin in the soul—the face catches the glow only from that side. It is the spirit's beauty that makes the best face, even for the evening's company; the spirit's beauty is the only beauty that outlasts the work and wear and pain of life. The single prayer worth praying in this connection is that of Socrates: "Ye gods, grant me to become beautiful in the inner man; and that whatever outward things I have may be in harmony with those within!"—William C. Gannett.

A MAGIC WOODPILE.

By Mary Louise Stetson.

Tom felt cross. And no wonder. What boy of the second grade would not feel cross to be called a baby just because he could not run as fast as a fourth-grade boy? Tom did wish he were big and strong. Then he would thrash that Jack Hicks. Yes, he would, he'd thrash him hard! And the longer Tom thought about Jack, the crosser he felt.

Tom turned into his own yard. That woodpile stared him in the face and seemed to talk to Tom.

"You want a fight, do you? Well, come on, then, and fight with me. I'm ready for you." That's what it said.

And young Tom accepted the challenge.

Seesaw! Seesaw! Seesaw! Back and forth over one big log. Tom worked his small sharp-toothed saw. By and by a chunk of wood dropped to the ground.

"You're beaten," declared Tom, pausing for breath. "But I'm not through yet."

How Tom worked! He worked until he was so hungry it seemed as if he could hardly wait to reach the cooky jar. He felt a vacant place inside of him somewhere, but his arms, though they were tired, felt strong.

"There, father will find three of his logs beaten," thought Tom, as he put his saw back in the barn. "I'll have a lunch, and then I'll be strong enough to thrash any fourth grader, even Jack Hicks, who thinks he's so smart.

But, try as he would, Tom no longer felt like thrashing any one. That sharp-toothed saw of his had eaten up more than half the crossness, and Tom himself ate up the rest along with three plump molasses cookies.—The Sunbeam.

LETTER OF PRINCIPAL FAIRBAIRN TO HIS SON.

Londonderry, April 12, 1884.

I have been thinking very anxiously over your letter. We must now decide what you are to be. There is, indeed, nothing I could more desire than to see you a good doctor; and a good doctor you will be if you are a good man working for the right reasons. There is no harder life than a doctor's; but so far as it is mere hard work, it is not to be feared. What does not involve labor is not worth doing. But think of this: a doctor has to care for human life—he has suffering and disease to cure. The living look to him to save the dying, the dying look to him for life. You can remember from our experience of last year how much unnecessary pain a doctor's error of judgment may cause; and mother can tell you of many cases where an error of judgment has had more serious results—has caused a loss of life. But we know also how much a doctor may do for a patient—Dr. Keith saved our dear Barbara; we shall never cease to be grateful to him for the kindness and skill which gave her back to us. And many a life has he so saved.

Now do you know why I am saying this? To make you understand the grave responsibility of choosing such a profession. I would not have a son of mine enter it unless it were to do his duty in it; and his duty is to use all his energies and efforts to lighten the suffering and sorrow of man. What this means you cannot as yet fully know; but if you feel that you can be the best possible and do the noblest possible by being a doctor, then a doctor, so far as I can help you, you shall be. And I will not stand any longer in the way of your practical chemistry. You can enter, only I would like to see Mr. Keeling after I come home. But for this you need not wait.

When you were a little child I often thought how willingly I would consent to be nothing and do nothing in the world, if I could only make you a good man! And I feel so still—anxious only to see you one who could serve your God and your kind! If you do that I shall be happy to be remembered only as your father!—Exchange.

"CHILDREN WHO CARED."

Stella opened her eyes. Why! She hadn't been dreaming after all. For there was that same wonderful Christmas tree, glittering and sparkling with the many colored lights of countless tiny bulbs hidden in the green branches.

And that soft white bed! Blissfully she let her tired self sink down in the pillowy whiteness—but Oh-h-h—a groan of pain escaped her. It was true after all. She wasn't in Fairyland. She was just plain little Stella Smith, and something terrible had hurt her.

She closed her eyes, and memories of the night before came back to her; memories of that cold, cheerless Christmas eve, when she had started to cross the icy street. She hadn't seen the street. Her thoughts were back there in the lighted shop window she had just passed, with the sparkle and wonder of an immense glistening tree!

And then—something had struck her. She didn't remember what it was. She only remembered the kind-looking lady who lifted her up. She had noticed a cunning little red cross on her shoulder.

Stella once more lifted her eyes. The tree was still there! She forgot the dark, cold-roomed tenement where she lived with Mrs. Flaherty. She forgot the long, lonely nights when she had sobbed herself to sleep—wishing that sometime, some one would care; some one would remember her on Christmas day. She forgot everything but that she was warm and comfortable and happy—and that the most beautiful tree in the world was shining down upon her as some good fairy.

And then the nurse came to the side of her bed.

"Honey," she smiled down at the little girl, "it's Christmas night. Don't you want to see your presents?"

The nurse went on: "There are a great many little boys and girls in this city who think of the lonely children in hospital beds, and who send them gifts of loving remembrance on Christmas day."

An hour later, little Stella, in spite of a broken leg and injured shoulder, rested supremely happy, on her spotless white bed. Beside her, on a table, lay an open book of lovely-colored pictures, and a dear little sewing basket—all her own. In front of her, from its corner of the long hospital ward, the great tree of Christmas twinkled its brightness down upon her bed.

But the little girl did not see the tree, nor the gifts. For Stella was asleep. And over her face stole a gentle smile, for her dream was a happy one; a dream of the "Children Who Cared."

LOVE AND SERVICE.

Love makes all burdens light. Two poor children, one a little girl of perhaps nine, the other a little boy of four, were following the circus procession, and forgot that they were wandering far from home. The little fellow became tired and sleepy. His sister, her own bare feet sore and muscles weary, took him in her arms to carry him, and he soon fell asleep. She was tugging away, her hair disheveled, her face rusty, and a kind-hearted man said to her, "Can't you waken him and let him walk? He must be very heavy for you to carry." "O, no," she said, "he is not very heavy, he's my little brother." Now that looks illogical, but it is not. Love makes burdens actually light. It gives wings to tired feet. It thrills weary muscles. Impassioned love for the work to which one feels especially called alone can give enthusiasm and moral courage. It may be that our fathers were too enthusiastic, for emotion that is intelligently directed is born of conviction, and that must be first conceived in the mind before it is impressed upon the heart. It is likely true that in some cases our fathers had a zeal, but not according to knowledge. But if so, it is to be feared that we have knowledge without zeal, which is the greater sin. Better the shout in prayer that could be heard for half a mile, and the "jerks" that would make the hair to "snap like a whip cracker" than the spiritual paralysis and moral death which sometimes in these last days holds the pulpit and pew in the chilly grasp of ice-embalmed proprieties.—Author Unknown.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

SHAH OF PERSIA SHOCKED.

A cable from Paris, Jan. 13, says: "Attired in the traditional tuxedo and wearing the famous peacock diamond ring on the little finger of his left hand, the shah of Persia last night made the acquaintance of American democracy at a bachelor dinner party given in his honor by Ambassador Wallace."

The Persian ruler made no speech, but talked informally with those present. Among other things he spoke thus of the freaks of fashion: "The shortness of the dresses and the extreme decollete, running even to corsageless evening gowns, result in some surprising exhibitions of feminine immodesty such as would not for a moment be tolerated in the East. * * * It is precisely the same with dancing, though in a general way I do not see anything indecent in the tango and the fox trot. One exception I might mention is the 'shimmy.' This amazing dance, which I am informed people think originated in the East, would not be tolerated in Teheran."

When the shah of Persia is shocked at the dress freedom among the western nations and shocked at the "amazing dance" which seems to be much in vogue at the present, it is time that some of our own people were shocked at the extremes to which this alluring amusement has gone. And we are only confirmed in our conviction that the church has not been extreme by its opposition to the modern dance.

A SCRIPTURAL STANDARD OF PUBLIC OFFICE.

The Democratic primary held in Louisiana during the week has served to call to the writer's mind a scriptural standard of public office which can not be surpassed to-day. It is standard of hoary antiquity. Three thousand years before Columbus discovered this great country which was destined to become the home of freedom, this high standard of public office was set by an Arabian priest or prince in the land of Midian. It is the ancient wisdom of that land whither Moses fled after he had slain the Egyptian, where he saw the flame of the burning bush, and heard the voice of the great I AM calling him to deliver his people from the bondage of the Pharoahs. It was the advice of Jethro to his son-in-law Moses when he saw how heavy were the responsibilities of Moses in judging and ruling so numerous a people. He advised Moses to appoint deputies who should share with him the burden of government. And he gave this advice with regard to the kind of men who should be selected: "Thou shalt provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness."

"Thou shalt provide out of all the people" indicates that in that distant age there was an idea of democracy and of authority to be drawn from the governed. Rulers are to come from all the people and not from some royal house, such as once divided the thrones of Europe, and such as once placed on the throne of England a foreigner, who could hardly speak the English language, and who employed Hessian mercenaries to fight against our fathers during the American Revolution. And we have given our treasure and our blood that the world shall not now be divided among the Hohenzollerns and the Hapsburgs.

"Thou shalt provide able men." Surely the great task of governing a great people calls for those who have the ability to serve. A man is employed in any business because he is supposed to have the ability to do the task for which he is employed. We do not employ a jeweler to install a lighting plant. So the state requires able men. But this ability is not to be measured by talents, training, knowledge of public affairs and experience alone.

A man's ability for public office is to be measured also by his faith in God, the author of righteousness in any sphere, and giver of the tables of stone from Sinai which lie in the base of the foundations of every code. Otherwise a man of ability, swayed by insatiate ambition and lust for power, might bring great loss to the people he is said to rule. The "Grand Monarch" of France was wont to say: "I am the state." He was wont also to say: "After me the deluge." And the deluge came—a deluge of blood surging around the guillotines, with all the horrors of the French Revolution. Besides deeds of blood and monstrous iniquity, there came revolting unbelief. The faith by which men had lived was declared a myth. The belief in God and Christ was declared a pious fable. The age of reason was proclaimed. A beautiful woman of Paris was placed in an antique seat, twined with ivy, and borne on the shoulders of four citizens into the profaned church of Notre Dame, and there crowned as the goddess of reason. The immortality of the soul was denied and over the cemeteries was placed the terrible legend: "Death is an eternal sleep." So we need "able men, such as fear God."

So government can not rightly make any compromise or partnership with evil. Let us thank God that the United States has at last severed its partnership with the liquor traffic, and that henceforth it will not put a bottle to the lips of the people and then lock them up if they get drunk.

Government in its origin and authority is from God, and the man in public office is rightly the very servant of God. The modern expression: "God save the king!" is of ancient origin. When Saul was anointed king of Israel, the people shouted: "God save the king!" He was anointed by the prophet of God. Likewise was the illustrious David anointed by Samuel. So government in its origin and authority is from God. "The powers that be," says Paul, "are ordained of God." So we need "able men, such as fear God" to rule over us.

Till the cat, through that mirage of overheated language loom Larger than the lion—"

but you will never persuade us that the man who does not serve God in his personal life before his election will likely serve God in his official life after he is elected.

They must also be "men of truth." They must love the truth, welcome the truth, and have nothing to fear from the truth. They will do all in their power to get at the facts in any case with which they may have to deal; to learn conditions, and rectify them. When a certain one of the presidents was running for the highest office in the gift of the American people, his enemies seized upon a sin of his youth, which he had bitterly repented, and for which he had done all in his power to make restitution. His friends telegraphed him of the charge and asked him what statement they should make. His answer was contained in three words: "Tell the truth." This same man when he had come into the White House often labored until two in the morning and was back at his desk by nine. This strenuous work was made necessary by the fact that he believed it was his duty to get all the facts in any case for which he considered himself responsible. Many such matters had been entrusted hitherto to minor officials. That is the kind of man we need in public office.

"Hating covetousness." The glaring sin of this age is covetousness. Too long it has robbed the very treasury of God and kept his church on half rations. Profiteering is even now despoiling the homes of the lowly and the poor in our land. This sin sometimes sits down in the seat of justice and makes it a seat of injustice, transforms the judge into a thief and a traducer of justice, and, in reality places him before the bar instead of on the bench. At the first Felix trembled under the burning words of Paul, but afterward he summoned him often hoping that he might receive a bribe for his release. Anathemas have been called down upon the head of the man who sold his Lord for thirty pieces of silver, and upon the head of Benedict Arnold who "planted the banner of the stars at Ticonderoga," but died a traitor to his own land. But a man may betray his country in peace as well as war, and for things other than gold.

"Just for a handful of silver he left us,

Sometimes a man in public office may be bribed by the favor of powerful interests, or by the hope of re-election in the next campaign.

If "able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness," should be elected to our places of trust, it does not need a philosopher nor any labor of logic to learn that it is our duty to elect such men to office. And the voice of the church should be lifted at fitting times on the duties of citizenship, and the church should, without naming partizans, stress this scriptural standard of public office found in the book of Exodus. Of all men the Christian should feel these words:

"The glory of the present is to make the future free.
We love our land for what she is, and what she is to be."

SAD NEWS.

Rev. W. R. Lott writes us that he has recently held the burial services of two who were closely connected with the Methodist Church at Holly Springs—Mrs. Sarah T. Rather and Mrs Nellie M. Belk. Mrs. Rather died at Gibson, Tenn., and was buried at Holly Springs on the 9th of January. She was the aged mother of Mr. L. A. Rather, Sr., who has been a steward in the local church for forty years.

Mrs. Belk was the wife of W. A. Belk, a notice of whose death appeared in the Advocate a few months ago. This family has been singularly stricken during the last year, three of the family of six having died. The funeral services were held from the church Saturday, Jan. 9, Revs. E. R. Smoot and J. H. Holder assisting the pastor, Rev. W. R. Lott.

The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the bereaved families of these noble women.

BROTHER J. S. NOEL DEAD.

We are grieved to receive the following from the pastor of Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, La., Rev. W. Winans Drake:

"Brother J. S. Noel, whose generous gift founded and built the J. S. Noel, Jr., Memorial Church in this city, as a memorial to his son, died on Thursday morning, January 15, and was buried the following day. Appropriately, the services were held in the church which he founded, and his remains were interred at Mouringsport, his former home. He had just passed his 75th birthday."

Brother Noel did a great work for Shreveport Methodism, and the handsome and costly edifice he built to the memory of his son will also stand as a memorial of himself.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. C. Price our pastor at Coushatta, La., reports that the year opens well on that charge.

The Editor left the city last week to attend the meeting of the Joint Commission on Unification in Louisville.

Dr. U. G. Foote, pastor of Rayne Memorial Church of this city, is enjoying a brief period of rest in Kentucky.

Rev. E. N. Evans has taken charge of the Angie and Talisheek charge of the New Orleans District, and he reports it to be a fine and promising field.

The presiding elder of the New Orleans District, Rev. J. G. Snelling, in the absence of the pastor, preached last Sunday at Rayne Memorial Church of this city.

The first quarterly conference of the church at Flora, Miss., was held January 12 by the presiding elder, Dr. Morse. The pastor's salary was raised from $1200 to $1600. Rev. B. W. Lewis is the pastor.

In sending in two subscriptions to the Advocate Rev. I. H. Sells writes that he has completed his first round on the Harrisville charge, Miss., and that he has been well received by the good people of the charge.

The pastor's salary at Guntown, Miss., has been advanced $200, and the pastor, Rev. J. D. Simpson, writes that the prospects along other lines are good. The church at Saltillo was dedicated on Sunday, January 11.

Bishop Kilgo read the appointment of Rev. A. J. Henry to the Corinth circuit, while the list of the appointments has it that Rev. A. J. Jones was assigned to that circuit. Brother Henry reports that Rev. "A. J. Jones" has not yet arrived but that he, A. J. Henry, has appeared on the scene and is in the parsonage.

Rev. A. J. Gearheard of Bogalusa, La., was in the city last Monday to consult with the architect about the plans of the new Methodist Church at that point. The project is well under way and a handsome church edifice for Bogalusa seems assured. Brother Gearheard is naturally gratified at a large advance this year in the pastor's salary.

Our church at Natchitoches, La., of which Rev. J. W. Lee is pastor, is enjoying a great revival led by Evangelist Bob Jones of Montgomery, Ala. Three hundred or more are in attendance upon the afternoon services, while the building, which has a large seating capacity, is filled at the evening services. The meeting will continue through next Sunday.

The Sunday school of Clarksdale, Miss., where Rev. E. Nash Broyles is the pastor, has 39 officers and teachers and two teacher training classes with a membership of 40. One of these classes is made up of 12 young people who are preparing themselves to be teachers. The record-board of the school on Sunday, January 11, showed that 237 were present and that 91 were absent.

In a letter, enclosing a subscription to the Advocate, Rev. Ovid A. Clark, of Marmaduke, Ark., writes that he is pleasantly situated in a flourishing town near the Missouri line and in the midst of a good farming country. He enjoys his association with the brethren of the conference there, but he often longs to see and mingle with the preachers of the North Mississippi Conference. Brother Clark is a native of Mississippi, and was licensed to preach in the Winona District.

Y. W. C. A. IN SERVICE FOR THE GIRLS OF THE WORLD.

The Educational Campaign.

Last November the National Board of Young Woman's Christian Association started an educational campaign which is to last until the first of March. "How strange!" exclaimed the few initiated. "Why, we thought everybody, especially all women, knew about the Y. W. C. A." "What's this about?" cry the many. "What does that bunch of letters mean? What new thing is being sprung upon us?"

Strange as it may seem to those who have reaped the benefits from this organization, the Y. W. C. A. is not generally known to the American public. Many of its members even have never been inside a Y. W. C. A. building. They know of it vaguely as a place where one might learn to trim hats if one took a notion, or maybe think of it as a place where there is perhaps a swimming pool for girls. As a real, vital organization of women and for women, themselves included, this idea of it has never entered their consciousness. But that is exactly what a thriving Y. W. C. A. is: in so far as every woman in every community where an organization exists takes an active part in it, in so far is it a success. On account of this widespread ignorance, the Y. W. C. A. has launched the educational campaign to teach the world what the Y. W. C. A. could do for women and girls and through them for the community at large.

Mrs. Rockefeller Speaks.

The Chairman of the entire National Educational Campaign Committee of the 1920 World Service Programme of the Y. W. C. A., Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., recently made the following statement:

"Since the war we are more than ever aware of the economic, industrial, educational, social and religious difficulties which beset the lives of girls and women everywhere. In meeting post-war needs of women, the Young Women's Christian Association stands as an instrument of service tested and proven by war and organized to meet the manifold problems of peace.

"Because of its fifty years of experience in meeting fundamental problems affecting girls, the Y. W. C. A. is an organization particularly fitted to exert a stabilizing influence upon troubled times through a consistent programme of service for girls and women."

Pre-War Experiences.

Before the war the Y. W. C. A. was a well-eslablished, efficient organization. To the girls and women who belonged to it and used its privileges it meant a great deal. At their local organization they could get companionship of the right kind, and aid and advice in all things appertaining to their welfare. Educational courses were offered at a small price, also physical culture and recreation of various kinds. The girls could form clubs, industrial, religious, or vocational or recreational, which particularly appealed to a particular group. There were summer camps where girls might go for a small sum and enjoy the out of doors, swimming, hiking, and boating.

Besides all these things for the American girls, there existed the International Institutes, where foreign-speaking women could go and learn the English language, where they were taught American laws, history and customs, and where they were encouraged to seek recreation and amusement.

Post-War Obligations.

Now that the war is over, would it be right for the Y. W. C. A. to fold its wings and wish the trend of the times godspeed without lending a helping hand? It would not be right, nor is it possible. The very things that it has accomplished in war time have given it strength and vitality to carry on still greater projects during times of peace. Citizens of the United States must knew about the Y. W. C. A. and co-operate with it.

American women and girls are asking how they may share in the world's reconstruction. They can do so by enlisting the support of their communities for this World Service Programme, which will insure to the world a healthier and better womanhood.

TRAINED STEWARDS.

(By request, we reproduce the article below from the Nashville Christian Advocate. It deals with a matter that is worth thinking about.—Ed.)

"Mr. W. C. Cason, one of our worthy Methodist laymen at Jackson, Tenn., suggests that a suitable 'stewards' manual' would go far toward enabling the Editor, of the Christian Advocate to exhort 'feelingly' on the duty of the preacher to 'save up money.' Mr. Cason makes a strong and convincing plea for such a 'manual.' He feels that efficient stewards are the crying need of the church. He suggests that there be published as soon as possible by the Laymen's Missionary Movement or some other authority a 'stewards' manual' which will show the importance of the office, the necessity of efficiency on the part of the steward, the responsibility and sacredness of the office, the qualifications required, and the preparation to be made before the work of the steward can be best done. Mr. Cason also insists that a stewards' training class should be organized in every charge, and that from those who pass an approved examination the pastor shall select the stewards. It is insisted that since our preachers and Sunday school teachers are required to prepare themselves it is equally important that our stewards be proved efficient before they shall have been intrusted with their responsible work. Mr. Cason uses good, hard sense in much that he says on this subject, and we trust that there may be an early and favorable response to his exhortations."

THE FIRST SEEKING

The absolute condition of any acceptance with God and of all Christian living is announced in the gospel rule: Seek ye first the kingdom of God! This is the search of all searches, the finest finding among all discoveries. It is the first seeking in point of importance and ought to be the first chronologically, although some, alas! defer it to the dull and uncertain "eleventh hour." Life is a chain of seekings, and a series of competitive choices. If Socrates were alive he would tell us that no man willingly chooses an inferior object, or course of action, when he is once persuaded that some other course is better. It is really a question of relative values. From infancy man is after values, for he is born a seeker, for the nourishment to sustain him physically, and when he is fourscore and ten he is still seeking, if only then for shelter and warmth. The question from infancy to age that most presses is the query, What is the best value? What is the very first seeking, in point of range, of efficiency, of usefulness, and of satisfaction? While many individuals make a number of false starts in answering this question, there is but one true solution of it, and that is the counsel of the divine Book of human guidance, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness!" None who have ever obeyed this instruction have made a failure of life. When this sufficient premise is secured the glorious conclusion follows without fail. If we put God first, thereafter, in our lives, everything will follow in its proper order of accumulating blessing, prophetic of the immeasurable happiness of the world to come. Zion's Herald.

O happiness! Our beings's end and aim!
Good pleasure, ease, content! Whate'er thy name;
That something still which prompts the eternal sigh.
For which we bear to live or dare to die.

MRS. C. E. ROUGEON, on December 2, 1919, passed calmly into life eternal. She succumbed at her home, near Elmer, La., in her eighty-first year. It can be truly said that she lived a long life of devotion to friends, home and family, all of whom will miss her greatly. Grief, however, is through our own personal loss, for we feel assured that her soul is now basking in the warmth and love of a Home Beyond. When nearing death's door, she feebly remarked, "Dear children, a home in Heaven!" What a consolation to know that her saddest hours are over, and what a blessed assurance of Divine care in the end. She was a person of unusual judgment, and retained that faculty till the last. Her advice and counsel were sought on many occasions, every one knowing that she adhered strictly to the principles of right and duty. For many years she had been a faithful member of the Methodist Church, and her life was a radiant example of Christian endeavor and usefulness. She was twice married, the first time to Mr. Jas. Couch, of Mississippi. To this union two daughters were born, one of whom, Mrs. A. G. McArthur, of Hineston, La., servives her. In after years she married Mr. Jos. Rougeon, of Elmer, La. From this marriage three children were born, two of whom are living: Mrs. H. R. Lawson and Mr. J. S. Rougeon, both of Elmer. Besides the children left to mourn her demise, she also leaves quite a number of grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Loved ones ministered faithfully during her long illness, and everything was done to make her last days peaceful and happy, but the end was inevitable and she gladly answered the summons. She sleeps in the family cemetery near her old home, there with loved ones long since gone before.

A heavenly home for her we see.
She beckons us on to a shining strand;
And though lonely and lost we be,
Think of her waiting in that beautiful land.

FROM RINGGOLD, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I desire to make a report of my work here on the Ringgold charge. I have been received very kindly by the people of the charge and feel that there will be brotherly co-operation in the work of the Kingdom this year. The Ringgold people have responded to our appeal for some needed improvement on the parsonage. There is a move now to build a porch on the east side of the building and to make two additional rooms on same—one room for pastor's study and the other for a bath room.

We have not had our first quarterly conference, but have had a meeting of the board of stewards from all over the charge. During this meeting assessments were made. The pastor's salary was put at $1500, and the presiding elder's was made $225. We gave a dinner in our parsonage home for the Board during their stay with us, and all seemed to enjoy themselves very much. The following were present: H. R. Wimberly, Rev. T. J. Martin, J. H. Tooke, A. E. Tooke, W. E. Mosley, W. F. Burckett, J. M. Woodard, F. E. Franklin.

In closing my few remarks, I desire to say to the Advocate that upon my visit to Grand Bayou church, I had a talk with an ex-steward, who said to me that he always found it a great help to have the Advocate visit the homes of those where he himself was required to visit in search of aid on pastor's salary. He considered it such a help that he said to me to get up what I could and he would pay the deficit (if there should be any) in putting the Advocate in every home on the charge, on the one dollar plan. I give the name of the ex-steward who has made the foregoing generous offer in hopes that it may cause some other good man to do likewise. His name is J. L. Wimberly.

Comb Sage Tea in Faded or Gray Hair
If Mixed with Sulphur it Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.
Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.
A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.—Adv.

Great Believer In Black-Draught

Oklahoma Lady Tells How Her Husband Believes In Black-Draught and Uses It For Many Ailments.

Nowata, Okla.—Mrs. W. B. Dawson, a resident of this place, says: "My husband is a great believer in Black-Draught and thinks it cures about everything.

It is splendid for headache, constipation (which usually causes headache), indigestion, or any kind of stomach trouble, and we just keep it for these troubles. I don't know when we haven't used it, and we always find it satisfactory.

I know it has done us both a lot of good and saved us many dollars. I use it in teaspoon doses at first and follow with small doses, and it sure does make a person feel like new.

It cleanses the liver better than any other liver tonic I have ever used, and after taking a thorough course nature asserts itself and you are not left in a constipated condition that follows a lot of other active medicines. This is one thing I like especially about it."

For over 70 years Thedford's Black-Draught has been in use for many simple ailments and to-day is a recognized standard remedy in thousands of family medicine chests. It will pay you to keep Black-Draught in the house for use when needed.

Your druggist sells it.—Adv.

FROM HOULKA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We are in our new field, and on the job. We arrived at Houlka, December 6, found the good ladies at the parsonage, with a good, hot dinner (with coffee, too), waiting for us. We found the pantry filled with good things, and, best of all, they are still coming. The people at Houlka, surely know how to take care of the preacher.

We have a fine people to work with. I have made my first round in spite of bad weather and roads. The people at Van Vleet loaded our buggy down with good things to eat. They even gave us sausage, and eggs to eat that cost 75 cents per dozen. Now, what do you think of that? The people say they like their new pastor very much, and we almost believe they do, for they surely do act like it.

We are going to pray and work for a great year on the Houlka charge. I am going to have a meeting of the stewards in a few days, and we hope to arrange to have the Advocate put in every home at once.

Yours in the work.
B. F. BULLARD.
Houlka, Miss., Jan. 6, 1920.

FROM HOLLY SPRINGS, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I have noted that some get more of the good things of this life than others, and, too, that often credit is not given where it is due. That this is true concerning the class of men who 'serve the tables' of our church has for some time been a settled conviction with me. The boards of stewards of the various churches have, in a large measure, determined the growth of the church—sometimes to their credit, and, again, otherwise. I would like to make some mention of the individual members of the board of stewards of the Holly Springs Methodist Church because of their merit as men, and, perhaps, it will be of interest to a long list of preachers and laymen who have gone from this historic church.

Some one, of superstitious or jocular turn, remarked upon the fact of the board's having thirteen members; but it was settled by the prediction that what was unlucky for the board would be lucky for the preacher. S. W. Mullen is president of the board, having been elected several years ago on the death of Dr. R. K. Luckie. Brother Mullen has, for a number of years, been prominent in public life in Marshall County, being superintendent of education and sheriff, and is now president of the Merchants' and Farmers' Bank. Thus he brings to the church a painstaking and efficient service. L. A. Rather, Sr., will be remembered by those who have been connected with this church during the last thirty years, by his hearty laugh and well-stocked drug store. Brother Rather is secretary and treasurer, having given the church faithful service for years. W. B. Bradberry has, by general consent and voluntarily, superannuated himself; but that does not mean that he is near ready for one of the beautiful marble slabs which he fashions for others. He says now, when assessments are made, "assess me with the leading." L. G. Fant, a prominent attorney in this section and president of the Bank of Holly Springs, comes of a long line of Methodists, as the memorial windows in the church testify. He is now superintendent of the Sunday school, and has, for years, given faithful service in that and other capacities. C. H. Curd, county superintendent of education, is a man who easily wins his way into the hearts of those with whom he associates. He is faithful and true to the church. W. H. Jones, an automobile salesman, would, they tell me, twenty years ago serve as janitor when that proverbial undependable was not to be found. As long as "Bud" Jones lives, the Methodist Church will have a champion. M. A. Greene, a prosperous merchant, farmer, and president of the Holly Springs State Bank, takes and reads more religious papers than any other layman I know. Brother Greene is a faithful attendant on all services of the church, and has been active in financing it many years. E. C. Wright, an attorney, although a young man, is growing into an efficient worker. He has developed for the pastor a loose-leaf church ledger which is a jewel. The president often says, "We will meet in Clyde Wright's office tonight." J. O. Tyson would insure all of our lives for cremation or burial, perhaps, but he is more interested in inspring the church against lethargy. I know no young man who devotes more time to the church than Jim Tyson. His word is, "I will do that." Dr. T. A. Moore, a prominent physician, comes of a strain of loyal Methodists. He is a young member of the board in time of service, but bids fair to give the church many years of service. Horace Brown deals in hardware, but his heart is not as hard as his ware. I remember Wall Doxey when he and I were students at the University of Mississippi, some five or six years ago, and it does me good to see how he takes hold of the duties of the church with the same determination he takes hold of his legal practice. Ben White is last of the list, but with his genial manner and personality he is always ready for his task.

A NOTE FROM FLORIDA.

Dear Mr. Editor: I am renewing my Advocate subscription and having my address changed. At our last session of the Florida Conference, Bishop Candler picketed me at Okeechobee, Fla., on the north point of Lake Okeechobee. It is a beautiful country, with much exceedingly rich soil. The city has a healthful location and I am informed that it is practically free from mosquitoes. I have not seen any during my two weeks here.

We have water from four deep, flowing wells, coming from a depth of eleven hundred feet. For many years to come this is to be one of the South's most rapidly developing points.

Religiously, our needs are great. I trust our possibilities and realities will be equally so.

With much continued appreciation of the New Orleans Advocate, I am,

Fraternally,
F. L. CROWSON.

TIME OUT.

HOPE DEFERRED.

"Poor Maud! She got cruelly deceived when she married that old man."

"Didn't he have any money?"

"Oh, yes, plenty of money, but he is ten years younger than he said he was."—Boston Transcript.

HE MADE HER HAPPY.

"It is the duty of every one to make at least one person happy during the week," said a Sunday school teacher.

"Have you done so, Freddy?"

"Yes," said Freddy promptly.

"That's right. What did you do?"

"I went to see my aunt and she was happy when I went home."—The Continent.

A TRIFLING ERROR.

The motorist emerged from beneath the car and struggled for breath. His helpful friend, holding an oil can, beamed on him:

"I've just given the cylinder a thorough oiling, Dick."

"Cylinder?" howled the motorist. "That wasn't the cylinder. It was my ear!"—Exchange.

ABOUT RHEUMATISM

What Thousands Have Found Gives Relief From This Painful Trouble.

Rheumatism is a constitutional disease, manifesting itself in local aches and pains, inflamed joints and stiff muscles. It cannot be cured by local or external applications. It must have constitutional treatment.

Take a course of the great blood purifying and tonic medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, which corrects the acid condition of the blood on which rheumatism depends, and gives permanent relief. This medicine combines, with excellent alteratives and tonics, what is generally conceded to be the most effective agent in the treatment of this disease.

If a cathartic or laxative is needed, take Hood's Pills. Purely vegetable.

Muskegon, Mich.—"For six years I was so weak in my back at times that I could hardly walk. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me and it made me good and strong again so that I am able to do all my work. I highly recommend your medicine and tell everyone I meet what it did for me."—Mrs. G. SCHOONFIELD, 240 Wood Ave, Muskegon, Mich.

Woman's Precious Gift

The one which she should most zealously guard is her health, but she often neglects to do so in season until some ailment peculiar to her sex has fastened itself upon her. When so affected women may rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a remedy that has been wonderfully successful in restoring health to suffering women.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

I am just back from the meeting of the secretaries of our church at Hot Springs, Ark. It was a great meeting and I feel that it is going to mark a new day for us. Our men seem to be planning fine things for us, and the reports from the field are encouraging.

The series of leaflets the Sunday School Board is getting out in regard to Evangelism is very fine. The first ones have just been issued and can be gotten by writing for them. I think it would be a good thing if you would write to Rev. C. D. Bulla and ask to be placed on his mailing list for this set of leaflets. His address is 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

The first meeting of the Mississippi Conference Elementary Conference will be held May 4-5, the place to be announced later. Pastors, superintendents and elementary workers, begin to plan to come. Miss Minnie E. Kennedy will be with us. Our program will be worth your time.

I have just visited Canton and they have pledged to make their school a Standard School. This is a mighty fine school, and will do a fine work, no doubt. May the blessings of God attend them in their efforts.

I found here at Canton one of the best Leagues. I have seen in some time. They seem to be greatly interested. Brother Evans, the pastor, likes his work and is in great favor with his folks.

Mrs. Brame will be employed for full time after the first of February. Please send in your applications for her services.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.
145 Adams Street, Jackson, Miss.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Church School, as a periodical on Christian Education, is in a class to itself. When are you going to send in your order for it?

The Methodist Superintendent and His Helpers is the latest monthly magazine put out by Dr. Chappell and his assistants. Send for the January number and see if it is not the publication that answers a hundred and one questions and gives help where you need it most. Only 25 cents a year. Order of Smith & Lamar.

Brother Superintendent, do you want help in your task of seeing the bigness and greatness of your position, and do you want to fill that position with some degree of success? If you do, send for Organization and Administration of the Sunday School, 65 cents, order of S. & L. Read it and then tell other superintendents about it.

Of course the preacher, the superintendent, and the teachers are interested in the salvation of all that attend the Sunday school. The preacher is expected to lead in this work. The office force at Nashville has prepared some of the best kind of helps for our guidance and instruction. These men and women have boiled down many books and years of experience into a small compass. Here is a partial list: The Place of the Sunday School in Evangelism, A Practical Program of Sunday School Evangelism, The Sunday School Teacher as an Evangelist, Repairing the Bridge or Educational Evangelism, From Throne to Manger, Let us go Fishing. All these and others can be had for the asking. Write to Dr. C. D. Bulla, for as many as you can use wisely.

The revival is only one method of evangelism, winning souls by personal work is another method, and teaching Christ is still another method. We should not discount any of these methods but we should use all of them and train as many of our teachers as posible to master all methods and then let the Holy Spirit have the right of way to use us and our teachers until we have won the last soul out of Christ.

Now is a good time to take the Bible and study the methods Jesus used. Learn how he fished for men, how he hovered over and accepted little children. Have him tell us the secret of loving men into the kingdom. Did he hire some one else to do his work? Did he have some one else pay the price that gave him his passion for the lost? Too many of us have tried to do the work God called us to do by proxy. We have lost the art and forfeited the blessing that comes to the fishers of men. Let us repent.

The Senatobia Sunday school is the first to sign up for a "Missionary Special for this new year. The school has asked for an Evangelistic Sunday school worker at Osaka, Japan, at a cost of $90 for the year. Good for Senatobia. While we wait men are perishing.

The Presiding Elder of the Winona District means to devote one-half day exclusively to the Sunday schools of his district during the session of his district conference. Something is going on in the Winona District. By the time the district conferences are held every school in town and country place can put on the campaign for new members and the evangelistic campaign also. Surely this is not more than can be done—ought any man plan to do less? And yet only a few men have done this much. "What wait I for?"

GALLOWAY MEMORIAL CHURCH.

The Board of Stewards of the Galloway Memorial Church at its first meeting for the year determined upon advanced steps in several directions. The salary of the efficient and popular pastor, Rev. C. W. Crisler, was fixed at $3600, which is an advance of $600 over 1919. Of course our pastor has also the use of a good parsonage—a residence which would readily rent for $900 a year.

The board is taking more seriously its duty toward the poor of the city and for the purpose of systematizing the work of the church in that direction has authorized the employment of a deaconess and provided in the budget for an item of $1200 to cover the estimated salary and expenses. The pastor was authorized and directed to make the necessary arrangements. Mr. Thad B. Lampton, one of the active members of the board, has given a fund of $1000, the interest on which is to be used in the work of the church among the poor, and it is hoped that this will be the nucleus of a large fund devoted to that cause.

A committee of the board was appointed to arrange for the every-member campaign, and teams composed of members of the board, and a number of volunteers, on the second Sunday in December visited practically every member of the church and, with some work done since that day by way of completing the campaign, there have been secured subscriptions covering the budget for the year, which has been fixed at approximately $10,500. This is the second conference year in which a thorough campaign has been made, and the results last year, when for the first time in its history the church raised a surplus over all obligations, lead us to believe that we have hit on a plan that fits our needs.

At the January meeting of the board the pastor announced that he was making plans for a revival and that these plans would be presented to the church at some early date.

A MEMBER.

ADVENTURE AND ROMANCE.

By Johnstone Ray.

There was a lass in a far village who longed to follow the shining road of steel that led to the City of Dreams, more mysterious than old Cairo, more splendid than ancient Babylon.

The village had grown drab and commonplace in her eyes. She was misunderstood at home. She hated Main Street, the Palace Hotel, the stuffy little postoffice, the Young People's Circle, and the quiet humdrum life of the village. She wanted to get away from it all, to learn something about the great outside world.

And so she left on the evening train while the folks were at prayer meeting. She left quietly, carrying an ancient travelling bag that had once belonged to her grandmother. She avoided the station master and the few loiterers that lingered on the station platform to see the 8:16 go out. She found the City of Dreams with all its lights and all its mysteries. The labyrinth of streets—the crowds—unfriendly faces—dismayed her.

But there was one in the vast station—one with kindly eyes—who found her out, who mothered her and protected her, listened to her tearful story and a few days later sent her back to the old home town with a new vision.

That one was the quiet little woman who wears the badge of the Travelers Aid Society. She is to be found at the gateways of our great cities—at the railway stations and steamship docks—keenly alert to aid the weak and the aged, to protect the ignorant and the innocent, to stand as a buffer between a great unknown city and thousands of unwary travelers who daily pass through them.

Remember the days of your own youth when you were beset by visions of adventure in the Great Outside! Perhaps you did not run away from home but, remember, thousands of girls and boys embark upon that great adventure every day! A large proportion of them find their way to New York, and unless they are intereepted at the very threshold, who can say what may befall them? The answer is written in the police records, at the morgue, and in the hearts of thousands of mothers throughout the country.

The Travelers Aid has been doing a work of protection and prevention for many years at the city's gates. It has not sought publicity. It has not asked for praise, but the records of acomplished good in the files of the Society's offices tell an eloquent story.

28 IDLE HENS NOW LAY 27 EGGS A DAY

And this was in Cold Winter Weather. Mrs. Davidson's Plan is Simple.

"I fed a 50-cent box of Don Sung to my flock of 28 hens that were not laying. But they are laying now. I receive as high as 27 eggs a day and never less than 22."—Mrs. Jennie Davidson, Yates Center, Kansas.

Mrs. Davidson wrote this letter in February. Figure her profit on two dozen eggs a day from hens that "wouldn't lay" during January and February. We'll make you the same offer we made her. Here it is:

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 462 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.—Adv.

100 Eggs a Day in Winter

Miss Vera Bowman, of Rochelle, Va., writes: "I received my 'More Eggs' Tonic about the 8th of January and am so well pleased with it I am mailing you $1.00 for another box. I have about 150 hens and get anywhere from 80 to 100 eggs daily, one day over 100."

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. "More Eggs" is a scientific tonic that revitalizes the flock and makes the hens lay all the time. "More Eggs" will double the production of eggs. Poultry raisers everywhere are making big profits by giving their hens "More Eggs." The results of a few cents' worth will amaze you.

If you send $1.00 to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 3251 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, today he will send you two large size $1.00 packages of "More Eggs"—one package being absolutely free on the special limited offer he is making now. The Million Dollar Merchants Bank of Kansas City, Mo., guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request. So there is no risk. Send a dollar today on this free package offer. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

GET READY FOR "FLU"

Keep Your Liver Active, Your System Purified and Free From Colds by Taking Calotabs, the Nauseless Calomel Tablets, that are Delightful, Safe and Sure.

Physicians and Druggists are advising their friends to keep their systems purified and their organs in perfect working order as a protection against the return of influenza. They know that a clogged up system and a lazy liver favor colds, influenza and serious complications.

To cut short a cold overnight and to prevent serious complications take one Calotab at bedtime with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea, no griping, no sickening after effects. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified and refreshed and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you please—no danger.

Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Every druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not perfectly delighted with Calotabs.—Adv.

OUR NEIGHBORS
Suffer from Coughs, Colds, Lung Troubles

West Helena, Ark.:—"For many years Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has been kept in my home as a household remedy and has been taken by every member of my family. At one time my husband had some lung trouble but after taking 'Golden Medical Discovery' he never had another hemorrhage and is today in the best of health. I also have taken the 'Discovery' as a blood purifier and spring tonic and have given it to all my children for colds and coughs and to give them strength, and it has never failed to give good results."—Mrs. Phenia E. Jones, 251 S. 5th St.

New Orleans, La.:—"Ever since I can remember Dr. Pierce's medicines have been used in my family and have never failed to give perfect satisfaction. When I was quite a young girl I had my first experience with them. I had caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs causing me to have a severe cough. I was in a miserable condition when my father gave me Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and it soon strengthened my lungs so that my cough stopped and it completely restored my health. Then during middle life I depended entirely on the 'Favorite Prescription' and it brought me thru this critical period in remarkably good health."—Mrs. Carrie Diodene, 1818 Baronne St.

Baton Rouge, La.:—"I have often heard my mother say that Dr. Pierce's were wonderful medicines. She gave the 'Discovery' to one of my brothers who became quite frail and sickly after a heavy cold had weakened his lungs, and I remember well how quickly he regained his strength whilst taking the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' He now has no sign whatever of weak lungs."—Mrs. Mamie Higginson, 824 North St.

"A REMARKABLE STEWARDS' MEETING."

Dear Brother Carley: Let me give you an account of what I call a remarkable stewards' meeting, which I hope you may find room for in our paper. In response to an invitation given by the pastor and wife, of Homewood charge, eighteen stewards out of twenty from the charge were present to dinner at the parsonage, some of them coming twelve miles and through the cold. This was on New Year's day. Dinner was served at 1 o'clock, during and after which many inspiring speeches were made by W. H. Jones, Rev. Andrew Boyle, W. E. McKenzie and others.

Immediately after dinner, the vice president of the board of stewards called for a business session, in which the work was discussed and planned for the new year, and at the same time the salary for the pastor and presiding elder was fixed for the respective churches of the charge, at an increase over last year of fifteen hundred dollars.

After the business, the stewards and trustees of church property looked over the parsonage property to see and recommend repairs on the property where needed.

In getting ready to return to their homes, three stewards who came in a wagon—which is not out of the ordinary for a steward of a country church when he goes to the home of his preacher—announced that they had some things for us and wanted to know where to put them off; I said, "Put them off where they belong," and most all of it was put off in the kitchen. There were sacks of flour, not less than six cans of syrup, and all kinds of good things, even to old-time fresh sausages, which look like a box of snakes when you open them.

There has been much fresh meat and other good things sent to us all along, for which we thank them very much. To say that these people are very thoughtful of the preacher's needs, is not by any means saying enough. They certainly feed him.

As these people open their pantries to the bodily needs of their pastor and his family; pray for the pastor that he in return may have the ability, under the authority and power of God, to feed their souls on the bread of life, the Gospel.

This was indeed a fine looking set of men, and, looking into their faces, I thought, "Well, the wolf will not get to the door of the parsonage, and certainly we can put the devil to flight."

We are expecting a great year.

The pastor and wife,
Rev. and Mrs. H. R. McKEE.

HAPPENINGS AT INDIANOLA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Mrs. McGehee gave a big spread to the elder and the official board; immediately after supper, they raised the preacher's salary $600. Now the question comes up, Who gets the $600—the pastor or his wife? I say the former, but the stewards and Mrs. McGehee say differently. So there you are!

You said that you wanted to make the Advocate more interesting, so I am writing for it. The only way to make the paper please some, is to make them editors and let them write for it, especially the preacher from Bogalusa.

Many things have happened at Indianola since we came here, due to the pastor and the Lord. Whatever is accomplished these days, in the spiritual realm, can be credited to these two. If the church had not felt that way about it, they would not have increased the pastor's salary from $1200 to $2400 in two years.

The big increase in church members is due to the Lord and Hogg working together. We got 92 members as the result of our meeting, and every service since then we have taken some one into the church.

The biggest thing that the Lord has accomplished here is the calling into the ministry of one of our very brightest young men in Indianola. He goes to Millsaps College to begin his life's work.

The Winona District is patting itself on the back for having secured one of the very best men in the church for presiding elder. (Of course you can discount all this, for it's policy to praise those in authority, especially the P. E's.) However, just because Mrs. McGehee's supper hit them in the right place, and because the P. C. was so popular, they raised the P. E.'s salary $20 over the amount assessed by the district stewards. What do you think of that?

All jokes aside, we have a great people here in Indianola, the finest I have seen anywhere. They propose building a beautiful $50,000 or $60,000 church this year; the ladies are spending $600 on improvements at the parsonage; a pounding was in order after Conference. (This was in the nature of a thanksgiving offering, rejoicing that they did not get some of the preachers that had been touted as coming to them.)

We might name many other things, but it might prove the first part of this paper true; of course that would not do, for the world. As for turkeys, we won't tell one like Neblett—we did not have three at a time; or like Stephens—one to come from a Baptist brother; but, Carley, they send them to us every day. Why, we have been eating turkey since Christmas; it may be the same one, but this I know, we have it—daily. Perhaps if you come to the district conference in May, we will have some then. (Guess you had better send the next issue of the Advocate, care of General Delivery.) Any way, Mrs. McGehee will treat you right when you come to the conference.

Yours in the Master's service,
CHAS. D. McGEHEE.
Indianola, Miss.

Minister Builds Church Out of Profits from "More Eggs"

Burkettsville, Ohio.—D. A. Schweitzer, a local pastor writes: "Enclosed please find check for 'More Egg' Tonic. My School sisters and myself have tried your tonic for chickens and found it extraordinary good. I have about 90 farmers in my Parish and shall try to induce them to use 'More Egg' Tonic, which undoubtedly they will. If once used, keep up, for it pays well. The profits I make will be used for the new church I am building."

Reefers' "More Egg" Tonic has made big egg profits for thousands of poultry raisers all over the U. S. It revitalizes the hens, tones them up and makes them lay all the time, no matter how cold or damp the weather. Get ready now and make big profits out of your hens this winter.

If you send $1.00 to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 3251 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, today he will send you two large size $1.00 packages of "More Eggs"—one package being absolutely free on the special limited offer he is making now. The Million Dollar Merchants Bank of Kansas City, Mo., guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request. So there is no risk. How Shivar Mineral Water Relieves Rheumatism.

According to the standard medical books, Rheumatism is not a germ disease but is the result of imperfect nutrition. The food is either imperfectly digested or imperfectly assimilated. Poisons accumulate and these irritate and inflame the delicate linings of the joints, the heart and other organs. To relieve Rheumatism it is therefore necessary to stop the formation of these poisons and get rid of those already formed.

The celebrated Shivar Mineral Water acts on the stomach and kidneys. It corrects the digestion and washes out the poisons through the kidneys. This is the opinion of physicians who prescribe it. If you suffer from rheumatism, dyspepsia, indigestion, disease of the kidneys, bladder or liver, uric acid poisoning, or any curable conditions due to impure blood, read the following letter then sign it, enclose the amount and mail it. Only two out of a hundred on the average report no benefit.

Shivar Spring,
Box 17B, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:—I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give it a fair trial in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and, if I report no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

NOTE.—"I have had the pleasure of serving the little church at Shivar Spring as Pastor for years, and am therefore well acquainted with Mr. Shivar and his associates, whom I gladly commend as an honorable business man and worthy of the confidence of the public. I have personally derived great benefit from the use of the Shivar Mineral Water and have knowledge of its beneficial effects in a great number and variety of cases."—Rev. A. McA. Pittman.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Notice.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society will be held at Lake Charles on February 24th, 25th and 26th. Each auxiliary should elect delegates to attend this meeting at the next business session.

Reporting.

Now, we are back to the all-important subject of reporting again. Our new fiscal year has just begun, new officers are elected, or old officers are re-elected; you know all about it there in your auxiliary but others are concerned—ours is a connectional work. Corresponding secretaries, send to your district secretary a list of your officers for 1920. Let the first vice presidents, the second vice presidents, superintendents of missions, study and publicity and superintendents of social service all get in touch with their respective conference officers.

A Debt We Owe.

Did you ever think of it, you who are not impressed much with the importance of sending a delegate to the annual meeting that this is a debt you really owe? You say, "We are getting on very well, we need the money, it would cost for other purposes," and write a mental reservation you think, perhaps, for better purposes.

You have been doing lots of good things, and thinking lots of good thoughts, but you have not reasoned this thing out; if you had you would pay your debt. No man lives unto himself and no auxiliary lives unto itself; you are doing good work because others have met together, counseled about the future, found the mistakes of the past, gathered inspiration to go forward, and laid plans for the Kingdom. Should you send a delegate and help? Is it worth your spending a little money for? Or will you continue to let others do this part of the work for you?

Attending the annual meeting at Lake Charles, there should be one or more delegates from every auxiliary in Louisiana.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Woman's Society of Central Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Meridian, Miss., held its Harvest Home at the residence of the president, Mrs. J. C. Templeton, on December 11. The members felt that it was a time of rejoicing and of giving thanks for the year just closing as it has been one of the most eventful in its history. The completion of the handsome new Central Church building, the revival held there by the Rev. S. W. Walker, evangelist, and Mr. T. M. Boyd, singer, the meeting of the Mississippi Annual Conference so recently in Meridian, mark 1919 as a red-letter year with Central Methodists. The splendid program was given.

Mrs. Addie Kennedy voiced the prayer of praise for God's goodness, the past year, reconsecrating the Society to His service. Miss Mary Sue Houston sang the beautiful Harvest Home. Two Centenary girls, Misses Inez Hancock and Dorothy Rush, played exquisitely a piano duet. Mrs. J. H. Rush gave a most interesting and gratifying resume of the year's work, dividing it into a three-fold harvest — the harvest of members, the harvest of dollars, the harvest of spirituality, making glad each woman present that she had some part in bringing in this harvest. Mrs. D. C. Hull in a clear, concise and inspirational talk told of the Centenary movement and some things already accomplished by it. She referred to the intercessory prayers that have ascended to the throne of grace since the beginning of the Centenary, the reflex action upon the church itself, and the stressing of faithful stewardship have both contributed towards the revival that many feel has started throughout the entire Southern church. She also called attention to the enlargement of Foreign and Home Mission work in all the various fields. Again were the women glad just to be connected with such a wonderful movement. Mrs. Olin Green allowed her imagination to look ahead into the future and in her fancy drew several pictures for the Society to look upon.

In the year 1930 (?). The first three pictures are scenes in the new Central church. In the Moise auditorium at least five hundred women gathered together in a meeting. Can it be a returned missionary is addressing them, or perhaps a member of the Woman's Council is with them? Oh, no. Why, it is just the regular Monday afternoon meeting of the Woman's Society. How such a large attendance? Why, when a woman joins the Methodist Church she takes a vow to support the institutions of the church and the Woman's Missionary auxiliary is certainly one of the church's institutions, and she should support it not only by paying her dues but by her presence, so she attends every meeting that she may keep posted on local work, and learn from the Year-book program what the Council plans for all the auxiliaries to do, in the furthering of God's kingdom on earth. She takes the Missionary Voice, official missionary organ of the church, reads it and is ready at every meeting to discuss intelligently the news obtained from its pages.

Another scene is the first Thursday of the month; the same five hundred women met together again in the auditorium. If a woman is a member of the auxiliary, she necessarily belongs to the Mission Study Circle, is a broad minded woman and wishes to study world conditions and world needs that she may do her small part (humble though it may be) towards giving the Christ, Savior of the world, to those people who know Him not.

A third scene is in the sub-story of the church. Three hundred persons seated around banquet tables. And what is this? An official banquet! The board of stewards, one-third of whom are women (since laity rights are theirs), the officers of the Woman's Society of Young Woman's, of Centenary, of Central, of the Epworth League, superintendent, officers and teachers of the Sunday school. And who is the speaker? None other than Bishop H. B. Watkins, one time beloved pastor of Central, en route from Monterey, Mexico, where he has been to look over the fine plant there that was Central Centenary special. He tells them with pleasure, this scene recalls very vividly the time he was host to the Annual Conference and the good times all the preachers had in this room and at these very tables.

He congratulates the church on the good work among the Mexicans, being carried on now by the Colporteur, the day school, and the hospital all making for the Christian uplift of poor Mexico.

He thinks the societies fortunate in having three missionaries represent them in China, the Epworth League helping splendidly with their own medical missionary in Africa, in the Congo; the Sunday school, lucky, or rather plucky to support a native pastor in China, one in Japan and one in Korea.

Next we look upon an imposing new building of red-pressed brick out in the cotton mill district. Do we recognize it? It is the Elizabeth Cochran Wesley House situated on a spacious lawn, the gift of R. W. Cochran. On entering we find it fully equipped with all modern conveniences and appliances for doing just the good work that Deaconess Fail and her five assistants are so happy

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made.

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will quickly earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

IF BACK HURTS USE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if Kidneys feel like lead or Bladder bothers you —Meat forms uric acid.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twings, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

FROM IUKA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a few lines from Iuka station: We arrived here on the night of December 3, and found Rev. W. M. McIntosh and wife at the depot waiting for us. (He is one of the general evangelists.) On arriving at the parsonage, we found a number of ladies and a few men, with warm fires and warm hearts waiting to receive us. Evidence of thoughtful kindness and love for the church was very manifest. Dainty new curtains hung at the windows; there were snowy white linen coverings, bright druggets, some new furniture, and a good supply of groceries was in the pantry.

We held our first quarterly conference on the 4th and 5th of January. Brother Mitchell acquitted himself well as a presiding officer, which is characteristic of him. He preached two fine, strong sermons Sunday. The board of stewards are a fine set of men. They increased the pastor's salary $300 over last year. The church here is keeping abreast with others in taking care of their preacher, and in every other way. One of our parishioners lent us a nice Jersey cow, and I tell you we are enjoying the nice, rich, creamery milk and butter.

"Surely the lines have fallen to us in pleasant places." We have a goodly heritage among these fine Christian people. Thanks to our predecessors, Brother and Sister McKeown, for a nice clean house to move into.

God bless you and yours,
Fraternally,
H. E. CARTER.

A LETTER FROM REV. S. W. MILLER.

Dear Brother Carley: The last Advocate brings the news of Rev. J. D. Newsom's passing away. I see also, that Rev. T. G. Freeman has gone to heaven, also Brother George Gordon. When I entered the Memphis Conference, at Holly Springs in 1869, at the close, Brother Freeman handed me a plan of his work and invited me to come by and spend a night with him on my way to my work, and agreed to get Rev. Alfred Freeman, his father, to fill my first appointment in case I could not get there. I found Brother Freeman a true and tried friend during the year. During the Civil War, he could not keep a horse on account of Federal scouts, so he traveled his work on foot, walking from point to point.

Brother Newsom was also a real friend of mine. I call to mind an amusing incident in West Point with a fly lighting on his nose while he was giving in his report, and also the next day while preaching. His wit, humor, and gentle spirit always impressed me with the feeling that he took the world easily, which largely contributed to his long life.

My nephew wrote me that of those who were on the roll at Water Valley in 1870, only seven were alive, and I was one; and as one has gone since then, we are now six. But the roll in Heaven is growing as on earth it diminishes.

The first Methodist pastor I remember, was Rev. John Boswell, and the first preachers at a camp meeting were Rev. Thomas Boswell and Brother Lee, of Tennessee. I remember seeing Brother Lee, at the close of his sermon, put his hand on the pulpit and hop over the front into the chancel.

When I think of the past, and then turn to the future, earth recedes, and Heaven draws nearer.

Yours in Christ,
S. W. MILLER.

Indigestion

DO YOU KNOW that indigestion can be cured, permanently cured, so that you can eat any kind of food that you crave? It has been done not only once, but in almost every case when Chamberlain's Tablets are used. An instance: Mr. J. Pominville, Stillwater, Minn., who had spent over $2,000.00 for medicine and treatment was permanently cured by these tablets.

to be able to do. This Wesley House stands as a monument; it shows what the loyal support, self-sacrifice and consecrated dollars of the local auxiliaries can do, as well as the interested co-operation of all Mississippi missionary auxiliaries and the watchful, kindly care, and wise assistance of the good women of the Woman's Council at Nashville.

When and how much of this ideal picturing may come true, who can tell? May we not go forward "without spectacular display or noise of trumpets in a quiet continuance of Christian service" for God's glory.

MRS. OLIN GREEN.

LOOKING BACKWARD.

Looking back over the year 1919, do you feel that your little "barge" was rowed, or did it merely drift? How did you spend your time? What did you study? How did you plan your activities, or did you allow some one else to plan them, and then let them hit or miss, as the case might be? How many really worth-while books did you read?

Bacon said, "Some books are to be tasted, others swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested"—while others are to be let alone. There are books that contain moral poison as deadly to the mind as the poison of an asp to the body. Books very largely influence life, and we cannot be too careful in the selection of books that are placed in the hands of the young. They are going to read, but what are they going to read? Go into a mint and watch them place a bit of metal on the die. The "stamp" moves toward this metal with a mighty force, but with a touch as silent as a caress; when the touch is over, there is upon the coin an impression that will remain beyond a thousand years. Thus, books are moved into our lives, silently and caressingly, either by our own choosing or others, but they come, some of them, with a mighty force, leaving an impression upon the mind that will outlast the ebb and flow of the ocean's tide. And that is not all. Impressions tend to express themselves in conduct, and if the books chosen have been Mission Study Books, this conduct will manifest itself toward others for their good and God's glory. In thus living out in service a Christian life, and thus only, are we fulfilling the divine purpose. We cannot live unto ourselves. For evil or for good, whether we will or no, our lives are speaking. Let's resolve to make them speak with no uncertain voice, because of the materials we build into our ideals through the written page. Order "Crusade of Compassion" or "Adventures." They give new views to life and teach us how to live.

YOUNG PEOPLES' DEPARTMENT.

Mrs. T. W. Baker.

"If I knew you and you knew me.
If both of us could clearly see,
And with an inner sight divine,
The wearing of your heart and mine,
I'm sure that we would differ less
And clasp our hands in friendliness;
Our thoughts would pleasantly agree
If I knew you and you knew me."

YEAR-BOOK FOR 1920.

To me our new year-book is most attractive, The central theme is "Friendship." The subject of the devotional study is, "The Elements of Friendship;" the missionary topic is, "Movements Toward World Friendship;" the social service topic is, "From World War to World Brotherhood." The programs are instructive and inspiring. The "Order of Business" on the last page is a new, helpful feature. Mrs. Perry urges each member to purchase one. One free copy goes to each auxiliary; the others are 5 cents each. Order from me or Mrs. Lipscomb at Nashville, Tenn.

Our specials for 1920 are again Brazil and the Mexican in the W. S.

WOULD IT BE SAFE TO TRY IT?

What do you suppose would happen if some well-to-do layman in the congregation to which you belong should hand out to your minister, just before Christmas, say, an envelope containing a big roll of bills that would run into several hundreds, or perhaps a few thousand, dollars? Do you think he would have a serious heart seizure following such an action? But do you think he might recover from that without any really fatal results? And then, what would be the final result of the deed, both upon the preacher and upon the layman?

Of course those are rather hard questions to answer right off-hand. But suppose we let our minds run on them for a little while. That at least couldn't do any harm. That the suggestion that any man should do such a thing as this is not an impossible suggestion is proved by the fact that one man actually did it. The editor of The Christian Advocate, New York, tells us that a certain pastor in New York State reports as follows:

"The other day one of my laymen handed me a sealed envelope and told me to open it at my leisure. I found, to my surprise, that it contained a roll of bills all of the twenty-dollar variety. Later, when I tried to return this windfall, my friend made this unusual explanation of the gift: 'I have been lately convinced,' he said, 'that it is unfair to ask a man with a twenty-five-thousand-dollar brain to work on a clerk's salary, especially since the preacher is a co-worker with men who have unusual opportunities for large financial returns. And, therefore, I want to share with my pastor some of my success.' And then he added: 'I hope this is only the first of many such dividends of our silent partnership.'"

So far as we know, this is the only case of this sort. But who can tell, it might become catching! And, really and truly, we would like if it would—just in a mild way, you know—in order that we might, for one thing, actually see how the experiment would turn out.

Now we hasten to say that we do not wish any one to start in right here and deliver a little homily to us about the worldly-mindedness of the preacher of to-day, and how good it is for him not to have too much of this world's goods. We have heard all that before, a good many times. And the most of it is pure bunkum.

No matter what anyone would say to us about the matter, the spirit of the action of this wealthy layman, and the philosophy back of it, seem to us sound and good. And, we don't care specially whether the bills would be twenties or twos, we would like to see the thing tried over again, in the same spirit, and with the same purpose. We are not particular at all about the manner of doing it. Actually we do not think any risk would be run. And we are not sure but that this might be a very good time to make the experiment. — Christian Guardian.

TIME OUT.

A Variety.

A man ran into a physician's office in St. Joseph, Mo., the other day, and said a man had swallowed a two-foot rule and was dying by inches. The doctor said that was nothing, as he had a patient once who swallowed a thermometer and died by degrees. A couple of patients chipped in, one saying it reminded him of a fellow in Texas who swallowed a revolver and went off easy; and the other said he had a friend in Manitoba who drank a quart of applejack and died in high spirits. —Exchange.

Tragic.

Mrs. Commuter had lain awake with a headache till one o'clock. Then in the balance of the night she had responded to several calls for a drink, a doll, and all the other nocturnal infantile orders. At five in the morning, as she was just beginning to round out the first continuous hour of slumber, the little six-year-old girl called softly from her crib:

"Mother."

No answer. Again, a little louder: "Mother."

Mother said nothing. Again the child's voice, this time mezzo-forte:

"Mother."

"Well, what is it?"

"Mother, isn't it too bad that one of Harry McCole's pollwogs died?"—New York Times.

OPPORTUNITY.

To every man there openeth
A way, and ways, and a way,
And the high soul climbs the high way,
And the low soul gropes the low;
And in between, on the misty flats,
The rest drift to and fro.
But to every man there openeth
A high way and a low,
And every man decideth
The way his soul shall go.

—John Oxenham.

Eggs $15 a Dozen

Yes, $1.25 for one egg! And even at that price you can buy them only on two days a week. No more than three eggs sold to one family at a time. That's how scarce eggs are in the war bruised countries of Europe.

Last winter eggs sold in America for $1.00 a dozen. We are just now informed by telegraph that, owing to the strike in New York, eggs are now selling at $1.25 a dozen. Europe must get eggs. America must supply them. It is entirely possible that with Europe's enormous demand, eggs may be selling in America for as much as $1.00 or $5.00 a dozen!

Now is the time to get every egg possible from your hens.

The way to do it is to give the hens "More Eggs," a scientific tonic that revitalizes the flock and makes the hens lay all the time. "More Eggs," will double the production of eggs, it will make hens lay heavily, no matter how cold or wet the weather. Already over 400,000 poultry raisers are making big profits by giving their hens "More Eggs." The results of a few cents' worth will amaze you.

If you send $1.00 to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 2251 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, today he will send you two large size $1.00 packages of "More Eggs"—one package being absolutely free on the special limited offer he is making now. The Million Dollar Merchants Bank of Kansas City, Mo., guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request. So there is no risk. Send a dollar today on this free package offer. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

Plan For Unification of American Methodism.

(The official copy of the Plan of Unification is not yet available, since the Committee on Editing and Form has not yet completed its work, but the Plan as here printed is practically perfect. We are greatly indebted to Bishop John M. Moore, Chairman of the Committee on Editing and Form, for his kindness in helping us to verify the substantial accuracy of the Plan as finally passed upon by the Joint Commission in session at Louisville, Ky.—Editor.)

ARTICLE I. THE NAME.

The name of the Church hereinafter constituted shall be Methodist Church. The membership of the church shall be divided into local societies, one or more of which shall constitute a pastoral charge.

ARTICLE II. ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

The traveling preachers shall be organized into Annual Conferences with such privileges and duties as are hereinafter provided for. Laymen shall be represented in the Annual Conference in a number to be determined by the General Conference, which shall prescribe their qualifications and the method of their election.

ARTICLE III. REGIONAL CONFERENCES.

Section 1. There shall be the following Regional Jurisdictions, each having its own Regional Conference:

A. White Membership in the United States.

(1) Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

(2) Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, North Carolina, and that part of Tennessee now embraced in the Holston Conferences of the two Churches.

(3) South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, and that part of Tennessee not now embraced in the Holston Conferences of the two Churches.

(4) Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin.

(6) Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico and Arizona.

B. Colored Membership in the United States.

(7) The Annual Conferences, Mission Conferences and Missions embracing the work among colored people in the United States.

C. Membership in Foreign Countries.

(8) The number and geographical boundaries of Regional Conferences in foreign countries shall be determined by the General Conference.

Members.

Section 2. (a) Each Regional Conference for White Membership in the United States shall be composed of the ministerial and lay delegates elected to the General Conference by the Annual Conferences within the territory of the said Regional Conference.

(b) The Regional Conference for Colored Membership in the United States shall be composed as follows:

One ministerial and one lay delegate from and elected by each Annual Conference, Mission Conference and Mission of its jurisdiction for each 2,000 church members in full connection, or fraction of two-thirds thereof; provided, that each Annual Conference, Mission Conference and Mission shall be entitled to at least one ministerial and one lay delegate. The numerical basis of representation in said Regional Conference may be changed by said Regional Conference, subject to approval by the General Conference, provided, that the membership of said Regional Conference shall not exceed 400 ministers and laymen in equal numbers.

(c) Each Regional Conference for Membership in Foreign Countries shall be composed as follows:

One ministerial and one lay delegate from and elected by each Annual Conference, Mission Conference and Mission of its jurisdiction for each 2,000 church members in full connection or fraction of two-thirds thereof; provided, that each Annual Conference, Mission Conference and Mission shall be entitled to at least one ministerial and one lay delegate. The numerical basis of representation in any of these Regional Conferences may be changed by said Regional Conference, subject to approval by the General Conference; provided, that the membership of said Regional Conference shall not exceed 400 ministers and laymen in equal numbers.

Powers.

Section 3. (1) Subject to the limitations and restrictions of this constitution, each Regional Conference shall have full power over all distinctively regional affairs within its area, including the power to fix the boundaries of Annual Conferences, Mission Conferences, and Mission, and to provide for the organization of the same, provided that no new Annual Conference shall be organized in the States of the United States with less than fourteen thousand church members in full connection therewith.

(2) It shall also have power to receive, own, transfer and control, publishing, educational, benevolent and charitable institutions of the Church within its own territory which are not otherwise legally provided for, and shall have supervision of all such enterprises, except those which are owned, controlled and supervised by some other organic agency of the Church.

(3) Each Regional Conference shall have power to elect from time to time the number of Bishops allotted to it by the General Conference, and said Bishops shall be confirmed by the General Conference, and ordained by the Bishops, unless two-thirds of the members of the General Conference, present and voting, shall object to said confirmation; provided, that the privileges, powers and duties of a Bishop elected by or for a Colored or Foreign Regional Conference shall be limited to the Regional Jurisdiction by or for which he is elected.

(4) The powers and privileges of a Foreign Regional Conference representing less than 150,000 church members in full connection shall be determined by the General Conference.

(5) No Regional Conference shall, in the exercise of the powers provided herein, make rules or regulations contrary to or in conflict with any rule or regulation made by the General Conference for the government and control of the connectional affairs of the Church.

ARTICLE IV. ASSOCIATE GENERAL CONFERENCES.

Whenever in any Colored or Foreign Regional Conference the membership in full connection shall exceed 400,000, upon request of said Conference, the General Conference shall organize the membership of said Conference into an Associate General Conference, with the privileges and powers herein provided.

An Associate General Conference shall have representation in the General Conference of ten ministerial and ten lay delegates with the right to speak and to vote in the General Conference on all matters which affect the interests of their jurisdiction. The General Conference may also be represented in an Associate General Conference by ten ministerial and ten lay delegates.

Members.

Section 1. An Associate General Conference shall be composed of an equal number of ministers and laymen to be chosen in such number and manner as said Associate General Conference may determine.

Powers.

Section 2. Subject to the restrictions and limitations of this Constitution, each Associate General Conference shall, so far as relates to its Jurisdiction, have all the powers of the General Conference, legislative, executive and judicial, except as herein otherwise provided;

Provided, that an Associate General Conference shall not prescribe conditions, privileges and duties of church membership that are contrary to or in conflict with those prescribed by the General Conference, nor shall it define and fix powers, privileges and duties of the Episcopacy contrary to or in conflict with the powers, privileges and duties of the Episcopacy as defined and fixed by the General Conference.

Privileges.

Section 3. An Associate General Conference shall be entitled:

(1) To have such representation as the General Conference may determine upon the connectional boards or societies in which its interests are directly involved.

(2) To share in the proceeds of the Book Concern or Publishing House as the General Conference may determine.

Meetings.

Section 4. An Associate General Conference shall meet quadrennially and at such other times

THE SURE FOUNDATION.

By Mrs. L. M. Lipscomb.

We are building a life
As the days go by;
We are building a life
For the home on high;
For this home is transient
And will not endure,
While the home above
Is eternal and sure.

Every day that we fill
With deeds nobly done,
Helps to make this home
And the crown to be won.
If 'tis only a smile
Or a kind word spoken,
It may soothe some heart
That by sorrow is broken.

We are building a life;
It may be in sand,
But this foundation
Will not always stand;
No matter how fair
To the world it seems,
It will some day crumble
Like a fabric of dreams.

But the life we build
On the solid rock
Will resist the storm
And the lightning's shock.
The wild winds may blow
And the billows roll,
But this life is anchored
In the home of the soul.

So let us dig deep
And be very sure
That our foundation
Is safe and secure.
Let Christ be the rock
Upon which we stand,
For all other ground
Is sinking sand.

THE GLORY OF THE LORD.

By Wm. C. Allen.

"But we all with unveiled face, beholding as in a mirror the glory of the Lord, are transformed into the same image from glory to glory, even as from the Lord the Spirit." II Corinthians iii. 18.

"The rushing of His chariot wheels
Told by His thunder's herald peals,
The flashing of His midnight lightning.
The earth through all her chambers bright'ning
Till mankind, wakened out of slumber,
Beheld the numbers without number,
Rank behind rank down heaven's high steep
The seraph legions gorgeous sweep,
Till in the center blazed the throne
Of Him who sat—the first great One!"
—Author Unknown.

The apostle speaks of our reflecting or taking the glory of the Lord. It is a beautiful thought. But why should Christians not expect to do so? Is it possible to live in delightful associations and not be influenced thereby? Is it likely that we shall have lovely thoughts of God's goodness and purity and not ourselves be transformed somewhat into His likeness? If we think too much of Satan, and of the hideous fruits of his work, are we not depressed and our own serenity depreciated? When we behold God's splendor, and have uplifting thoughts thereon, we spiritually are transformed into His image from glory to glory. It is an ascending scale. God always leads His people upward and there is never any lowering of man's dignity by Him. With Wordsworth we say:

"Not is entire forgetfulness,
And not is utter nakedness,
But trailing clouds of glory do we come
From God, who is our home."

There is no doubt but that the more we have of the Spirit of God the more we glorify Him. The less we know of Him the less able are we to appreciate or praise Him. The more He does for us the greater will be our love for Him. It was after Jesus had raised the man sick of the palsy from his couch that the one-time invalid glorified God. And we are told that his friends, also, "glorified God, saying, we have seen strange things to-day." This narrative typifies the spiritual position. When a man who was once hard-hearted has become sin-sick and touched by the Savior of men, and has been healed of his sin and forgiven, he indeed is an ingrate if he fails to adore the marvelous power that has transformed him. He praises God for his cleaner life, his new hope, his freshly discovered joy. His face has been unveiled—he sees new beauties in heaven and on earth. He is not a victim of false elation. He soberly and really knows that he has been transformed by the power of his forgiving King.

Christians do not sufficiently glorify God. It is not enough to go to a place of worship once or twice a week. We may, as Jesus said some did, honor Him with our lips and our hearts be far from Him. We need a deep longing after God. We must, as David says in the sixty-third psalm, thirst after God in the sanctuary, "to see Thy power and Thy glory." The thirsty soul becomes the refreshed soul. When we have been spiritually revived and enlarged in the love of Jesus Christ, we also, "with unveiled faces behold as in a mirror the glory of the Lord"—it is inevitable.

FROM BISHOP KILGO

Dear Brethren I have hesitated to inform you of my physical condition, hoping that I might soon recover, at least sufficiently to join you in labors, but I feel that I should no longer keep from you the facts. I especially regret that I must adopt this method rather than a more private method.

As many of you know, during the greater part of last year I was the victim of sciatica. This painful ailment was with me during the round of my Conferences, and since I came home from the Conferences I have been a constant sufferer, really unable to undertake any kind of work, although I try to keep up in some sort of fashion with necessary correspondence. I can not now foretell when I shall be able to travel and to labor. Nothing is more aggravating to my trouble than travel and irregularities of habits and diet. I can not make plain to you the regrets I have at not being able to join you in the great work you are carrying on, but I must in patience try to possess my soul. Amid physical pains I keep you all in my mind and in my prayers, and I feel certain that you will bear with me in my inability to do my share of the work.

I am rejoiced at all the signs of prosperity among you. I am pleased that the charges are making more adequate provisions for your physical needs and comforts. But especially does it fill me with joy to learn of the unmistakable signs of God's presence in your work in moving the souls of men to repentance and to a desire for holier lives. Let me exhort myself and you to be constant in prayer and the study of the Scriptures that we may be increased in all knowledge of God, having intimate fellowship with Him through the Holy Ghost, remembering that a ministry filled with power from on high, is the heart of a revival of true and abiding salvation. May the blessings of God be with you. Sincerely,

Charlotte, N. C. JNO. C. KILGO.

THE QUIET WORKER.

Years ago we remember our attention being called to two horses which were traveling along a quiet road. One was trotting along with head erect and an unusual amount of action, which left the impression that he was traveling at great speed. The other was moving along with a minimum of action, and moving so quietly and with such little fuss that she did not seem to be going at any speed. And yet the latter was really going faster than the former. But she didn't make half the fuss about it. And we remember once watching a lady knit. The needles moved, as it seemed to us, very rapidly, and there was a great play of steel, and the whole impression left on us was that the lady in question was a wonderfully rapid knitter. But on commenting upon the fact to another lady we were referred to a quiet old lady who made no fuss at all, but who, we were told, was turning out much more work. And only the other day a good brother in the ministry, commenting on another brother's work, referred to the fact that while he blew many trumpets and beat the big drum with great regularity, some brethren who did not make half the fuss were really doing more work. Fuss and noise do not accomplish much.

God bless the quiet workers who don't advertise, who are not forever planning to get into the limelight, who are too busy doing things to spend much time talking about them, who never sulk and never balk, who may not be much on a short sprint but who keep going all day, who do not flash out like a meteor for a moment, but who shine steadily for forty or fifty years. God bless these men and women! Too often we underrate their value, too often we forget to appreciate them, too often we half-discourage them by showing plainly that we prefer their showier brethren; and yet they never quit work, and when the erratic meteors have subsided into blackness these steady souls shine quietly on.

We met a good brother the other day who never pushed himself, never advertised, never kicked because he didn't get what he wanted, never sat down and sulked because some one else was preferred to him; but quietly and steadily he toiled for many long years; and the church is the better for that self-forgetting toil. How much better, eternity alone will reveal. There are better things than presidents and chairmanships; better things than blaring trumpets and loud-sounding drums; better things than the applause of the crowd and the envy of the less fortunate. To do one's work faithfully; to bend the knee to no idol, social or ecclesiastical; to refuse to lower one's ideal even in order to enter some earthly or ecclesiastical paradise; to retain one's honor unsmirched and to keep one's self-respect unimpaired, are worth more than the best gifts that lie in the bestowal of men. It is customary for men who desire to apologize for some lowering of manly standards to declare that others would have done as they did "if they had had the chance." The man of whom we are speaking is the man who would not have lowered his standards if he had had a thousand chances.

Long ago Elijah posed before his God as the only man left in Israel who remained true to Jehovah; and he was quietly informed that God knew of seven thousand who had not "bowed the knee to Baal." Elijah was a leader, and he was in the limelight probably more than was good for him. When a man gets so that he cannot recognize goodness in common men, he has evidently gone a little too far. Elijah didn't believe that there was another good man in Israel; but he was just 7000 out in his count. It is a bad thing when the preacher pats himself on the back as the only man in the church who hasn't backslidden. Bad for the church, and bad for the preacher!

We should like to speak a word for the quiet church member who never shouts hallelujah; who never is known for his much speaking; who never blazes up in revival and never freezes up between revivals; who never is led away by fads and never gets his ascension robe ready; who is looked at askance in periods of religious excitement, but who is always sought out to pay and to work when the excitement is over; the men who never get on Pisgah's top, but who can always be depended upon when the Pisgahites have disappeared. These quiet men and women are the backbone of the church, and we ought to appreciate them much more highly than we do. Thank God for the dependable people who, in quietness and humility, are living lives of godliness and honesty. We do not wish to disparage the man with the gift of tongues, nor to reflect upon the man who talks and prays fluently and well, and who helps in a very marked manner to keep our prayer meetings going; but at the same time let us not forget that the quiet worker also is a valuable asset.—Christian Guardian.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Every man of sane, common sense, after a careful study of the Holy Scriptures, must believe in a progressive revelation. Moses knew more of God than Abraham, and Isaiah's vision of the Divine and his imperial call to righteousness are clearer than the noonday sun. So, all aloug the lagging centuries, fuller and louder ring the voices of prophet, apostle, and the call of Him who spake as man never spoke before nor since. The breadth, the scope, the meaning of all this wondrous ministry sometimes staggers me, and yet it grows bigger with every age. The ministry of my youth is a far cry from the ministry of to-day. Once we were sent or called to churches; now the world of commerce, politics, society—in short, all of life's relations are calling us to help with their movements. Now these interests, no doubt, are wise and helpful to the world at large in many ways, but are scarcely within the range of the prophet's call. And, moreover, I have neither the time nor inclination to attend to them. My Master's business requireth attention. I am not antagonistic; I am otherwise employed. Excuse me, gentlemen; I am not raising cattle, nor cotton; I am not a partisan in politics; I know but little of sociology, am not an authority on economics, civics, etc. These are all honorable callings, no doubt; but just somewhat out of my line. I don't want to cover too much territory.

When I discover a real good book, one worth the reading, I feel a thrill like unto that of a voyager, when his vision first lights upon a new land. Ellis Smith, P. C. of Carrollton Avenue Church, led me a willing captive to this one. It is Charles Silvester Horne's "Romance of Preaching." Written in that chaste, beautiful English which marks the author as a son of one of England's great universities, and brimming with thought and purpose that are the golden fruit of years of earnest toil and study, its reading will richly repay every preacher. If Charley Crisler and William Schuhle have not yet lighted on this treasure, I most earnestly commend it to them and to all like-minded gentlemen of scholarly tastes. For a good book is like a tried friend—helpful, uplifting, encouraging, distilling the life of its lessons into richer, nobler thought for those who dwell, for the time, in the presence of its teaching. Not infrequently one is given a clearer vision and a strengthened purpose, by its perusal.

To-day the sun is shining, after ten days of rain, mist, sleet, darkened skies and dreary winds. Most of us were busy "keeping the home fires burning." The way people talked about the weather was scandalous. It was just as unfeeling and harsh as ever. Yet the fact that the rain was flooding and soaking earth, air and sky was commented on morning, noon and night. Riley, James Whitcomb, said whether the Lord sent rain or sunshine, it was his "choice." Bowing to the inevitable is the only way to get along with it. But, all the same, I am glad the sun is shining to-day. It takes a genius like Mark Twain to write anything worth while on the weather; it changes the subject too often for ordinary mortals.

RIGHTING A WRONG.

To the Methodists of the North Mississippi Conference:

The opportunity and privilege is now offered every member of our church in the North Mississippi Conference to make a liberal contribution to an endowment fund to be used solely for a more humane support of our superannuated preachers and their dependents.

The financial aid heretofore rendered these godly men and their families has been of sufficient meagerness to cause those of us with knowledge of its inadequacy to feel keenly the neglect on the part of our church for these beloved leaders.

Our church is brought face to face with a duty long overlooked and neglected; so let us respond with the promptness and liberality superinduced by Christian love to reward the life service of these disciples of Christ, therefore, in a measure righting a great wrong.

The committee issuing this appeal has been named by the North Mississippi Conference to direct this campaign to secure an endowment fund of $265,000, cojointly with Brother A. C. McCorkle, field agent.

The terms of subscription will be part cash, the balance to be closed by notes, payable in one, two, three or four years, as may best suit the subscriber.

The amount of the total subscription will be placed at interest, the interest to be used through the Treasurer of the North Mississippi Conference, in addition to the amount assessed throughout the Conference, more adequately to defray the living expenses of the superannuates of our Conference.

Let us have as our slogan: An endowment fund sufficiently large to enable us to pay our superannuated preachers not less than $50 per month from the date they are superannuated until their death.

To give an idea of the meager support now given our old preachers, the Conference Treasurer had on hand at the last Annual Conference $8000 to be distributed among the 57 beneficiaries of the North Mississippi Conference.

We appeal to every fair-minded Methodist quickly to right this wrong.

A DAY DREAM.

A little while ago I had a day-dream, one of those subjective visions which sometimes visit the mind in seasons of wakeful meditation and serious thought. I was in my study in the early morning, before the day's work was begun, and I was somewhat sadly contemplating the comparative weakness of my ministry and the many shortcomings in my personal life. And while I pondered, with closed eyes, I became aware of a Presence before whom my spirit bowed in trembling awe. He lifted my garments and I saw that they were badly stained. He went away, and came again, and again he lifted my robes, and began to remove the stains, and I saw that he was using the ministry of blood. And he touched my lips, and they became as pure as the lips of a little child. And then he anointed mine eyes with eye-salve, and I knew he was giving sight to the blind. Then he breathed upon my brow, and my depression passed away like a morning cloud. And I wondered what next my august Companion would do, and with the eyes and ears of my spirit I watched and listened. Then he took a pen, and putting it into my hand, he said, "Write, for I will take the things of Christ and show them unto thee." And I turned to my desk and I wrote in the communion of the Holy Ghost.—J. H. Jowett.

CHURCH EXTENSION AID.

The annual meeting of the Board of Church Extension, the meeting at which appropriations are made, will be held April 29, 1920.

The Board will not consider applications which have not been presented to the Conference Board of Church Extension, or its Executive Committee, for approval.

The Conference Boards of Church Extension, or their Executive Committees, meet early in March to approve applications and transact such other business as may properly come before them. Applications should be in the hands of the Secretary of the Conference Board of Church Extension at as early a date as possible.

Blanks for use in making application may be secured from this office, and when applying for blanks information should be given as to whether aid is desired for church or parsonage, and as to the purpose of the trustees to apply for aid to the General Board or Conference Board, or both. A line to this office will secure application blanks, accompanied by detailed instructions. Delay in preparation of the application, and, therefore, a failure to place same before the Conference Board, does not constitute an "emergency case."

H. A. BOAZ, Secretary.

TWO KINDS OF FOOLS.

As a man may be rich and not know it, so also a man may be a fool and not realize it. There are two kinds of fools. There is the intellectual fool, often known as the lunatic or imbecile, or the man who is half-witted. We look at him in pity and say: "He is not all there." This is an intellectual fool. But there are moral fools, men who are intellectually bright, sometimes even brilliant, and who nevertheless are fools. They are fools because they do foolish things. They throw away their most valuable possessions. Was not Robert Burns a fool? His intellect was fine. His intelligence was large. His brain structure was remarkable. His genius was great, and yet he was a fool. When he became famous as a poet he spent his evenings at banquets and guzzled wine. "What," asks Carlyle, "had he to do at such banquets, blending the thick smoke of intoxication with the fire that had been lent him from heaven?" A man who is dowered with the finest gifts and who burns himself up in alcohol and lust is most assuredly a fool.—Charles E. Jefferson.

Meetings During Quadrennium.

Section 9. The Judicial Council shall meet at the same time and place as the General Conference, and shall continue in session until the final adjournment of the General Conference; provided, that if during the session of a General Conference the appeal of a Bishop is pending, the Judicial Council shall defer its time of adjournment until it disposes of said appeal.

The Judicial Council shall convene during each quadrennium at such times and places as it may deem necessary to hear and determine appeals.

Vacancies.

Section 10. Vacancies shall be filled by the Judicial Council from the same order, lay or ministerial, in which the vacancy occurs, until the next meeting of the General Conference, which may then fill the vacancy for the remainder of the unexpired term.

ARTICLE VII. AMENDMENTS.

Section 1. The recommendation of three-fourths of all the members of the several Annual Conferences present and voting, shall suffice to authorize the next ensuing General Conference by a two-thirds vote of those members present and voting, to alter or amend any of the provisions of this Constitution; and also whenever such alteration or amendment shall have been first recommended by a General Conference, by a two-thirds vote of those members present and voting, then so soon as three-fourths of all the members of the several Annual Conferences present and voting shall have concurred therein, provided that such concurrence shall take place previous to the meeting of the next ensuing General Conference, such alteration or amendment shall take effect; and the result of the vote shall be announced by the General Superintendents.

RECOMMENDATION.

We recommend that the General Conference make an equitable provision for the financial support of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church by setting apart a designated amount or a fixed percentage of the total annual offerings of the reorganized Church for the support of work among colored people.

IF I WERE A LAYMAN.

By Rev. Charles Edward Locke, D. D.

If I were a layman: I would pray that if I became grouchy and disgruntled, God would take me to heaven before my unfortunate spirit might send some people to the other place. I would be, if necessary, an unreasonable optimist, and I would talk up my church, and its members, and its minister, and, by my own loyal attitude, I would rebuke any inclination among others to be fault-finding and cynical.

I would try to give my pastor a square deal. I would feel that it was not a square deal to leave him alone on Sunday night to carry the heaviest burden which rests upon the preacher to-day, that of having a flourishing Sunday night service. I would regularly attend church twice on Sunday, Sunday morning for my own soul's growth, and Sunday night to help my minister in his evangelistic effort to widen the influence of the church in the community.

If I were a layman, I would want to be an intimate friend of my minister. I would invite him frequently to my home and table, and I would thank him for his sermons and encourage him in all of his faithful ministries. I would realize that the church belongs to the laymen; that it is the laymen who build the churches and who license the preachers, and who pay and expend the money, and who are, indeed, the church, and that the minister is God's man who may come and go, but the laymen stays.

I would endeavor to make money by every honest means that I might be able to give largely to enterprises of the kingdom. I would begin by giving a tenth, even when my income was small, and then if increased means came to me I would give another and still other tenths, and I would not lavish money on myself or in needless luxuries for my home. I would not put multiplied thousands in a magnificient house for myself when there was so much poverty in the world and so many of my fellow-men, like their Master, had no place to lay their heads. So soon as my business would admit of it, I would give all of my time to helping on the work of the church. I would not spend all my life making money when there is so much for a consecrated layman to do in religious work.

I would earnestly devote my humble talents to advancing the affairs of the kingdom of Christ in the earth. To this end I would seek first for the conscious presence and comradeship of Jesus Christ and endeavor to be a yokefellow with Him. Then I would take the Master at His word and believe that if He were lifted up He would draw all men unto Himself. I would seek to lift Him up in my character, my home, my business, and in my social circle.—Zion's Herald.

THE WORKER VERSUS THE WAILER.

By J. L. Harbour.

The men and women who are really doing things in this world are seldom to be found among those who would be good additions to the men and women who beat their heads against the wailing wall in Jerusalem and rend the air with their ineffectual cries. The workers of the world are seldom to be found among the pessimists of the world. They have a cheery optimism unknown to many of the idlers who kill time by spending it in magnifying all the evils of the world.

I have never yet known a person engaged in the good work of trying to make the world better and brighter, who was a pessimist, and I have known many workers of this kind. If you want to hear the most woful of wails, harken to the cry of the man who is doing nothing to lessen the evils of which he complains. The cheeriest and most hopeful worker I know is the man who lives in the slums trying to be helpful to those around him. He sees life at its worst every day, but he refuses to be depressed or discouraged by this fact. He is too busy for despair or discouragement to get in their deadly work. No one is so likely to take a low view of life as the idler. No one is so likely to see light ahead as the workers of the world. They have the cheerfulness that Sydney Smith had when he wrote to a friend:

"I have gout, asthma, and seven other maladies, but am otherwise very well."

Or they may carry about with them the cheerful optimism of the rhymester who wrote:

"For every evil under the sun,
There is a remedy, or there is none;
If there be one, try and find it:
If there be none, never mind it."

The trouble with the idle wailer is that he seems to be looking out on life through smoked glasses. He sees nothing clearly and he knows nothing of the joy of service. He needs to take to heart this bit of good advice:

"Take life like a man. Take it just as though it was—as it is—an earnest, vital, essential affair. Take it just as though you personally were born to the task of performing a merry part in it—as though the world had waited for your coming. Take it as though it were a grand opportunity to do and to achieve, to carry forward great and good schemes."

The man who takes life in this sane way is never likely to pollute the air with his wailing. He will give himself the joy of being among the workers of the world and he will never have anything in common with the pessimist. The world will be the happier and the better because he is in it, and it will remember him with gratitude when he has gone out of it. Not so will the wailer. Even the most charitable will be unable to feel any regret when his last wail has been uttered and the world knows him no more.—Exchange.

PREACHER WANTED.

Wanted, a preacher for a small work. Will pay a young man who will work and stick to the place enough to live on. Give references; write me if interested.

TO THE PASTORS IN THE SEASHORE DISTRICT.

Dear Brethren: Please send to Col. R. P. Linfield, at Biloxi, Miss., the names of your local treasurers of the Centenary Fund, and your charge lay leader. Do this at once, if you please, so that he may arrange for the Campaign as District Leader.

W. M. SULLIVAN.

NOTICE.

I want a helper in my work; not a singer for evangelistic service, but a business agent, who will look after handling my Bible Lectures, making dates, attending to the advertising, and so on. I have more than I can do. It would be pleasant and useful work for the right person. Let me hear from you if you want the place.

When God sees the returning prodigal, he sees more than the sin; he sees the sinner within the man, the man within the sinner, the God within the man.—Joseph Parker.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the checks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

THE MYSTERY.

Sometimes my papa, when it's night an' time to go to bed,
He takes me on his lap—an' nen I cuddle down my head
An' he 'ist hold me nice an' close an' sing a lot of things
All whispery an' soft—you know the way your papa sings.
An' nen—next thing I know, why, it's to-morrow! An' I've been Tooked to my bed—an' I don't know who was it tucked me in.

I ast my papa why it is, an' where does people go
When they think 'at they go to sleep—an' ho say he don't know,
Utceptin' 'at th' best o' life, sometimes, to him, it seems,
Is when us folks 'at's worn an' tirod goes to the Land o' Dreams.
But I don't know 'ist what that means, an' nen I wouldn't care
If I knew when I went to bed, an' who put me in there.

My papa says there's lots o' things 'at we can't understand,
An' 'at there's lots o' paths where we can't see the guidin' hand,
But 'at if we 'ist do our part, an' keep a-movin' on,
The song 'at sings us all to sleep will echo in the dawn—
We'll lie down in our Father's arms an' wake to find the day,
An' never ask nor wonder how we came along the way.

ANY ONE BUT AMY!

"Another cup gone! Oh, Amy, you reckless, wretched creature! Now we've not enough left that match to go around!"

"Well, you needn't be so tragic about it, Prue; and, anyway, it wasn't my fault. The old thing's been cracked for ages and its time had come—it simply went to pieces in my hand."

"Quite simply—after you'd knocked it against the faucet. It naturally would," said Prue, dryly.

Sally and May, busy putting back glass and china on the shelves of the cozy living room, after the tea, laughed and exchanged a meaning look.

"Why, Prue, of course it wasn't Amy's fault!" said Sally, with overemphasized reproachfulness. "How could you think it for a minute?"

"No, of course it wasn't!" added May sweetly. "Most likely it was no one's fault at all; but if it was any one's, it certainly was any one but Amy."

That night, as Amy brushed her hair before the glass, there was a worried pucker between her brows. A broken teacup more or less did not matter much, but there had been something in the girls' tones that did matter. They were joking, of course, but it was something she did not like—something different; almost as if they had been talking of some one else—of a girl much less popular and petted and admired than Amy Alston. Bother the miserable cup! If Sally or May had broken a dozen cups, she would have sympathized with them; she would not have made invidious remarks. What did May mean with her hateful "Any one but Amy!" She had never considered herself as infallible.

Amy paused, with head bent sidewise, midway of a brush stroke down her smooth, brown locks. There had been that loaf of cake that was burned—but that never would have happened if Sally had not called her off to consult her about something quite unnecessary. She had hurried back as quick as she could; and they could use most of it by cutting off the bottom and one corner. She brushed again, hard. Sally ought to have known better. Cake required a person's whole attention!

"Any one but Amy!" To be sure, the time she forgot to snap off the storeroom light, and it was on for three days, until the next meeting, she had pointed out that, if Isabel had gone the rounds carefully before locking up, it could not have happened; and if the girl who had the key was not responsible for going the round, who was? Why, Isabel had acknowledged that she ought to have made sure about every light, even though she did not know any one had been to the storeroom. No! Isabel never tried to squirm out of a hole. She accepted consequences.

Just there Amy laid down her brush and severely addressed the sober young face contronting her in the glass.

"My child," she told it, "you've always considered yourself a pretty good sort, and in particular an all-round, good comrade. Let's hope you are. But there's one thing you've got to learn thoroughly and right away, and that's the art of owning up. You'd be decent enough to take the blame for anything big. I honestly believe, if you deserved it; but it's mean and disgraceable to try to slip out of small responsibilities.

"Now, my dear, you can't drop the best club salad bowl to-morrow and nobly and spectacularly confess the crime, as you'd like to do, because the bowl can't be spared; but you can and will buy six new penitential teacups and present them to the club, to make good with interest for the one you smashed—yes, smashed! That is the word you'll use, and you won't even hint that it was cracked! After this, every blessed blunder, fault and accident for which you are responsible is yours, and yours only; you won't let any one else claim a share, if she wants to! Not any one but Amy!"—The Youth's Companion.

A BEAVER'S WORKING DAY.

A young beaver in Regent's Park Gardens, London, was once placed at work upon a tree twelve feet long and two feet, six inches thick, just as the town clock sounded the hour of noon. The beaver began by barking the tree a foot above ground. That done, he attacked the wood. He worked hard, alternating his labor with dips in his bathing pond. He bathed and labored alternately, when he ate his supper of bread and carrots and paddled about in his pond until half-past five o'clock.

Ten minutes later, when only one inch of the tree's diameter remained intact, he bore upon his work and the tree fell. Before it fell the beaver ran as men run when they have fired a blast. Then, as the tree lay on the ground, he portioned it out mentally and began to gnaw. He worked at intervals all night; cut the log into three parts, rolled two of the portions into the water and reserved the other third for his permanent shelter. The work done, he took a bath.—Harper's Weekly.

HOW JACK WORE HIS CLOTHES.

Jack was cross; nothing pleased him. His mother gave him the choicest morsels for his breakfast, and the nicest toys; but he did nothing but fret and complain. At last his mother said: "Jack, I want you to go right up to your room and put on all your clothes wrong side out."

Jack stared. He thought that his mother must be out of her wits.

"I mean it, Jack," she repeated.

Jack had to mind; he had to turn his stockings wrong side out, and to put on his coat and his trousers and his collar wrong side out.

When his mother came up to him, there he stood—a forlorn and funny-looking boy, all linings and seams and ravelings—before the glass, wondering what his mother meant; but he was not quite clear in his conscience.

Then his mother, turning him round, said: "This is what you have been doing all day—making the worst of everything. You have been turning everything wrong side out. Do you really like things this way so much, Jack?"

"No, mother," answered Jack, shame-faced. "Can't I turn them right?"

"Yes, you may, if you will try to speak what is pleasant and do what is pleasant. You must do with your temper and manners as you prefer to do with your clothes—wear them right side out. Do not be so foolish any more, little man, as to persist in turning things wrong side out."—Selected.

Doubt digged a fortress deep and dim,
Guarded by moat and javelin;
And, having fettered every limb,
He dungeoned me therein.

Then Victor Faith's illuming star
Shone in upon my black despair,
And back flew rivet, bolt, and bar,
And I was free as air.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

THE PLAN OF UNIFICATION.

The action of the Joint Commission on the Unification of American Methodism, at its recent meeting in Louisville, Ky., in agreeing upon a plan of unification to be transmitted to the General Conferences of the two churches for their consideration and final determination, has brought this vital question to the point where it must be considered carefully and candidly by the constituency of both churches with reference to a definite acceptance or rejection of the plan.

The Questions Involved.

Speaking from the standpoint of Methodism as a whole, the discussion will, we think, naturally center about three questions: 1. Is unification desirable in itself? 2. If unification is desirable, is the time ripe for its consummation? 3. Does the plan proposed furnish an acceptable basis of agreement between the parties involved? We realize that the first two questions are inextricably bound up with the third, but we suggest them for the sake of clearness of vision as we give ourselves to the consideration of the whole matter.

Our Attitude.

We desire to state for ourselves, though we trust it is superfluous for us to do so, that we will be perfectly frank in the expression of our own views, and that we will preserve an open-minded attitude toward the many questions that will arise as the plan is studied in detail. We will jump to no conclusions; we will welcome arguments against any views we may hold, as heartily as we shall those that support them, and we will honestly try to be amenable to reason in all things; we will not, under any circumstances, consider mere differences of opinion as grounds for personal dislike or antagonism, and we will accord to all who differ from us the same sincerity of motive that we claim for ourselves. We realize that momentous issues are involved in the decision that must ultimately be reached, eventuating in the acceptance or the rejection of the plan, and we are earnestly desirous that that decision shall be based upon the principles that will most surely hasten the coming of the Kingdom of God upon earth. Our whole effort shall be to discover those principles, and our sole determination is to act in accordance therewith.

Our Views.

We hold the opinion that unification is, in itself, desirable. The two great branches of Methodism in the United States are one in origin, one in doctrine, one in order of worship, and practically one in polity. The issues that brought about the division in 1844 have largely disappeared. There is urgent need that Protestantism present as united a front as possible against the heathen world, against Roman Catholicism, and against the non-Christian forces in our civilization. In a practical way, the correlation of resources and the conservation of energies will increase largely the efficiency of Methodism as a whole.

We frankly confess that we do not know whether the time is ripe for the unification of Methodism or not. We are inclined to believe that it is, but we have not sufficient data upon which to base a definite opinion. The general reception of the plan as proposed by the Joint Commission will determine this question. Not much would be gained by opening a new line of cleavage in the attempt to close an old one. In considering this matter, however, we must be sure that our purely personal preferences do not outweigh our judgment as to what is best for all concerned; and we must be prepared to justify our position, whatever it may be, in relation to the manifest spirit of the age in which we live. As a broad proposition, it will be hard to convince the world that two great Christian organizations "of like faith and order" should perpetuate their differences; and while we are not willing to submit matters of ecclesiastical policy to the world for arbitration, we should be willing to take into consideration the views that are held by what might be termed disinterested onlookers.

The plan proposed by the Joint Commission appeals to us as being sufficiently satisfactory to enable the two churches to come together in a really unified, workable organization. It does not meet our own wishes in all points, as it probably does not represent the personal views of the commissioners themselves in every respect, but as the best plan that could be devised under the circumstances and under their instructions, it is submitted as an equitable basis of agreement. Both sides have conceded much. It appears to us that the rights of the minority are adequately protected by the powers given the Regional Conferences and by the method of amending the Constitution, and that the negro question is acceptably adjusted by the establishment of the Colored Regional Jurisdiction, the restriction of negro bishops to their own Jurisdiction, the limitation of negro representation in the General Conference, and by the provision for Associate General Conferences. It would appear that this is as much as could be expected, short of setting the Negro apart in a separate church—which, to us, is the only completely satisfactory solution of this problem.

Full Discussion Desirable.

The question of unification is now before the church in a concrete form, and it is right that it should be seriously and fully considered from every point of view. We desire to state emphatically and unequivocally that the pages of the New Orleans Christian Advocate are wide-open to its constituency for the fullest and freest possible discussion of the subject, provided only that the discussion be kept free of the bitterness of personal controversy, and that the amenities of decorous debate be observed. Limitations of space, will, of course, have to be taken into consideration. We will continue, as heretofore, to keep in the forefront matters that are of vital import to the spiritual life and work of our church and people. We do not propose to side-track other important things to make way for the discussion of unification, but we do propose to give space to all who desire it—pro and con—to present their views of the subject. We do not conceive it to be our function to assume a partisan attitude under any circumstances—an attitude as foreign to our nature as it is repugnant to our sense of duty.

A METHODIST HOSPITAL AT HATTIESBURG, MISS.

The Commission appointed by the Mississippi Conference to secure a site and arrange for the establishment of a first-class hospital has, after careful consideration, selected Hattiesburg as the location for the new enterprise. The South Mississippi Infirmary of that city, already a well established institution, has been purchased for $30,000, and plans are now under way for the erection of a new building that will make the institution one of the finest in this section of the country.

We are glad to see that our church has come to realize fully the value of such enterprises in its ministry of helpfulness to all the people. It will continue to lay emphasis upon the preached Word in the future as in the past, but it will no longer suffer the reproach of those who "say and do not." The healing of men's bodies inevitably becomes associated with the healing of their souls, and the work is as urgent to-day as it was in the days of the Master.

This enterprise of the Mississippi Conference will necessarily require a large outlay of money, but we have no doubt the money will be forthcoming. Men of large means are willing to contribute liberally to movements of such unquestioned worth, and those of lesser ability are glad to help forward so worthy a cause. We understand that an agent will be put in the field at once to secure the necessary funds; we bespeak for him a sympathetic hearing and a cordial co-operation. Too long our own people have had to go to distant cities to find in Jewish and Roman Catholic institutions the hospital facilities they should be able to find at home. We are glad that the Mississippi Conference will soon have a great hospital of its own.

SPECIAL PROPOSITION WITHDRAWN.

When we first made the announcement that we would send the Advocate one year for one dollar where it was put in every home represented in the membership of the church, we accompanied it by the statement that our sole purpose was to enable the paper to do the largest amount of good possible in a given community and not to put money in the treasury of the Advocate, the price being too low for any margin of profit. The decision to make the proposition was arrived at in November of last year, and even then it was based upon the well recognized economic principle of diminishing expense in quantity production.

The response to the proposition has been highly gratifying, and we believe that, under normal conditions, we would have gone a long way in the right direction in solving the difficult problem of the adequate circulation of the church organ. But conditions are not normal; and with the increased cost of production since the proposition was made we find, after careful investigation, that one dollar is less than the actual cost of the paper for one year. In other words, we are selling a product for less than it costs to produce it.

Under the circumstances, we know of but one sensible thing to do—withdraw the proposition—and we do hereby withdraw it, though with the utmost regret that the necessity is upon us to do so. We desire to say, however, that those who have already taken the special offer are at liberty to send their lists in at the special rate; we will accept them and cheerfully carry out the terms of the proposition.

If the Advocate had a reserve fund for emergencies, we would draw upon it and continue the special proposition until March 15, the date originally set for its expiration; but there is no such reserve fund, and we cannot afford to imperil the stability of an institution of the church by knowingly managing its affairs at a loss. We feel assured that every friend of the Advocate will approve the action we have taken.

DEATH OF MRS. JAMES A. PARKER.

"Mrs. Eliza Penn Parker, widow of the Rev. James A. Parker, who preceded her on March 16, 1916, passed away at Greenville, Texas, on Jan. 15, 1920, at 11:30 o'clock p.m., in the loving care of her living children.

"Born June 30, 1846, at Cotton Valley, Ala., of William S. Penn and Eliza White, of distinguished ancestry, she was reared in culture's lap and plenty. Her marriage to the able Doctor and prince among preachers carried her into an eventful itinerant's life. The sorrowings that came, the sufferings of body, graduated into an intense and all-absorbing Christian life and experience that sat like a crown of light on her latter days.

"The body, accompanied by her son, James, and family, was buried from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. T. B. Hopkins, Jr., at Lafayette, La., by the Rev. Harry W. Rickey on Saturday, January 17, 1920, at 3 p.m. Mrs. James Carter, in her clear soprano, sang "Rock of Ages" over her grave. Laid to rest beside that nobleman of grace, Dr. Parker, we realize the grandeur of redemptive grace."

The brethren and many other friends throughout the Louisiana Conference will read with sorrow this notice of Sister Parker's death from Rev. Harry W. Rickey. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved ones.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"All goes well with us," writes Rev. A. R. Beasley, from McCool, Miss.

Our church at Poplarville, Miss., has increased the pastor's salary to $2000 a year. Dr. C. M. Chapman serves that appreciative congregation.

Rev. J. M. Corley writes that he has been cordially received at Lumberton, Miss., and that the stewards have made a liberal raise in the pastor's salary.

Rev. W. M. Williams received twelve members into the church by certificate at Purvis, Miss., on January 11. That is a pretty good record for one day.

Rev. C. H. Strait is delighted with the reception that has been given him at Florence, Miss., where he serves a loyal and faithful people. He, too, has been the recipient of a generous pounding.

Rev. T. L. Oakes, of Sallis, Miss., requests us to announce that the church at that place will be dedicated on Sunday, February 15, and that all former pastors are invited to be present and take part in the service.

Rev. Briscoe Carter, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, Louisiana Conference, was in the city last week, and called at the Advocate office in company with Rev. F. M. Freeman, pastor of Parker Memorial Church, New Orleans.

The church at Pass Christian, Miss., claims the honor of being the first in the State to put a woman on the board of stewards—Mrs Susie S. Ford. All departments of the church's work are prospering under the leadership of Rev. Jno. L. Sutton.

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, pastor of Main Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., was recently elected president of the Hattiesburg Ministerial Association. The regular meetings of the Association are held on the first Monday of each month.

Rev. H. A. Gatlin is beginning his fourth year at Tylertown, Miss., under happy auspices. The pastor's salary has been increased $300 over last year, making a total increase of $900 in three years. A beautiful church has been erected, at a cost of $25,000.

Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpaulr, of Estherwood, La., has been busily engaged in preaching since Conference, though the revival season has not yet opened. He still has some dates unfilled; those who would like to engage his services, may write him at the above address.

Captain J. B. Frazier, head of the Chaplains' Corps, United States Navy, has announced that there are about sixty vacancies in the corps. Men of culture and established ability are needed. Surely our own church should be able to furnish its quota for this important work.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, pastor of First Church, Baton Rouge, has resigned as Louisiana Conference Missionary Secretary. His successor has not yet been chosen. All matters in connection with the Board of Missions should be taken up with Rev. W. W. Holmes, President of the Board, Lake Charles, La.

We had the happy privilege of meeting Mr. and Mrs Asa Watson, of Strongs, Miss., on the train as we were returning from the meeting of the Commission on Unification. They were on their way to New Orleans to spend a few days in sightseeing. It was refreshing to come into contact with these loyal friends and supporters of the church.

Rev. C. A. Battle, our pastor at Mansfield, La., broke his arm while cranking an automobile, January 18, but is reported to be doing well. Brother Battle is well known to the readers of this Advocate, in which many articles from his pen have appeared. He is meeting with his usual success in his new field of labor. Thirty-six have been received into the church by him since Conference.

The annual meeting of the presidents of Conference Epworth Leagues and of Conference Epworth League Boards, will be held at Nashville, Tenn., February 28-29. Rev. W. E. Thomas and Rev. Jas. B. Grambling, of the Louisiana Conference, Rev. J. O. Waro and Mr. W. D. Hawkins, of the Mississippi Conference, and Rev. R. P. Neblett and Rev. J. H. Holder, of the North Mississippi Conference, are expected to attend.

One of the enjoyable affairs of Nettleton, Miss., during the holidays was the entertainment of their husbands by the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church. The beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. James Wivgul was thrown open to those who were present on the happy occasion. Cut flowers and other decorations added to the beauty of the hospitable home. Delicious cream and cake were served and innocent games were enjoyed to a late hour.

Rev. R. S. Stewart, recently returned missionary from Japan, now working under the auspices of the Centenary Commission in the home land, is conducting a series of services for the students of Centenary College, Shreveport, La. We have received a request from Professor Sidney A. Seegers, Director of Religious Work in Centenary College, to urge that our preachers and people throughout Louisiana join in prayer that great good may be accomplished in the meeting. We are sure that many such petitions will ascend daily.

The song, "My Guiding Star," composed by Miss Eddie Bentley, an active member of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, of this city, is rapidly becoming popular locally. It was sung a few Sundays ago by Mr. T. O. Adams in the Carrollton Avenue church, and on last Sunday evening by Mrs. T. O. Adams in Rayne Memorial Church. It will also be sung next Saturday afternoon in the Gold Room of the Hotel Grunewald, at a musical gathering, by Mrs. Arthur Herman. The appealing sentiment of the song is enhanced by the appropriate musical setting.

The Clarksdale Daily Register very properly gives considerable space to items of church news. Its issue of January 15 contained an extended account of the work of the women in the various churches of that progressive city. We were especially interested in the full report of the work that is being done by the Methodist women through a complete organization of the Missionary Society. We do not recall having seen anywhere a more perfectly developed plan of work. We congratulate the pastor, Rev. E. Nash Broyles, the church, and the entire community upon having such an aggressive force of Christian workers enlisted in the promotion of the Kingdom of God.

The Educational Campaign Commission will meet at McKendree Church, Nashville, Tenn., February 24-25. This Commission, of which Bishop James Cannon, Jr., is chairman, is composed of eleven members, six from the General Conference Board of Education and five from the Methodist Educational Association. This will be the second meeting of this Commission, the first one having been at Lake Junaluska last August. Immediately following this meeting of the Commission, the Educational Association will hold its second annual meeting. This meeting, which will also be at McKendree Church, will begin on the evening of February 25, and continue through the 26th and 27th. Dr. R. E. Blackwell, of Randolph-Macon College, Virginia, is the president of this Association.

The two Commissions composing the Joint Commission on Unification voted separately on the resolution to transmit the Plan to the General Conferences. The Commissioners of the Methodist Episcopal Church voted unanimously in favor of it; the Commissioners of our church voted 19 for, to 5 against. The press dispatch from Louisville that the vote was unanimous, was incorrect.

THE "EVERY FAMILY" LIST.

In addition to the places previously announced, the following have definitely accepted the Special Proposition to put the Advocate in every home represented in the membership of the church:

Ruleville, Miss., Rev. W. S. Shipman, pastor.
Drew, Miss., Rev. W. N. Duncan, pastor.
Grenada, Miss., Rev. W. W. Woollard, pastor.
Pleasant Hill, La., Rev. P. O. Lowrey, pastor.
Braxton, Miss., Rev. C. H. Strait, pastor.
Jonesboro, La., Rev. G. A. Morgan, pastor.
Fernwood, Miss., Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, pastor.
West Point, Miss., Rev. Carroll D. Varner, pastor.
Schlater, Miss., Rev. O. L. Savage, pastor.
Alexandria, La., Rev. S. H. Werlein, pastor.

In addition to the above, we have been notified that several other places have definitely taken the matter up, with the probability that the proposition will be accepted. In spite of the fact that we have been compelled to withdraw the Proposition so far as the future is concerned, we desire to emphasize the statement that those who have already taken definite action looking to its acceptance are at perfect liberty to send in their lists at the special rate as soon as they have completed them. We regret beyond measure that the increased cost of production since the Proposition was made renders it impossible for us to leave it open indefinitely. We renew our thanks to those who have so willingly done everything in their power to give the Advocate as wide circulation as possible. We earnestly entreat all our friends to continue their efforts to put the paper into the homes of all our people at the regular rate—a rate which itself is lower than most of our Conference organs are asking.

Obituaries.

The little town of Walnut Grove, Miss., was filled with sadness when, in the early morning of Dec. 13, 1919, the death angel came and carried away the spirit of Mrs. LILLIAN MARIAM HATTAWAY (nee Funston). She had been sick for several months and suffered intensely till death brought relief. She was born July 13, 1875, united with the Methodist Church early in life, and made a loyal member until death. She was married to Mr. Ed Hattaway in January, 1896. Of this union were born four children, two girls and two boys. Her husband and elder son preceded her to the grave by about twelve years. During her widowhood she lived with one of her brothers and her aged father and mother, but one by one God called each of these away. She was an affectionate and thoughtful wife and mother, an unselfish and faithful sister and a devoted church member. Besides her many friends and loved ones, she leaves a brother, three sisters, two daughters and a son to mourn her death. While on her deathbed, realizing that she must die, just after prayer she remarked: "It's a grand thing to have a Father." We should not weep over her departure, for her Father hath called her unto himself, that she may dwell with him for evermore. Her pastor,

W. N. WARE.

JAMES LEROY BLAIR was born Sept. 20, 1835, in Charlotte, N. C. He died on Sunday, Jan. 11, 1920, in the home of his son near Water Valley, Miss. Brother Blair was married when a young man to Miss Eliza Orr, of Coffeeville, Miss. Five children were born of this union—three sons and two daughters. He leaves the two daughters, Mrs. J. A. Goad, wife of our pastor at Noxapater, and Mrs. J. R. Perneli, of Hot Springs, Ark., and one son, Mr. E. C. Blair, of Water Valley, to mourn his going away. Brother Blair resigned his office as postmaster at Coffeeville, Miss., to enter the Civil War at the opening of the war between the States, and served with valor and faithfulness until the surrender. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, about 45 years ago, and for all these years he has remained true to the church he loved so well, and true to the Christ he worshiped as his Savior and Lord. On Sunday, Jan. 4, he was stricken with pneumonia and lingered one short week before the great final summons came. He was a quiet, reserved man in all his ways, but firm, rigid, pronounced, and positively unyielding when right and wrong stood before him for choice, and his choice was always for right and God, as he saw it and believed it. I knew him for four years at New Albany, and many a time have I thought of the words of Jesus, when we would be discussing various moral problems that came up, and Brother Blair would quietly but firmly ring true to the right always and in every instance. "The Prince of this world cometh, but hath nothing in me." He was a good man, just the kind of man God and the angels will take good care of against the resurrection.

S. L. POPE.

On Sunday afternoon, Jan. 4, 1920, God saw fit to call the pure and gentle spirit of Brother JAMES PAUL ABNEY from this life. He was born Feb. 21, 1837. His sunset was beautiful. He told Thomas, his "preacher boy," that death to him had no pangs, and "I am ready and willing to go to meet my Savior when He calls." As his sun slowly sank into the western horizon the sky was tinged with the golden rays of hope for his loved ones. He joined the M. E. Church, South, July 12, 1849; was happily converted Sept. 6, 1856; served as steward for thirty-two years, two years as Sunday school superintendent and two years as classleader. He has been a regular subscriber to the New Orleans Christian Advocate ever since the first copy was published. He was three times married—first to Miss Eliza Ann Tatum, Dec. 22, 1857. To this union eight children were born. On Dec. 5, 1890, he was married to Martha Jane Hinton, and then to Sarah Jane McLaurin on April 19, 1905. Three brothers, two sisters, two wives and one child preceded him to that beautiful city. He leaves a wife, seven children, three brothers and a host of grandchildren to mourn his departure. May the calling of this brave Confederate veteran, patriotic citizen and generous Christian draw us all nearer to Him. On Jan. 5, 1920, his body was interred in Montrose Cemetery. May we meet this soldier of the Cross in that home not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

His pastor,
HILARY S. WESTBROOK.

The subject of this sketch, Mr. W. G. EVANS, was born Jan. 1, 1851, and received the summons to come up higher on Jan. 7, 1920. His age was 69 years and 7 days. He joined the Methodist Church in early life, and they tell us that he was a consistent member of the militant church here in this world of mutation. God's children die as they have lived, and then go from this stage of action to join the church triumphant. The home-going of a Christian is precious in the sight of the Lord Jesus. He was married to Miss Alice Williams, Nov. 15, 1869, and to this union were born seven children. One preceded him to the better world on high, and his wife and six children and a host of relatives survive him to mourn his demise. How blessed it is to know that we can meet him again after awhile. Mourn not, loved ones, for him, but rather rejoice to know that there will be a great reunion; and strive to emulate the noble example that has been set by him. The funeral services were conducted in the Montrose Methodist Church on the afternoon of Jan. 8, 1920, by the writer of these lines, after which his form was laid to rest in the cemetery here to await the resurrection morn. "Peace be to his ashes."

His pastor,

[illegible] interesting [illegible] Mississippi recently about [illegible] have been given [illegible] at various places. [illegible] has our eighth year — [illegible] entire year at Edwards. I [illegible] say that no new [illegible] a more cordial reception than has been given us at Edwards. No visitor has marveled at a [illegible] from a preacher; why, Brother Henry, that was just a beginning. [illegible] and whole, [illegible] and other things too numerous to mention. Best of all, however, is the warm Landesp and free expression of brotherliness, helpfulness and welcome.

Our work this year includes two [illegible] formerly in the Port Gibson [illegible] Learned and Rives Chapel. We have made one round at these places and it seem to be happy and glad to see us. At the first quarterly conference the assessment for the preacher was materially increased over former years and the prevailing spirit was one of helpfulness. Our presiding elder, Brother J. M. Morse, is leaving nothing undone to help in every way.

During last year we increased the circulation of the Advocate 100 per cent.

Come to see us and we will let you preach to as few people as you can and stay with us.

G. P. McKEOWN.

FROM OAKDALE, LA.

Oakdale is decidedly the best town between Alexandria and Lake Charles, and from a business way there is not a town in Louisiana near its size that will equal it. It has more good streets, sidewalks, water, lights, and up-to-date business houses and hustle generally than any town of its size.

The town is filling up with nice, new homes on every hand, not the least of which is a most comfortable new Methodist parsonage. The parsonage is modern in every respect except heat, and if you give Evans a little time he will have the fireplace going so you would not know but that "Gene" was in the furnace.

Oakdale employs 30 public school teachers and has one of the finest school buildings in the State.

The Methodist church occupies a commanding place in the community life of Oakdale. The Methodist Church is comparatively new here. The people have a very large and strong organization.

J. L. Evans came to us as pastor a year ago this fall on account of some [illegible] that were made after Conference. He found a delightful, new home with nicely [illegible] furniture and a congregation that was glad to receive him.

We have had a lot of bad weather, which has interfered with services, but the people of the church and town are delighted with Brother Evans and wife. Oakdale has never had an [illegible] preacher, and Brother Evans [illegible] to every one; he is a [illegible] preacher and has the dignified qualifications becoming [illegible] Work a leader [illegible] we look forward [illegible] Year. We own one of the most valuable pieces of property in the town on which the new parsonage is located, and the new church will be built as soon as conditons are right.

Presiding Elder May has held the first quarterly conference and was well pleased to find the church in such fine shape.

OFFICIAL BOARD MEMBER.

EXTRACT FROM THE WILL OF MRS. T. B WHITE, OF RUSTON, LA.

"In view of the probability of my early close of life and accountability, I commit my soul to God who gave it; trusting alone in the atonement of Christ for salvation, I make this my last will and testament:

"First, in consideration and gratitude for an annual sum from the Benevolent Fund of the Louisiana Conference in recognition of my husband's services to the church, by which I have been personally aided, I bequeath to the Legal Conference (Board of Trustees) of the Louisiana Annual Conference, the sum of $500, to be known as 'The T. B. White Fund,' interest on the same to be paid annually to the Conference claimants.

"I give to the Methodist parsonage in Ruston the furniture (walnut) in my front room, consisting of bedstead, dresser, washstand, table, armoir and one chair to match."

FROM GRENADA, MISS.

With this copy of the Christian Advocate, there will go into every home of our church, 135 of them, this organ of our church and Conference for twelve months. It was ordered by the quarterly conference, and the board of stewards was directed to guarantee the cost. It was believed that many of the members would gladly pay for the paper. Its cost, under a special proposition of the management, will be only one dollar a year, where it goes to every family of the church. Otherwise it costs one and a half dollars.

Committees are waiting on the members who are receiving the Advocate, giving them an opportunity to pay the dollar. But if for any reason of inability or unwillingness the payment is declined, the paper will continue to come just the same, and the stewards will care for the entire list out of funds otherwise provided for.

This is a part of our Evangelistic Campaign which we are conducting, and which we trust under God may be blessed to a genuine revival of religion throughout the city of Grenada, and its environs. In the columns of the Advocate you will be kept informed not only of the general work of the church and the local news of the Conference, but as well will you have that reading of healthy, religious thinking which is so needful for one's spiritual development.

Wm. W. WOOLLARD,
Pastor.

TOO WEAK TO DO ANYTHING

A Serious Feminine Illness Remedied By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Casco, Wis.—"After the birth of each of my children I had displacement and was so weak I couldn't do anything I found a book about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so thought I would try it, and after taking it I soon felt better. That was fifteen years ago and I have felt well ever since except that I had a slight attack of the trouble some time ago and took some more of your Compound and was soon all right again. I always recommend your medicine and you may publish my testimonial for the benefit of other women."—Mrs. JULES BERO, Jr., R. 1, Box 99, Casco, Wis.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills in this country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Foley's Honey and Tar

COMPOUND

AN OLD RELIABLE FAMILY REMEDY, recommended for coughs, colds, tickling of the throat, spasmodic croup, whooping cough, la grippe, and bronchial coughs, hoarseness, etc.

The First Dose Gave Relief

C. E. Summers, Holdredge, Neb., writes: "Some time ago I contracted a very severe cough and cold due to exposure. My cough got so bad I could hardly sleep for two or three nights. A friend of mine recommended Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, and I got a 60c bottle. The very first dose relieved me. I took a second dose before going to bed and can truthfully say I did not cough once all night. By using as directed the next two days my cough was entirely gone, and I give Foley's Honey and Tar full credit for my speedy and permanent recovery."

For more than thirty years Foley's Honey and Tar has been used with satisfaction and success.

114 EGGS A DAY NOW INSTEAD OF 25 A DAY

That Means About $105 Extra Income Per Month for Mrs. Ropp.

"I have 240 hens, including late pullets not old enough to lay and had been getting 25 to 30 eggs a day. Then I tried Don Sung in the feed, and am now getting 107 to 114 eggs a day."—Mrs. Essie B. Ropp, R. R. 2, Littles, Ind.

Mrs. Ropp got this increase of 7 dozen a day in the middle of winter. At 50 cents a dozen, 30 days a month, this makes $105 extra income a month. The Don Sung for her 200 hens cost her about $2.50 per month. You can see how well it paid her, and we'll guarantee it will pay you. Here's our offer:

[illegible] Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 162 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.—Adv.

week. (2) The Wesley Bible Class Federation at Shreveport, March 11, 12 and 13. This Conference-wide Sunday school meeting has become a great power and school. We purpose to give to Louisiana Methodism a real school in modern Sunday school methods. Since it is impossible for us to hold an Elementary training Conference-wide we are going to give the Elementary classes equal opportunity with the Bible Classes. This meeting of the Federation will begin Tuesday, March 11 at 1:00 p. m. and close Thursday at 12 noon. The plan of the program is to give expert help in all departments. In selecting your delegates to the Federation it is going to be almost impossible for Shreveport, with so many visitors and so many travelers, to find entertainment; therefore we are giving notice now that all delegates will be compelled to hold their assignment before coming to the Federation.

Will every pastor or superintendent of a Sunday school send me at once a list of his teachers, if he has not already sent them? I need them for my mailing list. I can send you leaflets and general information if you will do this.

Talk the Federation! Plan the sending of delegates! Shreveport in March!

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Simply wishing for a full attendance in the class and in the Sunday school is not sufficient. We must go and compel them to come in.

The Batesville Sunday school, under the leadership of the wise pastor, Melville Johnson, has made a careful canvass of the town and the results of the work done are more than satisfactory.

Literature on the Membership and the Evangelistic Campaigns has been mailed to every pastor and to many of the superintendents. This literature merits a careful reading. After reading it, if it is worth anything, use it to the best advantage.

The way to find out whether the Membership Campaign for new members is worth the trouble is to try it out, and if it is of no value, try something better. The men who have made this canvass have found that it is worth a hundred-fold more than it cost.

In the face of all the selfishness, worldliness, and coarse sin that is destroying our people, young and old, is it not worth while to use every means offered us to win them back before they destroy themselves and us?

Would you like for your school to take an interesting special this year? A list of specials has been offered the Sunday schools of our Conference. We have until the first of April to accept them. Each district has been offered ten objects, ranging from fifty to three hundred dollars a year. We will not close the door of hope against these needy ones.

Wouldn't you like to get an Extraordinary Honor Certificate signed by your pastor, Sunday school superintendent, and Sunday school secretary for attending Sunday school for five Sundays in February? Of course, you would. This Honor Certificate can come only three times in one hundred years. It will be worth framing and can be handed down to posterity with pleasurable pride. In the meantime, the idea will bring back people to the Sunday school. Announce this to your school at once, then send for the certificates. Price, 20 cents per dozen, $1.25 per hundred. Smith & Lamar, Nashville.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

January 14, the Good Hope Sunday school on the Williamsburg charge was organized with Mrs. Mary Ella Chance as Superintendent. They put in Graded Literature for the Beginners and Primary. Pray for her and her work. She has a difficult but very important field of service.

There are some evidences of growth. Letters are coming telling of progress. This is most welcome news.

Mrs. Ida Stewart Brame one of the most outstanding ladies of our State will be the Elementary Superintendent for the Mississippi Conference this year. She is employed for full time. Her services are free to all. I wish that we might use her in the most needy places. I trust that those who feel your need and those who are in difficult places will use her.

Do you think of any way the Sunday School Board can be of help to you? We desire to help in every possible way and to what we can. Please help us to help you.

Write to Dr. C. D. Bulla, 811 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. the leaders in Evangelism. The General Sunday School Board is getting out some very fine leaflets that will be of service if they can be placed in the hands of the people.

Who would like to see the Mississippi Conference a Standard Conference? Forty per cent of all the Sunday schools measuring up to the Standard. Many schools only miss the standard a few points. We can do this for the sake of the cause of Christ if we make an effort.

I wish to commend the Advocate to all Sunday school workers and call upon them to support the campaign. Volunteer to help your pastor make a canvass of the church for the Advocate. Pray for the Editor and Business Manager.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Did you know that February has five Sundays? Did you know that this happens only about three times in a hundred years? Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn., Sunday School Department, have prepared certificates worthy to be framed to be given to those who attend all five Sundays in February. Price of Certificates $1.25 per 100. This is a fine thing if you will adopt it. It will stimulate interest and create enthusiasm.

Yours in the work,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

FROM NATCHITOCHES, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: This is to advise your readers that big things are happening in old Natchitoches. The Baptists, Presbyterians and Methodists are engaged in a big co-operative meeting, with Bob Jones and his singer and pianist leading the forces to victory. We began Sunday, the eleventh, and will close out Sunday night, the twenty-fifth. Up to the present writing, many in the churches and out of the churches have professed religion through the old time conversion way, and the end is not in sight. As a result so far, our church will add thirty-six on profession and several by certificate—some of the leading men of the town. The other churches are reaping a harvest, too.

I never heard a more earnest, nor a more effective preacher of the gospel than Bob Jones. And he preaches the gospel of our fathers, the old-time word of life and power, and it has the old-time effect. His denunciations of the sins of the day are simply terrific. I never heard the like. He is without fear.

And his helpers are helpers indeed. Mr. Loren Jones has been pronounced by competent judges here among the music teachers of the faculty of the Normal School as one of the finest tenors they ever heard, and his wife is a splendid pianist and a great worker among the women, giving Bible lectures and doing personal work. What a magnificent evangelistic team these three make, and what a world of good they are doing up and down through the cities and towns of this nation of ours! Brethren, pray that the last few days may be the greatest days of the feast. Fraternally,

J. W. LEE.

Convalescence after pneumonia, typhoid fever and the grip, is sometimes merely apparent, not real. To make it real and rapid, there is no other tonic so highly to be recommended as Hood's Sarsaparilla. Thousands so testify. Take Hood's.—Adv.

Recipe For Gray Hair

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ½ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix at home at very little cost. Full directions for mixing and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually restore streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

You Will Write a Letter Like This

I wish I knew which one of the thousands of letters I receive would have the most weight with you, my friend. I can't quote all of them here, but I am going to ask you to read these carefully and then give me a chance to renew your health and make you write me one very much like them:

Barnard St., Savannah, Ga.
Mr. N. F. Shivar Shelton, S. C.

Dear Sir: I was suffering with indigestion, stomach and liver disorders and all the train of horrifying phenomena for several months. I had lived on milk, soft-boiled eggs, shredded wheat, a very insufficient diet for an active working man, and of course, from disease and starvation was in a very low state of nervous vitality and general debility. I ordered ten gallons of your Mineral Water, which I used continuously, ordering when necessary, and in four months gained twenty-nine pounds, was strong and perfectly well and have worked practically every day since. It acts as a general renovator of the system. I prescribe it in my practice and it has in every instance had the desired effects. It is essential to use this water in as large quantity as possible for its properties are so happily blended and in such proportion that they will not disturb the most delicate system. It is purely Nature's remedy.

A. L. R. AVANT, M.D.
Leeds, S. C.

I have tested your Spring Water in several cases of rheumatism, chronic indigestion, kidney and bladder troubles, and in nervous and sick headaches, and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time it will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the liver, kidneys and bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter.

C. A. CROSBY, M.D.

These are not selected cases, nor are the results unusual. I receive thousands like them from physicians, ministers, lawyers, merchants, farmers, manufacturers and every conceivable profession. I want the satisfaction of receiving such a letter from you. No matter what your complaint may be, dyspepsia, indigestion, nervous headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, or any curable ailment that has not responded to drugs, I invite you to match your faith in the Spring against my pocketbook. If the water fails to benefit you simply say so, return the empty demijohns, and I will promptly and willingly refund your money—every cent. Sign below:

Shivar Spring.

Box 17 C, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:—I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give it a fair trial in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and, if I report no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

NOTE.—"I have had the pleasure of serving the little church at Shivar Spring as Pastor for years, and am therefore well acquainted with Mr. Shivar and his associates, whom I gladly commend as an honorable business man and worthy of the confidence of the public. I have personally derived great benefit from the use of the Shivar Mineral Water and have knowledge of its beneficial effects in a great number and variety of cases."—Rev. A. McL. Pittman.

BEAUTIFUL 1920 SCRIPTURE TEXT CALENDAR FREE

The Georgia-Alabama Business College, Macon, Ga., is sending out absolutely free of charge a lovely Scripture text calendar for the year 1920. This calendar is illustrated with extremely beautiful color scriptural illustrations. Each monthly page carries one of these Scripture illustrations, such as "Jesus Blessing the Children," "The Star of Bethlehem," "Jesus Stilling the Tempest," "Christ and the Holy Women." There are twelve of these monthly page illustrations in full color, besides the full page illustration on the cover of the calendar. Every Christian worker should have one of these calendars. Each day in the month is shown in large figures and immediately under the figures is given the text for the day, except on Sundays. Each Sunday date gives the subject for the Sunday School lesson, Scripture reading and Golden Text. On the back of the calendar is given the standard time for each of the twelve divisions, and also is carried a 200 Year Reference Calendar, which enables one to select one of seven calendars for use in each of 200 years from 1800 to 2002. The price of these calendars is 30c and they are very cheap at the price, but they are being sent absolutely free to Christian workers, the only return courtesy that is asked being the sending to Georgia-Alabama Business College of the name and address of some prospective student who desires to take a business course in bookkeeping, shorthand, typewriting, commercial English etc. Write at once and get your calendar, giving the name of some prospective business student. In writing mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Less Me't if Back and Kidneys Hurt

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys If Bladder Bothers You.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder neys aren't acting right, or if bladder Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—Adv

FROM THE HILLS OF PONTOTOC.

Dear Brother Carley: Yes, we are in the hills, and red hills at that. The Lord is here with us, too. We feel that we are among His people. We see the marks of faithful work done on this charge by former pastors. Brother W. M. Young, my predecessor, is dearly loved by all classes of all denominations. They tell me that if I make as fine an impression as he did for the Cause, there will be no doubt of our success. Brother J. H. Holder did a work here in one year, before Brother Young, the fruits of which still abide. And that may be said of a long list of pastors who have served these people, because the history of Pontotoc Methodism dates back to 1836.

The Methodism of Pontotoc to-day is a substantial, progressive type. The officials attend to the business of the church with the same zeal and devotion that successful business men give to their private business. They magnify the Lord's cause by doing as Jesus said we should do—putting His work first.

They have increased the pastor's salary $300, and paid up for the first quarter. Also the presiding elder has been paid, and nearly one-third of the Conference collections. Since our coming here, a debt of $1000 on the parsonage has been raised.

Our presiding elder has been in our midst and made such an impression that I have heard from several sources that he will always command a full house of listeners when it is noised abroad that he is to preach.

The Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues are growing, and taking on definite work for the year, and a holy enthusiasm is possessing the entire church to go forward in the Master's service.

We attended the District Stewards' Meeting at Tupelo last week, and met 18 of the 20 preachers of the Aberdeen District there, also about 12 of the district stewards; $560 was added to the salary of the presiding elder, the Conference assessments were equitably distributed among the charges, and a delightful "get-together" meeting was held among the preachers, as we talked about the spiritual work to be done on our charges, and sought the fellowship and prayers of the brethren for the work ahead. The revival spirit is abroad among the preachers.

We gathered the following information about salary advancement over the district: Tupelo, advanced $600; Amory, $100; Okolona, $300; Houston, $300; Pontotoc, $300, Nettleton Circuit, $250; Verona, $125.

The welcome the brethren have given us into this Conference is one of the most cheering features of our ministerial life. From many old Millsaps students, both laymen and preachers, and every preacher brother we have met, we have received the most cordial welcome. With such fellowship, and that priceless fellowship we may have with Him who loved us so, we are strengthened to give our service unstinted to the promotion of the Kingdom of God.

Fraternally yours,
H. P. LEWIS.

FROM GLOSTER, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: On January 20, Brother J. R. Jones was with us at Gloster for our first quarterly meeting. Six churches out of the seven that constitute the charge now known as Gloster and Liberty and Mission, were represented in person by an official, and the seventh was represented by proxy. It was an interesting meeting. Brothers W. W. Simmons and E. C. Terry, a preacher in the Protestant Methodist Church, father of our W. A. Terry at McComb, were in attendance. Brother Simmons is in very good health and vitally interested in every phase of church work. He has already been a marked help to this little preacher. The main work of this conference was to get the charge adjusted. Mt. Vernon, of Mt. Vernon Mission, has been added to Gloster and Liberty, and two local preachers, Brothers C. A. Hastings and L. L. Stokes, have agreed to look after the remainder of the Mission, since Brother Jones has failed, so far, to get a preacher for Mt. Vernon Mission. Brother Jones impressed me as a little preacher's sympathetic and helpful brother rather than a presiding elder. He is a presiding elder, but is possessed with an unusually brotherly and kindly spirit. Having so much business connected with the conference, he did not preach, but helped us all by a talk on fruit-bearing.

Yes, we were met, too, at the depot and whisked to the parsonage. Brother E. S. Jackson, a good Baptist brother, did that part. Mrs. J. E. Brown, meeting the train and leading us to the Ford, while Mrs. E. S. Jackson kept the fire "chunked up" at the parsonage and met us with a smiling spirit. These, with other ladies, had us a warm dinner ready, and the people in general had the pantry pretty well stocked. These material blessings were appreciated, but the spirit behind them and the almost universal desire for a general revival and the many ways by which we have been encouraged by the people to expect it and look for it are the great incentives to move forward.

The Woman's Missionary Society at Gloster is alive and has already added to the furnishings of the parsonage. The three Sunday schools (at Gloster Liberty, and Mt. Vernon) are doing constructive work.

It has been several moons since the Lord has so signally blessed me as I have gone among the people talking of the Kingdom, reading the Word, and calling upon Him in prayer. All and in all, we have a most delicate and tremendous proposition ahead of us, but just the kind of a proposition that my Elder Brother waits to handle. Pray that I may get out of the way and let Him handle it!

I hear good things said of Brother Moore. He left good friends here, who follow him with love and prayers.

Just after we got well acquainted with Brother W. W. Cammack and wife, they moved to Fayette to reside near a brother, who married his wife's sister. All hated to give them up, they were such effectual church workers.

I earnestly solicit the prayers of the real pray-ers who may chance to read these lines. Happily moving on,

J. A. WELLS, P. C.

Neutralizes Uric Acid!

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a scientific combination of salts prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief; too much can not be spoken in behalf of 'Renwar' for rheumatism." Sold by druggists, price 50 cents, or by mail from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

"I Wasn't Getting an Egg ---Now Get 10 a Day"

"I received your 'More Eggs' Tonic and started giving it to my hens. I wasn't getting an egg; now I am getting 10 a day." So writes Mrs. Ernest Campbell, of Mineral, Va.

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. Reefer's "More Eggs" is a scientific tonic that revitalizes the flock and makes the hens lay all the time. "More Eggs" will double the production of eggs. Poultry raisers everywhere are making big profits by giving their hens "More Eggs." The results of a few cents' worth will amaze you.

If you send $1.00 to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 3251 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, today he will send you two large size $1.00 packages of "More Eggs"—one package being absolutely free on the special limited offer he is making now. The Million Dollar Merchants Bank of Kansas City, Mo., guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied, your dollar will be returned on request. So there is no risk. Send a dollar today on this free package offer. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv

CATARRH DOES HARM

Whether It Is of the Nose, Throat, or Other Organs, Get Rid of It.

Catarrh of the nose or throat when it becomes chronic weakens the delicate lung tissues, deranges the digestive organs, and may lead to consumption. It impairs the taste, smell and hearing, and affects the voice. It is a constitutional disease and requires a constitutional remedy.

Take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which by purifying the blood removes the cause of the disease and gives permanent relief. This alterative and tonic medicine has proved entirely satisfactory to thousands of families in three generations.

If there is biliousness or constipation, take Hood's Pills,—they are a thorough cathartic, a gentle laxative.

STILLMAN CREAM CO. Dept. 39 Aurora, Ill.

Woman's Missionary Society

All communications for this Department should be sent to Mrs. J. G. Snelling, 4721 Prytania St., New Orleans, La.

The Missionary Review Publishing Company of New York, is making a very attractive offer to the auxiliaries of the Woman's Missionary Society. Their publication is an illustrated interdenominational monthly record of Christian progress, and those who have used it find it indispensable to a thorough understanding of the conditions as they exist in the religious world. Its information can always be considered as absolutely reliable.

As it has proven so effective a link between the missionaries in home and foreign fields and the Christians at home, by reason of authoritative information, practical suggestions and inspirational material, Mrs. H. R. Steele heartily endorses this effort to increase its circulation.

The price is $2.50 for single copy or $2.00 in clubs of five. A commission of sixty cents is given on every subscription taken at $2.50, or a free subscription for every five in clubs. For every hundred subscriptions obtained by the combined efforts of our auxiliaries before February 1, we would thus receive $60 in cash to be applied to our Conference Treasury; also an additional bonus of $15, to pay for six yearly subscriptions to missionaries or any one else that we name. Mrs. Steele urges that we send every auxiliary president a subscription to the Review and pay for it from the local fund. If any auxiliaries wish to take this offer under consideration, I shall be glad to transmit the orders. Notice the time of expiration of offer.

MRS. R. H. WYNN,
Superintendent Study and Publicity,
Louisiana Conference.

P. S.—One hundred subscriptions to the Review would mean 100 Societies reached with missionary information, 1000 or more Christians inspired to pray, give and serve, six missionaries cheered monthly by its thrilling pages and $60 earned for the work of missions.

Mrs. Steele urges that every auxiliary make a present of a subscription to its president, the money to pay for it to come out of the local fund, as the President would be able to give out information and inspiration during the whole year.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Mrs. Olivia Browning, of Vivian, writes:

"We want a mission study class in our W. M. S. this year, and we want to begin early. I am so anxious that we look after the spiritual side of our work. We hope to make this the greatest year in the history of our organization."

Annual Meeting.

Doubtless many of the women who are interested in missions are glad of the nearness now of our Annual Meeting. Just a few weeks before the 24th, 25th, 26th and 27th of February, when, we trust, a great crowd shall gather at Lake Charles, La., to review the past year's work and to catch a vision for 1920. If your auxiliary has honored you by electing you as their delegate, get ready to go with joy and to return with overflowing enthusiasm.

December at St. Mark's Hall.

"Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace good will to men."

We look back over the month at St. Mark's Hall with a feeling of deep joy. To the friends who have done so much for us, who have given so much financial aid, so many good things to eat, so many clothes for the supply store and so many messages of encouragement, what shall we say? For all these gifts we are truly grateful, but for the love and interest that they manifest we are even more thankful. We wish you one and all a very happy New Year.

Christmas.

About 800 persons were ministered to under the auspices of St. Mark's. The Sunday school entertainment led the program, with a well filled church, and exercises and gifts enjoyed by all.

The boys' banquet was a great success; 150 were present. Dr. Bell presided, and toasts were responded to by Mr. Hoyt, Scout Executive of the city, and Mr. Bier, physical director of public schools. The Christmas story was given by Mrs. Geo. Brown.

One hundred and twelve attended the girls' banquet the following night. Mrs. Paul Saunders presided, and the Christmas story was given by Miss Mary Harvey, followed by Christmas carols and a drill by the girls themselves. The combined offering of these groups for Armenian Relief was $18.09.

The Camp Fire Girls served their dinner, prepared and cooked by the five Wood Gatherers, on their regular meeting night. They had previously met and baked a large supply of cookies, which were sent to the girls at Vashti Industrial school.

A hundred children were given tickets to the Doll and Toy Distribution. Each was delighted with the gift received. Sixty persons, including whole families, were invited to the Shriners' dinner and were royally entertained.

A group of carol singers gave a message of peace and joy to the people of our community early Christmas morning. Many came to tell us of their gratitude for the beautiful gospel message.

About fifty people had their Christmas dinners from baskets sent through the Hall. Special mention should be made of those sent by the Wesleyan Bible class of First Church Sunday school.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Using the secular press, Mrs. H. L. Talbert, Publicity Superintendent for the Clarksdale auxiliary, sends the following clipping from the Clarksdale Daily Register:

REMARKABLE PROGRESS SHOWN IN WORK OF LOCAL CHURCH WOMEN.

Various Women's Organizations of This Community are Adopting Plans to Govern in the Pursuit of the Labors Before Them for the New Year; Can Look Back with Pride to Accomplishments During Year.

By J. M. A.

Now that 1920 is here and the machinery of the New Year is beginning to run more smoothly, the various women's organizations in the churches are hard at work planning to meet the needs of the coming twelve months.

They can all look back with pride to their accomplishments during the year just past, for all organizations found it hard to fall into their former lines of work after having done Red Cross and other lines of war work for several years.

But during 1919 the following societies let themselves be heard from most favorably, not only in their local work, but in foreign fields. The Woman's Missionary Union of the Baptist Church, the Altar Society of the Catholic Church, the Methodist Woman's Missionary Society, the Presbyterian Aid Society and the Guild of the Episcopal Church.

For the past two weeks all the societies have been busily perfecting their plans for the New Year.

Perfection in Organization.

A scheme of organization has been planned by the Methodist ladies, which bids fair to make the other societies look to their laurels.

Under the presidency of Mrs. Wilmire, the membership of one hundred and twenty-five women has been divided into three circles, each having a leader.

Sage and Sulphur Darkens Gray Hair

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Restore Color, Gloss and Attractiveness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.—Adv.

BACKACHE ? RHEUMATISM ? RUN-DOWN ?

Those of us who are past middle age are prone to eat too much meat and in consequence deposit lime-salts in the arteries, veins and joints. We often suffer from twinges of rheumatism or lumbago, sometimes from gout, swollen hands or feet. There is no longer the slightest need of this, however, as the new Prescription of Dr. Pierce's, "Anuric," is bound to give immediate results as it is many times more potent than lithia, in ridding the impoverished blood of its poisons by way of the kidneys. It can be obtained at almost any drug store, by simply asking for Dr. Pierce's Anuric for kidneys or backache. It will overcome such conditions as rheumatism, dropsical swellings, cold extremities, scalding and burning urine and sleeplessness due to constant arising from bed at night.

If you wish to give 'Anuric' a trial send Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., ten cents for a trial package, also write for free confidential medical advice.

FROM AMITE CITY, LA.

Just a few words from Amite, La. We serve a people second to none in the Conference, I am sure. We arrived here soon after the closing of the session of the Conference, and found no parsonage, but our people took care of us until we could secure a parsonage. We got right busy, and soon purchased a splendid house, and we are now very happily domiciled in the same. Our people having owned and sold a parsonage in the past, had quite a lot of household goods stored at different places, the best of which they have assembled in the parsonage, and are taking such steps in all things as they think necessary to make the pastor and his wife comfortable. These good people have made us very glad that our lot has been cast among them.

The Board of Stewards have raised the pastor's salary $300 over that of last year, and they pay it monthly. Plans are already under way not only for a revival, but also for an evangelistic campaign as well.

The date of our meeting has been set for May 16, and we have set to work for a strong evangelist to help us in this great work. We expect to make our "Survey" in due time.

With the best of wishes, for a very happy and prosperous New Year, to the Editor, the Advocate, and all its readers, I am Cordially,

THOMAS H. MILLS, P. C.

APPRECIATIVE OF MRS. CAMMACK.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Gloster Methodist church having suffered an irreparable loss in the removal from our midst of Mrs. W. W. Cammack, who for eight treasured years has been the untiring, efficient, and consecrated President of our auxiliary, we wish to express our deep and abiding love for her, through the columns of the Advocate, and our true appreciation of her earnest, faithful work and her inspiring leadership.

During the eight years of Mrs. Cammack's presidency, the Society has held every monthly meeting save one—that of October, 1918, during the epidemic of influenza, when the County Health Officer had forbidden all gatherings. And in all this time she was absent from her chair only a half dozen times, sickness being the cause in every instance.

Her pure, white life, given to the service of others, her cheerful word of encouragement, and her unswerving loyalty to every call of her church, has been a daily appeal to each of us to live more nobly.

Our hearts are torn and grieved because of her leaving and we follow her into her new field (Fayette, Miss.), with tender wishes and loving prayers.

May she and her saintly companion find only joy and peace resting beside their new hearth-fire and may the Everlasting Arms hold them close, is the earnest prayer of the members of this Society.

Signed by Mrs. J. E. Brown, Mrs. E. S. Jackson, Mrs. J. M. Whittington.

TOPISAW CHARGE.

This new year finds us back with the good people of Topisaw charge. We were pleasantly surprised on New Year's morning when the people came from every direction. At the noon hour a bountiful feast was spread on the table, after suitable services led by Brothers R. Z. and Ira Felder and Mrs. Mae Felder. Every one was filled, and more than twelve baskets were left for pastor and family, besides groceries too numerous to mention. Several social hours were enjoyed in the afternoon.

The Woman's Missionary Societies are taking care of that part of the work that is assigned to them. They have placed several articles in the parsonage.

The Board of Stewards are on the job, and indications are that the pastor's salary will be raised over last year. This is due to wide-awake laymen like Brother R. Z. Felder and others.

attended to by the General Financial Director, Mrs. E. J. Mullens, who has a financial chairman and committee in each of the three circles. She has been so wonderfully successful with similar work in the past that the society has no fears for its financial future. This leaves the president free to carry forward her heart's desire of stressing the spiritual side of the work during this New Year. To further this work, Mrs. H. S. Talbert has been appointed Chairman of Mission study classes and Mrs. T. D. Greenhaw, Chairman of Bible Study classes.

To assure good attendance the General Attendance Director, Mrs. H. H. Hopson, has appointed a chairman and committee in each of the three circles; and these ladies send written invitations to their members each week. A book for registration is kept at each meeting and the absent ones noted and inquired about.

The General Membership Chairman, Mrs. T D. Greenhaw, and her committees in each circle, visit every newcomer of Methodist inclinations and give a cordial invitation to join the society. The General Treasurer, Mrs. W. B. Nichols, looks after all dues, pledges and mission offerings.

With Mrs. House for Vice-President, Mrs. W. K. Herrin for Corresponding Secretary and Mrs. Ernest Moore for Recording Secretary, the forces of this mighty circle have gone to work to build up the spiritual side of their lives and the lives of those whom they meet. How can they fail to succeed with such a perfectly organized membership? Their success in meeting all financial obligations of the past year is a record they may well be proud of, for in the building of their handsome church the women gave a $7500 organ and a great many other things needed.

IS GENIUS ESSENTIAL TO SUCCESSFUL LIVES? NOT THAT HISTORIES RECORD.

Men often complain that they do not possess the genius which nature gave to other men who succeed. "All rot," observes Joseph H. Odell in Association Men for January, writing on "The High Cost of Loafing."

"Note," he says, "what some of the greatest men have to say on that point:

"Lord Macaulay, who sometimes wrote on his histories for twelve hours at a sitting, said: 'I have made myself what I am by intense labor.' When Turner, the celebrated artist, was asked the secret of his tremendous success, he replied that he 'had no secret but hard work.' John Ruskin wrote: 'When I hear a young man spoken of as giving promise of high genius the first question I ask about him is, always: 'Does he work?' Byron said: 'The only genius that I know anything of is to work sixteen hours a day.' Dickens, the novelist, made a similar confession: 'My imagination would never have served me as it has but for the habit of commonplace, humble, patient, daily toil.' Speaking of himself, Alexander Hamilton said: 'People sometimes attribute my success to genius. All the genius I know anything about is hard work.' Daniel Webster, at seventy years of age, said in an address: 'Work made me what I am. I never ate a bit of idle bread in my life.' The man who made the most far-reaching scientific discovery of all time, Isaac Newton, left this record: 'If I have done the public any service it is due to nothing but industry and patient thought.'"

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WHAT WE MAKE IT.

A good many of us have been wondering what the new year has in store for us. We have thought, perhaps, that some unforeseen event might occur which would lighten our burdens, double our joys, and speed us through the passing months by a shining way, with music in our hearts. It may be so; but the chances are that the year will be exactly what we make it—no more, no less. We would not have it otherwise. It adds zest to life to know that we can get out of it what we put into it—and to know that we can put into it whatever we will. This year of our Lord, 1920, will be a good year for us—if we make it so.

POOR PACKAGES.

We were greatly interested the other day in reading a statement to the effect that American export business is greatly handicapped in comparison with European competition by reason of the fact that goods from other markets are better packed and placed in better containers than are similar products from America. This is merely an item in the problem of trade development, but it is suggestive of an important consideration in a much higher realm. Diamonds in the rough have great value in themselves, but it is only after they have been cut and polished that they are looked upon as works of art, to be eagerly sought after and purchased at a great price. Goodness itself should be made to appear in as desirable guise as possible. The "pillar saints" of the early centuries were doubtless sincere and conscientious in the contempt they showed for their physical appearance and well-being—but their example does not commend itself very highly to people of esthetic tastes to-day. Goodness is commendable for itself alone; but courtesy of manner and graciousness of address enhance its value as an appropriate setting does a beautiful stone. If the agents of evil find it profitable to disguise themselves as angels of light, those who would do good cannot afford to discard the habiliments of virtue. Appearances are often deceitful—but an unnecessary burden is assumed by those who are content to appear worse than they are. The package is not everything—but it is worth something.

AGRICULTURAL DEVELOPMENT.

In the last analysis, the material prosperity of the South depends upon the proper development of its agricultural resources. We have timber and mines, and manufacturing enterprises are becoming more and more common; but our chief source of wealth is in our fertile fields. It is not to our credit that we have waited so long even to begin to realize how great are the riches at our command; but we are beginning to realize it and, doing so, we are beginning a process of agricultural development that will inevitably make this section a veritable storehouse of food supplies for the world. One of the first steps in this development is the establishment of agricultural schools and colleges that will adequately prepare our young men, and young women, too, for the work that must be done to secure the proper utilization of these vast resources at our very doors. In this connection we desire to commend most heartily the movement now under way in Louisiana to provide a "Greater Agricultural College." A definite campaign is being made to secure the means for the establishment of an institution that will be second to none in the land in equipment and in facilities for training its students in both the theory and the practice of agriculture. It will cost some millions of dollars to do all that needs to be done—but those millions should be forthcoming. We are not afraid of taxation for such a cause as this as a part of the great educational system that is to be, and we believe our people generally will respond gladly to the appeal for liberal appropriations by the General Assembly for the support of such an institution. Assuming that there will be wisdom in administration, the only money wasted in the development and enlargement of our educational institutions is the money that is not spent. We believe this statement holds good all the way from the public school to the university. The time has come for us to quit playing at education and go to work at it seriously and earnestly.

BURIED TREASURE.

Every now and then, the report is circulated that a long-buried treasure, secreted ages ago by a noted pirate or band of notorious outlaws, has been found by some eager searcher. Following the report, almost invariably there is a widespread interest in searching for such treasure, and many misguided persons spend time and money in the effort to locate the hiding place of other ill-gotten gains. The hope of sucess can be only remote at the best, and the possible reward is all out of proportion to the time and labor involved. But there is a buried treasure that may be found by any one who is willing to dig for it, that is worth infinitely more than the cost of its acquisition. Talents lie hidden in every life that need only to be brought to light to enrich not only the possessor, but also scores of others as well. These talents —many of them—are rarer than rubies and more precious than the jewels of Golconda. They were not hid away, either, by thieves and robbers, but were bestowed as a gift by One who intended that they should be the full possession of those to whom they were given. The tragedy of too many lives is in their undiscovered talents. We are prone to look to far-off places for the things we desire, when they lie at our very doors. The buried treasure that we should be seeking for is the treasure we ourselves have hidden beneath the surface of long years of indifference and neglect. Our poverty is of our own choosing, and our fate is our own fault. If we will be all that we are potentially, Croesus were a pauper in comparison.

THEY ARE RIGHT.

We have taken occasion more than once to express the opinion that horse racing as it is conducted in New Orleans is an evil that ought not to be tolerated by the city itself, or by the State if the city will not act in its own defense. The plea that the races bring thousands of visitors to the city is offset by the character of many of those visitors, whose presence, according to current newspaper reports, certainly is not an asset to the community. It is worth nothing, in this connection, that the very number of these visitors makes impossible the entertainment of other visitors whose presence would confer a distinct honor upon the city. For example, it is well known that the Joint Commission on the Unification of Methodism would have held its recent meeting in New Orleans if sufficient hotel accommodations had been available—and it is equally well known that the hotels are largely pre-empted at this season of the year by followers of the races. But our purpose now is to call attention to views of the races as they were given at the meeting of the Young Men's Business Club of New Orleans last week. We quote some of the opinions expressed by leading members of the Club as they were stated in the press reports of the meeting: "There is not a man here who does not know what a temptation the handbooks (arrangements for betting) are to boys. If for no other reason than to remove temptation from the boys, I believe we should abolish racing." "When you pick up every newspaper and see how many are ruined by the races, I believe that even the men who can control themselves would be willing to sacrifice the pleasure they get out of the races, to save others by abolishing the races." "There are so many attendant evils in having the races here that the only way to abolish these evils is to abolish the races themselves." These men are right in the position they have taken. Racing as it is conducted now—and it is generally admitted that it cannot be conducted without gambling—ought to be abolished. The good people of the State have a right to make themselves heard on this question, and we hope they will speak out in no uncertain tones. The next session of the General Assembly should send horse racing after John Barleycorn.

MESSAGES FROM MARS.

Scientists are now discussing the possibility of the transmission of wireless messages to distant planets and the establishment of communication with the inhabitants of those far-off spheres. We do not presume to have any knowledge of what the future may have in store for us as a result of the marvelous discoveries and achievements yet to be made; but we have long known that a Voice has been calling to us from the vast reaches of infinite space. While men are wondering if they can construct a tower high enough to hurl its waves of electric energy out to the rim of the universe, with equipment delicate enough to catch the vibrations that have swept through countless millions of miles, they have but to pause a moment to realize that their souls may be attuned to the music that makes melodious the courts of Heaven, and that they may start in their own hearts a song that will be heard to the uttermost shores of eternity. We may or may not be able to bridge the space between earth and Mars; but we know already that God speaks to men and that men may speak to him.

new upon the earth. Since the days of David, and seemingly a long while before, they thrived to the discomfort of the weak saints and the generally uninformed. At least David knew them well. When the planets are rolling around in the immensity of space above us, like giants playing football, and strange phenomena appear in the skies, it is mighty comforting to know sometbing of Him who has charge of things too large for our management, and to be able to say with David, "The Lord is my keeper." Things may and do tumble around above us, but the ancient Hebrew bard declares that "the sun shall not smite thee by day, nor the moon by night." "I will botb lay me down in peace and sleep." The true scientist, in tbe face of the immensity of space filled with revolving planets and changing worlds, is not disturbed. He knows that the power that made them all, can also control them. He is content to study them in all their course to find, if be may, not only bow God made tbem, but aiso how He manages them. He, with the devout Psaimist, declares "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth His handlwork. Day unto day uttereth speech and night unto nlght showeth knowledge."

And let it here be aiso said that this matter of the ending of the world and the coming of Hls kingdom is so largely misapprehended as to be a fruitful source of blind superstition to many. The mlraculous and spectacular ending of time and material things with some mighty catastrophe is the product of a popular misconception of tbe Orientai metaphors used by St. John in the Revelations. Jesus plainly taught his misunderstanding disciples that his kingdom was spiritual, and that it "comes not by observation, but is in you." Sinco the day of Pentecost, Hls kingdom has come, is coming, and will continue to come to the day of its completeness and the spiritualizing of all tbings. The mighty warfare of the dragons and beasts is but the titanic conflict of forces and ideas, ideals and forces which to-day are playing about us in the development of a civllization in the which He is and shall be the center and tbo Universal King it is the making of a "new earth and a new heaven." He did come quickly back, and is coming mightlly, and will come more gloriously till tho day of His perfected coming and the complete subjugation of all things unto Himself. The picture being painted by this long and tedious process will be finished as seen by John on the Isle. He peered through the conflicts of the ages and beheld the glorious and triumphal ending in the perfected plan of saving tbe lost world.

AT LAST, A SUPERANNUATE.

Dear Brother Carley: The Mississippi Conference, at its last session, superannuated me. What do you think of that? Several of the brethren have told me they were greatly surprised. It was not forced on me; I asked for it. It appears that I am almost always turning up something that nobody is looking for. When I was sent to the penltentiary two years ago, some of the brethren wore overwhelmed with amazement. George H. Thompson told me that he had felt sure for several years that I would come to some bad end, but that he had never once dreamed of my breaking into the penitentiary. It seems impossible for me to do anything without making my brethren gasp with astonishment. I suspect that some of them would say, if I were to die, that Adams has at last done a normal and sensible thing. But let it be distinctly understood between you and me that I am not hankering after any commendations of my good sense on that line. No, sir; by no means. I intend to let dle be the last thing I do—I have definitely and decidedly made up my mind to that. There is no use whatever for any brother to argue that matter with me. I serve notice on one and all of them that it will be time killed and breath wasted to try to change me.

I feel so inexpressibly strange at being a superannuate tbat I have been inwardly moved closely and critically to examine myself to see what it means. Wbat led up to this let-down? The history of the wbole case covers forty-five years. On Sept. 30, 1874, I was married. I was desperately and distressingly poor—in purse, but not in avoirdupois. I borrowed the money to buy the license to marry. I was married in a suit of clothes I bought on a credit. I had nothing in the wide world but a wife. Wasn't that a startling beginning? Don't you tbink my wife deserves a crown as an heroine of faith? I believe she deserves a place with the worthies given in the 11th chapter of Hebrews. All I have been as an itinerant preacher I owe, under God, to her. God knew my hot and turbulent nature, and gave me a holy and heavenly-minded woman to pull me through and up. It has proved to be the best gift the Lord ever made me, save that of his Son. In gratitude for tbis great gift it has been a joy to give my life to him.

Some wonderful consequences followed our marriage. In the following montb, I was licensed to preach; in the next month, I was admitted on trial by the Mississippi Conference. Tben began a life of undreamed-of privations and hardships. I rode my first circuit afoot. The second year I rented a pony, paid $25 for its use, and received about $165 quarterage. On this small salary I had to, and did, feed and clothe my wife, self and baby. Some close cutting there, Henry, to make the cloth cover our naked needs. Our fourth child was born on the first work that ever paid me over $200. Wasn't that going some, and then some more? My! those were sorely trying years! My heart almost failed, but my wife was unshaken. "Go on," was her constant cry. I knew I could make money and support her comfortably. I urged her to give her consent to quit. But she always said, "I cannot, in the fear of God, agree for you to quit." She, feeling sure tbat God had called me to preach, would tell me that she would rather live in hard conditions and risk everything with God, than to live in luxury, out of duty.

During all those first ten years tbe trials were fiery, and the waters were deep. But our Father in heaven brought us through without hurt. He gave sufficient grace. We thank God for trying us so severely. We were tested and proved. While we are thankful for them, all of them, we are specially thankful that they are all in the past. May the Lord shield us from all such in the future! Let all the brethren say, Amen!

During all those trying years I tried almost every legitimate means to keep going. I hoed cotton for $1 a day; I taught school; I sold goods behind counters; I wrote for newspapers—anything to make money to keep mo doing my Master's work. What saved me was that my wife and I promised that we would never owe anything to any one but love. If we had ever forgotten that vow, wreck and ruin would certainly have come. But we held firm and won out. Thank God, no man can look me in the face and say, "You owe me and will not pay." In the Great Day, I am determined, God helping me, to stand unabashed in the presence of the Judge and the assembled multitudes.

More than thirty years ago I was profoundly convicted that no man can prosper in soul or purse if he should withhold from God what is his. Since then I have been tithing. Beginning with the tithe, I soon came to look upon it as a privilego to give God something. I never doubted that I owed him the tithe. As a loving son, I found it a joyous experience to go beyond paying the debt, and giving out of my nine-tenths all I could spare. This course has given me great pleasure, and I have prospered. It pays to be liberal with the Lord. I promised the Lord many years ago to stay by him if he would take me under his wings. My fear of bishops and presiding elders all passed away. They have given me some very hard jolts, but they have never downed me. When I was 66 years of age, I was sent to the hardest problem in the Conference. The church had fallen down tho year before I went there, having paid 65 per cent on all claims. In the pulpit I gave them to understand that I paid my debts and expected them to do likewise. I prayed that the Lord would come down with a big stick and crack the members on the head and wake them up. The church waked up and paid 100 per cent on all claims. I gave tbe Lord about 25 per cent of what was mine, and came out with about $600 clear money. It pays to be honest with the Lord.

Brother Carley, I must stop. In my next I will say what I had in mind to say when I started this. If Sam Steel and Tom Holloman don't take up all the space in this week's Advocate, please publish this; if everything is full, drop this in the waste-basket.

Fraternally,

T. W. ADAMS.

BECOMING A SLAVE.

By Chaplain Johns, of the Louisiana State Prison.

Who wishes to become a slave? Of course, it is not called slavery, but it is slavery nevertheless, and the worst of it is, the persons so becoming bring this awful condition upon themselves.

All this happens right here in free America, and sunny Louisiana!

To be debarred of one's liberty, to say for a term of years or life, "You must remain hidden away from the outer world, you must rise early, and work at hard labor, on common food, wear a uniform of dishonor, and be subject to other men's orders—all without pay"—this is slavery.

Do you know of any one wishing such a job? While none are "wishing" such jobs, many are doubtless "candidating" for just such a position at the present time!

Let any one stand at the gate of the Receiving Station in Baton Rouge, or the gate of any other State prison and watch the crowds that come continually: Will the stream never cease? Will the awful tragedy ever come to an end? Mothers, fathers, wives and children left behind, many of them to struggle in poverty, children to remain out of school, and every other sort of misfortune to happen!

Recently one of the prisoners here received a telegram that his mother had just died. He desired to attend the funeral and gaze once more upon the mother who had advised him to lead a better life, to tell her he had reformed and would never grieve her heart again. Of course, she would not be able to bear it, but it would afford him some relief. His request could not be considered, as he was "sold unto bondage unto the State" by his own voluntary act!

Therefore, tbe purpose of this article is to warn people everywhere: sin, dishonesty, hot tempers resulting in murders, getting revenge, all forms of vice and immorality, tbe lack of self-control, will surely bring about this state of slavery referred to in the captlon of this article.

If you know any one "candidating" for the penitentiary, stop him, if you can. Have a straight talk with him, tell him the truth. Drinking whiskey, it is hoped, will soon be a thing of the past. Pistol carrying and pistol selling should be prohibited. The handy pistol gets its victims by the score.

"QUOTH THE RAVEN, 'NEVER MORE.'"

By Brother T. B. Holloman

While sitting, looking pensively into the fire this morning, Mrs. H. waked me from reverie with the question, "Isn't it time you were sending another article to the Advocate?" I wasn't thinking of Poe, nor of the raven over his chamber door; but somehow out it popped out, "Never more — that hopper's already choked with copy from this quarter." Now she has a book into which she has for years put all my vaporings, and for desire for more clippings, or, perhaps, spoiled by that Utica subscriber, she jogged my memory. Really I suspect that my frequent references of late to the splendid paper you are giving us suggested that I ought to write and tell you so. Now that's no joke; but seriously, I did say monopolies are against the law and more than an appearance once in two weeks might subject me to action under the Sherman Bill, and, perhaps, a closing down of the Advocate for complicity. Then, too, there are other Priscillas who doubtless like to see their husband's names in print. By the way, Henry (my boys call you that for old Millsaps' sake), a reader of the Advocate—yes, and an intelligent reader—said to me recently, "I always look to see if you and Dr. Steel have anything in my paper, and if so I read both, but yours first." Now, Sam, I'm one ahead of you—wasn't that tutti frutti or just taffy, which?

"Into each life some rain must fall, some days be dark and dreary," but these January days seem resolved to fill us to overflowing with their weepings—rain, rain, rain. I recall a little four-year-old of many years ago flattening his nose against the window-pane, saying, "Rain, rain, pour down, rain," believing such apostrophe (?) would cause it to stop; Aunt Dina said it would.

My last had just been posted to you when the Advocate came containing that letter from Brother M. S. Enochs telling of that District Stewards' meeting in Capitol Street, which was a memorable one—I had already heard of it through our Brother C. L. Ray, of Canton.

To those of us who know the man and have been reading after him these many years, those articles of Dr. J. W. Boswell's are interesting and inspiring; his last recalls the communications of Bishop Stuntz on "The Pastor Who Wins," quoted from the Central Christian Advocate in your issue of January 1, and that of Brother A. A. Clark's, "If I were a Preacher," in last issue, all of which remind me of a book which has been in my library for fifteen years, and has just been read—and how much I have missed as a pastor in passing it by! I am not certain of my authority, but I think it was President Wilson who said, "The history of a people is in the lives of its great men." We know that the history of the early church is largely in the recital of the deeds and sufferings of the Apostles. When a man's life has been concededly a success, it is not only worthy of reading but it is profitable as well. Such was the life of Dr. John Matthews, long-time pastor in New Orleans, who gives us so many peeps into success through his "Peeps Into Life." As an autobiography, of course there is much that would not interest the average reader, but those experiences which he recites are so paralleled by all pastors that the book becomes a pleasure, and for rainy day reading—well, from 9 in the morning to 9 at night found us (we two) reading much of our own experiences in the pastorate and enjoying it to the full. If the boys of the Mississippi Conference will permit, I would say get the book and read it as the recital of a life not only full of interest but one of the most successful pastors in our Southern Methodism.

Under the head of Obituaries, Rev. W. G. Henry writes uniquely, briefly and comprehensively of Mrs. B. E. Meigs. Pages could not have told more of that character—conciseness is a gift, and Henry has it. But lest I come under the condemnation of Brother Lowrey pleading for a readable church paper, I do well to close. Keep up those brief, spicy Editorial Paragraphs—feed us on meat.

THE INTERCHURCH WORLD MOVEMENT.

At the recent Atlantic City Conference of the Interchurch World Movement there were eighteen hundred persons registered, of which number thirty-six recorded themselves as members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. This group, composed of eight editors of Conference organs, two bishops, secretaries and members of the General Boards of Missions and Church Extension and Education, and others, held three meetings.

The following committee was appointed to prepare a statement concerning the Interchurch World Movement for publication in the church press: James Cannon, Jr., W. W. Pinson, Miss Belle H. Bennett, A. C. Millar, W. B. Beauchamp, and Stonewall Anderson. The statement of the committee follows:

"We recognize in the Interchurch World Movement an agency of vast possibilities for good, in the development of unity of spirit and of genuine practical co-operation among the Protestant denominations of the United States. The ideal of the whole church united in carrying the gospel to the whole world is wonderfully inspiring and appealing. Moreover, we consider it to be both scriptural and practicable. We believe that the needs of the world to-day are so pressing, so appalling, that they demand a degree of power and of efficiency on the part of the Protestant church which can be most effectually secured only by the co-operation of all.

"In spite of mistakes incident to inaugurating such an unprecedented movement, and notwithstanding the problems yet to be solved, we are hopeful that under divine guidance, and with the genuine spirit of Christian co-operation, mistakes will be corrected, difficulties overcome, and that this movement will perform a tremendous service. This can be done by a thorough, world-wide survey, discovering and grouping the facts concerning the world's needs and by developing an educational and inspirational program, based on these facts, resulting in the development of spiritual power and the consecration of money and of life service, adequate to meet the needs.

"In this Atlantic City conference, the aim and the scope of the Movement have been clearly defined. It is shown to be distinctly an agency of the denominations. Its aim is to facilitate the efficient co-operation of the denominations, and not in any sense to displace denominational organizations. It explicitly leaves in the hands of the churches the determination of policies and the administration of missionary and educational enterprises. In its survey the Movement confines its service to ascertaining the facts and to presenting the needs indicated by these facts, to the churches and emphasizing the opportunity of meeting these needs through a wise combination of effort, and by division of work where necessary, thus preventing wasteful duplications.

"We are greatly impressed by the response of so many great organizations to this effort to secure united endeavor to win the world for Christ. Already over one hundred different Boards, representing over twenty-five denominations have affiliated themselves together in this Movement, to study and to plan to meet the responsibility laid upon His church by the Master "to disciple all nations." This manifestation of a realization of responsibility and of a unity of purpose seems to be the beginning of a new epoch in Protestant church life. While recognizing that the survey of conditions and facts presented to this Conference is of necessity incomplete, and subject to revision and amendment, yet we record it as our conviction that the total amount of its budget indicated, $1,320,000,000 for five years, is amply justified by the present pressing needs of the various fields surveyed, by the great latent capacities and the supernatural resources of the Christian church, and by the evident leading of the Spirit of God in national and world events. Too long has the church measured its gifts and its service, not by the needs of the world, but by the weak faith and contracted vision of a divided church, which has never squarely faced its responsibilities for the whole world.

"The Interchurch World Movement presents world facts and consequent world duties which demand a world program by a united church. When men are honestly and earnestly working under the same Master, to accomplish a common task, ignorant isolation and indifferent independence are alike impossible. Sincere, intelligent, brotherly co-operation must be characteristic of all laborers together with God. While maintaining absolutely the determination of policies and the administration of all our missionary, educational and other church enterprises, we believe that our people can secure great profit by a hearty co-operation, through the Interchurch World Movement, in the making of adequate surveys of the world's needs, and in carrying forward an educational and inspirational program.

"While it is not practicable for our church to join in any campaign for funds at the present time, yet we do believe there can be practical co-operation of all the churches in the immediate evangelistic campaign for the next three months, involving, as it does, not only a great ingathering of souls, but also the pressing of the ideals of stewardship and life service, and of necessity the conservation of the work already done in our Centenary Campaign."

Signed by James Cannon, Jr., A. C. Millar, Stonewall Anderson, W. B. Beauchamp, Belle H. Bennett, W. W. Pinson.

THE UNIFICATION COMMISSION—A STATEMENT BY DR. J. E. DICKEY.

There appeared in the daily papers of Wednesday morning, Jan. 21, 1920, a press dispatch, dated Louisville, Ky., Jan. 20, 1920, to the effect that the Joint Commission on Unification had adopted unanimously a plan for the unification of the two great Methodisms of the United States.

The day following (Thursday) Dr. J. E. Dickey, a member of the Commission from the M. E. Church, South, and one of the leading members of the North Georgia Conference, pastor of First Church, Atlanta, published a statement regarding this dispatch, giving the public certain facts which he considered essential as to keeping the public informed, where misinformed, regarding the issues at stake.

I am glad to be able to give the statement of Dr. Dickey in full for the information of the Methodist people, and others interested, through the columns of the Mississippi press as well as the organ of the Conferences of Mississippi.

The statement is as follows:

"The Joint Commission of the M. E. Church, and the M. E. Church, South, recently in session at Louisville, Ky., agreed to transmit to the General Conferences of their respective churches a plan of unification by reorganization, but the Commission did not recommend the said plan to them for adoption.

"The plan to be transmitted was not satisfactory to either Commission as a whole, and it was publicly agreed in the Joint Commission that members of the Commission voting either in separate commissions or in joint session, to transmit the plan to the General Conferences did not by that act, in any sense, indorse the same.

"In accord with the above understanding, the commissioners of the M. E. Church voted unanimously to transmit the plan. The commissioners of the M. E. Church, South, with the same understanding, voted, 19 to 5, in favor of the motion to transmit.

"As a member of the Southern Commission, I feel that I ought to make the foregoing statement in view of the fact that the press dispatches from Louisville are misleading."

WHICH SHALL IT BE?

By Rev. James H. Felts.

"By faith Abram, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive as an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out not knowing whither he went." But he had great faith in God.

"He that hateth his brother walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth." But he is a sinner, wanting in faith and good works.

"Quo Vadis, Domine?" is familiar to many of us—how the erring servant met the Master, was rebuked, returned to Rome to suffer.

Many of us have been watching tendencies for a few years. We have wondered what the end would be. Our faith has staggered. We have seen sin rampant, bold, flaunting itself in the face of decency with utter disregard of consequences. We have seen decency cater to the demands of indecency till we wondered if insanity had become epidemic. Some of us recall the warning from the sacred desk by men of great ability a few years since. The late Sam P. Jones told us in language not to be misunderstood what would follow the dance. It has followed. The church practically put the seal of her approval on this social outrage during the world war. The Y. M. C. A. became a dance hall as well as a gospel dispenser. It is even said by those who know that "our girls were forced to dance twice to three times per week. They nearly danced them to death." I have not heard that the Salvation Army girls were forced to dance. We are all familiar with the relative standing of the two institutions among returned soldiers. The one yielded to the demand of the world—the other functioned only as a religious institution. The "Y" practically represented the Protestant church. The world put one over on us.

We have seen church membership mean less and less, till it has become a question in the heart of many people as to whether it is an institution worth joining or not. They see little if any improvement in the life of those who do join—why should they join? Men remain members of our churches who are guilty of deeds that bring them under the social ban. Woe unto the minister who seriously protests.

We have seen faith, so-called, become so evanescent, so spineless a thing as to be despised. In some of the colleges of the South certain leaders glory in doubt—deem it a mark of super-intelligence. They still belong to the church.

We have seen our sons and daughters "pull stunts" that would not be permitted, under the public eye, our cats and dogs, yet they remain members of the church. Vital godliness is still found in individuals, thank God, but too many of the church crowd are utter strangers to the witness of the Spirit.

They, to all intents and purposes, discard the fundamentals of Christian faith.

We have seen home life gradually disintegrate, parental authority become a byword, marriage less and less a thing to be held sacred—and such an outbreak of licentiousness as has hardly been known since the days of Rome. We have seen the revival spirit sicken unto death—just a few fires burning to remind us that there is still "power in the blood." Are we in the throes of spiritual death?

We have seen a great World War fought, and the powers of darkness, force, oppression, world lust, brought to their knees. We have seen a great Peace Conference, with all its difficulties, bickering, strife of tongues, that was epochal. We have felt the thrill of a great world call, responding with millions of money and increased forces of men. We have found the pulse-beat of truth under the millions of unrest—the desire for larger, better things, though poorly expressed in most cases. We have seen money become a more sacred trust despite the orgies of spending, the saturnalian festivals knowing no hours of rest. We have observed that men are thinking of missions in terms large enough to bring hope. We have been all but dazed at the spirit of the secular press, wondering why editorials were teeming with thoughts worthy of a place in our greatest church papers. We have been amazed to hear a call for an "old-fashioned revival" from the editorial pages of the Manufacturers Record, and many of our great dailies scarcely less insistent in their plea for better things. Some of us have knelt by the bedside of young men, fellows full of hope and desire, and seen them slip out into the other country with a victory smile and words of good cheer, manifesting a sheer courage so heartening that we were shamed that there had ever been a doubt. This writer has knelt in the circle of a body of college girls, bright, splendid young women, life looking mighty good to them, yet the lure of the world forgotten. He heard, "Lord, here am I, send me where thou wilt. I am ready to go to the ends of the earth if thou wilt direct." By faith Abram went that way before them.

We have seen John Barleycorn outlawed, Prohibition written into the Constitution of the United States. Every officer, municipal, county, State, taking an oath, as they all do, to support the Constitution, swears to fight old John. We have seen an awakened interest in revivals, and despite the even unhappy differences obtaining, the promise of larger, better things. Some of us look with sad hearts at the prospect of a long war of words, the bitter unrest, even the falling away that is likely to come with the renewed effortz at church union. But when we remember that Jesus Christ is being written into the hearts of men, the literature of men, the art of men, the thinking of men, the plans of men as never before in the history of the world—well, faith is not ancient history, hope is not deferred to the extent of making the heart sick, brotherhood is not a misnomer, world peace is no pipe dream, and the day of his power is not a thing just to be talked about. I try to look at both sides—and am an optimist, by the grace of God. It's reconstruction, brethren, and Christ is to be in it as never before. Lord, teach us how to wait as well as pray.

Columbus, Miss.

CONCERNING UNIFICATION.

1. I am in favor of unification.

2. I do not believe that the time for unification has arrived, because the Northern Church has about 350,000 Negro members who, in my opinion, will be a disturbing element if the Churches are united at this time.

3. I stand with the five members of the Southern Commission who voted "No," because the plan recognizes the principle of proportionate negro representation, and I do not believe that Negroes should be granted this right or privilege. It is true that negro representation by the present plan is limited to five per cent, but if their membership should increase to above that ratio, they could logically, and I think they would, insist on a continuance of proportionate representation to any extent whatever.

I assisted in framing the plan which is being submitted, and believe that it is the most satisfactory plan that can be proposed at this time.

If the Southern Church decides to concede the principle of proportionate negro representation, I shall abide by the decision; but personally I am opposed to it.

"WHAT WILL WE DO WITH THE FORGOTTEN MAN?"

We hear quite a lot about the needs of the church, and no doubt they are many. One of the most popular ones at this time, perhaps, is the expected revival—this has always been the one thing that we wanted and needed. In fact, the great church which we love was born on such an occasion, and no church can be healthy without it. Now as to just how we may bring it about, is the thing that we are trying to solve. We find quite a number of different opinions as to method; I am inclined to agree with the old prophet when he said," When Zion moves, sons and daughters will be born into the kingdom." Now, if this saying be true, Zion is not moving, as but few are coming in.

What is the remedy? Are we doing our duty to our church? I think that we can never expect to see a great revival such as we would like to see until we take care of our superannuates as we should. The North Mississippi Conference is trying to do this, and we are in the field expecting to raise an Endowment Fund of $265,000. I want to ask each layman in our great Conference to make as large a contribution as possible to help meet this debt we owe to our forgotten men and their families. Will not all of the Missionary Societies make some kind of an offering? One has already done so.

Do not wait for me as your field agent to come to see you, as it will be impossible for me to see you all, but just send me check; my address is Durant, Mississippi, Box 155. Yours for Christ,

A. C. McCORKLE, Agent.

FAITHFULNESS.

We ought to become holy in the state in which Providence has placed us; instead of making projects of goodness in the future; and we need the greatest faithfulness to God in the smallest things. That state of life to which God has called us is safe for us, if we fulfill all our duties therein. Accustom yourself to adore His holy will frequently, but humbly submitting your own to His orders and His Providence. Let us do what we know He requires of us, and, as soon as we know His will, let us not spare ourselves, but be very faithful to him. Such faithfulness ought not merely to lead us to do great things for His service, but whatever our hand finds to do, and which belongs to our state of life. The smallest things become great when God requires them of us; they are small only in themselves; they are always great when they are done for God, and when they serve to unite us with Him eternally.—Francois De La Mothe Fenelon.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions since our last report: Rev. B. F. Jones, Lumberton, Miss., 4; Rev. G. B. A GREAT

Simultaneous Revival Campaign

To Mark The Crest of the CENTENARY

While the Joint Evangelistic Committee has never dictated how, when, or where any pastor should hold his meetings, the suggestion of a great simultaneous campaign just prior to Easter has met with great favor.

The days preceding the campaign should be a time of earnest prayer and careful preparation. Helpful literature may be had for the asking. Observe February 13 as a Special Day of Fasting and Prayer. On February 15 begin the survey in the local Church. This should be completed by February 29, and if the Standard Plan has been carefully followed, the close of the survey will find pastors and people alike ready to work together to the best of their ability to bring unsaved souls to Christ.

Soul winning is the chief business of our Church. It is a dangerous thing to try to live a Christian life and not be a soul winner. An effort to preach the gospel to "every creature" will be most pleasing to Him who died to save all men everywhere.

WAS THERE EVER A MOVEMENT MORE OPPORTUNE? WAS THERE EVER ONE MORE IMPORTANT? WAS THERE EVER ONE THAT SHOULD ENLIST THE EARNEST PRAYERS AND CO-OPERATION OF ALL GOD'S PEOPLE MORE THAN THIS? DO NOT FAIL TO SHARE IN THIS GREAT WORK.

The Home Circle

SENDING OUT SMILES.

I have some little enemies—
They call themselves "The Blues,"
And like all other kind of foes,
They're splendid things to lose.

So when I know they're planning
To come and spend the day,
I send the little smiles out
To chase them all away.

TOM AND THE CLOCK.

Winnie and Tom were spending a delightful three weeks with grandma. They had never been in the country in the winter time before, and everything was new to them. Such fun as they did have! and how fine it was to go sleighing and coasting with Uncle Jack, who lived just a mile away!

"There isn't a single thing I don't like," confided Winnie to Tom, as they sat talking one day. "Only just one. I do hate having to go to bed every night just at 8 o'clock."

"So do I, and I think it's mean to make us when we're visiting," declared Tom.

The two children stood looking out of the dining room window. They were all alone, for grandma was upstairs taking a nap.

"Oh," said Tom, presently; I know something splendid to do."

"What? Oh, Tom, please tell me."

Tom leaned closer that he might whisper: "I'm going to set the clock back an hour."

There was a little gasp from Winnie, then a frightened silence.

After a minute Tom spoke: "I know just how. I see grandma wind it up every night. Watch." Pulling out a chair, he climed on it and reached the clock, which stood on a high shelf. Carefully he moved the hand. When he climbed down again and pushed back the chair, it was 2 o'clock instead of 3. He looked at Winnie triumphantly. "What did I tell you?" he exclaimed.

But Winnie was frightened. "I wish you hadn't," she said, her blue eyes full of trouble.

"Pshaw, who's a 'fraid-cat now?" cried Tom. "I can fix it back whenever I like."

Just then there was a ring at the front door. Grandma had finished her nap, and immediately came down the steps to receive the note which the messenger handed her. "Why, children," she said, smiling, "this is from Aunt Mary. She wants you to come over at 4 o'clock. There's something jolly going on, but I'm not to tell. Why, what are you looking so sober about? Don't you want to go?"

"Yes," said the children, faintly.

Grandma looked puzzled, but she did not say anything more. She glanced at the clock. "Dear me, I thought it was later. Well, you've plenty of time. I'll get you to wind a ball of yarn for me until it's time to get ready."

Winnie looked ready to cry, and Tom glanced despairingly at the clock. Oh, how much easier it was to do a wrong thing than to undo it! Mamma had always told him that, but then it had not seemed such a real thing; while now—oh, how dreadfully loud that clock did tick!

Presently grandma spoke: "It's time for you to go now, dearies, and—dear me, how dark it is for the time of day! Well, run along and have a good time. I guess Jack will bring you home."

The two children fairly raced all the way. At the kitchen door Aunt Mary met them. "Why, children," she said, "what makes you so late? I thought you weren't coming. You see, I invited the minister's children to come over, and I made some candy for you to pull; but I had to let them do all the pulling, as you didn't come. Then Uncle Jack happened in, and took them for a little run in his new sleigh. I do wish you had been here. Why didn't you come?"

The children did not know what to say. They ate a few of the doughnuts which Aunt Mary provided, but somehow they did not taste good. Aunt Mary was puzzled. Pretty soon the children said good-by.

"I hope grandma hasn't found out about the clock," said Winnie, as they went slowly over the hard, frozen fields, "because I want to tell her."

"No, let me," cried Tom, "because I'm never, never going to do a thing like that again."

But grandma knew, and she had known all the time.—Selected.

LUTHER'S SNOW SONG.

On a cold, dark night, when the wind was blowing hard and the snow falling fast, Conrad, a worthy citizen of a little town in Germany, sat playing his flute, while Ursula, his wife, was preparing supper. They heard a sweet voice singing outside:

"Foxes to their holes have gone,
Every bird unto its nest;
But I wander here alone,
And for me there is no rest.'

Tears filled the good man's eyes as he said: "What a fine, sweet voice! What a pity it should be spoiled by being tried in such weather!"

"I think it is the voice of a child. Let us open the door and see," said his wife, who had lost a little boy not long before, and whose heart was opened to take pity on the little wanderer.

Conrad opened the door, and saw a ragged child, who said:

"Charity, good sir, for Christ's sake!"

"Come in, my little son," said he; "you shall rest with me for the night."

The boy said, "Thank God," and entered. The heat of the room made him faint, but Ursula's kind care soon revived him. They gave him some supper, and then he told them that he was the son of a poor miner, and wanted to be a scholar. He wandered about and sang, and lived on the money people gave him. His kind friends would not let him talk much, but sent him to bed. When he was asleep they looked in upon him, and were so pleased with his countenance that they determined to keep him, if he was willing. In the morning they found that he was very willing to remain.

They sent him to school, and afterward he went to a monastery. There one day he found a Bible, which he read, and learned the way of life. The sweet voice of the little singer became the strong echo of the good news, "Justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Conrad and Ursula, when they took that little street singer into their house, little thought they were nourishing the great champion of the Reformation. The poor child was Martin Luther.

ROOSEVELT'S MOTTO TO A BOY.

Some boy wrote President Roosevelt to the effect that some of his friends were quoting the president as saying to a person who had got worsted in a struggle and was inclined to complain, "Whatever else you do, don't squeal." The boy wanted to know whether the president really said this. He added that he had submitted the question to his teacher, who had assured him that the quotation could not have been genuine, because the president would not have used a word like "squeal."

Roosevelt would not, of course, contradict the teacher by admitting that he did say "squeal," so he got around it by diverting the boy's attention to another admonition and giving the advice founded on a game of football, saying in his answer, "Do you play football? If so, here is a motto for you: 'Don't foul, don't flinch, hit the line hard.'"—Christian Advocate.

THE SOURCE OF ALL GOOD

"Forget not all His benefits." A boy was bringing home a loaf of bread, and one said, "What have you there?" "A loaf." "Where did you get it?" "From the baker." "Where did the baker get it?" "He made it." "Of what did he make it?" "Flour." "Where did he get the flour?" "From the miller." "Where did he get it?" "From the farmer." "Where did the farmer get it?" Then the truth dawned upon the boy's mind, and he replied, "From God." "Well, then, from whom did you get that loaf?" "Oh, from God." Here is a boy who, in the last resort, acknowledges God to be the giver of good. In this materialistic age a man says: "My business supports me and my family." It is a lie; God supports you and your family. Men deal with God only as a last resource and yet go on hoping to sneak into God's heaven when they have done with his world; but the God of Sinai is thundering out to this age: "Thou shalt put Me first and the baker second."—G. Campbell Morgan.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:

Louisiana Conference—Rev. J. M. Henry, D. D., Rev. J. F. Foster, Rev. S. J. Davies.

Mississippi Conference—Rev. C. W. Crisler, Rev. J. T. Leggett, Rev. J. R. Jones.

North Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. H. Felts, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, Rev. J. W. Dorman.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS AND PREACHERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI, THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI, AND THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

As Chairman of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, I request that each of you push the campaign for the Advocate. I know that you each have many calls made upon your time; but this is our own work and we are requested by the Publishing Committee and ordered by each of the patronizing Conferences, on recommendation of the Committee on Christian Literature, to give this matter our earnest attention. By this time the Boards of District Stewards have all met and the allotment has been made to each charge, so that each pastor knows the number of subscribers—new and renewal—which he is expected to secure as a minimum from his charge.

Remember that a renewal means as much as a new subscription, and frequently more. We hope that you will secure the renewal of old subscribers, and as many new ones as possible.

If you have not received your allotment, brother pastor, write your elder and learn the number you are expected to secure. If you, brother elder, have not sent out the allotment, kindly do so immediately, for the time is short.

Of the one dollar and fifty cents paid for the Advocate, more than one-third goes for the white paper alone used for each subscription, and the remainder has to cover all other expenses. Unless we have an increased subscription list, we cannot pay bills, with all materials and labor advancing in price, and thus we may be forced to increase the cost of the paper. Secular papers have been forced to do so, but we have hoped that we would not be. We, therefore, appeal to you to push the campaign. By so doing, we shall reach more people, enlarge the influence of the paper, and be able to meet all bills without being forced to increase the subscription rates.

Cordially,

JNO. F. FOSTER.

THE MEETING AT LOUISVILLE, AND ELSE.

When it became known that the editors of the church papers would be admitted to the meetings of the Joint Commission on Unification, we determined to take advantage of the opportunity to get, at first hand, the results of what promised to be the most important of all its sessions. Accordingly, we left New Orleans on Tuesday evening, January 13, for Louisville, Ky., the place of meeting. It is about a twenty-three-hour run from New Orleans to Louisville, and the scenery along the way is not especially interesting; but the companionship of Dr. U. G. Foote all the way, of Dr. A. F. Watkins from Jackson, Miss., and of Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, who got on the train at Memphis, Tenn., made the trip a most enjoyable one. We left New Orleans at 7:30 p.m., and were due in Louisvill at 6 p.m., the following day. We have become more or less accustomed to delayed trains; we are glad, therefore, to record the fact that we rolled into the Illinois Central station in Louisville exactly on time—a remarkable demonstration of the efficiency of modern methods of travel.

Through the kindness of Dr. F. M. Thomas, secretary of the Southern Commission, a room had been reserved for us at the Henry Watterson Hotel, the headquarters of the Southern delegation. We appreciated his kindness all the more when we found that only those who had reservations could find lodging at the Watterson on the night of our arrival. We found the rates to be exceedingly reasonable as compared with New Orleans hotels; we were given a very comfortable room, with bath, for $2.50 a day. Most of our meals were taken at the Britling, a cafeteria just across the street from the hotel. We discovered that even high dignitaries do not hesitate to "wait on themselves" for the sake of well prepared food at reasonable prices. Bishops and secretaries could be seen in line, with their platters, every day with the crowds that thronged the place.

The Northern delegation had headquarters at the Seelbach, within a stone's throw of the Watterson. They, too, found the Britling a desirable place for getting their meals. Since the expenses of both delegations were provided for by their respective churches, it is a commendable fact that so many of the commissioners practised careful economy in their necessary expenditures.

It was a matter of sentimental interest, at least, that the final session of the Commission for evolving a plan of unification for American Methodism was held in the city where the Southern Church set up its government in 1845. The sessions were held in the Fourth Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, South, whose pastor, Dr. Leonidas Robinson, showed every possible courtesy. The presiding elder of the Louisville District, Dr. S. J. Thompson, was also very attentive to the comfort of the visitors. The banquet given by the members of the Fourth Avenue Church on Friday evening, at which addresses were made by representatives of both Methodisms, was a delightful occasion.

Twenty-five commissioners from the M. E. Church, South, were present, and twenty-three from the M. E. Church, two of them being unable to attend for various reasons. Those present from our church were: Bishops Mouzon, Denny, Moore, Cannon, Ainsworth; Drs. Thomas, Young, Bishop, Lamar, Watkins, Linn, Chappell, Ivey, Dickey, Selecman; Messrs Snyder, Madden, Hyer, Reynolds, Blackwell, Samford, Pepper, White, McGowan, Hines. The commissioners from the Northern Church were: Bishops Cranston, McDowell, Hamilton, Cooke, Leete; Drs. Blake, Downey, Jones (colored), Nast, Neff, Spencer, Randall, Van Cleve, Wallace, Stuart; Messrs. Brown, Harris, Kinne, Penn (colored), Watt, Pollock, Kidney, Joy.

The meetings were presided over alternately by Bishop Cranston and Bishop Mouzon, or some one designated by them. Dr. F. M. Thomas and Dr. A. W. Harris were the efficient secretaries of the Joint Commission while in session. The procedure was always orderly, though there was never any disposition on either side to insist upon observance of the technical details of parliamentary rules. We were greatly impressed throughout by the very great brotherliness of spirit of all who took part in the proceedings, and the evident determination to deal with all questions that might arise with the utmost frankness and sincerity. It is hardly necessary to say that the devotional exercises were devotional in fact as well as in name.

After the report of the Ad Interim Committee had been submitted to the Joint Commission, the two Commissions met separately for several sessions to consider the plan in detail. After both had reported that they were ready to accept the plan as a basis for a final report by the Joint Commission, the provisions of the plan were taken up one by one, and a harmonious agreement was reached upon each, and then upon the whole. This does not mean that every member of the Commission was satisfied with all the changes that were made, or that any one of them approved fully the plan as a whole; it was distinctly understood that the plan was, in the opinion of the Commission, the best that could be devised under the circumstances. The resolution of transmission, which was considered by the Commissions separately and then jointly, was offered by Dr. A. J. Lamar, as follows: "That we respectfully transmit to the General Conferences of the two churches the following draft as a Constitution for the Methodist Church, together with recommendations for a method of procedure, the best that we have been able to agree upon under the circumstances and our instructions."

After full consideration in the separate sessions, the resolution was adopted. In the Northern Commission, the vote was unanimous; in the Southern Commission, the vote was 19 for, to 5 against. Those voting against were: Bishop Denny, Bishop Ainsworth (by proxy), Dr. J. E. Dickey, Judge T. D. Samford, Judge J. G. McGowan. Judge H. H. White, who was compelled to leave before the final session, has had his vote recorded in the negative, making the final result in our Commission, 19 for, to 6 against.

The plan as finally adopted was given in full in our issue of last week. It is now before the two churches for acceptance or rejection. The General Conference of the M. E. Church will meet in Des Moines, Iowa, on May 1. Naturally, its action will be awaited with the utmost interest throughout both churches.

The Southern Methodist Press Association.

At the first meeting of the Southern Methodist Press Association, held in Birmingham, Ala., last December, another meeting was appointed to be held at Louisville, during the sessions of the Joint Commission on Unification, to complete the organization and to transact several important items of business. The meeting was held in the magnificent Board of Church Extension Building, which had been cordially tendered by Dr. H. A. Boaz, the Secretary of the Board. After we had admired its beautiful architecture and inspected its perfect appointments, we made the remark, being sure that nobody was present who had ever seen our own quarters, that it reminded us of our office at 512 Camp Street, the reminder being, of course, in the contrast. The editors are under deep obligations to Dr. Boaz and his charming daughter who assists him in some details of his work, for their gracious hospitality and many kindnesses.

The editors were the guests of the Central Methodist, published in Louisville, at a dinner on Thursday evening. Dr. W. E. Arnold, the editor of the Central, acted as host—a part he plays to perfection. In addition to the editors, there were present Bishop James Cannon, Jr., Dr. C. W. Tadlock, of St. Louis, Dr. S. H. C. Burgin, of Dallas, Texas, Dr. G. E. Cameron, of Lexington, Ky., and several others.

A Day In Nashville.

After the adjournment of the Joint Commission, some business in behalf of the Southern Methodist Press Association took us to Nashville for a day, the first visit we had made to that city since our graduation from Vanderbilt University in 1902. We found all those with whom we had business—Secretaries of Boards, etc.—at the Publishing House, busily engaged in carrying forward the work to which the church has called them. Since it was our first sight of the Publishing House, we viewed it with great interest—probably too critically. It seemed strange to us that the main elevator, at the very entrance of the building, should be out of commission, with nothing to indicate that repairs were being made or being contemplated. We assume, though we do not know that it was the case, that our visit was made during the stock-taking season; in no other way could we account for the general disarray and apparent neglect of the book department.

It was a great pleasure to see in their offices many of the men who are known throughout the church for the faithful service they are rendering. We cannot mention all of them, but we will make mention of those who are our very own—Dr. Jno. W. Boswell, Dr. F. S. Parker, and Rev. J. L. Neill, all of whom showed us appreciated courtesies. It was our great privilege to take the evening meal in the home of Rev. J. L. Neill, where we had delightful fellowship with him and his family. The disagreeable weather made it impossible for us to visit the scenes that were so familiar to us in our student days, and the press of accumulated work at home made it impossible for us to tarry longer. A stop-over of about two hours in Memphis gave us the opportunity of calling up over the telephone Rev. W. H. Coleman, now pastor of St. John's, one of the great churches of the connection, formerly a prominent member of the Louisiana Conference. He showed his brotherliness of spirit by taking the trouble to call at the station before our train left, giving us the opportunity of a few minutes' conversation. Happily, also, we ran across Dr. Foote in the station, whom we had not seen since our arrival in Louisville, returning to New Orleans. Thus going and coming, we had delightful company.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Spencer J. McLean reports that the work at Farmerville, La., is moving along nicely.

"The outlook is encouraging on the Benton charge, and we are expecting a good year," writes Rev. J. B. King, of Benton, Miss.

Rev. R. T. Nolen writes that the work for the new year has begun encouragingly on the Vardaman charge, North Mississippi Conference.

Rev. W. W. Nelson gives a good account of the work on the Scotland charge, Mississippi Conference. The outlook for the year is encouraging.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Bucatunna, Miss., writes that his people are invariably kind and thoughtful of their pastor and his family, and that the prospects for a good year are encouraging.

Rev. and Mrs. Jas. B. Grambling, of Shreveport, La., are very happy over the arrival in their home of a fine son—Jas. B., Jr. Brother Grambling is assistant pastor of Noel Memorial Church.

The ladies of the Presbyterian and Methodist Aid Society of Pass Christian, Miss., gave a "Birthday Party" on Friday evening of last week. We thank them for an invitation to be present.

The many friends of Sister T. S. Randle will hear with great sorrow that she has lost the sight of one eye, and that an operation in the near future is all that can save the other one. She is still at her home in Yoakum, Tex.

The first quarterly conference of the Wheeler charge, North Mississippi Conference, of which Rev. J. W. York is pastor, increased the assessment for ministerial support $300 over last year. We are glad to learn that the prospects for the year are most encouraging.

Rev. Harry W. May, the presiding elder, requests us to announce that the district stewards of the Alexandria District will meet at Alexandria on February 17, at 1 p. m., in First Church. The pastors of the district are cordially invited to be present.

The prayer meeting is a distinct feature of the work of First Church, Baton Rouge, La. The average attendance for this year has been about fifty, though on several occasions that number has been largely exceeded. On a recent rainy Wednesday night twenty-three were present, fourteen of whom were men. Fine! Rev. N. E. Joyner is the pastor.

Rev. Marion Browning, who has spent considerable time in the work of our church in Mexico, was in New Orleans for several days last week. He is taking a vacation, seeking for a restoration of health. He intended to visit the Cuba Mission Conference, but was prevented by failure to receive his passport in time. We appreciated his call at the Advocate office.

We are informed by a friend that Mrs. Lou Martin, mother of Mrs. N. B. Hunter, of Waterproof, La., passed away on January 22. Truly a mother in Israel has gone. She was one of the oldest members of the Methodist Church in Waterproof. She had been an invalid for many months. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing ones.

Rev. J. L. Cady, of the St. Francisville charge, Louisiana Conference, was in the city last week and favored the Advocate office with a call. He gave an interesting account of his work, which is making satisfactory progress in spite of the handicap of the recent bad weather. Some substantial improvements have lately been made on the parsonage, adding greatly to its comfort.

Centenary Church, McComb City, Miss., is beginning a great year under the pastorate of Rev. H. M. Ellis. The pastor's salary has been fixed at $3000, the largest in the district. All financial claims have been paid in full to date, and $260 has been sent to the Orphans' Home at Jackson. The church expects to pay at least $1200 to the Orphans' Home this year.

A note from Rev. J. V. Bennett informs us that Mrs. Bennett has just been taken to her home at Brookhaven, Miss., from the Jackson Infirmary, where she recently underwent a serious operation. She is still confined to her bed, but is making satisfactory progress toward recovery. The prayers of many friends will ascend in her behalf. It will be some days before Brother Bennett can resume his evangelistic work.

A letter from Mrs. A. B. Barry, wife of our pastor at Coquille, Oregon, gives an interesting account of the work in that field. Bishop H. M. Du Bose and Rev. J. Loyd Decell, of Fresno, Calif., are assisting Brother Barry in a meeting at this time. Sister Barry has been seriously ill since Christmas, but is improving in health now. She requests the prayers of the readers of the Advocate for the success of their work.

Rev. Robert Selby, the Commissioner of Emory University for the State of Mississippi, spent last Thursday in New Orleans. He honored the Advocate office with a call, which gave the editor the opportunity of renewing a friendship of many years' standing. Brother Selby has been indefatigable in his efforts to promote the interest committed to his care, and unusual success has attended his labors. His splendid advocacy of the cause of education has given him a reputation that extends far beyond the borders of his own Conference.

According to the Holly Springs Reporter, Rev. W. R. Lott, our pastor at Holly Springs, has a keen sense of humor. On a recent Sunday morning, in stating that he thought the congregation was excusable for not attending the prayer meeting on the previous Wednesday evening on account of the very inclement weather, he added that the only ones present were the minister, the pastor, and himself. By the way, the Reporter is generous in the space it gives to religious happenings in the community—a most commendable trait.

The following lines from Rev. Harry W. May, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference, sound a cheering note: "The revivals in the Alexandria District are being held with glorious results. The meeting at Natchitoches was far-reaching and glorious. The meeting at Pineville was very fair. Bob Jones, of Montgomery, Ala., led the meeting at Natchitoches, and Brother J. L. Evans, of Oakdale, the meeting at Pineville. Dr. Werlein, of First Church, Alexandria, reported at his first quarterly conference thirty-odd accessions since the Annual Conference."

We do not recall anything that has given us more pleasure recently than the presence in our office, on Saturday afternoon of last week, of Robert Wynn, Murff Snelling, Wynn Rickey, and Prentice Smith—all Methodist preachers' sons who are attending Tulane University. They had just passed successfully through the ordeal of term examinations and were accordingly very happy. We were happy with them. The future looks bright to us with such splendid young men preparing themselves, in character and attainments, for positions of high responsibility in church and State.

As a result of the recent meeting held by Bob Jones in Natchitoches, La., eighty-two members have been added to the Methodist Church, most of them by vows. In addition, there were a good many accessions to the Baptist and the Presbyterian Churches. Many family altars have been established in homes where they were unknown before, and the prayer meeting has increased in attendance from about fifteen to sixty. It is impossible to estimate the good that comes to a community from a meeting like this. We are praying that we may have scores of them this year. We rejoice with Brother Lee, our pastor at Natchitoches, over the good that has been accomplished.

The Advocate office was brightened on Saturday of last week by a visit from an enthusiastic group of Epworth Leaguers who were returning to their homes from the meeting of the Church-wide Epworth League Conference, held at Nashville, Tenn., January 28, 29—the meeting which we, by some mistake, announced in last week's Advocate as scheduled for the same dates in February. Those in the company were: Rev. Jas. B. Grambling, President of the Louisiana Conference Epworth League, Shreveport, La.; Miss Monita Goldsby, Junior and Intermediate Superintendent, Louisiana Conference Epworth League, Amite, La.; Miss Imo Bickham, Intermediate Superintendent, North Texas Conference Epworth League, Celeste, Texas; Mr. T. O. McIntosh, President, Central Texas Conference Epworth League, Meridian, Texas; Mr. Geo. Hay, President, Texas State Conference Epworth League, Jacksonville, Texas; Rev. S. M. Hull, Chairman, West Texas Conference Epworth League Board, Waelder, Texas; Mr. C. T. Dean, President, North Texas Conference Epworth League, Dallas, Texas. They reported that thirty-five Conferences were represented at the Nashville meeting by nearly two hundred delegates. Those who are inclined to think that the League is a waning force would be likely to change their opinion after coming into contact with so much enthusiasm.

DEATH OF TWO NOBLE CHRISTIANS.

Dear Brother Carley: On the 16th and 21st of January, respectively, Mrs. S. J. Ames and Dr. H. A. Minor were buried at Macon, Miss. They were two of the oldest citizens of this part of the State, and both were loyal members of the Methodist Church. Mrs. Ames was in her eighty-ninth year, and Dr. Minor had passed his eighty-fifth. Both passed away as gloriously as they had lived.

Obituaries.

EARVIN LEON YEAGER, son of Mr. W. D. and Mrs. Maudie Yeager, was born Aug. 24, 1904, and died Jan. 4, 1920. He met his death when the automobile driven by him was struck and completely demolished by a moving freight train which was passing through here on the morning of Jan. 3, 1920. He was rushed to the sanatorium at Newton, Miss., but his condition was such that no medical skill could save him. This awful tragedy brought gloom and sorrow to all of our hearts. But, in cases of this kind, we have to bend our will to God's divine will and comply with the Scriptural injunction, "God's will and not ours be done." He was a member of the Methodist Protestant Church, at Pineville, Miss. While we share the sorrows of others, we also weep for ourselves, for each of us to-day can recall some sacred form, and our heart cries:

"O! for the touch of a vanished hand,
And the sound of a voice that is still."

At the Montrose Methodist Church, after religious ceremonies were conducted by the writer, Jan. 4, 1920, the remains were carried from the church to the cemetery and laid to rest, in the presence of a large concourse of grief-stricken relatives and friends who mourn his departure.

His friend,
HILARY S. WESTBROOK.

On Nov. 28, 1919, the Savior came with his almighty arms and carried home Mrs. JOHN LOFLIN from this vale of pain and sorrow to that realm of happiness, there to exist in sweet communion with loved ones gone before. She had been in ill health for several months, but with Christian fortitude and patience she had borne her suffering remarkably well. Though she often expressed a hope of getting better, still she was perfectly ready to go. She united with the church when quite young and her life represented the highest type of true Christian character, noble in thought, high in purpose, possessing a great heart that radiated love and kindness towards all. One of her greatest pleasures was to attend church and Sunday school regularly as long as her health permitted. Mrs. Loflin leaves a husband, three daughters and five sons and a host or friends and relatives to mourn their loss. Loved ones worked heroically to lengthen the span of life, but in the end God's will must prevail and she could stay no longer. She was laid to rest in the Wesleyana cemetery, beside her son who preceded her some months ago, under a beautiful cover of flowers. Sleep on in peace, dear, tired body; we grieve for thee, though we know in higher circles thy soul rejoices everlastingly. A Friend,

ANNA BELLE BARLOW.

Jan. 14, 1920.

Sister S. B. SIMPSON was known to the writer only about two years. She was born July 21, 1842, and was married to F. M. Simpson on Dec. 20, 1871. To this union several children were born, who grew to manhood's estate. Her husband preceded her to the heavenly home about twelve years. She departed this life in the first hours of New Year's morning without her children knowing she was entering into that peaceful sleep that knows no waking. She came from good Anglo-Saxon stock. Early in life she felt a desire to enter into the new life. Having accepted Christ as her Savior, she united with the Methodist Church, holding her membership with the Thomas Town Methodist Church at her death. The New Orleans Christian Advocate had been a weekly visitor in her home all her life. She possessed all the virtues and qualities that go to the making of strong Christian character. She was buried by the side of her late husband in the cemetery at Sallis, Miss., by sympathizing friends after funeral services by the writer. T. L. OAKES, P. C.

Sallis, Miss., Jan. 22, 1920.

On December 27, 1919, the death angel visited our home and took from us my dear, sweet angel mother, Mrs. FANNIE WRIGHT. Just one short year ago she came to make her home with us, but the time passed by so rapidly that it seems only as a day. Her chair is vacant, and no one on earth can fill it as she did; and no one but God knows how I miss her dear, sweet face and ever-helping hands. She was a devout Christian, a kind, sympathetic and helpful friend, and words cannot be grouped together to describe her as a mother. She joined the Methodist Church when a child and remained there until her death. She loved her church dearly, and her home was always open to her pastor and friends and all strangers who came her way. She was best satisfied when ministering to others, and especially those poorer than she. She certainly laid her treasures up in heaven. She was taken dangerously sick at the first and lingered ten days, but seldom murmured or complained. She told me a few days before she was taken that she was not afraid to die, for she knew all was well with her. We know she is at rest with Jesus, and we know that He "doeth all things well," yet we do miss her so much more than tongue or pen can tell. We want each reader of the dear old Advocate to pray for us.

Her daughter who will ever miss her, MINNIE WRIGHT MARSHALL.

SAGE TEA BEAUTIFIES AND DARKENS HAIR

Don't Stay Gray! It Darkens Hair so Naturally That Nobody Can Tell.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days. —Adv.

Rheumatism and Indigestion

Practically all physicians and medical writers are agreed that there is a close relationship between Indigestion and Rheumatism. This view is substantiated by the fact that Shivar Spring Water, which is probably the best American mineral water for Dyspepsia and Indigestion, relieves Rheumatism and the Rheumatoid diseases, such as Gout, Sciatica, Neuralgia and Nervous Headache. All of these diseases are probably related and all are probably due in whole or in part to imperfect digestion or to imperfect assimilation of food. Physicians who have studied this water and who have observed its effects in their practice believe that it relieves these maladies by rendering the digestion complete and perfect and thereby preventing the formation of those poisons which inflame the joints and irritate the nerves, and also by eliminating through the kidneys, such poisons as have already been formed.

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder troubles and in Nervous and Sick headaches and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the Liver and Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant of Savannah writes: "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living when I began using Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time I was entirely relieved."

Mr. Rhodes of Virginia writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for Rheumatism. I know of several who were relieved of Rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam of South Carolina writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from Rheumatism and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water was entirely relieved of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter of Virginia writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints on her hands, caused by Rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

On the morning of Jan. 13, 1920, in the sanitarium at Newton, Miss., Mrs. JANETT WESLEY McLAURIN, daughter of Rev. C. W. Wesley and wife of Mr. Huston McLaurin, of Montrose, Miss., passed from this life to that beyond. For just eleven weeks she had endured the greatest of suffering, and then, in spite of all that loving hands and the most skilled physicians could do, she quietly fell on sleep. She was just in the prime of young womanhood, lacking a few days of reaching her twentieth birthday. From her eighth year she had been a member of the Methodist Church, and left testimony that makes the sorrow of her loved ones not without hope. They expect to see her on the other side. She leaves to mourn their loss a devoted husband, father and brother, and to the tender care of loved ones little twin girls just eleven weeks old. We pray for the comforting presence of the Holy Spirit with our friends in their sore bereavement.

H. J. MOORE.

Mrs. ANNA BOULLET TINSCOMB, wife of Mr. Allan Tinscomb, died on November 20, 1919. Her home was near Gueydan, but she passed away at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Boullet, near Indian Bayou church. She joined the church of her parents, and attended church and Sunday school from her childhood. She left the testimony that she was ready to go, regretting only to leave her children and loved ones. She leaves to mourn their loss, husband, five children, father, mother, three brothers, four sisters and a host of relatives and friends. Her remains were laid away in the old Indian Bayou cemetery, there to await the resurrection morn, Rev. C. D. Powell, the pastor of the Indian Bayou church, officiating.

T. H. HOFFPAUIR.

After a short and painful illness, JOHN BOULLET, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Boullet, in the bloom of young manhood, died at Crowley, La. He was born in Vermilion Parish, near Indian Bayou church, in 1897. Although not a member of the church, he was noted for morality and honesty. He told his family a short time before the end came, that he was not afraid to die. He leaves to mourn their loss, wife, baby, father, mother, three brothers and four sisters. He was buried in the old home cemetery at Indian Bayou, Rev. Henry Faulk officiating.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, God in his infinite love and wisdom has seen fit to call into eternal rest our beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. Nettie Cameron Marshall, and

Whereas, The Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church of New Albany has been bereft of one of its most loyal, faithful officers; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to a loving Father's will.

2. That we ever hold in grateful remembrance the useful life, the splendid Christian character, and the unselfish and loving service of this dear one "whom we have loved long since and lost awhile."

3. That our hearts go out in tenderest sympathy to the bereaved husband and children, to the broken-hearted sister, to the devoted brother, and to the aged father.

4. That we commend them to the Christ who has wept over human sorrow and who is ever present to heal the broken-hearted and give peace to the soul.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our minutes, that a copy be sent the family, and that a copy be sent the local papers and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: Mrs. W. N. Parks, Mrs. Alma Coker, Miss Corinne Rogers.

Jan. 12, 1920.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas God, in his infinite wisdom, has seen fit to call our beloved friend and member, Miss Charlie Johnston, to her heavenly home, and the Coldwater Methodist Sunday School has lost its most faithful and punctual teacher; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That while we humbly bow to His will, acknowledging His wisdom and goodness, we do most sincerely lament her death.

2. That we cherish the memory of her Christian graces and her devotion to her church, her Sunday school class and her Savior.

3. That the Sunday school has lost a most conscientious and consecrated teacher with an unbroken record for attendance for more than seven years, the last Sunday spent on earth, which was at Lucy Brinkley Hospital, being the first Sunday she failed to meet with her class.

4. That our hearts go out in deepest sympathy to the heart-broken sister left to mourn her going away.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her sister, to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and a copy be spread upon the minutes of the Sunday school.

Signed by: Mrs. J. L. Christy, Mrs. W. G. Durley, Mrs. C. L. Graham, Committee.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

HAVE YOU SCROFULA?

Now Said to Be as Often Acquired as Inherited.

It is generally and chiefly indicated by eruptions and sores, but in many cases it enlarges the glands of the neck, affects the internal organs, especially the lungs, and if neglected may develop into consumption.

It causes many troubles, and is aggravated by impure air, unwholesome food, bad water, too much heat or cold, and want of proper exercise.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the medicine that has been used with so much satisfaction by three generations, is wonderfully successful in the treatment of scrofula. Give it a trial.

If a cathartic or laxative is needed, take Hood's Pills,—there is nothing better for biliousness or constipation.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PROGRESS.

By Rev. E. R. Stanford.

The General Sunday School Board is composed of twenty-six members—one bishop, one ex-officio, 12 clerical and 12 lay members. The work of the board is done through eight departments with a superintendent in charge of each department. The staff of workers now numbers thirteen.

There are thirty-two Conference Field Secretaries and twenty-eight Conference Elementary Superintendents giving full-time service.

Readers of the Advocate will be interested to know something of the work of the Intermediate-Senior Department, which includes the years from twelve to seventeen.

I was elected Superintendent last August, a few days after my return from France, where I served as chaplain with the United States Army.

My first duty was to establish an office and organize the department. More than one hundred Intermediate and Senior Classes have been enrolled as Wesley Classes. New application blanks have been prepared, giving explicit directions how to organize and enroll. These are now ready for distribution. Our goal for 1920 is 1000 new organized classes. There should be at least one Intermediate and one Senior Wesley Class in each of our 17,279 Sunday schools.

Leaflets have been prepared on the "Intermediate Department," "Repairing the Bridge," "Class Standards," "The Sunday School and the Young Convert," and "Activities and Recreation."

Sunday schools are being organized departmentally, with a superintendent in charge of each department. One hundred and fifty-one district superintendents have been elected, and several Conference Intermediate-Senior superintendents. Through a system of reports, the connectional feature of Methodism is being established between the local school and the central office. One weakness of the Wesley Class movement has been the lack of supervision and oversight. Too many classes are simply organized on paper with little or no understanding on the part of officers and committees of their duties and responsibilties. Many committees have died from inactivity.

The greatest losses from the Sunday school are during the adolescent years. We must first learn something about these teen-age boys and girls and then provide a graded program of instruction, of worship, of service and recreation which will meet their needs and develop the four-fold life.

A great need in this department is for trained teachers and leaders. Courses of instruction for Intermediate-Senior teachers are being given in all of our Standard Training Schools. Training classes are being organized in many churches.

The Superintendent has visited three Annual Conferences and one Wesley Bible Class Federation.

This department has outlined a program of Life Service and Part-time Service to be presented in every Sunday school and in every church. All of the General Boards have been invited to unite in enrolling recruits for Life Service and Part-time Service. Cards have been prepared and a fuller announcement will he made later.

Every Christian should face the call to service and give a proportionate part of his time to the church. Thousands of leaders are needed to-day where hundreds were needed before the war.

For information or assistance, write to E. R. Stanford, Superintendent of the Intermediate-Senior Department, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Brother Pastor, have you made your campaign for more members in your Sunday school? Tell the truth—are you going to make the effort to have your school go out and seek the lost?

Brother Superintendent, what are your plans for your school this year? Do you know how many unsaved people in your school and in your community that ought to be in your school and ought to he saved?

Sister Teacher, have you read a book that might help you to win that boy or that girl for Christ? Do you desire to be an evangel for the sake of Christ? How much do you care for souls? What would you give to see the last one in your class brought to Christ and then trained in his service?

Fathers and Mothers, have you not thought that some one else ought to win your child for Christ? Have you established a family altar with the hope of creating a wholesome atmosphere to surround your child so that he may grow up in the nurture of the Lord? How much of the Christ spirit does the child see in your life?

To Whom it May Concern, are you thinking more of what you are to get than you are to give? I have heard it said, "You have got to make a negro hungry and let him be half naked before you can get good service out of him." Is any one else like the negro? No man can pump up a passion for souls; the passion is imparted to the man that goes to the Cross.

We do not know when the Lord shall come again, hut as sure as he did come he is coming again. When he comes will he find us doing what he called us to do? A great host will cry, "Fall on us and hide us from the presence of Him who sits on the throne and from the anger of the Lamh; for the day of His anger—that great day—has come, and who shall be able to stand?"

To Relieve Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of parmint (double strength), and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy, and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial. For sale by all druggists or sent on receipt of price 90c by CHAS. A. SMITH DRUG CO., ATLANTA, GA.

Men and Women

Women as well as men are made miserable by kidney and bladder trouble. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney medicine, is highly recommended by thousands.

Swamp-Root stands the highest for the reason that so many people say it has proved to be just the remedy needed in thousands of even the most distressing cases.

At druggists in large and medium size bottles. You may receive a sample size bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post, also a pamphlet telling you about it. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents, also mention the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Salts if Backachy and Kidneys Hurt

Stop Eating Meat for a While If Your Bladder Trouhles You.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your howels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

BEAUTIFUL 1920 SCRIPTURE TEXT CALENDAR FREE.

The Georgia-Alabama Business College, Macon, Ga., is sending out absolutely free of charge a lovely Scripture text calendar for the year 1920. This calendar is illustrated with extremely beautiful color scriptural illustrations. Each monthly page carries one of these Scripture illustrations, such as "Jesus Blessing the Children," "The Star of Bethlehem," "Jesus Stilling the Tempest," "Christ and the Holy Women." There are twelve of these monthly page illustrations in full color, besides the full page illustration on the cover of the calendar. Every Christian worker should have one of these calendars. Each day in the month is shown in large figures and immediately under the figures is given the text for the day, except on Sundays. Each Sunday date gives the subject for the Sunday School lesson, Scripture reading and Golden Text. On the back of the calendar is given the standard time for each of the twelve divisions, and also is carried a 200 Year Reference Calendar, which enables one to select one of seven calendars for use in each of 200 years from 1800 to 2002. The price of these calendars is 30c and they are very cheap at the price, but they are being sent absolutely free to Christian workers, the only return courtesy that is asked being the sending to Georgia-Alabama Business College of the name and address of some prospective student who desires to take a business course in bookkeeping, shorthand, typewriting, commercial English, etc. Write at once and get your calendar, giving the name of some prospective business student. In writing mention this paper.—Advertisement.

IN MEMORIAM—MRS. J. M. MASSEY.

The entire community was shocked and grieved on the morning of January 5, to learn that Mrs. J. M. Massey had so suddenly passed away during the early morning hours—just slipped away into the "glory land."

This dear, departed one needs no eulogy, for her life was a psalm read and known by all who knew her. In the morning of life, at the age of 12, she was happily converted, and consecrated her life to the Most High, and continued a valiant follower through life.

When a young girl, still in her "teens," she was blissfully wedded to Rev. J. M. Massey, a young minister of the North Mississippi Conference, and for almost one-half of a century she was willing to go with him anywhere, always happy to be about her Father's business, finding her greatest joy in service. She will always live in the memory of those who knew her in these five words: "She went about doing good."

Were I called upon to mention her leading characteristics, I would emphasize love, unselfishness, and humility. These we know were attributes of the lowly Nazarene, in whose steps she so closely followed. Her home life, and the work of the church of her choice were closely interwoven, never neglecting the one for the other, but giving to each the best that was in her—her time, her services, her devotion. Truly of her it can be said: "Her children rise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her." Filled to overflowing with "the milk of human kindness," she not only responded to every call to aid, but sought out opportunities to extend a helping hand. The night was never too dark nor the hour too late for her to respond to the call of the needy or suffering, as long as her health permitted. Eternity alone can tell the good she has done. If we could see all together the work accomplished, all in one great mound, how it would reach into the sky—just the product of that little pair of hands!

On every side, from a human standpoint, are reasons why she should have been spared to her home, her husband, her children, her grandchildren, and to the community. But 'tis not ours to question why, or attempt to solve the mysterious dispensation of Providence. We can but remember "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter," was spoken in connection with such an ordeal. She leaves a desolate home, a heart-broken husband, and five devoted children and precious gradchildren to fight the battles of life without her guiding hand. To each of her loved ones we express our heart-felt sympathy, and may the God in whom she trusted comfort them in this dark and trying hour.

After a sweetly solemn and impressive service in the home with her pastor, Rev. E. M. Shaw, officiating, she was laid to rest in the Houston Cemetery, surrounded by her devoted family and sorrowing friends.

We shall hear her voice no more on earth, for, like David of old, we cannot bring her back, but we can go to her. Could she but speak to us now, from the other shore, I think she would exclaim in Newman's language.

"The night is gone;
And with the morn those angel faces smile,
Which I have loved long since and lost awhile."

"Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him."

FROM COLUMBIA, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I have been kindly received on the Columbia charge, and while I have served very fine people during the past and was never equal to the requirements, I find according to my opinion, and that of my presiding elder and Sunday school conference secretary, for refinement and cultivation I have an extraordinary people. They will look after the temporal, if I can just feed the flock, and properly care for the lambs.

I did not complete my first round until last Sunday on account of high water and bad roads. The water was not quite high enough for my boat, and the mud was too deep for my Ford car; so I secured a horse, and Friday afternoon mounted him, with the same saddle, saddlebags, and in the saddlebags the same Bible and hymn book I had when I started to my first appointment thirty-two years ago this month, with the parting admonition of my widowed mother, "Son, be faithful to your calling." But, oh, sir, night overtook me while I was passing over some of the worst road I think I ever traveled, and some of my people in Columbia were uneasy lest I fail to make the journey. While my faithful horse often stopped and seemed to say, "I can't go through that mud," yet finally he brought me to Boeuf River church, and, close by, I found an excellent home recently occupied by Brother J. W. Wommack, whose hospitality was greatly enjoyed.

After visiting twenty-two homes, conducting worship in eighteen, securing fourteen subscriptions for the Advocate, and thirteen for the Methodist Armor, preaching three times to large, attentive congregations, and raising money to put in 36 window lights, and electing three committees to take care of the church, I returned home Monday afternoon, expecting great things of that country church, which has a Sunday school, Epworth League, and Saturday night prayer meeting.

THE SPIRIT OF SACRIFICE.

A letter of thanks from the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief to one of our women for her Christmas contribution gives the touching incident of a "group of five or six little children where there was food enough for all for one day, or enough to save the life of one child until relief could be secured. The facts were laid before the children, and they voted to save the life of one—the others silently turned away."—Council Bulletin.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Shelby Celebrates Harvest Day.

Tuesday, Dec. 30, was a gala day with the Woman's Missionary Society of Shelby, Miss., for it marked the conjunction of two notable events in its calendar for 1919. One of these events was the auxiliary's midwinter social meeting, the other was the celebration of Harvest Day.

For two years in succession the Shelby Auxiliary has been the first in North Mississippi to meet the Council's "Harvest Day" conditions, and report that fact to the Conference officers. Armistice Day, Nov. 11, marked the date of their triumph in 1919. On that day they closed their accounts for the year, with every assessment, and all voluntary pledges paid in full. This record was made with an increase of 72 per cent over the pledge paid in 1918, and an increase of 54 per cent on all connectional funds. The Harvest Day exercises had of necessity been postponed from the earlier date in December fixed for such observances.

The spacious and elegant home of Mrs. Janie P. Shelby, a charter member of the society, with its artistic holiday decorations, made an ideal setting for this happy and auspicious occasion. An impressive Harvest Day program constituted the outstanding feature of the auxiliary's midwinter social. The dominant note of the occasion was joyful thanksgiving. The all-absorbing motive was to commemorate the victory in such a way as to make it the inspiration of great things in the rich harvest fields of the Master, in 1920.

Besides the members of our own Methodist flock, the ladies of the Presbyterian Missionary Circle were the invited guests, who shared the festivity, the thanksgiving and overflowing good cheer of the day.

The President, Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, warmly bespoke the society's welcome to all present. She set forth in brief but striking review the year's work, outlining the policy, plans and methods by which it had been accomplished. She heartily commended the official staff whose fidelity and splendid co-operation had made Harvest Day possible. Unstinted praise was given to the entire membership, without whose unanimity of purpose the high record for 1919 could never have been made. Her Harvest Day address was punctuated at intervals by calls upon all officers who had collected and handled the year's finances to present their sheaves (with reports). Golden sheaves were impressively brought forward by the Treasurer, and the Superintendents of Supplies and of Parsonage Improvement. Each gave an excellent account of her year's stewardship.

Praise and thanksgiving were in all hearts and upon all lips for the precious privilege of laboring in the Master's vineyard. The President had prepared and adapted a unique form of service, blending the ideas of "Harvest Day" with an installation of officers for 1920, thus sending them forth to their duties with the harvest-some vision of successful achievement. The pastor, Rev. J. M. Wyatt, led in this dedicatory service, delivering a solemn charge "on behalf of the Woman's Missionary Council and in the name of Him whose harvesters and stewards ye are." He closed with a fervent invocation of divine blessings upon the auxiliary with its faithful membership.

A delightful social hour followed, during which happiness and good spirits overflowed. Mrs. J. N. C. Moffett, in pleasing manner, offered congratulations on behalf of our Presbyterian sisters. A dainty salad course, with coffee, was served in faultless style by our hostess, whose charming entertainment is proverbial.

The President has designed a Harvest Day banner for the auxiliary, which is both beautiful and full of significance and inspiration for a continued record of high achievement and noble endeavor.

ONE OF THE HARVESTERS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

A Letter from the President.

Dear Friends: The Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society will be held in Lake Charles February 24, 25, 26, 27. Mrs. J. H. McCoy is to be the Council guest and Lake Charles is making preparation for royal entertainment of the delegates. At least one delegate should be sent from each auxiliary, and one who can carry home the inspiration of this meeting.

Please send names of delegates to Mrs. Seaman Mayo, Chairman of the Entertainment Committee, box 555, Lake Charles, La., at your earliest convenience.

Please send without delay to your District Secretary the names of those who died during the year that were members of your auxiliary, that their names may be placed on the Memorial Roll.

We trust you have, ere this, sent to your district secretary a complete list of officers for 1920, also the amount pledged by your auxiliary for 1920. This information should be in her possession at the earliest possible date.

If during the year that is past you have had some unusually fine programs—if your Harvest Day program was a successful one, or if you used some clever invitation or poster—please send a copy of same to Mrs. R. H. Harper, 5830 Prytania Street, New Orleans, for display at the Annual Meeting.

If it be true that a "good beginning makes a good ending," let us begin this new year with prayer for the success of this Annual Meeting, supporting it in every way, and let us determine to make 1920 the best year of the Woman's Missionary Society of Louisiana.

MRS. C. F. NIEBERGALL,
President.
MRS. A. EARLY, Sec'y.

A Good Society at Rayville.

My Dear Mrs. Snelling: On Dec. 1 the Rayville Auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society celebrated Harvest Day, everything being paid, including the pledge. The required number of boxes were sent during the year. The new officers have been elected and the work for the coming year outlined. We aspire to the Honor Roll.

We have a splendid Mission Study Class of about twenty-five members. The book in use is "The Meaning of Prayer," by Foedick. This book is inspirational and full of food for thought. We heartily recommend it to any society that hasn't yet used it.

MRS. C. A. BLATCHFORD,
Chairman of Publicity.

BITTER TASTE SOUR STOMACH

Pills and Strong Medicines Made This Lady's Troubles Worse, But Thedford's Black-Draught Improved Her Appetite and Took Away Her Bile.

Nancy, Ky.—Mrs. Cora Waddle, a resident of this place, gives out this statement: "I have taken Black-Draught and found it to be the best liver medicine I ever used. It has just been fine for indigestion, sour stomach and a bitter taste in the mouth.

I used to get bilious and constipated and had to take something. Pills and other strong medicines would only tear my stomach up and leave me in a worse fix than before taking. I began to have sick headache.

After learning of Black-Draught I took it and was cured of sick headaches. One or two doses a week, or a pinch after meals, kept the bowels open and took away all bile. I have a good appetite, due to my use of Black-Draught."

If your liver is not acting properly you may suffer from such symptoms as headache, biliousness, constipation, indigestion, etc., and unless relief is obtained serious trouble may result.

In its 70 years of successful use, Thedford's Black-Draught has been found to relieve these ailments and stimulate the liver to do its work.

The Quick Way to Stop a Cough

This home-made syrup does the work in a hurry. Easily prepared, and saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

"COMPLETELY DISCOURAGED"

Is the feeling and plaint of women who are "run-down" so low that work drags, head aches, back aches, dragging down feelings, dizzy, pale and weak, little things annoy and "everything goes wrong."

Look the other way just a minute and see what Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has done for more than a million women in the last fifty years.

What it has done for others it can do for you.

A helping hand to lift up weak, tired, over-taxed women—that's what you'll find in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives you just the help that you need. To be had in liquid or tablets. Tablet form, 60 cents, at all drug stores.

It is a medicine that's made especially to build up women's strength and to cure women's ailments—an invigorating, restorative tonic, soothing cordial and bracing nervine; purely vegetable, non-alcoholic, and perfectly harmless.

Jackson, Miss.:—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a good medicine and I have recommended it many times to women who suffer. This medicine was a great comfort to me after motherhood. I had inward trouble and could not walk upright for six weeks and the doctor seemed unable to give me any relief or help, but I had very prompt relief as soon as I started to take the 'Prescription.' It cured me of my inward trouble and restored me to a perfect state of health and that is why I do not hesitate to speak a good word for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription whenever I have an opportunity."—Mrs. K. FROM PICKENS, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Conference is over and I find myself in Pickens, Durant District, North Mississippi Conference, in the midst of a loyal and royal people. The people were disappointed at my appointment—they expected Brother Guinn to remain with them. They appreciated him and they should, for he is worthy their love and confidence. May the Lord prosper him in his new field.

These good people received us with open hearts and hands. We found a company of ladies in the parsonage to bid us welcome, and when they had gone, we found a good supply of things in the pantry, and provisions enough cooked and on the table to last us about a week. And constant reminders are coming to the parsonage that they have us not only on their minds but also on their hearts.

Our first quarterly conference has just been held, and they raised the preacher's salary about five hundred dollars over what it was last year. Everything is cheerful and we are expecting a year of much success in the Master's vineyard. Our new presiding elder was with us in his usual good spirits, and with well laid plans. God bless Brother Brown.

And say, Mr. Editor, some are writing about what their charges paid per member last year: I would like to say that the charge served last year, Coahoma and Lyon, paid to all purposes, $116 per member—next!

JAPAN NEEDS CHRISTIAN SCRIPTURES.

There is a great need for the Bible in Japan, according to the Rev. C. K. Harrington, D.D., who has an extensive article on Japanese translation of the Scriptures, in the December number of the Bible Society Record. "Practically the whole rural population still waits for its message and the great industrial classes of the cities are well-nigh untouched."

His observation of the social, moral, and industrial conditions in Japan are most interesting.

"Moral conditions, both in city and country, are almost incredibly bad. One-third of the marriages end in divorce, and one-third of the births are illegitimate. In a single year the guests in the licensed houses of shame number over sixteen millions and spend in vice twenty million dollars, and probably the clandestine houses could show even higher totals. Japan is represented in the countries around the Pacific by an army of 22,000 prostitutes, gone forth to poison the life of the nations. Japan herself, by social vice, intemperance, and wretched industrial conditions, is destroying her own physical and moral health. The ordinary laboring man spends a sixth of his small income on liquor.

"To supply the wastage of human life and health in the great factories half a million new workers, largely women and children, must be recruited annually from the country-side. In these factories the day's work is from twelve to sixteen hours, and the operatives live and labor amid most unwholesome conditions, sanitary and moral. Japan is mortgaging her future life as a race in order to win a high place in the industrial world. Surely the Bible, with its Christian standard for the personal life, for the home, for society, for industrial and economic life, has a great work before it in Japan.

"Christian thought when brought into actual contact with the Japanese heart meets a prompt and warm response. They are a people of fine, strong qualities, to which moral and spiritual truth can make appeal."

RAMON'S LIVER PILLS

Physician Explains Who Should Take Nuxated Iron

Practical Advice on How To Help Build Up Great Strength, Energy and Endurance.

The accompanying article of Dr. Sullivan should be carefully read by every man and woman who wants to possess perfect health, great physical endurance and a strong, keen mentality. Dr. Sullivan tells how to increase the iron in our blood and thereby gain greater physical and mental power; brighter intellects and better health.

Commenting on the use of Nuxated Iron as a tonic, strength and blood builder by over three million people annually, Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.) New York, and The Westchester County Hospital, said, "Lack of iron in the blood not only makes a man a physical and mental weakling, nervous, irritable, easily fatigued, but it utterly robs him of that virile force, that stamina and strength of will which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life. It may also transform a beautiful, sweet-tempered woman into one who is cross, nervous and irritable. I have strongly emphasized the great necessity of physicians making blood examinations of their weak, anaemic, run-down patients. Thousands of persons go on year after year suffering from physical weakness and a highly nervous condition due to lack of sufficient iron in their red blood corpuscles without ever realizing the real and true cause of their trouble. Without iron in your blood your food merely passes through the body something like corn through an old mill with rollers so wide apart that the mill cant grind.

For want of iron you may be an old man at thirty, dull of intellect, poor in memory, nervous, irritable and all "run-down," while at 50 or 60 with plenty of iron in your blood you may still be young in feeling, full of life, your whole being brimming over with vim and energy.

But in my opinion you can't make strong, vigorous, successful, sturdy iron men, and healthy, rosy-cheeked women by feeding them on metallic iron. The old forms of metallic iron must go through a digestive process to transform them into organic iron—Nuxated Iron—before they are ready to be taken up and assimilated by the human system. Notwithstanding all that has been said and written on this subject by well-known physicians, thousands of people still insist on dosing themselves with metallic iron, simply, I suppose, because it costs a few cents less. I strongly advise readers in all cases to get a physician's prescription for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—or if you don't want to go to this trouble then purchase Nuxated Iron in its original packages and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the package. If you have taken preparations such as Nux and Iron and other similar iron products and failed to get results, remember that such products are an entirely different thing from Nuxated Iron.

Manufacturers' Note—Nuxated Iron which is used by Dr. Sullivan and others with such surprising results, and which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated and does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

Biliousness

WHEN you have a bilious attack your liver fails to perform its functions. You become constipated. The food you eat ferments in your stomach instead of digesting. This inflames the stomach and causes nausea, vomiting and a terrible headache. Take Chamberlain's Tablets. They will tone up your liver, clean out your stomach and you will soon be as well as ever. There is nothing better.

A REVIVAL NOW.

Dear Brother Carley: Your editorial note on "Why Wait for the Revival" impels me to say this word as one of the Conference evangelists.

Surely there are signs and feelings of a coming revival, and the Holy Spirit is stirring our people. To think of a congregation of people giving twenty-four hours to the reading of God's Word in one sitting is surely a token of interest. Any earnest reader of church literature may note the deep currents of spiritual power moving our people to prayer, to giving, and to personal consecration, and large ingatherings in revivals being held.

This expression of holy zeal, and manifest power does not depend in any sense on the evangelist; but as we now have this recognized office in the church, and "help in meeting" has been and is a serious question with pastors, why not break away from some of our customs, get out of the ruts and have meetings "in season and out of season," that these men may be used, many times and in many places, where their services will be blessed of God. There is not one but has more "calls" than he can fill; but they come within such a short time that many of them cannot be filled.

This has been my experience as a pastor, and is now, in my present appointed work. While any appointment may be made a "pocket" (as Brother Thompson suggests) for men, it should not be; that depends on one's relationship to God and the church.

The question of the "evangelist coming" may mean "how much," but it should not, any more than the coming of a pastor; and my impression is that the present list of evangelists have the record of Conference approval—"nothing against them,"—and the "right spirit" within them; and though they are only like other men, the Lord is using them for his glory.

My plea is that time and men should be used of the Holy Spirit, and that as we are merging into a brighter and greater day for the church, we should "move up," and let God have right of way, and these "signs" we see of the coming revival would point to something.

Build a fire in the church, materially and spiritually, as in our homes, and the cold and hungry hearts will come. Make the church comfortable and attractive, at any cost; advertise this fact; then lay everything on God's altar, and the Holy Fire will start a revival. On with the revival!

CHARTER.

STATE OF LOUISIANA,
PARISH OF ORLEANS.

BE IT KNOWN, That on this Thirty-first day of December, Nineteen Hundred and Nineteen.

Before me, JOSEPH LAUTENSCHLAEGER, a Notary Public in and for the Parish of Orleans, State of Louisiana, duly qualified, personally came and appeared the several persons whose names are hereinafter subscribed, all of full age of majority, who declared that availing themselves of the laws of this State, relative to the organization of corporations, they do hereby covenant and agree to form themselves into a Corporation for the objects and purposes, and under the following stipulations to-wit.:

ARTICLE I.

The name and title of this Corporation shall be the "RELIABLE AUTO SALES COMPANY, Inc." It shall enjoy corporate existence for a term of 99 years from date, unless sooner dissolved. It shall have, enjoy and exercise all rights, powers and privileges now granted by law, or hereafter granted, to corporations of this character, especially the right to hold, receive, purchase, alienate, sell, mortgage, pledge, rent or lease property, real, personal and mixed, in fact anything permitted by the law necessary and convenient for carrying out the objects and purposes of this Corporation.

ARTICLE II.

The domicile of this Corporation shall be in the City of New Orleans, Louisiana, where all citations, or other legal process, shall be served on the President and in his absence on the Secrtary-Treasurer.

ARTICLE III.

The objects and purposes of this Corporation are hereby delared to be the buying and selling of Autos, trucks, tractors and all their parts and accessories, and everything pertaining to that line of business; also the operation of a general garage, and anything else that may be necessary to or incidental to said business.

ARTICLE IV.

The Capital stock of this Corporation is hereby fixed at the sum of TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS, divided into 100 shares of the par value of One Hundred Dollars each, to be issued in the manner and for the consideration prescribed by law. All shares to be full paid and non-assessable. The Capital stock may be increased when found necessary by a vote of 2-3 of all the capital stock at a meeting called for that purpose.

ARTICLE V.

All the Corporate powers of this Corporation shall be vested in and exercised by a board of Directors to be composed of Three Stockholders, two of whom shall constitute a quorum. The following named stockholders shall constitute the first Board of Directors, viz.: Will J. Morgan, 344 Carondelet Street; Henry J. Prados, 5338 Perrier Street; Rufus H. Prados, Bay St. Louis, Miss., with the said Will J. Morgan, as President; Rufus H. Prados, as Vice President, and Henry J. Prados, as Secretary-Treasurer, and they shall hold their office until the first Monday of January, 1921, or until their successors are elected and qualified, on which day the election shall take place, or as soon thereafter as possible.

All stockholders' meetings, including the annual meeting for the election of officers and directors shall be preceded by written notice, delivered personally or mailed to the last known addresses of the stockholder, 15 days before such meeting; provided the stockholders shall always have the right to waive such notice.

If any vacancy occurs on the Board of Directors the stockholders shall name or elect a successor to fill the vacancy until the next general election. The election of Directors shall be by ballot, and each stockholder shall be entitled to one vote, in person or by proxy, for each share of the Capital stock owned by him.

ARTICLE VI.

No stockholder of this Corporation shall have the right to sell or pledge his stock, without first offering same to the stockholders, through the officers of this Corporation, upon allowing said stockholders TEN DAYS to purchase same, at BOOK VALUE, or receives same in PLEDGE, as may be desired by the owner of said stock, and no transfer of stock shall be binding upon this Corporation unless actually made on the Books of the Corporation, in the manner required by law.

ARTICLE VII.

The Charter of this Corporation may be modified or altered, or the Corporation may be dissolved, the capital increased or decreased, or liquidated in the manner as is now or may hereafter be prescribed by law.

THUS DONE and PASSED, at New Orleans, La., on the day and date first before written, in presence of Emanuel L. Weil and Orrin Beegle, competent witnesses of lawful age, residing in this Parish, who hereunto sign their names with said Appearers and me Notary.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE PLODDER.

The chief characteristic of the plodder is that he gets there. He never startles the world by an astounding display of intellectual agility or by an awe-inspiring spectacle of mental pyrotechnics—but when the roll is called at the end of the day's work, he answers, "Here." He is not generally an authority on up-to-date methods, and labor-saving devices are not a part of his every-day equipment—but he manages to get through with what he undertakes, and he seldom has to go back over his work to put the "finishing touches" on it. Other men gain the praise of the world by the rapidity with which they complete one piece of work and turn to another—but the plodder moils along in the obscure places, not caring for public applause but intent upon the completion of his task. While more gifted men are working easily and comfortably, he puts his shoulders to the wheel, bearing the heat and burden of the day. Others may beat the plodder to the goal—but none is surer of reaching it in the end. The man of genius sees quickly and acts with dispatch—and may or may not receive his reward; the plodder takes his time in seeking and in doing—but he passes through the triumphal arch just the same. Thank God for the plodders!

WAR OR PEACE?

Nothing is truer than the statement that the future is in the hands of the youth of to-day. Inevitably those who are now children will, when they have come to manhood and womanhood, take the place of those who have served their generations in the days past. The attitude of these new leaders will be largely determined by the influences that were brought to bear upon them as they were growing up, whether those influences were good or bad. It is for this reason that we are unalterably opposed to legislation that will, through compulsory military training, familiarize our young people with the thought of war, train them in the services of war, accustom them to the practice of war and, unconsciously, perhaps, but really nevertheless, predispose them to the waging of war. We are in favor of such physical training in our schools as will develop and maintain vigorous bodies, fit for the carrying out of the most difficult and dangerous undertakings, but we are not in favor of a system of training that will instil into the minds of our people the idea that war is almost a necessary and normal part of our existence. We do not need, and we ought not to have in this nation a militaristic spirit, a militaristic policy and a militaristic program. We want peace in the future—not war; and the only way to insure it is to follow the paths that lead to peace. We believe that a vigorous and continuous campaign for the Americanization of immigrants, and the inculcation of the deeper principles of patriotism in the hearts of all our people will furnish a type of citizenship that will respond adequately to every appeal in time of national crisis.

REPRESENTATIVE GOVERNMENT.

Everybody is aware of the fact that we are passing through, in this country, a series of critical situations, the outcome of which will affect seriously the whole future of our nation. Nobody is wise enough to know what that outcome will be: but all of us may well be concerned about some of the tendencies that are making themselves felt in our social, industrial, political, and religious life. They are too many for us even to undertake to suggest all of them at this time; but we do call attention to the fact that the whole question of representative government—"government of the people, for the people, by the people"—is being considered afresh in the light of happenings that have affected the attitude of large masses of people toward government of all kinds. It has been our proud boast that the United States has furnished the one great example of a successful democracy; and yet it is not at all certain that we have passed the experimental stage. We know that centralization of power is the tendency of all organizations and governments, and we know, too, that those who are entrusted with great authority do not always use it wisely. Arbitrary restrictions upon the long-exercised privileges of the people may become necessary under the stress of unusual circumstances; yet they may be imposed without serious consideration of all the issues that are involved. It is sometimes hard to draw the line between what constitutes free speech, for example, and seditious utterances. We would not err on the side that would give any aid or comfort to those who are out of sympathy with our ideals of government—but it is a dangerous procedure to undertake to prevent the legitimate expression of opinion. We need to move surely in our efforts to overcome the disintegrating forces in our government, but we should move slowly enough to be in the right. Radical repressive legislation is sometimes as dangerous as the freedom of speech and action which it undertakes to prevent.

MAKING MEN.

The world is always calling for men—real men. The demand is as strong to-day as ever before—maybe stronger—and the supply seems to be as limited. There is tragedy in a situation that finds official bodies anxiously searching the field over for men properly qualified to undertake certain responsible tasks, and then having to admit that they are not able to find them. Something must be wrong somewhere, or this condition would never exist. We do not know where the trouble is; it may be in the home, or in our educational system, or in our system of moral and religious training. Wherever it is, we need to find it and cure it. Making men is an infinitely more important business than making money; and yet we spend years in unremitting toil to do the one, and seem to expect the other just to happen without any special effort on the part of anybody. The time may have come for us to devote our energies to the making of men who can handle any situation that may arise, rather than to the creation of machinery that nobody seems to be able to run. The finest engine in the world will haul precious little freight unless there is a competent engineer in the cab.

THIS IN NEW ORLEANS.

We quote, without comment, the following news article, published in a prominent daily newspaper of New Orleans, on January 26: "Candles will be blessed in every Catholic church in New Orleans at 7 a.m. next Monday, and on Tuesday, Feb.3, the throats of all Catholics and others will be blessed after the masses in the morning, again in the afternoon, and in a great number of churches at night. This year greater significance attaches to the blessing of the candles and throats than ever before, principally because the candles blessed on this day are known to keep harm away from any one, while throats so blessed are free from soreness and other ills for a whole year." (!)

MONEY WELL SPENT.

Very few of us are likely to feel that we have not sufficient opportunity to give away all the money that we can very well spare. Our mail is full of appeals for various and sundry worthy causes, and almost every day we are personally solicited for contributions to deserving charitable and benevolent enterprises. We should remember, however, that many of these causes are altogether dependent upon the generosity of the public at large, and that those who have interested themselves in helping to support them have done so out of the goodness of their hearts—not for the sake of any material reward. Some of these appeals we may feel that we can afford to disregard; but there is one being made now that should be responded to with the feeling that duty and privilege are one. We refer to the appeal of the Near East Relief for the rescue of the starving population of Armenia. It is impossible to read the accounts of those who have visited that stricken country without being moved by a complexity of the deepest emotions; and the testimony of eye-witnesses is to the effect that the half of the suffering and sorrow of those people cannot be told. Hot indignation against the Turks does not relieve the fact that the victims of their brutality are literally starving to death by the thousands. We cannot save all of them—it is too late for that—but we can save some, and it for the remnant that we appeal. Be it little or much, the money given for the relief of the starving Armenians is money well spent.

THE DANGER OF PROSPERITY.

Abounding prosperity in material things is not always an unmixed blessing. We are prone to forget God as we begin to feel able to take care of ourselves. "The deceitfulness of riches" has lured many a man to destruction.

GOD'S SUPPORT.

Even as a nurse, whose child's imperfect pace
Can hardly lead his foot from place to place,
Leaves her fond kissing, sets him down to go,
Nor does uphold him for a step or two;
But when she finds that he begins to fall,
She holds him up and kisses him withal:
So God from man sometimes withdraws his hand
Awhile, to teach his infant faith to stand;
But when he sees his feeble strength begin
To fail, he gently takes him up again.

WHAT TITHING WILL DO.

By Rev. T. W. Noland, Presiding Elder, Lebanon District, Tennessee Conference.

At the quarterly conference on the fourth round of 1919, on the Algood circuit, under the head of miscellaneous business, a prominent layman of the town of Algood, said: "Five or six of us got together in a room of the bank the other night and were discussing the needs of our town, and decided that we would put into practice the doctrine of stewardship and tithing. We counted our tithe and found that the tithe of just a few of us alone would be enough money to pay our preacher a salary of $1200 and then have money left for the benevolences and repairing the parsonage. We decided we wanted a station next year." This church was one of a circuit of six, all of which were paying $800. So the request for a station was granted and the pastor there is now receiving $1200 from that church alone. At the first quarterly conference of this year, the church at Algood, as the result of tithing, had the preacher's salary for the whole year in the bank and all the Conference collections paid up in full.

As a result of the progress of the Methodist church at Algood, a superintendent of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., came to the presiding elder of the M. E. Church, South, and said: "Since your church is doing so splendidly the work needed at Algood, we have decided to withdraw from that town and turn over to the Methodist Church our interests there."

The Carthage mission was composed of two churches—Carthage, a strong country church and a very weak country church. This charge received $200 a year from the Board of Missions. A considerable number of the members at Carthage became tithers. As a result, the strongest church in the country was added to another circuit, and the church at Carthage and the very weak country church became self-supporting and are now paying this year a $1200 salary.

Livingston circuit was paying $700. At the end of the Conference year they decided they would put into practice these things that we have been preaching about tithing, and they came to Conference and asked that Livingston be made a station, and that church alone is now paying $1200, where the whole circuit paid only $700. This has been followed by the greatest revival the town has ever witnessed. They had 53 conversions and 43 joined the church.

Oak Mill Mission became self-sustaining, and by adding one church from the Algood circuit, that charge is now paying $1000. It paid less than $500 last year. The increase in the district was $5650 in the support of preachers. The Stewardship and Tithing Campaign was the principal cause of this remarkable increase.

In the Cumberland Mountains, near the Obion River, Rev. T. W. Nowland, presiding elder, chanced to meet a plain farmer, who told him his experience in about the following words: "My son was at the front in France. Naturally, I was profoundly concerned for him and carried the matter in prayer to God. As I prayed, I reached the point of making a complete dedication of myself to God, saying to Him, 'I will do whatever you want me to do.' A thought came that perhaps God would call me to preach. This, however, He did not do, but the conviction deepened upon me that I should tithe This I began at once, and have found it a wonderful means of grace."

THE PROPOSED CONSTITUTION FOR THE REORGANIZED AND UNIFIED METHODIST CHURCH.

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

The Joint Commission on Unification of Episcopal Methodism, which met in Cleveland in July, 1919, appointed an Ad Interim Committee to consider all the questions involved in the subject of Unification and to report back a plan to the Joint Commission for its action.

The Ad Interim Committee met in Richmond, Va., Nov. 4, 1919, and after two days of general discussion appointed a sub-committee of four, consisting of Edgar Blake, J. R. Joy, F. M. Thomas and James Cannon, Jr. This committee worked over the entire subject and presented to the full committee a plan for a Constitution for the reorganized and unified church, and this plan was transmitted by the Ad Interim Committee to the Joint Commission for its consideration and action.

The Joint Commission met at Fourth Avenue M. E. Church, South, Louisville, Ky., on Jan. 15, 1920, and continued in session until the evening of Jan. 21. The report of the Ad Interim Committee was presented, and, after some general discussion in the Joint Commission, the Commissions of the two churches met separately to consider the report. Both Commissions, voting separately, reported back suggestions of amendment which, along with other amendments proposed in the Joint Commission, were fully discussed, some adopted and some rejected, but the main outlines of the plan presented by the Ad Interim Committee were retained, and the following resolution was adopted by a vote of 44 to 5 (the votes in the negative all being cast by members of the Commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South):

"Resolved, We respectfully submit to the General Conferences of the two churches the following draft of a Constitution for the Methodist Church, together with recommendations for a method of procedure, as the best that we have been able to agree upon under the circumstances and under our instructions, and we submit the same for your consideration and decision."

The report of the Joint Commission under the above resolution will be presented to the General Conference of the Methodist Church which meets in Des Moines, Iowa, May 1, 1920. The Southern General Conference at its session in Atlanta in May, 1918, expressed its judgment that a special session of the General Conference should be held to consider the report on Unification, provided the Northern General Conference should take favorable action on said report. Therefore, if the Northern General Conference does take favorable action on the proposed Constitution at its approaching session, there will be a called session of the Southern General Conference, if the request of the General Conference of May, 1918, is complied with.

In view of the fact of his membership in the Ad Interim Committee and also of his membership in the committee of four which drafted the plan of the proposed Constitution, the writer has been requested by several members of the Commission to state the important features of the Constitution which has been submitted to the General Conferences of the two churches for consideration and action.

The proposed Constitution is like all other Constitutions in that it does not express in every particular the opinions and preferences of any one man. Probably every member of the Joint Commission would prefer a different statement of some one or more provisions, but that is true of the present Disciplines of the churches, and, indeed, of all constitutions. While that is true, it is also true that the proposed Constitution does represent the best combined judgment of the Joint Commission and their best solution of the various matters involved in a plan of Unification.

The writer will not enter into the details of the proposed Constitution, but will discuss briefly the action taken on the six outstanding questions: Regional Conferences, Protection of Minorities, Colored Membership, The General Conference, The Judicial Council and The Episcopacy.

Regional Conferences.

The Joint Commission, under its instructions was bound by the Chattanooga plan to effect Unification by a Reorganization, which would efficiently protect the rights of minorities in the unified church. To accomplish this purpose the membership of the united church is sub-divided into three groups: (A) White membership in the United States, (B) Colored membership in the United States, (C) Membership in foreign countries. The white membership in the United States is sub-divided into six regional jurisdictions, as follows: (1) Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey; (2) Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, North Carolina, and that part of Tennessee comprised within the boundaries of the Holston Conferences of the two churches; (3) Middle and West Tennessee, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi; (4) Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin; (5) Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Nevada, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, California, Hawaii and Alaska; (6) Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico and Arizona.

In three of the jurisdictions, 1, 4 and 5, a large majority of the membership will be composed of those who at present are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In three of the jurisdictions, 2, 3 and 6, a large majority of the membership will be composed of those who at present are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. By this arrangement the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Illinois, Kansas, Colorado, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and California, will be in jurisdictions in which members of the Methodist Episcopal Church are in a large majority. On the other hand, members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas, New Mexico and Arizona will be in jurisdictions in which members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are in a large majority.

By the proposed plan there is a grouping together in one reasonably compact jurisdiction of a membership having its own Regional Conference, which Conference has full power over all distinctively regional affairs within its area, including the power to elect from time to time the number of bishops allotted to it by the General Conference, subject to the confirmation of that body. Taken as a whole, the membership in each Regional Jurisdiction is homogeneous, and will probably work together efficiently and with a minimum of friction. The objection that the plan destroys in a measure the unity, which has characterized both churches in the past, by cutting the territory up into six jurisdictions, in the judgment of the writer, will not be sustained by the actual results. The territory covered at present by either church, or by the united church, is so vast and the membership so large that it has been increasingly evident there must be administrative areas, and the proposed plan provides for Regional Conferences for such areas which shall have full power to consider and legislate for their local needs. The Annual Conferences still remain as the final authority in the church, and still retain their relationship to the General Conference.

In the proposed plan the boundaries of any Regional Conference as given above cannot be changed without its consent for a period of twelve years succeeding the adoption of the Constitution, nor can it be changed at any time without its consent unless five of the seven Regional Conferences shall vote affirmatively.

Protection of Minorities.

Another result obtained by the adoption of the Regional Conference plan is the Protection of Minorities. By the proposed Constitution the General Conference is composed of delegates from the several Regional Jurisdictions. Whenever a majority of each of two Regional delegations in the United States shall so request, a vote shall be taken on any pending motion or resolution, including amendments to the Constitution, by Regional delegations, and it shall require the concurrence of two-thirds of the Regional delegations in the United States, the members of each Regional delegation voting as one body, to adopt said motion. The practical result of this provision is, so far as the South is concerned, that if any two Southern Regional delegations request that a vote be taken by Regional delegations on any pending motion or resolution, including amendments to the Constitution, it will require five out of seven Regional delegations in the United States to adopt said motion or resolution. A proposal to amend the Constitution under a similar call for a vote by Regional delegations would not only require the affirmative vote of five Regional delegations, but in addition the approval of three-fourths of the members of the several Annual Conferences present and voting upon the proposed constitutional change.

It is difficult to see how the right of minorities can be more carefully safeguarded than by this proposed plan, and in the opinion of the writer it would be exceedingly unreasonable to insist upon any greater protection.

Colored Membership.

The proposed Constitution groups into one Regional Jurisdiction the colored membership in the United States. A Regional Conference is provided for this Jurisdiction, which Conference will have full power over all distinctively regional affairs within its area, including the power to elect the number of bishops allotted to it by the General Conference, said election to be subject to confirmation by the General Conference. The plan, therefore, provides for separate congregations, separate district and Annual Conferences and a separate Regional Conference for the colored membership, and for colored bishops to be elected by the Colored Regional Conference.

It is distinctly provided that the privileges, powers and duties of a bishop elected by or for a Colored Regional Conference shall be limited to the Colored Jurisdiction by or for which he is elected. A colored bishop elected under the proposed Constitution cannot preside or perform any of the duties of a bishop in a white Annual or Regional Conference, or in the General Conference. The proposed Constitution provides that the Colored Regional Jurisdiction shall have not less than 20 or more than 42 delegates in the General Conference, and distinctly provides that the number of delegates from the Colored Jurisdiction shall never exceed five per cent of the total membership of the General Conference. On this matter of representation in the General Conference, the proposed Constitution does not follow either the Chattanooga plan or the Oklahoma recommendation. The Chattanooga plan stated: "We suggest that the colored membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Protestant Church and such other organizations of colored Methodists as may enter into agreement with them may be constituted and recognized as one of the quadrennial or jurisdictional conferences of the proposed reorganization. * * * The delegates in the first house (of the General Conference) shall be apportioned equally among the quadrennial conferences and elected under equitable rules to be provided therefor. The ministerial delegates in the second house shall be elected by the ministerial members in the Annual Conferences and the lay delegates by the laity within the Annual Conferences under equitable rules to be provided therefor."

The Oklahoma recommendation is as follows: "However, we recommend that the colored membership of the various Methodist bodies be formed into an independent organization holding fraternal relations with the reorganized and united church."

The Chattanooga plan suggests no distinction between the jurisdictional conference for colored membership and the jurisdictional conferences for the white membership, and, furthermore, suggests proportionate representation for the colored membership in the General Conference. The Oklahoma plan recommends that the colored membership be formed into an independent organization, with no representation in the General Conference. The Constitution proposed by the Joint Commission provides for a regional jurisdiction for the colored membership, limiting the powers of the bishops elected by that jurisdiction and restricting the representation of the Colored Jurisdiction in the General Conference to a maximum of five per cent. The proposed Constitution fully recognizes racial distinctions by placing the white and colored membership in entirely separate Jurisdictions, and also the difference in maturity of the two races by restricting the powers of the bishops of the immature race and also its representation in the governing body of the united church.

Personally, the writer believes that this plan is not only logical and practical, but eminently Scriptural, not only as it applies to work among the Negroes in the United States, but as it applies to work among all races in foreign lands. It provides a plan for the development of immature races, which, while it recognizes race consciousness and racial differences, by the organization of separate congregations, Annual and Regional Conferences, also provides through the General Conference for such assistance as the stronger, more mature race can and should give to the weaker, less-developed races. If we are sincere in our efforts to increase our membership among the Negroes of Cuba, Mexico, Brazil and Africa, we must face negro membership in the General Conference from these mission fields, and we cannot logically oppose the negro representation in the General Conference provided in this Constitution for the negro membership in the United States.

Moreover, the plan is practical and Scriptural. The Southern Methodist Church has never excluded negroes from its membership. It does not do so to-day, and it is unthinkable that it will ever take such an unscriptural position as to deny that the gospel of brotherly love and of Christian fellowship applies equally to the Negro as to any other race. While the plan provides for negro membership in the united church, both in the United States and in the foreign mission fields, it also, in the judgment of the writer, makes such additional provision as will make such membership to be helpful, not hurtful, to both races.

General Conference, Judicial Council and Episcopacy.

These three subjects are so interwoven that the discussion must of necessity somewhat overlap.

The proposed Constitution provides for a General Conference of not less than 670 nor more than 850 delegates, of which each White Regional Jurisdiction shall have not less than 100 delegates, and not more than 20 per cent of the total membership of the body. The Colored Regional Jurisdiction shall have not less than 30 nor more than 42 delegates, and the Foreign Regional Jurisdictions shall each have not less than 10 nor more than 40 delegates, provided that the number of delegates from the Colored or from any one of the Foreign Regional Jurisdictions shall not exceed five per cent of the total membership of the General Conference. The General Conference is given full legislative power over all matters distinctly connectional, but in all its activities it is subject to the limitations and restrictions of the proposed Constitution. A majority of the members of the General Conference cannot determine the constitutionality of a proposed action to which objection is raised. One-fifth of the membership of the body can send any action of the General Conference to the Judicial Council for review and decision, and in all cases the decision of the Judicial Council is final, provided that if on a constitutional question there shall be a vote of two-thirds of the members of the General Conference present and voting disapproving a decision of the Judicial Council, its construction shall be sent to the Annual Conferences for final approval or disapproval.

Judicial Council.

The Constitution provides that the Judicial Council shall be composed of fifteen ministerial and lay members to be nominated by a two-thirds vote of the General Superintendents and elected by the General Conference. By this method it is not required that members of the Council be elected proportionally from the several Regional Conferences or from the ministry and laity, but they will be elected because of their personal fitness for such work. Inasmuch as the General Superintendents are all elected by the White Regional Conferences in the United States, and three of the White Regional Jurisdictions are Northern and three are Southern, and inasmuch as it requires the vote of two-thirds of the General Superintendents to nominate members of the Council, it is exceedingly improbable that any objectionable or intensely partisan person will be nominated as a member of the Council.

The Judicial Council is given full power to review, upon constitutional grounds, the acts of the General Conference, the Associate General Conference and the Regional Conference, and to hear and determine questions of law and all other appeals lawfully presented, and its decision shall be final, except that on constitutional questions the method prescribed for amending the Constitution may be adopted to overrule the decision of the Judicial Council.

This provision for the establishment of a Judicial Council with the powers and limitations indicated above is of great importance. It protects the Constitution from the sudden whim of a bare majority of the General Conference, and furnishes a permanent, competent court of appeals, which has long been needed in our Methodism.

The Episcopacy.

The Episcopacy is embedded in the proposed Constitution, and cannot be abolished by the General Conference acting alone, but must be abolished by the constitutional process, if abolished at all. Power is given to the General Conference to fix the privileges, powers, and duties of the Episcopacy, to fix the number of bishops to be elected by each of the several Regional Conferences; to confirm their election; by a general rule to superannuate them upon reaching a determined age, and to retire them for inefficiency or unacceptability after a due notice and a proper hearing, provided that it shall require a two-thirds vote to retire a bishop without the concurrence of the Regional Conference in which his official residence is fixed; to assign a bishop for residential supervision to the Regional Jurisdiction by or for which he was elected, or for residential supervision to any Jurisdiction with the consent of the delegates of the Jurisdiction from which the bishop is to be taken, and to which he is to be assigned. The general superintendents may assign any bishop to any Annual Conference for presidential supervision, if a majority of the resident bishops of the Jurisdiction to which he is assigned shall concur in said assignment, except that a bishop elected by or for a Colored or Foreign Jurisdiction cannot be assigned to any Jurisdiction except to that by or for which he was elected.

The proposed Constitution seems to restrict somewhat the privileges and powers of the hishops as previously understood in the M. E. Church, South, and to increase to some extent the power of the General Conference in relation to the Episcopacy. But there is no real restriction placed upon the efficiency of the bishops. The Episcopacy is simply an instrument by means of which certain work is performed in the church. The conditions of 1920 are not those of 1820, and the methods of 1920 should not be those of 1820. The church itself, through its representative governing body, the General Conference, should have full power, subject to the Constitution, to determine by what methods and under what conditions the work of the church should be performed. It would be unreasonable for any one to insist that the church should not fix the privileges, powers, and duties of the Episcopacy, just as the church fixes the qualifications and duties of elders and deacons, and the power and duties of quarterly, district and Annual Conferences, namely, through its great representative body, the General Conference. Powers, privileges and prerogatives claimed for the Episcopacy which are not in accord with the thought and will of the church, must of necessity be the cause of much adverse criticism and needless irritation, and are a positive hindrance to the great work of the Episcopacy itself. The proposed constitution retains the Episcopacy and general itinerate superintendency, but wisely gives to the General Conference the power to define and fix the privileges, powers and duties of the bishops so as to secure the greatest possible efficiency and the best possible results.

The Appeal of the World's Needs.

The Commission on Unification has performed the duty assigned it, and has presented a plan for the unification of Episcopal Methodism. By the man who is really anxious for such unification, the writer believes that the proposed plan will be found to have merit, and to be the result of an honest effort to face all the difficulties and to solve all the problems involved. If a man does not desire unification, he will not favor this or any other reasonable plan which may be proposed.

The writer favors unification. The needs of the world are so pressing, so appalling, that they call for the laying aside of narrow provincialism and sectional and political differences by the following of Jesus that there may he an effort by the united church to meet these great needs. From the ever-increasing population of the cities of our own country, from the mass of foreigners in our midst, from every continent, indeed from almost every country, the appeal comes to Protestantism to carry the simple, uncorrupted message of the Master's love. Methodism is the vanguard of Protestantism, and in this and every land she should combine her forces under one leadership, she should abolish all lost motion, all useless competition, all waste of money and men, and with the motto of John Wesley on her banners—"The World is my Parish"—she should lead the way in the united effort of the whole church to save the whole world.

The writer fully understands that such a united Methodism as is proposed will contain men who will he far apart as to methods, plans, and policies, will disagree in their interpretation of Methodist usage and history, and he is certain that there will sometimes be friction and there may even be sharp contention among the leaders in the councils of the united church; but this is no new thing in church history. At the council of Jerusalem Paul withstood Peter to the face. The contention between Paul and Barnabas was so sharp that it caused their temporary separation. There are to-day differences of opinion among the leaders and in the councils of our own church. There are conservatives and progressives, reactionaries and radicals, and it is not likely that the proposed united church would contain men with more widely divergent views as to methods than are found to-day in our own church or in the Northern Methodist Church. The writer honestly believes that the proposed Constitution thoroughly safeguards all that is necessary for the efficiency and success of our work among the Southern people, and that the result of the proposed unification will be the advancement of the Master's kingdom in the earth.

RECOLLECTIONS OF REV. J. D. NEWSOM.

By Rev. Isaac D. Borders.

Easily one of the most unique, and assuredly one of the truest of all the good men I have known in this Methodist brotherhood, dear old Brother Newsom went home to Heaven a week before Christmas. Just how old he was I do not know, but I suspect he neared ninety. If my memory serves me rightly, the Conference Minutes used to say that he began his itinerant career in 1848, a dozen years before the great war that so tried men's souls in our Southland. Could he have had his own way, he probably would have continued active until the day of his death, for I never knew a man who so thirsted to preach. After his superannuation, living in the modest home provided for him at Shuqualak, he walked all the way up to Macon, ten good miles, in the hope that they would let him preach there.

It is not my purpose to essay his memoir. That will probably be done by a worthier hand, stamped with a larger knowledge of his history. I thought it might interest some of the brethren a little if I were to call to their attention the passing of this noble old hero of the Cross, who was one of the last links to bind us to the pioneer days when this splendid heritage upon which we have entered was being wrought out by their toils and sacrifices. Possibly I would not be thought unkind to his sainted memory if I also related one or two little anecdotes illustrating his marked individuality; he knew that I loved him, and he would not have minded.

When he threw his saddle-bags across his pony's back and as a young preacher boy fared forth to proclaim the Gospel of the Son of God, the now prosperous Delta was a wilderness. There stand throughout that rich territory to-day noble edifices which are the outgrowth of the arbors and the log huts in which John D. Newsom preached. Preachers receive stipends almost or quite as much per month as he received for a whole year of dangerous and toilsome exposure and indefatigable labor in a discouraging field. Our pride in our attainments is probably pardonable, but we should not forget that our success is built upon the heroism of just such men as he; men who counted not their lives dear unto themselves that they might establish the Kingdom of their Lord.

When I first knew Brother Newsom, he was already feeble. His faculties were even then impaired so that it was difficult for him to get his bearings in a strange place; so that I found it a pleasure to pilot him about. He was a not infrequent guest in my home when I lived in Brooksville, and I remember that one of his peculiarities was that he always wanted a coffee-pot well charged, which he would place on the coals of the hearth on retiring, drinking his favorite beverage very early in the morning, and, perhaps, sometimes during the night as well.

He was a man of quaint expressions, bright and ready with repartee. At a district conference at Artesia, he made a speech in which he deplored some tendencies which he observed in the society of that day. Joe Cook, then Superintendent of Schools at Columbus, himself as smart as a whip, took rather spirited exceptions to what the old brother had said, quoting, "Say not thou, what is the cause that the former days were better than these? For thou dost not enquire wisely concerning this." Brother Newsom was not prepared for such a tremendously vigorous rejoinder, and arose to say that he thought the young brother ought not to have said some of the things, calculated to wound as they were. Manly, generous, big-hearted Professor Cook instantly assured the patriarch that he had not meant any offense. "Well, you hacked your ears when you kicked!" Brother Newsom replied.

We shall never see his like again. These are different times, and they breed different men With incomparably superior advantages and opportunities, we should be better. But not many men will arise in this generation or in any other whose lives will he cleaner, truer, Christlier than that of this humble, modest, unpretentious but devoted servant of Jesus Christ who has been received into full connection in the Conference of the skies.

THE EVANGELISTIC CAMPAIGN IN LOUISIANA.

Thorough preparation ought to be made in each pastoral charge during the month of February for the coming evangelistic campaign. Literature has been sent to each pastor and it is hoped the survey will he put on in each church and completed if possible by February 29.

The following brethren have been appointed as district evangelistic directors: Rev. Geo. Fox, of Bunkie, La., for the Alexandria District; Rev. L. I. McCain, of Hammond, La., for the Baton Rouge District; Rev. A. D. Martin, of Lockport, La., for the Houma District; Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Lake Charles, La., for the Lake Charles District; Rev. W. R. Harvell, of Rayville, La., for the Monroe District; Rev. R. H. Harper, of New Orleans, La., for the New Orleans District; Rev. W. A. Manguin, of Bernice, La., for the Ruston District; Rev. W. W. Drake, of Shreveport, La., for the Shreveport District.

An evangelistic director for each church ought to be appointed and their names sent to the district director, who is to receive reports as to the progress of the organization. Likewise a minute man for each church ought to he appointed and his name sent to the district minute man.

In many of the Sunday schools, the survey is being put on very effectively and like results will obtain if put on for the whole congregation.

The Epworth League is being utilized in many places for the church survey and the young people seem to have a great delight in having some definite task given to them.

The evangelistic committee, which is appointed by the church conference, now has some definite work before them. Here is a fine opportunity to put people to work in a mighty effort to bring souls to Christ. A working church in which each individual is put to work for others, is the New Testament idea of a church. It is a work of faith, a labor of love and a patience of hope."

Nothing less will succeed. Will you do your best? ALBERT S. LUTZ.

THE CAUSE OF THE SUPERANNUATES.

Dear Brother Carley: Brother A. C. McCorkle was with us the first Sunday in February and presented the interest of the North Mississippi Conference Superannuate Endowment Fund in a clear, concise and forceful manner. He does not resort to "high pressure" methods, nor does he endeavor to work on the emotions of his congregation; but he states plain facts, appealing to the people to correct an injustice that has in the past reflected anything but honor upon our great church. Our people gladly responded, subscribing in cash and notes nearly $700, with a promise of substantial donations in the future.

The cause appeals in a strong way to our people. Methodists believe in a "square deal;" they have a keen sense of justice. and many rejoice that they have a chance to right a long-neglected wrong. This they will gladly do in the not distant future if Brother McCorkle is given a square deal. In this work the pastor, again, is the key-man. He can help or hinder, intentionally or unintentionally. To do the job right and in a "big way," Brother McCorkle must have the co-operation of the pastors. The pastor can help in many ways. I'll mention a few ways as a matter of suggestion:

1. Invite Brother McCorkle to his charge. He is human, and does not wish to go where he is not wanted. The pastor can tell his people that he is coming, why he is coming, and the object of his visit. He should not apologize in tone or word, but let his people know that he believes in the cause, that it should be remedied, and that he is glad a chance will be given them to do a big, worth-while thing.

2. Prepare the way for his coming. He has a large territory to cover and should not have to spend too long a time at one place. Present the claim previously from the pulpit himself, talk it on the streets to individuals, to church and non-church goers, in the homes to members and shut-ins; distribute literature bearing on the cause; tell the people of destitute cases he knows personally; advertise the service in his local paper, on billboards, with the tongue or in any other sane way; pray earnestly to God for His blessings upon the speaker, the service and the cause; and last, be enthusiastic and earnest himself. Such virtues are catching.

3. Give the agent a list of his members, indicating to him approximately what each member should give. Make it possible for him to find the members.

4. Let us all subscribe to the cause and show our faith by our works.

Yours for the Superannuates,

E. G. MOHLER.

UNIFICATION—WHY NOT?

By Rev. W. M. McIntosh.

I want to say that I have just read the editorial in the New Orleans Advocate on the plan of Unification. I heartily endorse it. Much has been written, said and done, to bring the two churches together; and as I see it, it will be a glorious day for our Methodism when this is accomplished.

There is just one argument against Unification, so far as myself and other old fellows that remember something about the war are concerned, and that is—prejudice. If the difficulty, which is largely the negro problem, is solved, why then should we not be re-united? If we don't unite, it will be hard to explain to the outside world the reason why, and Southern Methodism will be put in a bad light before all people. These are times when men are organizing for big things. This last war has given us world-wide views on the great problems of life. In many of our cities, banks are being consolidated into one great institution in order to control capital, and do great things. Why should not the church, in her day and generation, be as wise as men of the world? It seems to me that we could do our work so much better, both at home and abroad, by bringing these two bodies of Methodism together. If some of our pastors had to serve charges in Oklahoma, Missouri, and many places of the Northwest, where two Methodist churches are established in small towns and cities, it would not take them very long to be convinced that Unification is the right thing. After they had been there six months, all you would have to do would be to strike a tune of union and they would dance to the music. Why force these men to struggle in these places where two churches are established that are identical as to doctrine, and almost the same as to polity? Whenever we unite, we will stop this big waste of the energies of men and money. Therefore, from an economical standpoint, we should unite.

If these two great bodies become one, rich men will give their money to help endow our colleges, universities, and evangelize the world as never before. Business men are disposed to put their money where they think it will count most. We are living in troublous times, and the union of these two bodies would be a tremendous force in solving the problems of the day, and combating the wicked forces of the land. Catholicism is making a tremendous effort to control our great country; therefore, Protestantism should be united as never before—especially churches of like doctrine and polity. Some of our leaders intimate that if our church unites with the Northern church, we may count them out. This does not sound very democratic to me. I have been in the Southern Methodist Church for a long time, and do not take off my hat to any man when it comes to loyalty; but, if the Southern Church unites with the Northern Church, I will be glad to go with it with all my soul, body and strength. But, if our General Conference, composed of our wisest and best men, does not see that it is a wise thing to do, then I am going to be the same faithful and loyal man to the Southern Methodist Church I have always tried to be. Ours is a great church and we have no grounds for being ashamed of her marvelous history. I verily believe that the uniting of these two forces will be a great help and uplift not only to the Methodisms of America, but of the whole world.

Brethren, let us keep sweet spirits and not lose our heads. This is a time to be serious, thoughtful and prayerful, that no mistake may be made. Let us come together and help usher in the kingdom of our Lord. We love even the name of the dear old church as an organization, but we love the kingdom of our Lord more. May the time soon come when the knowledge of Christ may cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. And don't forget that in unity there is strength.

Iuka, Miss.

Now

the Methodist Church is calling upon its ministers and laymen to help our Lord in the great harvest of the kingdom.

You, know that the Son of Man came to seek and save that which was lost. He chose twelve ministers and sent them out.

Then he called seventy laymen and sent them two by two.

Help

us in this great movement—in making the survey; or as minute men; or as personal workers to win some one to Christ.

Others

Churches and individuals are praying and working. Join this effort for a million souls.

Work, pray, expect.

Louisiana Conference Evangelistic Committee

THE MINIMUM AT LEAST.

Dear Brother Carley: Please allow me, as chairman of the Board of Christian Literature of the Louisina Conference, to call attention to the article in last week's Advocate by Rev. J. F. Foster in regard to an increase in the circulation of the above named journal.

At their meeting last October, the Publishing Committee decided upon 10,000 as a minimum subscription list; the number allotted to the Louisiana Conference is 2300. This means new subscriptions and renewals.

If every preacher in charge will see to it that old subscribers renew, and, in addition, will get five new subscriptions, the minimum will have been secured.

The writer has recently sent in three renewals and fifty new subscriptions.

Sincerely,

P. H. FONTAINE.

Eunice, La.

"The Kingdom of God Will Come in a Day"

The Interchurch World Movement has set aside the week of March 28-April 4 as Christian Stewardship Week in the M. E. Church, South.

These are the foundation thoughts of stewardship:

—that God is the owner of all things.

—that man is steward under God, for his life, his work, and his money.

—that only by setting aside a first portion of his income can he make proper and effective acknowledgment of that stewardship.

March 28-April 4 has been chosen as Nation-wide Stewardship Acknowledgment Week in the M. E. Church, South.

The goal which the Churches together have set is 10,000,000 Christian Stewards regularly enrolled in the holy habit of giving of themselves and their resources.

"One more revival, only one is needed," said Horace Bushnell;

"The consecration of the money power to God. When that revival comes, the Kingdom of God will come in a day."

Horace Bushnell knew what he was talking about. If every member of every church were a steward under God the Church could do a generation of work in a single year.

Do this one great thing to hasten the coming of the Kingdom: enroll as a Christian steward in the M. E. Church, South, during the week of March 28-April 4.

A CHILD.

By Olive G. Owen.

A child am I, yet in me lies
Part of the future of the race;
A child, in whom the good and ill
Of ages past have left their trace.

A child—with right to dream and play;
To grow just as God's flowers do.
A child—look deep within my eyes
And you read God's message true.

Protect me now, that I may keep
The Flag of Freedom floating high;
Protect me—that the altar fires
Of Truth and Justice may not die.

Protect me, for the Master said:
"Let little children come to Me.
And ye, whate'er ye do to them,
Ye do it also unto Me."

Protect me—ye of larger growth,
Hear my appeal: Please take my hand
And lead me safely through the days
Of Childhood into Grown-up Land.

HOW BILLY WAS A SOLDIER.

"My, but I just wish I was growned up, so I could be a soldier! I s'pose by the time I'm a man the war will be all over."

"I sincerely hope it will, my boy," answered his father, gravely, "and that there will never be another. If there should be, I trust you will be ready to do your duty; but let me tell you, my son, a good soldier has a great many hard lessons to learn before he is fit for service. You can be learning many of them while you are growing up if you will, and you can find all the fighting you want every day of your life."

"Why, Father Baker, I'd like to know how," said Billy, stopping in amazement.

"One of the first and most important lessons a soldier has to learn is to obey promptly, without a question. I know a little boy who is very apt to question why he must do things he is told to do."

Billy looked discomfited.

"That's different," he said; "if I was a soldier, of course I'd obey."

"I'm afraid not, unless you had learned to do so before. Suppose you begin this very day to try to do just as you are told every time, without one question or murmur, will you? You can imagine that you are in a training camp."

"That will be fun," said Billy; "but I don't see what chance there is for fighting."

"Don't you? Well, we are all encountering enemies every hour of our lives, and either we overcome them or they conquer us. Sometimes we have to make a pretty stiff fight if we want to come off victorious. Every time you are tempted to say or do anything that is not strictly true you are face to face with the enemy Deceit. When you are tempted to think of your own pleasure first, Selfishness is trying to get the best of you. When there is work you ought to do and you try to shirk it, Indolence is the foe. Then there is Disobedience, Ill-Temper and—"

"Don't tell me any more please, it makes me tired, but I guess I can do most anything if I just make up my mind to it."

Billy," said mother, that very afternoon, "I want you to look after baby while I go down the street to do an errand."

"Oh, dear!" exclaimed Billy, fretfully, "I was going over to Tommy's, and we were going to have lots of fun. That's always the way; when I want to go anywhere I have to stay home to do something."

"I thought you were going to be a little soldier boy," said mother, gravely. "Isn't this a good time to begin? I shall not make you stay home; go to Tommy's if you wish; but I shall be disappointed not to be able to do my errand, and I shall be even more disappointed to have my soldier boy defeated."

Billy felt uncomfortable.

"I told Tommy I'd be sure to come," he said, "he will be 'specting me."

"Very well," said mother.

Billy waited a few minutes, hoping she would say more, but she did not.

"You most generally say I must keep my promises," he continued, but there was no reply.

Then he slipped out of the room, took his cap, and went outdoors.

"Aren't you ashamed of yourself?" something kept saying inside of him. 'You're a pretty soldier, to be beaten the first time liko this. You are selfish not to be willing to give up your play, and you are disobedient. You're no soldier at all unless you can fight better than this."

Billy was almost to the gate, when all at once he squared his shoulders and marched back double-quick.

"I most got beat," he said, "but not quite. You go right off and I'll take care of baby. But I wish it was as interesting and easy to be a soldier as it is to think about being one."—Kate S. Gates, in Lutheran Church Work and Observer.

AROUND THE WORLD IN FORTY VEHICLES.

"Now that the Atlantic has been crossed and there are plans afoot to fly over the Pacific, the day may not be far distant when some aerial Magellan will make an aeroplane tour around the world," says a bulletin of the National Geographic Society.

"There are still many corners of the world whero aeroplane, automobile and even the horse would be curiosities. And if a man set out to tour the globe and 'do as the Romans do' in respect to adopting native conveyances he would have to:

"Resort to a donkey in Spanish America and in the Holy Land;

"Climb aboard a camel to traverse African deserts;

"Cross some rivers of India on the inflated skins of bullocks, and others by a bridge of one rawhide rope;

"Submit to the sea-going motion of an elephant when he continued his journey on land;

"Get into a man-borne palanquin at Calcutta;

"Jolt over Far Eastern roads in a non-shock-absorbing cart drawn by oxen;

"And in China be prepared to climb into a jinrikisha, a sedan chair or a wheelbarrow."

A few of these curious means of travel are described in a communication to the society by O. P. Austin, as follows:

"In all parts of that great line of deserts, stretching from North Africa across Central Asia to Northwest China, the camel is everywhere in evidence; the total number in the world being estimated at about three millions.

"Not only is the camel a valuable freight carrier, but he serves as the traveling car of the Rockefellers, the Carnegies, the Morgans, and the Harrimans of the desert. When he is chosen for this more pretentious service, a light framework is placed upon his back and covered with cloths to screen the occupants from the sun and the observation of the passers, and decorated with pompons of varied colors. In this gorgeous compartment, which may not be inaptly termed the 'palace car of the desert,' the master of the camel train places his wife and children, his choicest merchandise, his cooking utensils, and daily requirements, and travels in state, the observed of all observers, the envy of the wandering native of the desert.

"On the Euphrates and the Tigris are still retained the curious water transports of centuries ago—the raft of skins and the circular boats. These rafts are sustained by inflated skins, prepared for this especial purpose, and after the raft floats down the river to its destination the inflated skins are removed, the air permitted to escape, and the skins carefully folded and carried back to the upper waters, where they are again inflated and used as the support of another, and still another raft.

"Even more curious, to the eyes of the traveler from other parts of the world, are the circular boats, made of wickerwork and covered with skins, or made water-tight with pitch, which are still in daily use on the Tigris and the Euphrates Rivers.

"The three principal methods of transportation of people in Central and Southern China are the sedan chair, the jinrikisha, and the wheelbarrow.

"Probably more freight and more passengers are transported in China by the wheelbarrow than by any other land method. The wheelbarrow there used differs from that used by us, in the fact that the wheel is set in the center and thus supports practically the entire load, while the handles are supported in part by a strap or rope over the shoulders of the man who operates it. As a result, the wheelbarrow coolie in China will transport nearly a half ton on his vehicle."—Exchange

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

WITHDRAWAL OF SPECIAL OFFER.

As previously announced, the special offer to send the Advocate one year for one dollar where it was taken in every home represented in the membership of a church, has been withdrawn. We were forced to take this action because the increase in the cost of materials since the offer was made has been so great as to involve us in serious financial difficulties if it should be continued. It was with the utmost regret that we decided upon the withdrawal, and we did so only after the most careful consideration, stating, however, that we would still receive the lists of those who had already taken definite steps to accept the proposition.

In order to secure absolute accuracy in the lists that have been sent in, we will, in a short time—probably within two weeks—send a duplicate of the mailing list to those pastors whose churches have accepted the proposition. We have been unable to do this in all cases thus far on account of the tremendous amount of clerical labor involved. After the lists have been received, we shall appreciate a prompt notification if any errors are discovered. We will give in the Advocate in the near future the full results of the "Every Family" proposition.

DEATH OF A GREAT EDITOR.

Dr. E. C. E. Dorion, editor of Zion's Herald, passed away at his home in Boston, Mass., on January 29. He succeeded Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst as editor of Zion's Herald a little less than a year ago; but in that time he had established his position as one of the most vigorous, gifted and influential leaders of religious thought in America. At the time of his election to the place he held at his death, Dr. Parkhurst wrote: "There is no one else in the Methodist Episcopal Church so well fitted for the place, no one who could begin to match the success which I am sure he will make. I know him intimately and joyously, and it is impossible for me to commend him too highly."

Those who are familiar with Zion's Herald know that it is one of the great religious newspapers of the nation. It attained its high place under the guilding hand of Dr. Parkhurst—and it maintained it after Dr. Dorion took charge. Religious journalism has suffered a great loss in the death of this brilliant thinker, enthusiastic worker, big-hearted friend, devout Christian. We lament his passing, as do thousands of those who had come to feel an invisible bond of friendship with one whom they had never seen.

COMPOSITION OF THE FIRST GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE UNIFIED CHURCH.

On motion of a member of the Northern Commission, the Joint Commission on Unification voted unanimously in favor of a recommendation that the first General Conference of the unified church, if unification shall be consummated, shall consist of 800 delegates—400 from each church. While this would not be the division according to proportionate representation, it was graciously suggested by the Northern commissioners that equal representation would facilitate the carrying out of the provisions of the Plan of Unification.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle, of Rienzi, Miss., is very hopeful over the outlook on his new charge.

"We are receiving many kindnesses at the hands of our people," writes Rev. P. H. Howse, of Prentiss, Miss.

Rev. J. B. Randolph serves a choice people at Winona, Miss. We are not surprised to learn that the work there is making satisfactory progress.

Brother T. F. Smith, local Centenary treasurer from Pelican, La., was a visitor to New Orleans recently. We appreciate his call at the Advocate office.

Rev. A. D. Martin has been appointed by the presiding elder of the Houma District. Rev. Martin Hebert, to serve the Bayou Blue charge. His address is Bourg, La., Box 28.

Rev. S. B. Watkins, of De Soto, Miss., has fallen very much in love with the appreciative people he serves, and he is looking forward to a successful year's work. He covets the prayers of all good people to that end.

Brother W. A. Price, of Carpenter, Miss., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call while in the city a few days ago. He is a member of the "Old Guard," having been a subscriber to the Advocate for forty years.

Rev. W. H. Lane is beginning his fourth year at Rankin Street Church, Jackson, Miss., under the most favorable auspices. The pastor's salary has been substantially increased, and there are other indications of a prosperous year.

We regret to learn that Rev. J. C. Ellis, our pastor at New Augusta, Miss., has been slightly indisposed recently, the symptoms suggesting that he is the victim of the "flu." We trust that he will be speedily restored to health.

Rev. J. J. Brooks, of Dublin, Miss., is now in the 51st year of his ministry. He is serving his present charge for the fifth year in succession, and the fact that his salary has been increased more than $1000 is a pretty good sign that all goes well.

Rev. T. A. Ferguson is beginning his third year at Hermanville, Miss., under the most favorable conditions. The pastor's salary has been increased $200 over last year, and the official board has agreed to take care of all the Conference assessments.

"I am at the University of Oklahoma City. This is a great place, and we are having a great time out here; but I like to keep in touch with the North Mississippi men." So writes Rev. W. L. Broome in renewing his subscription to the Advocate.

Press dispatches on Monday announced the death, at his home in New Jersey, of Dr. J. M. Buckley, for many years editor of the Christian Advocate (New York), and one of the most distinguished ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The Louisiana Conference Committee on Evangelism met in New Orleans on Friday of last week. Rev. Winans Drake, of Shreveport, was the out-of-town member present. Active preparation is being made for a great evangelistic work in Louisiana this year.

Miss Belle Shoemaker, of Rose Hill, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate states that she has been receiving it for twenty-six years, and that she looks forward to its arrival with eager interest. We greatly appreciate such kindly expressions.

Rev. and Mrs. D. Y. Register, of Livingstone, Ala., are rejoicing over the arrival of a fine son, James Bascom, on January 4. Mrs. Register is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. C. Ellis, of New Augusta, Miss. We extend hearty congratulations to parents and grandparents.

Mr. John F. Edington, who was the official tabulator of the Centenary reports, has been appointed publicity manager of Lake Junaluska. Extensive improvements are being made on the grounds and buildings in preparation for the many gatherings that will be held there next summer.

Brother Wm. B. Rownd, an honored member of our church at Springfield, La., has recently been in the Presbyterian Hospital, of this city, for medical care. We regret to learn through his pastor, Rev. J. Wilson Brown, that his condition is serious. We trust that he may soon be restored to health.

Brother D. W. McLean, of Longville, La., writes to say that while the church at Pass Christian may claim the honor of having the first woman as a steward in Mississippi, Longville claims it for Louisiana, Mrs. W. E. Switzer having been elected to that office in the latter part of October, 1919.

Rev. Briscoe Carter, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, Louisiana Conference, was a visitor to New Orleans one day last week. We know of few men who are better informed as to the work of the church at large than is Brother Carter. He is master of the details of his own district.

Rev. W. J. Wood writes that he received a warm reception on the Duck Hill circuit, North Mississippi Conference. The good people gave him a good pounding as soon as he arrived, and they have been keeping it up. Congregations are increasing steadily. Sixty were present at a recent prayer meeting.

Our work at Mooringsport, La., is moving along splendidly under the leadership of Rev. R. T. Ware. The congregations are good all the time, and at the night services the house is crowded. Mooringsport is one of those towns which have proved that a full-time appointment strengthens the work in every way.

Just as we go to press, we learn that Rev. S. L. Pope, presiding elder of the Winona District, North Mississippi Conference, was called to Little Rock, Ark., on Sunday, Feb. 8, to attend the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Sara Emmerson, who died after an operation. Our deepest sympathy goes out to our brother in his hereavement.

Rev. A. S. Brisco, writing from Durant, Miss., requests us to state that the figures in the recently published Minutes of the North Mississippi Conference are in error in showing that his former charge, Duck Hill, lacked $200 of paying its Conference assessments in full. As a matter of fact, all the claims were paid in full, as his vouchers show.

We are sorry to learn that Rev. H. W. Bowman, presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, Louisiana Conference, has lately been confined to his home by illness—not serious, but interfering somewhat with his work. The affairs of the district are in good shape, as might he expected. Great emphasis is being laid upon the evangelistic campaign.

Brother J. T. Buckley, of Winona, Miss., gave a subscription to the Advocate to his wife as a bridal present when they were married, February 4, 1874, and it has been a weekly visitor to the home since that time. Brother Buckley himself has been reading the Advocate for sixty-three years, his mother having been a subscriber to it before the Civil War.

Press dispatches last week announced that Dr. F. N. Parker had been elected chancellor of Emory University, to succeed Bishop W. A. Candler, resigned, and that Dr. H. A. Boaz had been elected chancellor of Southern Methodist University, to succeed Dr. R. S. Hyer, resigned. Our information does not extend beyond the newspaper announcements.

Rev. P. H. Grice, of Meadville, Miss., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Tuesday of last week. He reported that the pastor's salary for his charge was increased several hundred dollars at the first quarterly conference, and that the outlook for the year is encouraging. He spoke in very high terms of the sermon preached by the presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Leggett, at the quarterly conference, which was held at Bude.

We regret to learn that Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, pastor of First Church, Shreveport, La., has been compelled to take a brief respite from his labors on account of his health. He will spend a month in Florida, in the hope that his recuperation will be rapid in that balmy climate. Dr. Sexton is one of the most successful pastors in our church. His many friends throughout the connection will wish for him a speedy restoration to perfect health.

Brother A. M. Mayo, of Lake Charles, La., one of the most faithful and energetic laymen in the Louisiana Conference, chairman of the Lake Charles District Minute Men, has been investigating the attendance of laymen at the sessions of the Annual Conference. In 1918, there were not more than 15 present at the Conference in New Orleans. The record was a little better in 1919, there being 24 at Ruston, out of a possible 56. He is hoping that the record will be very much better this year.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, the distinguished president of Whitworth College, honored the Advocate office with a visit on Friday of last week. We learned from him that very great improvements will soon be under way at Whitworth. A three-story brick dormitory is to be built, another story added to Margaret Hall, a gymnasium and swimming pool constructed, a Y. W. C. A. "Hut" erected, and an ornamental fence is to be put around the entire campus, all at an expense of something like $100,000. We congratulate the Methodists of Mississippi upon the record this great school has made and is making.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Louisiana Conference Board of Missions, held in New Orleans last Friday, Mr. J. M. Way, Secretary of the Department of Minute Men and Lay Speakers, of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, was present. Others present were, Rev. W. W. Holmes, Lake Charles; Rev. A. J. Gearheard, Bogalusa; Rev. J. G. Snelling, New Orleans. The object of the meeting was to select a Conference Centenary Secretary. After careful consideration, Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, who has had several years' successful experience in educational work in the State, and who has also had large business experience, was chosen. He will take up the duties of his office on February 20.

THE ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN FOR 1920.

The Ultimate Goal:

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE IN EVERY METHODIST HOME IN LOUISIANA AND MISSISSIPPI.

The Immediate Goal:

TEN THOUSAND PAID-IN-ADVANCE SUBSCRIBERS BY MARCH 15th.

The Object:

TO HELP ALL OUR PEOPLE TO BECOME INTELLIGENTLY INTERESTED IN THE WORK OF THE CHURCH AND EFFICIENTLY ENGAGED IN PROMOTING ITS INTERESTS BY INCREASING THEIR INFORMATION AND MINISTERING TO THEIR SPIRITUAL LIFE.

What the Advocate Is:

A SIXTEEN-PAGE RELIGIOUS NEWSPAPER, PUBLISHED FIFTY-TWO TIMES A YEAR, OWNED AND CONTROLLED BY THE LOUISIANA, THE MISSISSIPPI, AND THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

The fifty-two issues aggregate 832 pages a year—some advertising, but mostly reading matter. Some of its features are:

Brief editorial comment upon matters of interest, and discussion of important movements and measures in the church and in the religious world generally.

Helpful and interesting contributed and selected articles on various subjects.

The Home Circle—a department devoted especially to the children and young people. containing clean stories and poems, and many interesting and valuable bits of information.

Departments devoted to the interests of the Sunday school and the Woman's Missionary Society.

Many brief but interesting reports of the work of local churches throughout the three Conferences.

A column or more each week of notes that deal largely with people and events.

Full official announcements of quarterly conferences, and many other important official notices.

SOME THINGS THAT EVERY INTELLIGENT METHODIST OUGHT TO KEEP INFORMED ABOUT THIS YEAR:

The Evangelistic work of the Church.
The Plan of Unification.
The Educational Campaign.
Constitutional Prohibition and Other Moral Reforms.
The Issues involved in the Interchurch World Movement.

THE ADVOCATE WILL FURNISH THE INFORMATION.

THE COST: AS LITTLE AS COULD BE EXPECTED—$1.50 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

This is less than three cents a week! There are fifteen Conference organs in our church; the subscription price of eight of them is $2.00 a year, and the price of one is $2.50 a year. The New Orleans Christian Advocate wants to maintain its present price of $1.50—but it needs the ten thousand paid-in-advance subscriptions by March 15 to do it.

NOW IS THE TIME FOR EVERYBODY TO HELP—ARE YOU HELPING?

There are 160,000 Methodists in Louisiana and Mississippi; surely 10,000 of them will willingly give $1.50 for their church paper for one year.

THE CAMPAIGN IS ON! SUCCESS IS ASSURED IF WE GO TO WORK! LET'S AT IT!

10,000 by March 15!

WM. NEAL SIBLEY was born in Montgomery County, Mississippi, on March 11, 18644, and died at Rome, Miss., on November 9, 1919. The earthly life of Will Sibley has come to an end. He is called from his sufferings. For many years Mr. Sibley had been a great sufferer, but he bore up under his trouble manfully and accepted with patience his afflictions. He was always pleased to have his friends come to see him and talk to him. On my regular monthly visits to the home, he always met me with a smile and gave me his hand in token of the hearty welcome his heart felt but his tongue, on account of paralysis, could not utter. He joined the Methodist Church and was made steward when quite a young man under the pastorate of the late W. S. Lagrone; which office he continued to fill until he moved from Duck Hill to Rome in 1900, where, with his brother and sisters, he was very successful in business. He was a liberal supporter of the church, and the Sibley home has always been open to Methodist preachers; and many of them have enjoyed its hospitality. In the days when Rome was a small village, with only a few Methodists, the help of Mr. Sibley meant a great deal to the church. He made a great many friends who mourn their loss, and extend their sympathy to the bereaved loved ones.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions of respect from the Galloway Memorial Class of the Houston Methodist Sunday School.

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst our beloved friend and Sunday school worker, Mrs. J. M. Massey, and

Whereas, we feel that in the death of this earnest Christian character our Sunday school and church have sustained an irreparable loss; therefore be it resolved:

1. That we cherish the memory of Mrs. Massey, whose example we shall strive to emulate, and whose memory will ever be a benediction.

2. That we extend to her bereaved loved ones and friends, who with tearful eyes and aching hearts yearn—

"For the touch of the vanished hand,
And the sound of a voice that is still,"

our deepest sympathy, and commend them to the care of the loving Father who has promised, "My grace is sufficient for thee."

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the relatives of the deceased, one be recorded in the minutes of this class, and that copies be sent to the Times Post, New Orleans and Nashville Christian Advocates for publication.

FROM HARPERVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: The new year starts off very well with us. We have had our quarterly conference. Brother Moore came and preached a good sermon, and held the quarterly conference with all ease. He made a fine impression upon the officials, some speaking in high terms of him and his start as P. E. We have planned our meetings, have help for all except two. We just want a revival this year on our charge. The stewards made the pastor's salary $1100, and $100 appropriation makes it a $1200 salary, an increase of $655 over the year 1917 (the year before we came here). Pray for us in the work. R. H. NUXATED IRON IS USED BY OVER 3000000 PEOPLE ANNUALLY IN THIS COUNTRY ALONE TO HELP BUILD UP THEIR HEALTH STRENGTH AND ENDURANCE

Look around at the men and women you meet in a single day. One glance is enough to tell the ones with plenty of rich, red blood, strength and physical energy to back up their mental power and make them a success in whatever they undertake.

Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, says that to help make strong, keen, red-blooded Americans there is nothing so valuable as organic iron—Nuxated Iron. It often increases the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down people in two weeks' time. It is conservatively estimated that Nuxated Iron is now being used by over three million people annually, and it has been used and endorsed by such men as Ignace Jan Paderewski, Ex Premier of Poland and Master Pianist; United States Judge G. W. Atkinson, of the Court of Claims of Washington; also former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr, of Chicago, and others. Nuxated Iron is dispensed by all good druggists everywhere.

THE OWL TONIC

Acts better than calomel or pills and does not gripe. Especially beneficial for colds, chills, fever, malaria, and lagrippe. Five or six doses will positively stop any case of chills and if then taken as a tonic the fever will not return. Excellent as a tonic for that tired, achy feeling caused from malarial colds and lagrippe—troubles so common among Southern people. Sold on its merits under a money-back guarantee by all dealers.

FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS.

HASTINGS' SEEDS

ANY one who has ever planted Hastings' Seeds knows what can be expected from them. Gardeners who have never used them have a pleasant surprise in store. Successful crops depend on planting the right seeds. Hastings' Seeds are grown for Southern soils. A packet of Hastings' Seeds will prove more than a page of print.

THE TEST OF TIME

When an article is without merit public sentiment condemns it. It immediately dies a natural death. When an article has merit, it will be everlastingly in demand. Gray's Ointment has now been used for a full round century. No greater proof can be offered of its effectiveness. One hundred years of honest, good old-fashioned value for money received has made it a family word in every household. Effective for sores, boils, burns, cuts, bruises, stings, eczema and the many forms of skin eruption. Ask your druggist. If he can't supply you send his name to W. F. Gray & Co., 800 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn., and a liberal sample will be sent you free.—Adv.

RAMON'S LIVER PILLS

A CHANGING ATTITUDE IN FAVOR OF PROTESTANTS.

A little experience on landing serves to illustrate the small estimate in which the Romish priests are held by the Cuban people.

I brought with me a box of slides for an illustrated lecture on our mission fields. The inspector was undecided as to whether I should pay duty upon them, so sent to the man higher up. I unlocked and opened the box, and the officer began taking out and looking at the beautiful Centenary slides. "I have brought them for a lecture," I said. "They are illustrations of religious, educational and philantropic work of my church in various countries." "The gentleman is a priest?" he asked. I replied that I was a Methodist minister, and lectured to inform our people.

Then the custom's officer gave me a story and some comments. "Oh, that is better," he said. "Why, do you know, a padre came through the custom house just recently and tried to smuggle through thirty wrist watches. And another said his trunk contained only clerical robes, but we found ladies' neckwear and other expensive apparel. 'Just some little mementos for your lady friends, I suppose,' I told him. He looked sheepish, and said, 'Yes.' And these are not the only cases we've had."

I told him that we Protestant ministers always wanted to do the right thing by the civil governments. Then it was that he let himself out. Leaving his desk and accompanying me all the way down to the door, he said in part:

"Indeed, I have noticed the difference between you and the Romish padres. You are gentlemen of intelligence and honor. You stand for higher moral ideals, and the things you teach and practice are what this people needs. You are fitted to be moral leaders, because you marry and live honorably in our society. It is a great pity that all of our people cannot be brought to see the real character of the priests on the one hand, and, on the other, of the Protestant ministers. I wish you success." He bade me a most cordial and courteous adieu, offering me his services.

His attitude is that of the vast majority of the best Cuban men, who really want to see a better type of morality and religion in their country, and who have the highest confidence in and respect for the Protestant ministers, while despising and distrusting the Romish padres.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it: The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

FROM MAYHEW, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Please allow me space in the Advocate to write a few words in regard to the Mayhew circuit. The new year has brought us to the Mayhew charge, and I am glad to say that we are delighted to be with this good people. Everything is moving on very nicely. Our salary has increased about 25 per cent. The people of Mayhew are very, very good to us. They have brought us many good things. I feel that this will be the greatest year of my life, and am praying that there will be souls born into the Kingdom of God. I have only five appointments to fill monthly; I give Sessums half time, and the other four, half; so you see I will be busy on my job. Our first quarterly conference was held at Mayhew on January 28, with good reports. I feel I have the prayers and co-operation of the good people of the Mayhew charge, and this being true, I am praying for, hoping for, and expecting a genuine Holy Ghost revival over the charge.

Try This For Your Health

For diseases which do not readily yield to drug treatment, such as chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, rheumatism, uric acid poisoning, and diseases of the kidneys, bladder, and liver, the best physicians send their wealthy patients to the famous mineral springs. Some even spent months at the Spas of Europe and were almost invariably benefited, or permanently relieved.

I believe that the Shivar Spring is the greatest mineral spring ever discovered, and I believe it so firmly that I offer to send you enough water for a three week's treatment (two five gallon demijohns) on my guarantee that if it fails to benefit your case I will refund the price. You would hardly believe me if I told you that only about two out of a hundred, on the average, say that they have received no benefit. The water is restoring thousands. It restored my health when my friends and physicians thought my case was incurable and I am willing and anxious for you to match your faith in the Spring against my pocketbook. If I win you become a life-friend of the Spring. If I lose I will be sorry for you but I will appreciate your courtesy in giving the water a trial and will gladly refund your money on request. Sign the following letter:

CHARTER.

STATE OF LOUISIANA,
PARISH OF ORLEANS.

BE IT KNOWN, That on this Thirty-first day of December, Nineteen Hundred and Nineteen,

Before me, JOSEPH LAUTENSCHLAEGER, a Notary Public in and for the Parish of Orleans, State of Louisiana, duly qualified, personally came and appeared the several persons whose names are hereinafter subscribed, all of full age of majority, who declared that availing themselves of the laws of this State, relative to the organization of corporations, they do hereby covenant and agree to form themselves into a Corporation for the objects and purposes, and under the following stipulations to-wit.:

ARTICLE I.

The name and title of this Corporation shall be the "RELIABLE AUTO SALES COMPANY, Inc." It shall enjoy corporate existence for a term of 99 years from date, unless sooner dissolved. It shall have, enjoy and exercise all rights, powers and privileges now granted by law, or hereafter granted, to corporations of this character, especially the right to hold, receive, purchase, alienate, sell, mortgage, pledge, rent or lease property, real, personal and mixed, in fact anything permitted by the law necessary and convenient for carrying out the objects and purposes of this Corporation.

ARTICLE II.

The domicile of this Corporation shall be in the City of New Orleans, Louisiana, where all citations, or other legal process, shall be served on the President and in his absence on the Secrtary-Treasurer.

ARTICLE III.

The objects and purposes of this Corporation are hereby declared to be the buying and selling of Autos, trucks, tractors and all their parts and accessories, and everything pertaining to that line of business; also the operation of a general garage, and anything else that may be necessary to or incidental to said business.

ARTICLE IV.

The Capital stock of this Corporation is hereby fixed at the sum of TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS, divided into 100 shares of the par value of One Hundred Dollars each, to be issued in the manner and for the consideration prescribed by law. All shares to be full paid and non-assessable. The Capital stock may be increased when found necessary by a vote of 2-3 of all the capital stock at a meeting called for that purpose.

ARTICLE V.

All the Corporate powers of this Corporation shall be vested in and exercised by a board of Directors to be composed of Three Stockholders, two of whom shall constitute a quorum. The following named stockholders shall constitute the first Board of Directors, viz.: Will J. Morgan, 344 Carondelet Street; Henry J. Prados, 3338 Perrier Street; Rufus H. Prados, Bay St. Louis, Miss., with the said Will J. Morgan, as President; Rufus H. Prados as Vice President, and Henry J. Prados, as Secretary-Treasurer, and they shall hold their office until the first Monday of January, 1921 or until their successors are elected and qualified, on which day the election shall take place, or as soon thereafter as possible.

All stockholders' meetings, including the annual meeting for the election of officers and directors shall be preceded by written notice, delivered personally or mailed to the last known addresses of the stockholder, 15 days before such meeting; provided the stockholders shall always have the right to waive such notice.

If any vacancy occurs on the Board of Directors the stockholders shall name or elect a successor to fill the vacancy until the next general election. The election of Directors shall be by ballot, and each stockholder shall be entitled to one vote, in person or by proxy, for each share of the Capital stock owned by him.

ARTICLE VI.

No stockholder of this Corporation shall have the right to sell or pledge his stock, without first offering same to the stockholders, through the officers of this Corporation, upon allowing said stockholders TEN DAYS to purchase same, at BOOK VALUE, or receives same in PLEDGE, as may be desired by the owner of said stock, and no transfer of stock shall be binding upon this Corporation unless actually made on the Books of the Corporation, in the manner required by law.

ARTICLE VII.

The Charter of this Corporation may be modified or altered, or the Corporation may be dissolved, the capital increased or decreased, or liquidated in the manner as is now or may hereafter be prescribed by law.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Superintendent and His Helpers will help you—try it a year for only twenty-five cents.

Vaiden, Durant, Goodman, Pickens, and Richland have promised to order the literature on evangelism and study it at the prayer meeting hour.

If the parents are evangelistic, the home will be evangelized; if the teachers are evangelistic, the school will be evangelized; when that is done, the community will be evangellzed.

Never before has any plan been offered whereby every unsaved individual in the community shall have the opportunity of accepting Christ. Surely the Spirit of God moved upon our leaders to render this help in a time like this.

If you can invent a more effective plan than the one offered by the General Sunday School Board for making the Every Member Canvass, by all means use your plan. If you think bolding a revival meeting once a year will save and keep the people saved, continue that method.

What did Christ come to do? "To seek and save the lost." What is my business as a preacher? Put on the Every Member Canvass and the Evangelistic Campaign. The difference is in words only. Let us get at it in dead earnest. After the work is thoroughly done and the souls are won, the angels will rejoice and so will we. The devil alone will criticise. He is good at that.

Taking a "Special" for missions in your Sunday school is evangelism extended; it is evangelism by proxy. We have sixty-five small specials offered our Sunday schools in this Conference and a dozen larger ones. You can get a share in the Girls' Dormitory of Havana, Cuba, for fifty dollars a year. Write your District Superintendent of Missionary Education for one of these shares before they are all taken by your neighbors.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Wesley Bible Class Federation should be uppermost in the mind of every Methodist in Louisiana. The Federation will bring to every delegate just what the home school needs. I want to call your attention to some things of special interest in regard to this great meeting: (1) It is a combination of lectures and conferences; (2) It is a school of methods, giving direct instruction on the whole school, (a) Elementary, under Miss Kennedy, Superintendent of Elementary Department of our church, (b) Intermediate-Senior, under Mr. M. W. Brabham, also of the Central office, and, (c) Young People-Adult, under Rev. W. C. Owen, who is of the Central office; (3) Pastors cannot do anything better that to see to the selection of the best delegates for this Federation. Some can pay their own way and others will have to be helped. Where you bave a good person in your school who should attend this meeting, make some one responsible for the raising of the funds, and send such delegate. Let me remind you of the Elementary Department in the Federation and, when you can, select a delegate who is teaching or preparing to teach in that department. Divide your delegation as best you can.

As soon as you can select your delegates and when Chairman of Entertainment Committee is announced, send in your names at once. It will be necessary for every delegate to have assignment before reaching Shreveport. I say this because it will be most difficult to provide homes, since the city is headquarters for North Louisiana oil fields and abnormal conditions exist. Do not take this as an excuse for not coming, but select delegates at once, and be ready.

Put up the POSTER in public place as soon as it arrives.

Recipe For Gray Hair

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

Renwar vs. Rheumatism.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says, "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanatorium treatment, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." For sale by druggists, price 50c; or by mail on receipt of price from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Adv.

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HAIR

She Mixed Sulphur with It to Restore Color, Gloss, Youthfulness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your bair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, you bair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.—Adv.

BEAUTIFUL 1920 SCRIPTURE TEXT CALENDAR FREE

The Georgia-Alabama Business College, Macon, Ga., is sending out absolutely free of charge a lovely Scripture text calendar for the year 1920. This calendar is illustrated with extremely beautiful color scriptural illustrations. Each monthly page carries one of these Scripture illustrations, such as "Jesus Blessing the Children," "The Star of Bethlehem," "Jesus Stilling the Tempest," "Christ and the Holy Women." There are twelve of these monthly page illustrations in full color, besides the full page illustration on the cover of the calendar. Every Christian worker should have one of these calendars. Each day in the month is shown in large figures and immediately under the figures is given the text for the day, except on Sundays. Each Sunday date gives the subject for the Sunday School lesson, Scripture reading and Golden Text. On the back of the calendar is given the standard time for each of the twelve divisions, and also is carried a 200 Year Reference Calendar, which enables one to select one of seven calendars for use in each of 200 years from 1800 to 2002. The price of these calendars is 30c and they are very cheap at the price, but they are being sent absolutely free to Christian workers, the only return courtesy that is asked being the sending to Georgia-Alabama Business College of the name and address of some prospective student who desires to take a business course in bookkeeping, shorthand, typewriting, commercial English, etc. Write at once and get your calendar, giving the name of some prospective business student. In writing mention this paper.—Advertisement.

FROM LUCEDALE, MISS.

Our work in Lucedale is moving along nicely. Last year we paid off an old debt on our church property that had been running for over ten years, and had stood in the way of needed improvement being made. We are planning in the near future to build Sunday school rooms, and paint the church and parsonage. Our revival last fall was a great help to us and its influence remains. This is the fourth year that I have been serving this charge. At the last quarterly conference, they increased the pastor's salary $550 over last year. Last week the good people came to the parsonage as a surprise and gave the pastor and his family a good pounding. As a result, living in the parsonage will be good for some time to come.

We are planning and praying that this year may be one fruitful in results. In line with the call from the bishops and leaders of the church, we desire that the Spirit of God may be poured upon us. Yours cordially,

10 HENS LAY 8 EGGS A DAY. HOW IT'S DONE

Mr. Davis Shows How to Wake Up Idle Hens. Easily Tried.

"I have 10 hens and was getting 1 and 2 eggs a day. Since using Don Sung, my hens have improved so much that I am now getting 7 and 8 eggs a day. The results have been wonderful."—Henry Davis, 1324 30th St., Newport News, Va.

Mr. Davis wrote this letter in February, after a severe test in the coldest weather. Try it, as he did, and watch your hens stop loafing and start laying. Here's our offer:

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 462 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.—Adv.

MISSSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Women Rejoicing.

The women of the Mississippi Conferenee are rejoicing over the fact that the pledge for our Conference, $7,500, has been paid in full. It was a big venture on the part of the president and corresponding secretary when they pledged this amount at the last Council meeting, but their faith was strong enough to believe it could be raised and it has been, without the usual strain and anxiety that come at the close of the year.

All praise to the women of our auxiliaries! This past year has brought to them greater demands and greater responsibilities, but with it has come a realization of duty and an awakening that has not only given the work a greater impetus, but has brought to them a spiritual blessing they have never before experienced.

Let us hope, with this to encourage, they will press onward, never tiring in their efforts to serve God in the bringing in of His Kingdom.

"Thy Kingdom come Thy will be done" are not vain words upon our lips when we have done what we could.

Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, Conference Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. Geo. H. Thompson, Superintendent Study and Publicity.

Ready for Work!

Mrs. C. R. Keith, of Hosston, La., writes for the Hosston auxiliary, that they are ready for work. Officers are elected and plans made for a greater 1920.

Message from Home Base Secretary.

As we survey the past and present, we realize that all conditions have changed at home and abroad. The missionary vision of the women at home has been enlarged, and prejudice and narrowness have been in a large part overcome. The missionary message has caught the ear, gripped the heart and stirred the conscience of the womanhood of the church. The mighty chorus, "I do not believe in missions," has died away to a faint whisper. The first year we gave $4,014; in 1918 we gave $593,832, a gift which was made possible by the consecrated efforts and prayers of you, worthy daughters of heroic mothers, who are here to-day. It is not an unusual thing now for one woman to give at one time as much as the whole collection of that first year.

Now to summarize the duties of the new year as I, looking out into fields, see them:

1. Our organization must be enlarged and strengthened. It is a beautiful machine, but not large enough nor efficient enough for the output demanded this year. We must have a "1920 model," as they say of automobiles.

(a) More women must be gathered into its membership. No woman of the church should be allowed to miss its appeal. Its demands must be imperatively laid upon every heart. Make every uninterested woman an item on the prayer list and an object of special effort for the auxiliary.

(b) Its membership must be renewed in spiritual power. The day calls for a deeper consecration to service, more power in prayer, a better love for and knowledge of God's Word, and an unselfish attitude toward the world and its needs. We should give ourselves heartily to the conservation program of the Centenary, that it be carried out in the homes and the individual lives of our church. Altars should be erected in every family, and we, as wives and mothers, will be the most potent influence in accomplishing this. Moreover, we must deal honestly with our stewardship of parenthood.

Shall we not do for ourselves and families what we are so earnestly trying to do for others through our Missionary Society? I would suggest that committees be appointed in the auxillary to assist in getting the entire membership of women and children enlisted as intercessors, to press the campaign for family altars, and to secure volunteers for personal service for the church.

(c) The membership must have a constantly increasing intelligence regarding the world situation. We live in stirring times, "In an age on ages telling." Events follow each other so rapidly that God is packing more into five years now than once he put into a century. Through our monthly programs, our study classes, and the missionary periodicals, we must keep informed of the sweep of these mighty movements and of their bearing on the kingdom of God.

2. The regular offerings of the year should be increased. We thought years ago that we were giving to the limit of our ability. We have found that a constantly increasing gift is not only possible, but necessary. Last year's contribution to missions will not meet the obligations of this year. As you make your pledges to-day, bear this in mind and remember that the vital or revealing question is not, What have we to give? but, What do we want to give? . . . . Do not say you can not give more until every effort has been made and there have been time and opportunity for answer to your prayers.

To the newly elected officers of every auxiliary I would say to-day, as you lead your band of women into this field of service for the coming year: Count no price too great to pay, no labor too arduous to perform, as you prosecute the task committed to you by Christ. Take as your motto: "Not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord."

To the membership of every auxiliary this is my message: Loyally and faithfully support the leaders whom you have chosen, laboring and praying together with them for the advancement of the kingdom of God, each of you taking as your motto, "I must work the works of Him that sent me, while it is day; the night cometh when no man can work."

Yours in His service and His name,
MRS. B. W. LIPSCOMB.

WHERE MOST SICKNESS BEGINS AND ENDS

By FRANKLIN DUANE, M. D.

It can be said broadly that most human ills begin in the stomach and end in the stomach. Good digestion means good health, and poor digestion means bad health. The minute your stomach fails to properly dispose of the food you eat, troubles begin to crop out in various forms. Indigestion and dyspepsia are the commonest forms, but thin, impure blood, headaches, backaches, pimples, blotches, dizziness, belching, coated tongue, weakness, poor appetite, sleeplessness, coughs, colds and bronchitis are almost as common. There is but one way to have good health, and that is to put and keep your stomach in good order. This is easy to do if you take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is a wonderful tonic and blood purifier, and is so safe to take, for it is made of roots and herbs. Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., stands behind this standard medicine, and it is good to know that so distinguished a physician is proud to have his name identified with it.

Here is what Mr. A. R. Brown, of Meridian, Miss., says: "Will say I have used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and can fully recommend same as a great medicine. I would recommend the 'Discovery' to any one in need of a good blood tonic and the 'Favorite Prescription' as a woman's medicine. Have used them in my family and know their wonderful curative powers. There is nothing like Dr. Pierce's remedies. There is no use dragging through life when you can get remedies like 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Favorite Prescription' at any drug store. They will cure you and make life worth while."—(Signed) A. R. BROWN, Route 2, Box 196, Meridian, Miss.

Count Fifty! Pains and Neuralgia Gone

Instant relief! Rub this nerve torture and misery right out with "St. Jacobs Liniment."

Rub this soothing, penetrating liniment right into the sore, inflamed nerves, and like magic—neuralgia disappears. "St. Jacobs Liniment" conquers pain. It is a harmless "neuralgia relief" which doesn't burn or discolor the skin.

Don't suffer! It's so needless. Get a small trial bottle from any drug store and gently rub the "aching nerves" and in just a moment you will be absolutely free from pain and suffering.

No difference whether your pain or neuralgia is in the face, head or any part of the body, you get instant relief with this old-time, honest pain destroyer—it can not injure.—Adv.

What You Should Do—Most Successful and Economical Treatment.

Do you have a feeling of general weakness day in and out? Is your appetite poor? Does your food fail to strengthen you and your sleep to refresh? Do you find it hard to do or to bear what should be easy? Have your ordinary duties and cares become great tasks and burdens?

If so, take Hood's Sarsaparilla—this great medicine revitalizes the blood, gives vigor and tone to all the organs and functions, and is unequalled for those who are in any degree debilitated or run down. Do not delay treatment—begin it today.

To rouse the torpid liver and regulate the bowels take Hood's Pills They are purely vegetable.

Eat Less and Take Salts for Kidneys

Take a Glass of Salts if your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.—Adv.

To Relieve Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of parmint (double strength), and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy, and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial. GOD'S LOOM WEAVES ON.

By Willie Conger Page.

Golden moments and hours pass by;
Shuttles of time weave to and fro;
But the measure, the method, by which they ply,
And the pattern they weave we never know—
For God's silent loom weaves on.

In the morning of youth, tho' the threads are gay,
By Faith, Hope and Love made bright;
At the sunset of life, oft we see with dismay,
The pattern so warped it cannot be made right—
For God's noiseless loom weaves on.

Use care that the weft remain true and straight;
Weave in kindly words, glad thoughts and deeds,
Spin with patience and love—think before too late,
Lest the finished work meet not with life's needs—
For God's noiseless loom weaves on.

EVANGELISM IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

By Rev. J. W. Shackford.

The importance of the work that the Sunday school has to do in the task of evangelism is that it is the field of preparation for every harvest that the church is to reap. The seed sown here will determine the future character of the revivals, the future nature of the church membership, the future character and extent of our missionary operation, the future strength and leadership of the church, and, in a large measure, the future ideals and character of our citizenship. The Sunday school is in the business of life saving. Its whole process should be conceived as evangelistic and spiritual.

Unfortunately, we have made the mistake of separating too largely between teaching and evangelism, making a false distinction between teaching the Gospel and the evangelistic appeal. The Sunday school ought to be thought of as the greatest field of our evangelistic opportunity. It ought indeed to be a school of evangelism, continuous and perpetual. Nothing could be more unfortunate than to have our teachers think that their work ends with an impersonal discussion of the Sunday school lessons. These are only materials for their work. Theirs is to teach Jesus Christ, to reveal Him to those who are learners, to bring them into personal relationship with Him and to feed their pupils upon the truth as it is in Him.

This evangelism is fundamental, and this sort of evangelism will not collapse when the temporary emotion is passed, because it is based upon an intelligent apprehension of Christ. Nowhere in the church are there evangelistic resources and agencies more abundant, and yet hitherto so poorly utilized. If our pastors generally should come to realize the hidden sources of evangelistic power that are in their teachers, and if they would organize and make use of this power, there is little doubt that the rate of increase in our church membership would be doubled and even trippled almest immediately.

As a part of the Conservation Program of the Centenary, and in conjunction with the General Evangelistic Committee, the Sunday School Board has launched an Evangelistic Campaign in all our Sunday schools. There is not the slightest doubt that if our pastors shall call their teachers and officers about them and plan with them in the spirit of prayer for a great thoroughgoing campaign, that we shall have an increase in church membership from the Sunday schools alone of not less than a quarter of a million. And if we shall do this, we shall not only make this as a gain for the year, but shall succeed in turning the tide which shall mean even more for the years that are ahead. We shall set a new pace for our evangelistic work in the future.

FROM LOUISE AND HOLLY BLUFF.

Dear Brother Carley: If you can spare a bit of space in the Advocate, I would like to tell my friends some of the good things about Louise and Holly Bluff, the new charge that was created at the last session of the Mississippi Conference by taking two churches, Louise and Holly Bluff, from the Silver City charge, leaving the two oldest established churches, Silver City and Midnight, on the Silver City charge, which is still served by Brotber T. H. King, wbo formerly had all four churches, Silver City, Midnight, Louise, and Holly Bluff. I have two half-time churches, Louise and Holly Bluff, and two afternoon appointments, Lindsay and Spanish Fort.

Our first quarterly conference, held last Sunday, February 1, at Holly Bluff, was a decided success in several ways. Brotber Jones preached for us at 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m., holding the business session at 3:30 p.m. In the first place, I want to say that our people were just "carried away" with our new presiding elder, Brother J. R. Jones, not only as presiding elder, but as a preacher and as a man. (He is new on tbe district, but not new to me, for he "brought me along" with him from the Seashore District.) That means that he will receive the hearty and enthusiastic support of these people in his administration of the affairs of the charge and of the district.

In the second place, the former assessments for pastor's salary were doubled, with an extra hundred dollars thrown in for good measure. The assessment for pastor's salary as it now stands is $1510. Spanish Fort has not been assessed anything yet. and will probably run the salary up to $1600 at least. The assessments for presiding elder and the other claims are paid in full for the first quarter. Nearly one-third of the pastor's salary for the year was paid at this meeting, and the balance has been arranged for by subscriptions. Holly Bluff paid nearly half of her assessment for pastor's salary at this meeting. The Centenary Work is over-subscribed at both places. Brotber Jones said he had not found such a report in the district.

Besides the above, these good people have rented a house for us and paid the rent for a year in advance; and Uncle Wilbur (S. W. Sharbrough) went to Memphis and bought a lot of real nice, first-class furniture for the house; and they put plenty of good wood and coal here to last a long time; and they just keep bringing us fresh meat and otber good things to eat, until we hardly know wbat to do with it all. Surely, the Lord "maketb me to lie down in green pastures. He is my Shepherd; I shall not want."

We are planning great things in the nature of constructive work on this charge in the near future. We have a parsonage to build or buy; some work to be done on our church buildings; and many other things that will keep us busy. Our motto is, "Christian Optimism," and we make our calculations without regard to any possibility of failure. Our people often go "over the top," but never lag behind in the work.

I want to ask an interest in the prayers of all of the brethren, that the Holy Spirit may abide with us in great power in the accomplishment of the Master's work; and pray that we may be used as humble but effective instruments in His hands for the successful carrying out of His purposes on earth.

Fraternally,
M. K. MILLER, Pastor.

Got 117 Eggs Instead of 3

Says One Subscriber

Any poultry raiser can easily double his profits by doubling the egg production of his hens. A scientific tonic has been discovered that revitalizes the flock and makes hens work all the time. The tonic is called "More Eggs." It has already been used by 400,000 chicken raisers and literally thousands of letters have been received telling of its marvelous results. Give your hens a few cents' worth of "More Eggs" and you will be amazed and delighted with results.

If you wish to try this great profit-maker, simply write a postcard or letter to E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 3252 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Missouri, and ask for his special free package $1.00 offer. Don't send any money. Mr. Reefer will send you two $1.00 packages of "More Eggs." You pay the postman upon delivery only $1.00, the price of just one package, the other package being free. The Million Dollar Merchants Bank of Kansas City, Mo., guarantees if you are not absolutely satisfied your dollar will be returned on request. So there is no risk. Write today for this special free package offer. Profit by the experience of a man who has made a fortune out of poultry.—Adv.

FROM TUNICA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We have never been more pleasantly situated than we are here at Tunica. The people have been exceedingly kind to us. On our arrival, we were met by some of the officials and other members of our church. We had supper with Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Hall, and, after an hour or more of good-fellowship, we were carried to the parsonage. Everything was ready and waiting to make us comfortable. Over $300 had been put into furniture, etc., by tbe good women. The arrangements and all, indicated great pride and interest in what they were doing. Brother, you should have seen our pantry—it looked like a "Bynn You" or "Piggly Wiggly" corner. It has not run out yet and won't for some time. Old H. C. L. has not hurt us much yet. And you know the good work still goes on. The tide came in again Christmas. Among the many and good things it brought was a purse, presented by Brother J. D. Magruder, from the good people, amounting to $171.50. "This," he said, "is your Christmas spending money." Well, Christmas is not quite over yet, and the good work still goes on. I don't know when nor where they will stop. About all I know is that I am trying not to stop it.

Tunica is a station this year, and the record she has set out to make her first year alone will be worthy of emulation. We have had our first quarterly conference with our efficient, worthy, and well-liked presiding elder, Dr. R. A. Meek, presiding. The generosity of these big-hearted folk was again manifested in fixing the salary for the pastor at $2,400. They paid up in full for the quarter.

We are advancing along otber lines, too. We have some organized classes in our Sunday school, doing excellent work. The Wesley Bible Class, composed of young women, has, within the last two weeks, put the Advocate into every home represened in our church. They went out after them and brought them in.

Our congregations are excellent. Some of our people have not missed a service since we came. We have adopted a monthly offering for the Orphanage. The woman's work is up-to-date in every respect. Everything is in good shape, and everybody is in a good humor; the biggest thing we all need is more religion, and we are working and praying for that.

Fraternally,
C. A. PARKS.

A CORRECTION.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a correction I wish to make through the Advocate, concerning the report of the Tunica and Robinsonville charge for last year. I have a copy of the Minutes of the North Mississippi Conference just from the press, and on looking over the Statistical Table No. 3, I find an error in the grand total column of $3,000. This, I suppose, is a typographical error. My report should show collected for all purposes $5,125.56, whereas the Minutes show only $2,125. I make this correction so tbat it will not make the wrong impression on the Tunica people, and the general public also who read the reports.

Thanking you in advance for making this correction througb the Advocate, I am,

Yours fraternally,
H. E. CARTER.

THE BEAVER'S LARDER.

"With the arrival of autumn, another big job must be acomplisbed," writes Raymond L. Ditmars in an article on "Animal Engineers," contributed to the Boy Scout magazine, Boys' Life, for Decemher. "This is the storage of a winter's food supply—an immense amount of sticks, from which the bark may be gnawed. The whole operation is tackled in the same ingenious way as all beaver jobs—with fine intelligence and system.

"It may happen this time that the beavers decide to bring down the whole supply of winter food-wood in one grand crash and they have worked steadily several days, in fact, on a tree a foot and a half in diameter. They have gnawed this in a circle, the great cutting sloping inward like the outlines of a stout hour-glass. Masses of chips, four to five inches deep, lie about the base of the tree and most of the work is done at night. Viewed by human eyes in daylight, the skillfully cut trunk and the mass of chips would appear to represent labor beyond the power of any animal.

"As the heavers progress with the task, they concentrate their work upon one side, usually that nearest the water. The hour-glass outline loses its contour as they enlarge and deepen the orifice on this side. Now we realize that their object is to cause the tree to fall towards the water. This saves steps and much pulling and hauling of heavier branches.

"The beavers appear to realize just when the crash will come. There is no peering up at the tree, no hesitation. Tbey continue to gnaw right up to the time that a crackling at the base indicates the tree is about to fall; then they scurry out of harm's way—always in the right direction.

"Tbe writer has watched them after a tree has come crashing down. Within a few moments they are at work trimming off the upper branches. This is the operation now in order in providing the winter larder. The branches are towed to the house, masses of them are imbedded in the mud at the bottom, whence an island of brush soon rises for a distance of twenty feet or more. This is the winter larder. In mild weather, when a hole can be kept open in the ice, the branches on the surface are cleared of the bark forage. When the stream is solidly frozen over, the beavers fare equally well from masses of browse immediately accessible by diving from the underwater entrance of the house.

"There is other autumn work besides the construction of the larder. This consists of many trips with mud: for the house is thoroughly plastered each fall and thus rendered wind and cold proof.

"Thus does the beaver perform marvellous feats without training or inducements from man; therefore, we may place this wonderful creature in a class quite by itself."

Drink Coffee

If It Causes Indigestion, a Couplo of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Will Promptly Give Relief.

Indigestion caused by coffee is the same as indigestion caused by anything else. If eating food or drinking coffee makes you dyspeptic, all you need is Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

"I surely Do enjoy My Coffee! I'm Not Afraid to Drink It, Either, for I Have a Box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets mix with the food you eat. The stomach by its peristaltic action churns and moves the food around the stomach walls and the powerful ingredients in these tablets instantly begin digesting the food as they are forced through it and around it.

The use of one of these tablets after meals will in a very short time restore your appetite to its normal condition and you will enjoy your food with an old-time relish.

Every drug store carries Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Price, 50 cents.

Great Difference In Cost.

Think of the difference in cost between taking a professionally prescribed medicine and taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. You know that ordinarily it is considerable. In times like these when everybody should be economical it is well worth saving.

Hood's Sarsaparilla affords the least expensive of all treatments for the common everyday diseases or ailments of the blood, stomach, liver or kidneys. Many physicians use the same substances as its ingredients for these diseases and ailments, but these substances are better compounded in Hood's Sarsaparilla than they can possibly be in a prescribed medicine which is put up in a small way, with fewer facilities, and when the physician's fee is added costs a great deal more.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is prepared by skilled pharmacists in one of the largest and best equipped laboratories in the world, is wonderfully successful, and highly recommended to those who would recover health and strength with the minimum necessary outlay.—Adv.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE NECESSARY THINGS.

Most of us want a good many more things than we actually need. The "simple life" appeals to us as theoretically desirable, but as practically impossible. We are prone to forget the blessings we have, and lay the emphasis upon those we desire. Plain food, decent clothes, a home where love is, a place to work and a pure heart are the necessary things. Other things we may enjoy and may use to advantage—but these we must have. And, thank God, all of us can have them. Prosperity may be measured in terms of material possessions, but true greatness is of the spirit. With the labor of our hands we can secure our food and raiment and a place to lay our heads; with our hearts we can lay hold of the infinite treasures of Heaven. What we have not, may make us miserable; what we have, ought to make us happy.

WHAT WOULD WE DO WITH THEM?

A distinguished educator recently gave us the following figures: There are 35,000 girls between the ages of 16 and 22 in the State of Mississippi; if every girls' college in the State should increase its enrollment 10 per cent above its normal capacity, not more than 2800 students could be accommodated; there are, therefore, 32,200 girls in the State who could not have the advantages of a college education if they desired it. The question naturally arises, What would we do with those girls if all of them, or any considerable number of them, should make up their minds to go to college? The simplest answer is that there is no danger that they will form such determination. But that answer simply dodges the issue. We have been laying great stress, and properly so, upon the value of college training. We have earnestly besought parents to make great personal sacrifices, if necessary, in order to give their daughters the benefit of a higher education. And yet anything like a general response to our pleading would demonstrate at once the fact that we are not prepared to give what we had professed to offer. We are still playing at education. Our public school system is in need of financial support that is millions of dollars beyond what we seem to think is ample; our State institutions are suffering for lack of adequate equipment; our church schools are struggling pitifully to meet the demands made upon them. It is high time for us to begin to put first things first by making it easily possible for every boy and girl in the land to secure thorough educational preparation for living happily and usefully in this wonderful age in which we are placed.

HORSE RACING MUST GO.

The Louisiana State Lottery put millions of dollars into the treasury of the State, but it was finally overthrown because it had become a stench in the nostrils of the moral citizenship of the State. Horse racing will have to go the same way. It is not so far-reaching in its evil results as was the lottery, but it is the greatest corrupter of morals now extant in the greatest city of the South, and its influence is utterly inimical to the best interests not only of New Orleans, but of the State at large. Gambling is the very life of its existence. It is no more possible to maintain a great racing plant without gambling than it is to run saloons without liquor. The plea that it is necessary to encourage the breeding of good horses is the silliest kind of nonsense. The race horse, as a rule, is not good for anything but racing, and racing is conducted simply that gamblers may have a chance to ply their profession. Most men like to see a fair contest of speed between horses, and some of them would be willing to pay a reasonable price of admission to see such a contest once in awhile; but we venture the assertion that New Orleans Business Men's Racing Association could not pay expenses for one day by merely giving an exhibition of racing with betting absolutely eliminated. If anybody wants to race horses just for the sport itself, there will be no serious objection that we know of, provided the animals are given humane treatment; but nobody wants to do any such thing. Gambling, and gambling alone, is the foundation upon which horse racing rests, and gambling is evil and that continually. Now is the time for the good people of the State to let it be known that they want this moral blot removed from their midst forever. The General Assembly will meet in a few months; anti-gambling legislation, with "teeth" in it, should be enacted without fail.

A SEVERE INDICTMENT.

The Greater Agricultural College Association of Louisiana recently sent a questionnaire to the high school pupils of the State with reference to living on the farm and following agricultural pursuits. The results are interesting. Out of a total of 2039 pupils enrolled in 24 schools, 1029 have lived on farms; and of the total number, only 521 express a desire to follow agriculture as a means of livelihood. The following reasons occur again and again as constituting the objection to country life: "No conveniences;" "No ready money;" "Work is too hard;" Get nothing out of life;" "Farm life offers no attractions;" "Too isolated;" "Too monotonous;" "No diversions of any kind;" "Cannot live as comfortably as in town." We do not overlook the fact that some of those who gave these answers were probably not very familiar with the thing about which they were asked to express an opinion, but after full allowance has been made for all prejudice and lack of knowledge we must confess that a severe indictment has been drawn against rural life. The drift—worse than that, the steady stream—from the country to the city is one of the outstanding characteristics, as it is one of the gravest problems, of this age. We do not well to ignore it, or to pass it lightly by. The church is vitally interested in this problem in more ways than one, and the church will have a large part in finding its solution. Better agricultural education will remove some of the objections to living in the country; good roads will do a great deal toward alleviating the hardships of rural residence; first-class schools will overcome many of the difficulties. The church can help greatly in securing all these advantages, and in addition to these it can do a great deal by the type of men if sends to its country appointments and by the character of work they undertake. The cry, "Back to the country!" is beginning to mean a good deal more than the cultivation of more acres and the harvesting of larger crops; it means a new attitude of those who are interested in the social and moral welfare of the nation toward this primary source of material and spiritual wealth. A better country life will mean a better city life—and we need that most urgently.

GOOD FOR AMERICA, TOO.

We read the other day that Sr. Emilio del Toro, Judge of the Supreme Court of Porto Rico, has recently given expression to the following sentiment: "If I had the privilege of communicating with all of the mothers of Latin America for only one moment during my lifetime, I would employ it entirely in recommending that they place in the hands of their children the New Testament, being sure of obtaining for them the most noble and enduring influence of all the influences which could exercise themselves in the human conscience of this world." We are not in the habit of looking to Porto Rico for advice on moral and religious matters—but we could go farther and fare worse in this particular matter. The trouble with a great many of us is that we are expecting our children to grow up with the highest ideals of character and of conduct, while we fail to give them instruction in the one textbook that can furnish the inspiration that will lead them to true nobility of heart and mind. We do not know of a better thing the mothers of America could do for their children than to place the New Testament in their hands. If it could be brought about, it would mean a better national life for the next generation.

THE PRESIDENT AND HIS CABINET.

A leading political sensation last week was the request of President Wilson that Secretary of State Lansing resign his position, the President basing his request upon the fact that the Secretary, in holding informal cabinet meetings during the President's illness, had assumed presidential authority. Mr. Lansing, with a complete denial that such thought had ever entered his mind, complied with the request for his resignation—the only honorable course open to him. Speaking solely from a layman's point of view, we do not see how the business of the Government could very well have been conducted without some such consultation on the part of those who were in charge of matters of supreme importance. The President was too ill for months to be seen by any one save members of his family, his private secretary, and his medical advisers—the exact nature of his illness never yet having been officially declared—and many urgent matters had to be passed upon. We do not imagine that the country at large will hold Mr. Lansing very seriously at fault for the course he pursued. The President is an able man, and he probably feels that he should retain personal oversight of all the departments of the Government. The illness of the Chief Executive does not seem to have been sufficiently provided for in framing the Constitution.

COURAGE.

By Willie Conger Page.

What if the clouds are dismal and dreary?
What if nights are lonely and long?
What if your feet are worn and weary?
Be glad! Look up with a smile and a song,
For you know that soon the sunbeams will scatter
The murk and mists away from the sky;
That troubles and trials do not matter,
If the heart with courage and hope beats high.
Be thankful, take courage, for it is never far
From the path of duty to the shining star.

PRAY THE LORD OF THE HARVEST.

(St. Matt. 9:38.)

By Rev. S. Curtis Yates.

These words recorded by Saint Matthew have a definite, significant meaning, or they mean nothing at all. They constitute an earnest challege to men to rouse themselves to a spirited action, or else they are the idle, impassioned words of one giving expression to an hallucinated mind. But Christ's ministry as an historic person was of short duration in the earth—too short for one moment to be unoccupied, or for one word to be idly spoken. These earnest words, following immediately after a personal contact with a suffering multitude when the palsied, the sick, the dead, the devil-ridden had felt the touch of His restoring hand, were spoken out of a heart filled with pity and loving compassion. Perhaps Christ's heart was no more completely rent as he prayed in Gethsemane than when the pitiful panorama of a helpless, wailing world moved him to exclaim from the deep reaches of his soul, "The laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest."

The Master's words have not lost their meaning, neither is the message they convey obsolete; for after two thousand years the multitudes are still unshepherded, and the hungry sheep look up unfed.

I.

Every seen need is an opportunity, and every opportunity, a call. "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few." This was true in the days when Christ, single-handed, began to set up his Kingdom; it is true to-day when the multitudes are followers of Baal. God's purposes are unveiled, are so plainly written that one has but to look to read their meaning, and has but to open the heart if he would yield to, or enter into His purposes. God's purpose is man's opportunity; and every opportunity for service is to man a special call. Seeing the need for laborers is so pressing, every congregation is justified in praying the Lord of the harvest to raise up from among them "volunteers;" to use them in helping some young man or woman to see and interpret the "call" that is so apparent.

We are taught to look for direction and revelations in the Word of God, and not wait for dreams and visions. To the tragical hurt of the Methodist Church we have stood aloof, giving no encouragement or interpretation to the Spirit's call that might have come upon the youths of our church, leaving them listening for voices, and sleeping to dream. As a result our pulpits are being depleted, and we view with increasing alarm the constant decline in candidates for the ministry year by year. The writer was pastor of a church from which in more than a third of a century there had not gone out one soul fired with a passion of preaching the Gospel. If every church were as fruitless in the matter of ministerial supply, every pulpit in Christendom would be empty with the passing away of the ministers of to-day.

The writer heard a theological student say that from one Sunday school class taught by a little woman in a small Alabama church, of which the student was a member, there had gone out no less than ten young men as ministers! Do we not suppose that the little teacher was a great force in helping these youths see and interpret the call of God? Truly God and Heaven and the Holy Spirit lie very close to one in his youth—so close that there must be few who have not at times felt a distinct desire to dedicate their lives to Christian work. Instead of looking on while one struggles under something he can not quite understand, is it not every Christian's duty to help him see and understand the call? Eli interpreted the call for the boy, Samuel; he saw the perplexity of the youth, and perceived that the Lord had called him. And tutored by the grey-bearded priest, Samuel said: "Speak, Lord; for thy servant heareth."

II.

When a student the writer saw a revival break out in the college under the preaching of a fiery evangelist. In the college there were two young Koreans, who, converted in a Methodist mission in Korea, were finishing their education in an American college. The thing that made that revival forever an inspiring remembrance was those two Koreans doing personal work in the student body—men from the Orient pleading with unsaved Americans to accept Christ! If we as a church do not in all earnestness "pray the Lord of the harvest, that he will send laborers into his harvest," we may at no distant day see Christian Koreans, Christian Chinese preaching to un-Christian Americans!

The unconverted millions among us, as well as

"Where Afric's sunny fountains Roll down their golden sand," are a burning shame upon the evangelical programme of the faithless church, a ghastly spectre that lurks by day and haunts by night. But taking the Lord's command more seriously to-day than ever before, the church's one solemn petition is the earnest prayer of Moses, the faithful old patriarch, who prayed that prophets might be made of all the Lord's people.

God has spoken and is speaking. A Voice spoke to Moses, bidding him to lift the rod that a way might be made for the host to pass over the sea. We see that a deliverance should be effected to-day; is this spiritual insight a sufficient call? There are thirsting, famishing throngs—we see them. Is not God calling us to take up the rod and strike the rock? Shall the church leave the youths to "kick against the pricks?" Shall we leave them to wait for a thunderous voice to come leaping like fiery bolts among the Sinaitic hills, or in overwhelming power like that which swept down the confirmed rebel on his way to Damascus and made him to cry out, "Lord, what will thou have me to do?" God is calling now; He calls in Scripture, in the workings of the Holy Spirit, in Nature, in Providence. Pray that "He will send forth laborers into his harvest."

William McKendree, the first native American bishop of the Methodist Church, said that the call to the ministry came to him "through the active intervention of Christian friends." Will any one venture to say that it is doing violence to the Holy Spirit to claim that the will and mind of God are made known through the church? McKendree was made a preacher in the Methodist Church without his knowledge or consent. Attending an Annual Conference as a visitor, he was nearly overcome by surprise when he was "read out" to the Mecklenburg circuit. The church was greatly in need of men in that day, but the cry of every denomination to-day is that there is an alarming dearth of candidates for the ministry and volunteers for the foreign fields. It might be too radical literally to "compel" them to heed and go, but we can—must—"Pray the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest."

NEED FOR CAUTION.

By Rev. R. A. Meek, D. D.

There lies on my table a communication from Mr. James O. Grogan, of Birmingham, Ala., announcing that two more Interchurch Conferences for Pastors are soon to be held in Mississippi, which manifestly have for their object the enlistment of our preachers as largely as possible in the work of this organization. In view of the persistent aggressiveness of those directing this Movement, a few sidelight flashes as to some features of its operations are, in my opinion, entirely in order.

Side Light No. 1.

The New York Tribune of November 25, 1919, carried the following news-note:

"The Interchurch World Movement of America has leased 475,000 square feet in the former Big Store district, Sixth Avenue, for a period of ten years for use as executive offices, for which a rental of $3,500,000 will be paid. The churchmen arranged the last detail in the transaction for this big space yesterday through the Cross & Brown Company, Leitner, Brener & Starr with the Big Store Realty Company, of which B. J. Greenhut is the president. The space taken is in the Greenhut, formerly the Siegel-Cooper Store building, on the east side of Sixth Avenue, from Eighteenth to Nineteenth Street, and the Greenhut annex, which buildings were used as a hospital by the War Department during the war and until recently. The lease covers about twelve acres of floor space, which is about the area of the proposed structure to be erected by the Federal Reserve Bank on the Maiden Lane, Liberty and Nassau Street block. The area is one and a half times as large as City Hall Park. The Interchurch World Movement will occupy under the deal closed yesterday the third, fourth, fifth, sixth, and seventh floors, and the annex of the Greenhut Building."

In view of this statement of The Tribune, two inquiries are pertinent:

1. Who is putting up this colossal sum of money? Some of us have not forgotten that Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., got out and circulated a pamphlet advocating a policy much akin to this Interchurch scheme a year and a half or two years ago. Let us have an itemized statement showing where the funds promoting this movement are coming from, duly sworn to. Not even political parties are now allowed to carry on campaigns without showing where their revenues come from. If the activities of the Christian churches are to be swung into new and strange channels, we are entitled to know what forces are doing the swinging.

2. According to the Central Christian Advocate of February 4, there are in New York City, with its nearly 6,000,000 people, less than 500,000 Protestant church members. Of these 106,611 are Episcopalians, 61,707 are Presbyterians, and 50,745 are Methodists. The last-named denomination has had in the last ten years a gain of 775. Would it not be well for the Interchurchers, with their vast acres of office space in sky-scrapers, to show that they can do something to better religious conditions in the great metropolis where they have their headquarters, before they undertake to direct religious work in the remote Southern States where the most virile form of Christianity beneath the American flag is found? "Physician, heal thyself," is a proverb which has come down to us sanctioned by the Master.

Side Light No. 2.

"The Interchurch World Movement sends out what it calls 'The Interchurch Newsletter.' The one for December 25, among other things, had the following:

"The new evangelist has arrived in rural America, say reports which have come to Interchurch survey headquarters. The new evangelist works in farm terms. He doesn't hold protracted meetings. He adopts man-to-man methods, uses a socio-religious presentation of subject matter and advocates a 7-day, 24-hour-operating religion. His plan appeals to cow-punchers, horse-wranglers and busy farmers, who for the first time are seeing that religion is something they can take with them into their week's work, instead of something they must don for Sunday service as they do their Sunday clothes.'

"That isn't the sort of evangelism Methodism—Southern Methodism at least—has been used to. Religion of the genuine type will not go far without the protracted meeting. It has not in the past, nor will it in the future. 'Socio-religious presentation' of matters pertaining to personal salvation will not go very far. The Unitarians have tried that and their success in it has not been very startling. Nor is it a new doctrine that men should take their religion with them into their every-day work. That is sound teaching and much needed, but Methodism has not waited for the Interchurch World Movement to bring it to light. Better look closely into this recent huge movement before our church is committed to it."

Side Light No. 3.

From the Baptist Record (Jackson, Miss.):

"The Baptists attending the State Training Conference of the Interchurch World Movement in Topeka, December 1-3, protested against what they regard as a violation of the letter and the spirit of the agreement as to the conditions upon which the Northern Baptists agreed to co-operate. They cite specifically the recommendations of the Movement now being sent out for the elimination of churches of different denominations in a given community and the joining of all Christians into one Church."

Side Light No. 4.

Referring to the Interchurch Movement in the North Carolina Christian Advocate of February 5, Dr. L. S. Massey, one of Southern Methodism's ablest editors, among other things, said:

"In all of this process there has been a discounting of doctrine, of conviction of truth, of a clearly defined content of the gospel message. Creeds have been sneered at as a relic of the past, and the emphasis has been placed upon the life. The causal relation of faith to works has been denied, or slurred over as though it did not exist. During this process we have heard it often repeated that it does not make any difference what a man believes, so that his life is right. Denominational differences have been disparaged until now we are beginning to hear them characterized as sinful. The 'wickedness of denominational rivalry' is rolled as a sweet morsel under their tongue. This has been greatly helped by the bitterness that has too often characterized the discussions of doctrinal differences. The re-action from this latter has promoted the former, and helped to develop the present-day sentimentalism—just as one extreme usually begets another. And yet doctrine is the bed rock of our faith. Our faith is a doctrine. A faith without a content is not faith. We cannot believe without believing something—a creed if you please; and the more definite that doctrine, the stronger is the faith and the more potent in the making of life. As our religious life has drifted away from this anchorage, it has become shallow and shifting and uncertain.

"And here is the terminal to which this Interchurch World Movement is heading. Not that it is the design of any one connected with it, but it is the logical and inevitable result of its policies. More prominent in its thought, though that is not yet pronounced, is the organic union of Protestantism—a dream that would be as fateful to the purity of Protestantism as the same dream has ever been to Roman Catholicism. We say that this result is probably not present to the intention of the promoters of this movement; but it is a movement that is not responsible to any one. It has no standards by which to guide itself, no criterion by which to test its Christianity. Its present leaders may be sidestepped at any moment that they fail to respond to its dominant ideal. It is strictly a mass movement without regard to the homogeneity of its elements and what it may say or do to-day gives no guarantee of what it may say or do to-morrow. It is never safe to be caught off one's feet in the whirl of such a movement.

"We cannot but deplore action taken by representatives of our Church that bears a quasi-official stamp. As noted in the beginning of this editorial, thirty-six representatives of our Church at the Atlantic City Conference had a meeting and at least appointed a committee to draft a public expression of endorsement. Certain boards of the Church have also endorsed the movement and we understand have underwritten for some part of the expense of the movement. We believe that all such actions are unwarranted and dangerous. Any individual has the right as such to express his faith in it and to contribute of his own to its support; but, when it comes to groups of persons in a representative character, we do not believe that they have any right to take action that will appear to the public as committing the church to it, or to contribute the church's funds to its support. We have written this last paragraph with considerable hesitation, but with a conviction that will not allow us to leave it unwritten."

AN EXTRACT FROM AN ADDRESS BEFORE THE MISSISSIPPI STATE MEDICAL ASSOCIATION.

By Dr. W. S. Leathers.

It has been stated that 42 per cent of the men examined, chiefly of draft age, from Mississippi, who applied for enlistment in the army and navy during the recent war, were rejected because of physical unfitness. These men were looked upon by the military authorities as being handicapped for war service, and just as they would be regarded as inefficient for military duty, likewise the rejected population of the army and navy would also be handicapped for civil responsibilities. The most striking feature, perhaps, of the army and navy because of physical unfitness was the fact that a large percentage of these defects was traceable to child life that could have been corrected and these individuals made fit to fight in scores of instances. The cause of this condition can only be explained by one word, "Neglect."

When it is known that of the twenty-five million school children of this country at least 50 per cent have physical defects of one kind or another, some slight, others serious, a large part of which are entirely remediable, it is nothing less than criminal for the State and Nation not to assume the responsibility of protecting our boys and girls against physical unfitness in the future. Japan has had physical and medical inspection in her schools for thirty years. Why? Because she appreciates the fact that the strength of her nation depends upon the physical prowess of her men and the vigor of her women. Lloyd George, while addressing the people of England, made the significant remark that it is difficult to get an A grade army from a C grade population. While it was possible for America to obtain an army from about 60 per cent of her male population largely of draft age, physically fit, is it not the part of wisdom and economy in the future reconstructive policy of the State and Nation to start with the source of the trouble, with the child life, and by proper care and attention to the physical welfare of the child of school age increase the vigor and strength and make more efficient the other 40 per cent of our population?

The youth of our State should be made physically fit, not for the purpose of militarism, but to be fit to win in the achievements of a Christian civilization. It is a serious indictment of the civilization of this age for practically 40 per cent of the men and women at the most productive period of life to be suffering from physical weakness because of physical deficiencies resulting largely from neglect during childhood.

But what is the remedy? It seems to me that there are two main methods by which we can conserve the health of our boys and girls to the best advantage while attaining the age of manhood and womanhood. First, there should be introduced into our schools a system of Physical Education which would touch the life of the boy and girl in a personal way in relation to his fellow-man and would inculcate habits of right living. It is not simply a question of teaching physiology and hygiene in the schools. This kind of a course has been given for many, many years in our schools, and so far as the purpose for which it is intended is concerned, it has been largely a failure. The instruction given to the youth has not been practical and applicable to their daily lives. Neither has it enlisted their interest to any perceptible degree. On the contrary, because of the crudeness with which the work has been given, it has produced a reversion for such thought and study on the part of many students.

But there is an awakening among the school men of the State. Improvements are being made in the quality and methods of teaching and in the near future it may be predicted with assurance that such system of physical education as is needed for normal physical, mental and moral development will not only be required in all the schools in Mississippi, but in all of the schools in this country. This will result in a wholesome respect for the human body and it will make the boy and the girl feel as they attain their majority that the most important thing for them to do while achieving success is also to promote and conserve their physical welfare. This kind of physical education will bring the individual in touch with his environment in the right way, and, in the most unconscious manner because of having been trained in the habit of right living day by day, the youth of the land will so direct their lives as to prevent the invasion of disease on attaining manhood and womanhood, and, collectively, will conserve the national health and efficiency.

The medical inspection of our schools is a wholly different problem, although in a sense it is implied in physical education. This means the inspection of school children for the prevention of physical defects and the correction of such defects as are found before they develop into chronic conditions and permanently impair the body. The physical inspection of the school children can be made by a well trained nurse, with the assistance of the teacher, but the medical examination or, if you please, inspection, should be made invariably by a trained physician. The nurse could point out the children who need examination and the physician could restrict his activities, in the main, to those children who may be so classed by the nurse.

In view of the fact that the child is the ward of the State while of school age, and that he is a liability until he attains the age of accountability or becomes an asset, is it a wise policy in the economic development of the State to delay further in effecting a system of Physical Inspection and Medical Examination of the school child? Indeed, it would be criminal. If we lose sight of the lessons which have been impressed upon us during the war for the improvement of sanitary conditions and the physical condition of our people, it will be a tremendous error on the part of the State and Nation. Let me appeal to you, as a profession, to stand immovable as the Rock of Gibraltar for such legislation in the immediate future which will effect this end.

THE NEW CHANCELLOR AT EMORY UNIVERSITY.

Dear Brother Carley: I am sure the Methodists of Louisiana feel gratified at the selection of Dr. Franklin N. Parker as the head of the University. The fact that he is only to be chancellor temporarily arises from the fact, according to the statement in the public press, that Dr. Parker himself will not consent to hold the position for a longer time. It is the hope of the student body that he will be chancellor permanently, though the theological students, who are his most enthusiastic supporters, fear that it may take him from his class work, where he is specially helpful to them in their preparation for the ministry.

Apparently all the honor that Dr. Parker has received has come to him unsought, for no one who knows him could even imagine his seeking places of preferment. To him it is not honor but responsibility, and as such he never shirks it. It is a significant fact that since his election he has not referred to the matter either in chapel or class. A modest, kindly gentleman of the splendid Southern type, an earnest student and an efficient teacher, progressive in his ideals but intensely loyal to the fundamental truths of Christianity, he is a safe leader for the great educational work of our Methodist University. At least the student body think so, and it is gratifying to them to feel that the Trustees of Emory felt the same.

Mississippians may share the pride of Louisiana, since Dr. Parker's mother was a Miss Burruss, daughter of Dr. John C. Burruss, of the Mississippi Conference, known best, perhaps, as President for a number of years of Elizabeth Female Academy, at Washington, Miss. Sincerely,

J. B. CAIN.

STATEMENT OF THE JOINT COMMITTEE ON EVANGELISM CONCERNING THE MISSISSIPPI RESOLUTIONS.

(The resolutions to which specific reference is made in the communication from the Joint Committee on Evangelism, appeared in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of November 27, 1919. In justice to all concerned, we print the statement of the Joint Committee.—Editor.)

The Joint Committee on Evangelism met in McKendree Church, December 29, Bishop U. V. W. Darlington in the chair. Owing to the supreme importance of the work of this committee, coupled with the fact that the Committee has kept the bishops informed from time to time of every step taken and sent them sample copies of all matter published, it seemed wise this time to invite all the bishops to meet with the committee. Seven were present. Others were kept away by previous engagements and illness. Present with the committee were: Bishops Moore, Waterhouse, Cannon, and Murrah as visitors; Bishops Atkins, Ainsworth, and Darlington as members of the body. The visiting bishops were invited to sit with the committee and participate in all discussions. Reports were made indicating what had been done up to date, and plans for future work were agreed upon.

It was made plain that it was the purpose of the committee from the beginning to help pastors in every possible way to promote a revival atmosphere in the church. The committee said in the beginning to all pastors: "Hold your own meetings, at your own times and in your own way, and command us to help you all we can." It was understood from the beginning of its organization that if the pastors should reach all who ought to be reached by the meetings held by the pastors in the usual way with such help as this committee could render, there would be no campaign, no program, no plan. But if there were still unsaved people whom the Methodist Church should reach, let there be in addition to the usual revival work a campaign to reach those not reached in the meetings already held. Now that the surveys made in typical churches reveal the fact that there are even millions who ought to be reached by the Methodist Church, the committee advised a revival campaign. Preparations are now on for a great simultaneous revival campaign for two weeks preceding Easter.

Attention was called to the indictments against the committee made by the bishop and presiding elders in the North Mississippi Conference and published in the Advocate (Nashville) of Dec. 12. Some of the committee, including some of the bishops, felt that the indictments had attracted but little attention throughout the church, that there was not a word in the spoken or written word of the committee to justify such indictment, that all who had studied our literature knew that there was no foundation of truth in the allegations, and therefore should be treated with the silent notice they deserve. The majority thought that unless these brethren discovered their error and withdrew their charges personally, a positive denial of the charges should be made. A committee composed of a bishop and two elders was appointed to prepare this denial. Their report, after some modifications, was adopted. The secretary was advised to hold the denial that opportunity might be given for a withdrawal of the charges by these brethren. The steps advised by the committee having been taken to make it possible for these brethren to make such a withdrawal having now been complied with, the denial of the committee is herewith submitted for publication:

"Attention was called to the fact that in the Christian Advocate (Nashville) of Dec. 12 were published certain resolutions, passed at the late session of the North Mississippi Conference. These resolutions were signed by the bishop and all the presiding elders of the Conference.

"The statement and implications made in this paper make it necessary that a reply be made and published in behalf of truth and justice. The resolutions contained three grave impeachments of the present evangelistic order of the church.

"1. They say: 'We cannot co-operate with a plan plainly antagonistic to and repudiative of historic Methodism and evangelical Christianity.'

"2. 'We cannot approve or take part in a revival effort which effects chiefly an increase in church membership.'

"3. 'We recognize that to us as preachers and pastors is committed the supreme responsibility for the spiritual oversight of our respective congregations under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, and our rights and responsibilities we would guard against aggressions from any source which tends to make of us mere cogs in an ecclesiastical machinery, dominated and directed by outside agencies, to a degree destructive of individual initiative and intimate communion with the great Head of the church.'

"Because we are sure these brethren could not have meant to be unbrotherly in taking this action, and, therefore, that they must have been misinformed in regard to our aims and plans, we deem it proper that we should make the following statement:

"1. The plan which in Item 1 published above is pronounced 'plainly antagonistic to historic Methodism and evangelical Christianity and repudiative of them' was worked out by a number of the most experienced and spiritually-minded preachers of our church, and we are sure that none of the statements contained in the plan itself or in any official utterance of this committee or any utterance of any individual members of this committee can be quoted in justification of this grave charge. The only utterance which we have ever seen which would seem to lend even a color of justification to the charge is a statement that was not made either by the committee or a member of the committee, and which the committee does not now approve and never has approved.

"2. On Item 2 it is sufficient to say that none of the persons signing these resolutions is further from making mere church membership the end of the revival than are all the members of this committee. The plan, of course, contemplates an increase in membership as a result of the revival, but the spiritual enlargement of the membership and the conversions of many members who thus far have not known the Savior, with the bringing into the church of as many as possible of the converts, are included in the purpose of the plan. The assumption that any member of this committee deems mere church membership the chief end of the revival is contrary both to the belief and to all the official utterances of the committee.

"3. The implication of Item 3 is that the Evangelistic Committee is an outside agency. We have only to call attention to the fact that this committee is a creature of the General Conference; that it has not only the right, but is under the obligation of doing the very thing which it has done and proposes to do, that the will of the church in its creation may be carried out. The bishops in their June address not only recognized the responsibility of the Evangelistic Committee for promoting revivals throughout the church, but definitely appealed to the committee to show itself equal to the present opportunity. 'The day upon which we are entering,' they declare, 'furnishes the opportunity for these agencies (referring to the General Conference Evangelistic Committees) to justify their existence in providing a leadership in this campaign for souls.' We desire to assert further that the purpose and spirit of this committee is to co-operate with pastors in order to help them in whatever line of work or by whatever plan the pastors see fit to proceed. Nothing has been farther from the purpose of this committee and its representatives in the field than to impose anything like a cut-and-dried system upon the pastoral charges. Whoever so interprets its action misconstrues the case. Our object is, in short, to give the fullest assistance to our pastors in this greatest of all the work belonging to the Centenary Movement, and we are, therefore, one and all, at the service of the church for whatever assistance we may be able to render in promoting a deeply, genuinely spiritual revival throughout the church.

"We take this occasion to say further that we believe in the historic paths through which Methodism has come into this large day. We approve, as of God, the evangelistic agencies which Methodism has used throughout its history; we hold the pastor to be the supreme evangelistic agency within our church, and, therefore, have recognized, and do recognize, the right of the pastor to direct all spiritual movements within his congregation, and give whatever help he may be able to obtain and disposed to receive from his brethren. We believe that no revival of the spiritual life of the membership of the church, or such as results in the conversion of sinners, can come but by the agency of the Holy Spirit, upon whose gracious guidance we are steadfastly relying for all the good to be accomplished in this campaign. Our sole purpose is to assist in this great work that God may be glorified and vast numbers of souls shall be saved. If any brother has felt disposed to think of us otherwise and to ascribe to us any sympathy with a merely mechanical movement, or that we are acting in the spirit of 'numbering Israel,' we beg that he will dismiss that unbrotherly view and believe us most sincere in our efforts to promote a genuine revival throughout the connection.

"To the accomplishment of all these ends we need to have harmony among ourselves, and especially that we shall not ascribe unbrotherly motives one to another; and if any brother has any suggestions to make whereby our work may be better done, we heartily welcome his aid.

"We most heartily commend the work of Dr. O. E. Goddard as safe, sane, and spiritual. He is orthodox, evangelistic, and altogether trustworthy, and the committee most heartily commends him to the support and confidence of the entire church."

Published by order of the Joint Committee on Evangelism.

HOW I CELEBRATED MY BIRTHDAY, JAN. 18

By Brother T. B. Holloman.

Dear Brother Carley: Have you quit having birthdays? Well, I haven't. In one of my pastorates, not more than a quarter of a century ago, I was invited, with other friends, to take birthday dinner with one of my stewards. While at the dinner table, one of the company asked, "Colonel, what's the age to-day?" to receive reply, "Well, I've celebrated my 49th so many times that I've decided this shall be the last"; and so it was. But I haven't quit celebrating yet. Now Sam Steel butts in to ask, "How old, Tom?" Enough for him to know that I can call pigs, climb into the hayloft after eggs (gold dollars now), hold off the calf, and do other stunts of my boyhood, while he has to lie, like Tu. Titerus, under that spreading oak and read Reviews as dry as dust, and books full of all sorts of knotty problems—I'd rather tackle the knots in that oak. Only a few days now till time for hunting turkey nests—and then for fun climbing over these beech hills! Yes, and I ride five miles for the mail, and back before dinner, every day; and last but not least, I'm no longer "toothless." I've cut two sets while Sam hasn't been able to cut more than one in these 70 years—hurry up, Sam, I'm waiting.

But how did I spend that birthday? Well, this time it fell on Sunday, so of course I went to church, for it was our preaching day—first on the ground. When 12:30 came, and no preacher, the folks said I must preach; so I took Matt 6:33, and did my best for forty minutes and nobody snapped a watch on me, but one mother in Israel who had heard me many times said it was never better. At three p. m., we met the Sunday school, distributed the literature, and delivered a talk on the lesson of the day; and so I celebrated my 49th birthday, too—but don't mention it, Henry, I'm trying to play the part of an honor-roll member. As Bill Arp used to say, when I get to "ruminating," I wonder who's the best judge of a fellow's feelings—the bishop and his cabinet, or the fellow himself.

When another year turns the corner, I hope to meet you again; till then, "Good bye and good luck."

OPPOSED TO UNIFICATION.

Dear Brother Carley: I am an old layman. I have been steward and superintendent of the Sunday school nearly all the time since the Civil War. I am the son of a local Methodist preacher, and the father of two itinerant preachers—Rev. T. W. Lewis, Memphis, Tenn., and Rev. E. S. Lewis, Greenville, Miss. I have a great interest in the church.

I am opposed to unification for the following reasons:

First—In 1844 Bishop Pierce prepared the plan of separation. It was clearly stated and agreed to, that the M. E. Church was to pay the M. E. Church, South, our pro rata share of the value of all church property. This they failed to do. We had to sue them and get it by law. The M. E. Church has never apologized for this failure.

Second—At the organization of our church in 1845, Dr. Lovick Pierce, father of Bishop Pierce, was appointed the first fraternal messenger to the M. E. Church. Their General Conference met in 1848. Dr. Pierce attended and presented his credentials. He was refused a seat and was not recognized at all. The M. E. Church has not apologized for that affront.

Third—During the Civil War the Federal army invaded the South and captured a good many large cities where we had property located. Bishop Ames went with the army, took charge of our churches, and turned our members out. The M. E. Church held this property until we regained it by law. No apology has been made for this offense. I think the wrongs should be righted and let us make friends before we marry.

Again, from 1861 to 1865, we had a dreadful war. I was in it. Members of the M. E. Church were in the Federal army; members of the M. E. Church, South, were in the Confederate army. We fought desperately. After the war, we had ten years of bitter reconstruction. Carpet-baggers, scalawags, and negroes held high carnival all over the South. The bloody shirt has not been washed. We had better wait until the old war veterans and their children pass away. We had better take warning from the result of the Presbyterians' unification. One church, not far from here, is renting its own house of worship, that it built and paid for, as a result. There is too much at stake for us to be hasty. J. A. LEWIS.

AN APPEAL BY THE COMMITTEE ON EVANGELISM.

The Committee on Evangelism of the Louisiana Conference is very much in earnest in its desire that the present revival campaign, to close on Easter Sunday, shall accomplish what we desire and for which we pray. Our Missionary Centenary was successful because all joined heartily in the work. Is not this as important as that? Is it not more so? A survey of our communities in the State will reveal a surprisingly large percentage of the population without religious experience or church affiliation. If you doubt that statement, we challenge you to test it out.

If that statement be true, is not the church guilty before God and the world if it does not try to learn who are the people that most need the gospel in the community? In a political campaign we try to round up the indifferent for our man. This is not a political campaign; but there is a Man who must win.

When Jesus and his disciples were overwhelmed with the bigness of their task, he called seventy laymen and sent them to those cities whoro he himself would come. Now he calls on the laymen to help the ministers to proclaim his kingdom. Wherever that is done, He will come to that city.

This revival effort will succeed in proportion to the willingness of the people to give their time, to make an honest effort, to bear testimony to Jesus Christ, as Savior, and to pray. Sandwich prayer in between effort and testimony—and the effort will not be burdensome. Prayer removes difficulties. Have a secret place to pray.

This whole movement is co-operative. Pastor and people must work together. The pastor leads, but the people must follow. Where this is done, something will happen. The church is a body and its head and hands and feet must co-ordinate. The personal blessing in this movement comes to him who does.

"He that willeth to do my will, shall know of the doctrine." U. G. FOOTE.

DR. G. C. RANKIN, THE TEXAS EDITOR.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Having referred in a recent Advocate article to the Texas Christian Advocate as edited by the late G. C. Rankin, this further note might be of interest to the readers. Rev. W. A. Clark, of one of the Texas Conferences, who has just visited his father, J. H. Clark, the oldest of our Williams' Chapel church members at this place, informed us that every brewer and wholesale liquor dealer of Texas was a regular subscriber to the Texas Advocate when edited by Dr. Rankin, and when he died they came from far and near to attend his funeral; and that Hugh Nugent Fitzgerald, editor of the Fort Worth Record, the leading liquor paper of the State, not only attended his funeral, but in display headlines said something like this: "A prince has fallen. Dr. Rankin was a hard hitter, but he never struck below the belt. We appreciate a man, though he may differ with us as to policies, who has the courage of his convictions." This liquor editor's eulogy, Brother Clark said, was quoted all over Texas and in the West.

These liquor folks did not subscribe for the Texas Advocate and pay their $2 per year because they were loyal to the church, but because they were afraid of the church that was associated with such a paper as was the Advocate; for they, and all Texas — socially, politically, morally, and ecclesiastically—knew that there was such a periodical published, and that its policies were fast becoming the law of the State. And Texas Methodism, molded on the pattern of this aggressive organ of propaganda, is built on the same big type, and the Advocate, declares Brother Clark, was the leading influence in doing these big things.

It was also interesting to note that after having lost prestige for awhile after the death of Dr. Rankin, it has again moved up to a high place as a Methodist church paper under the editorship of Dr. Weeks.

When we entered Hiwassee College, East Tennessee, in 1891, Dr. Rankin had just the year before—I think it was—visited the school, and had told the boys about the pine pole shack where he "batched," and of the wheat straw on the planks in the corner where he slept, while he worked his way through this school under similar conditions as did this writer. Thus may be seen another reason for our pride in his brilliant career.

CONCERNING OUR REPRESENTATIVE CHURCH, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Our Representative Church at the National Capital has been completed, and the completion of the building has been marked by a notable advance in the success of the work.

The rapid increase of the membership vindicates the wisdom of the General Conference in projecting the enterprise, and the very large congregations which assemble at every service, from week to week, show how wisely the location was selected and how effectively the work is being prosecuted by the gifted pastor and his people. These gratifying results can not fail to give the utmost satisfaction to all our people throughout the bounds of Southern Methodism.

It is now necessary to collect all outstanding pledges and subscriptions to the end that the obligations incurred for the erection of the admirable building may be discharged as rapidly as possible.

The Commission to which was committed the task of erecting the Representative Church desires that sufficient funds be collected without delay to pay off all unpaid obligations. This appeal is made, therefore, to all who have subscribed or pledged money for this great church, and all who are interested in the complete success of the enterprise, to send their payments to Rev. H. A. Boaz, D. D., Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, 1115 Fourth Avenue, Louisville, Ky.

On account of unexpected and unavoidable delays and the increased cost of building materials and labor, arising by reason of the war, it has not been possible to complete the building at the original contract price. Hence it is necessary not only to collect all that has been pledged, but to secure additional gifts also. The Commission confidently believes that all our people throughout our connection will heed this earnest call for the funds required to carry this great and successful enterprise to complete and final success.

WHERE DOES YOUR CENTENARY MONEY GO?

It may go wherever you say for it to go. When an individual, a Sunday school, an Epworth League, or congregation, selects a mission special, the pledges made by them on the Centenary will, when collected, go to the person, place, or work selected. The pastor and church cabinet are urged to see that specials are taken to cover the annual Centenary collection. Persons, schools, pastors, and congregations will please write me asking for application blanks and telling me what sort of special is desired and the amount to be paid annually. This makes missions a part of the church life and work. When the report from your mission is read in your church, your interest, love, and joy, all will grow. Let every pastor apply for a special for each church at once. Apply to me.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The date for our District Conference has been fixed for Tuesday, May 18. I am making the announcement early so that in planning for revival meetings our pastors can have this in mind so that there may be no conflict. The Conference will be held at Broad Street, Hattiesburg, and the church is looking forward to it with great pleasure. May we have a great season of refreshing from the Lord. Fraternally,

W. B. JONES, P. E.

Hattiesburg, Miss., Feb. 11.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTICE.

The Executive Committee of the North Mississippi Conference Board of Church Extension will meet in Winona, at Hotel Wisteria, on Tuesday, March 2, 1920, at one p. m. Let all who desire to make an application to the General Board of Church Extension, for aid by donation or loan, have their applications in due form and in the hands of the Secretary. Rev. J. T. McCafferty, Starkville, Miss., or bring them to this meeting and be on time. Application blanks can be had by applying to Dr. H. A. Boaz, Secretary, Louisville, Ky. Be sure to state whether blanks are for donation or loan. W. M. YOUNG, Chairman.

THE ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN FOR 1920.

The Ultimate Goal:

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE IN EVERY METHODIST HOME IN LOUISIANA AND MISSISSIPPI.

The Immediate Goal:

TEN THOUSAND PAID-IN-ADVANCE SUBSCRIBERS BY MARCH 15th.

The Object:

TO HELP ALL OUR PEOPLE TO BECOME INTELLIGENTLY INTERESTED IN THE WORK OF THE CHURCH AND EFFICIENTLY ENGAGED IN PROMOTING ITS INTERESTS BY INCREASING THEIR INFORMATION AND MINISTERING TO THEIR SPIRITUAL LIFE.

What the Advocate Is:

A SIXTEEN-PAGE RELIGIOUS NEWSPAPER, PUBLISHED FIFTY-TWO TIMES A YEAR, OWNED AND CONTROLLED BY THE LOUISIANA, THE MISSISSIPPI, AND THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

The fifty-two issues aggregate 832 pages a year—some advertising, but mostly reading matter. Some of its features are:

Brief editorial comment upon matters of interest, and discussion of important movements and measures in the church and in the religious world generally

Helpful and interesting contributed and selected articles on various subjects.

The Home Circle—a department devoted especially to the children and young people. containing clean stories and poems, and many interesting and valuable bits of information.

Departments devoted to the interests of the Sunday school and the Woman's Missionary Society.

Many brief but interesting reports of the work of local churches throughout the three Conferences.

A column or more each week of notes that deal largely with people and events.

Full official announcements of quarterly conferences, and many other important official notices.

SOME THINGS THAT EVERY INTELLIGENT METHODIST OUGHT TO KEEP INFORMED ABOUT THIS YEAR:

The Evangelistic work of the Church.
The Plan of Unification.
The Educational Campaign.
Constitutional Prohibition and Other Moral Reforms.
The Issues Involved in the Interchurch World Movement.

THE ADVOCATE WILL FURNISH THE INFORMATION.

THE COST: AS LITTLE AS COULD BE EXPECTED— $1.50 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

This is less than three cents a week! There are fifteen Conference organs in our church; the subscription price of eight of them is $2.00 a year, and the price of one is $2.50 a year. The New Orleans Christian Advocate wants to maintain its present price of $1.50—but it needs the ten thousand paid-in-advance subscriptions by March 15 to do it.

NOW IS THE TIME FOR EVERYBODY TO HELP—ARE YOU HELPING?

There are 160,000 Methodists in Louisiana and Mississippi; surely 10,000 of them will willingly give $1.50 for their church paper for one year.

THE CAMPAIGN IS ON! SUCCESS IS ASSURED IF WE GO TO WORK! LET'S AT IT!

10,000 by March 15!

THE HEART GARDEN.

Keep your heart clean and it shall be
A garden fit and fair,
In which shall flourish plant and tree
With fruit and blossom rare.

Keep your thoughts pure and they shall be
The seed that you may sow,
And in good heart-soil you shall see
Them soon take root and grow.

Speak true, kind words, and they shall be
The beauteous blossoms rare,
Shedding rich fragrance full and free
Within a world of care.

Do deeds of love and they shall be,
Each helpful, loving deed,
The perfect fruit of plant and tree
That shall His hungry feed.

THE BRAVE LITTLE ENGINE.

Some one has told a kind of a fairy story about a little locomotive, that is worth repeating. A great freight train, so the story goes, stood waiting to go up over a mountain one day. The engineer went into the roundhouse and said to the first great engine that he met, "Oh, great engine, will you help me take the freight train up over the mountain to-day?" But this engine had been out all the morning, and did not wish to go again; so it puffed and grunted and let off steam as it said, "Been out to-day; been out to-day!" Then the engineer went to the next great engine, saying, "Oh, great engine, will you help me take the freight train up over the mountain to-day?" Now, this engine was very tired, and as it puffed and grunted and grunted and let off steam, it hummed, "Too tired to do it; too tired to do it!"

The engineer went to the next engine and said, "Oh, great engine, will you help me take the freight train up over the mountain to-day?" Now this engine was not tired and it had not been out before that day, but it puffed and grunted and let off steam as it answered, "Don't want to do it; don't want to do it!"

The man tried all the great engines in the roundhouse, but they all had some excuse! At last there was only one engine left. This engine really did not seem strong enough for the journey, but the engineer said, "Oh, little engine, could you help me take the great freight train up over the mountain to-day?" It was a cheery little engine and it answered with a cheery little song, "Think I can; think I can!"

"Good!" said the engineer. "Come!" And out of the roundhouse they went, and the little engine was fastened to the great freight train. Then the little engine began again its cheery "Think I can; think I can!"

At first the driving wheels did not turn at all—could the engine do it, do you think? Still it sang, "Think I can; think I can!" until at last the wheels turned, at first very slowly, then faster and faster, while the song kept on, "Think—I—can; think—I—can; think—I—can; think—I—can; think—I—can; think-I-can; think I can!" and at last they reached the top of the mountain. As they began to go down on the other side, the engineer heard a new song, for the little engine sang, "Thought I could; thought I could!" and down they came from the mountain top in safety.

Don't you think that little engine has set a good example for us to follow? When we are asked to do something that needs to be done, let us answer, "I think I can," and presently we shall accomplish the task and be able to sing in triumph, "I thought I could," for usually, "where there's a will, there's a way."—Apples of Gold.

KATIE'S TEMPTATION.

Katie looked longingly at the package on the library table. She knew what it was—or thought she did. Mother had sent off for Katie's winter coat and hat, and the package looked just as if it held those very things. She could not wait to see the handsome dark blue coat and velvet hat they had chosen, and here they were, just beneath her hands—and mother was out!

"I wonder if she would care if I opened it," thought Katie. "It's for me anyway. I don't believe she would—"

Her hand touched the string; a pair of scissors lay on the table—how easy. Then suddenly she drew back her hand. "It's for mother, I mustn't touch it."

But she could not help looking and longing until a thought flashed into her mind.

"Lead us not into temptation." She had prayed that prayer that very morning, yet here she was, almost ready to yield to the temptation to meddle.

"God doesn't want me to open it. I'll ask him to help me not to—and I'll go away from the temptation." She put the scissors on the table and ran quickly out of the room.

It was very hard to wait, but running away from the sight of the box made it easier to forget it. Keeping busy helped too. She practiced a long, hard exercise, and by the time she had finished, mother came home. Then Katie ran to her.

"Oh, mother, please open the box! I ran away from it."

"Ran away from it?" Mother looked puzzled. "What do you mean, little daughter?"

Then Katie told the whole story of her temptation. Mother looked at the package and laughed.

"My dear little girl, it is well you did resist the temptation to open that package, for you would only have had a great disappointment. That is a box of work for the Red Cross, and you would have found only sweaters and clothing. I am very glad my little girl has learned the great lesson of how to meet and resist temptation—by prayer for God's help, and to put yourself as far as possible from it. 'Lead us not into temptation' is the prayer for us all, for we are all tempted to sin, and if we try in our own strength to resist it we shall fail.

"And now, in good time, here is your box by the evening mail, and you may open it at once with my permission and approval."

The coat and hat were all that any little girl could have wished, and how glad Katie was now that she had not spoiled her own pleasure by meddling without leave.—Exchange.

"ALL SAME AS JESUS."

From far-away China there comes a story about two boys who were in a spelling class together.

The youngest boy in the class studied hard, and soon thought he was able to spell better than any one of the others.

One day he was too sure of himself. He missed a word! The boy who stood next to him spelled it right, and he had a right to move ahead of the boy who had missed. But he stood still.

"Why don't you move up?" the teacher asked.

"No, me not go," he said; "me not make Ah Fun's heart solly."

The others in the class looked at him with wonder.

Then one of the boys said, "He do all same as Jesus."—Exchange.

A SWEET VOICE.

"Oh, father, I wish I could sing! It's so nice to give pleasure to people. Florence sang at the missionary meeting, to-day, and we all enjoyed it so much. She sings every night to her father, too. I'd give anything if I could. But there's no good wishing; there isn't any music in me."

"Is that so?" asked her father, taking her wistful face between his hands. "Well, perhaps you can't sing; but don't tell me your voice has no music in it. To me it is full of music."

"Why, father, how can you say so?"

"Almost every evening," answered her father, "when I come home, the first thing I hear is a merry laugh, and it rests me, no matter how tired I am. Yesterday I heard that voice saying, 'Don't cry, Buddie; sister will mend it for you.' Sometimes I hear it reading to grandmother. Last week I heard it telling Mary, 'I'm sorry your head aches; I'll do the dishes to-night.'

"That is the kind of music I like best. Don't tell me my little daughter hasn't a sweet voice."—Round Table.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

SECURE THE QUOTA AT LEAST.

We are sure our readers know by this time that the Publishing Committee of the Advocate authorized a campaign to secure a minimum of 10,000 subscribers at the regular rate of $1.50 a year, by March 15. The matter was presented to the Annual Conferences and approved by them, and the understanding was that the required number of subscriptions would be divided among the pastoral charges by the district stewards, so that each pastor would know the exact minimum quota assigned to his charge. This has been done in most cases, we feel sure; but a recent inquiry from a pastor concerning his quota makes us fear that it may have been overlooked in some instances. This is a matter of very great importance just at the present time, and we sincerely hope that the presiding elders will, so far as practicable, see that every charge is notified of the quota assigned to it. In any case, we earnestly ask our pastors to push the campaign vigorously. We have not the slightest doubt that the full number can be secured by the date set if the matter is clearly presented. We are relying upon our friends even more, perhaps, than they realize. The time is short, and the need is urgent. Let us all do our best.

NOT LESS, BUT MORE.

If there is a particle of sectarian narrowness or bigotry in our soul, we do not know it—and we have searched diligently to be sure that we are correct in the statement. We claim nothing for ourselves that we are not willing to concede to others as to conscientiousness of motive and sincerity of statement. We have the greatest respect and Christian affection for those who differ from us in faith and doctrine, and we find real joy in hearing of the progress of the Kingdom of God, no matter by whom that progress is effected.

But we are coming more and more to feel that we need to develop a spirit of denominational loyalty, denominational pride, and denominational enthusiasm. If we belonged to the Methodist Church by accident, if we looked upon church membership as an insignificant detail of the religious life, we might be willing to think of denominational organization as a matter of little moment. But we are Methodists by conviction as well as by training, as we take it that most of our people are, and we cannot hold lightly the ties that bind us to an ecclesiastical organization that, under God, has been one of the most efficient means men have known for bringing sinners to repentance and saints to perfection.

Our loyalty to Methodism is based not so much upon what it has done, though it has a marvelous record, as upon what it is. At a time when the world was perishing from the lack of vital godliness, Methodism seized upon the cardinal doctrines of a universal atonement, personal accountability, justification by faith, regeneration, witness of the Spirit, growth in grace, and others that were unmistakably set forth in the Word of God, and made them the possession of multiplied thousands of men and women whose personal experience was an infallible proof to them of the things they had believed. Methodism is that expression of Christianity which, for us, most perfectly meets the needs of the individual soul and of the developing body of Christ in the world. It is broad in its views, deep in its sympathies, strong in its convictions, intense in its adherence to revealed truth, passionate in its devotion to God through Christ, ceaseless in its evangelistic activities. It holds up and insists upon a standard of righteousness that goes far beyond a ritual, a form or a ceremony; and its theology, being in keeping with the Word of God, is in keeping with the principles of sound philosophy as well as the dictates of unsophisticated reason. Having no entangling alliances with arbitrary systems of philosophy or theology, it has no unreasonable doctrines to defend or unnecessary burdens to carry. It is one of the historic expressions of that yearning after God which have brought peace and holy comfort to multitudes of earnest souls.

The denominational loyalty, pride and enthusiasm that we plead for are not out of keeping with a catholicity of spirit that recognizes the claims of other organizations of Christian people; but they are opposed to the latitudinarianism that has no special regard for any form of church organization of Christian belief. The time may come when denominations will have accomplished their work and all be merged into a simple church of Christ—but we cannot imagine it in the present order of things. All men can never agree upon what, to some at least, will be fundamental points of doctrine; and these differences of opinion will inevitably result in the close association of those who are like-minded. We do not believe that denominationalism is contrary to the spirit of early Christianity, and we do not believe that it is essentially contrary to its fullest development in the ages to come. God's blessing has been upon the work of the denominations in the past; we have no reason to believe that he will withdraw his blessing so long as they continue to labor for the right as they are able, in all good conscience, to see the right.

The Methodist Church is a great church, and we believe in it—in its doctrines, in its polity, in its motives, in its institutions, in its people. Other churches are better for some other folk—but not for us; if we knew of another that pleased us better, we would go to it. We do not claim perfection for our church; we are not intolerant of changes that godly wisdom may suggest; we believe in the wholesome doctrine of "going on to perfection" in the working out of our denominational destiny; but we take deep pride in the history of our church, in its work in the world today, and in what it promises to be in the future. Many forces are working diligently, faithfully, conscientiously, for the coming of the Kingdom of God on earth; not the least of these forces is Methodism, and it will accomplish its part in the glorious consummation the more surely as Methodists are not less, but more loyal to its teachings.

TOO MANY FOR US.

We try to keep as well informed as we may concerning movements in the religious world, but sometimes they come too thick and fast for us to have any very clear idea of what they all mean. First, we have our own question of the unification of American Methodism—about which we have some pretty definite ideas; next, the Interchurch World Movement of North America (something of a misnomer, it seems to us) makes its appearance, and we are hard put to it to discover how it has come to have such a powerful organization, what it is actually trying to do, and what its ultimate purposes are; all along we have had the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, which has functioned in so many ways and in so many directions that we have not been able to keep up with them; and now comes the Council on Organic Union of the Evangelical Churches in America, with a plan for the association of said evangelical churches into a visible body to be known as the "United Churches of Christ in America."

All these movements may be good—they probably have a lofty ideal in view at least—but we could wish that we might have time to make up our minds about one before another appeared on the scene. We are perfectly willing to co-operate to the extent of our ability in all good movements, provided such co-operation does not involve the question of allegiance to our own properly constituted and recognized ecclesiastical authorities; we are willing to give and to receive help in so far as our purposes and aims are one—and we can do so without the slightest feeling of incurred obligation on either side. To put it in the mildest form possible, we are inclined to look with friendly interest upon every responsible suggestion of a closer fellowship among the various bodies of evangelical Christians throughout the world, and we are willing to listen attentively to the claims of any proposed movement having such object in view; but we cannot become very enthusiastic over a proposition, involving momentous issues, submitted for consideration as to the advisability of its adoption, when, as a matter of fact, the proposition has already been worked out by those with whom we have not previously been in consultation, the organization set up, and the forces put to work. We are willing to move along with an appreciable degree oof speed—but we are not especially fond of being "hurried up," particularly when we have other matters of vast importance in hand.

We have been led to make the foregoing remarks by reason of the situation which is now confronting the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. So far as the Federal Council is concerned, it has probably served a very good purpose as a kind of clearing-house for interchange of ideas concerning religious activities at large—certainly it has not undertaken to function in a seriously objectionable way. Our church is represented in the Council by capable men, and we are not embarrassed by participation in its meetings. We do not know to what extent the newly organized Council on Organic Union of the Evangelical Churches in America will undertake to enlist the active co-operation of our church, but it is a movement that will demand serious attention. The Interchurch World Movement is already under way and, without committing ourselves to its plans as a whole, we are co-operating with it in certain phases of work which we had already arranged to take up independently. As we view it, we have not, as a denomination, been committed to it, and we cannot be so committed without the action of the General Conference. We owe it to ourselves not to do anything that could be construed as such commitment before the General Conference meets.

In our judgment, the time has come for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to give itself unreservedly to the work of attending strictly to its own affairs until its own great problems have been solved and its own urgent tasks have been accomplished. The question of unification is before us, and it must be settled. We should consider it earnestly and carefully, and act in accordance with our godly judgment as to what will be for the greater glory of God. We are at a critical juncture with reference to our educational institutions, and we are planning a great campaign to provide for the pressing needs of our colleges and universities. The work of the Centenary is not yet completed, and much of time and energy ought to be expended in that direction. And there are other matters that we ought not to neglect for any consideration. But greater than any of these, greater than all of them put together, is the work of spreading the doctrine of scriptural holiness throughout the land in such way as to quicken the spiritual life of our church members and bring sinners to repentance. A church has lost its mission when it allows anything to interfere with its efforts to save the lost. The prime mission of Jesus was to seek and to save that which was lost, and the church that fails to do its utmost to carry out that mission is unfaithful to him whose it professes to be. We need to begin in our own homes and in our own churches and in our own neighborhood, towns and cities, an intensive cultivation of the religious life that will bring the joy of salvation to those who have it not. We are not narrow, we are not bigoted, we are not contracted in vision; but our own church needs all the energy we are capable of expending at the present time. We have our own organizations, our own institutions, our own plans, our own agencies for doing our work; let us attend strictly to business at home for awhile.

DEDICATION OF CARROLLTON AVENUE CHURCH.

In the last few days every dollar of indebtedness on the Carrollton Avenue Church of this city has been paid, and the church will be formally dedicated by Rev. J. G. Snelling, the presiding elder and former pastor, under whose pastorate the church was erected. The dedication will take place at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of February 29, and former pastors, presiding elders, and members are invited to be present, as well as the public generally. No collection will be taken, and the pastor and members are expecting a great occasion. Rev. Ellis Smith is the present pastor of this important church in the Crescent City.

COMPLETION OF THE REPRESENTATIVE CHURCH.

We deem the statement of the committee in charge of the building of the Representative Church in Washington, D. C., to be of sufficient importance to have attention especially called to it. The statement will be found on another page of this issue of the Advocate. It has been a source of legitimate pride to us that this church of ours is looked upon as one of the architectural gems in a city of beautiful buildings; but our chief joy is in the fact that it is a positive and growing power for good in the capital of the nation. The reports are that it is crowded to capacity at every service, and that hundreds are being led to give their hearts to God through its ministry. It is important that all indebtedness against it be cancelled at the earliest possible date, and this call is made by the committee for the prompt payment of all subscriptions to the building fund. We trust there will be a prompt response.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. Theodore Copeland has recently been engaged in a very successful union revival meeting at Nocona, Texas.

Rev. H. C. Murphy gives a good account of the work of the Natalbany charge, Louisiana Conference, which he is serving this year.

We are glad to learn from a press notice that Rev. Beverly Carradine, who suffered a long illness following an accident, has recovered and is now writing a book.

Rev. C. E. Fike, our pastor at De Ridder, La., is serving one of the important charges of the Louisiana Conference. He will be the host of the next session of the Conference.

People and preacher satisfied and at work; new members received; salary paid to date—these are the items of a first-class report, it seems to us. It comes from Grand Cane, La., where Rev. S. J. Davies is pastor.

Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle, of Rienzi, Miss., continues to report gratifying results in connection with the work of his charge. Congregations are good and the services seem to be helpful to those who attend them.

We learn from a friend that the three churches of New Augusta, Miss., are negotiating for a lighting plant capable of meeting the needs of the churches and the Methodist parsonage as well. This is a distinct sign of progress.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley, pastor of Felicity Methodist Church, New Orleans, has been appointed Associate Field Director of the Interchurch World Movement in Louisiana. This work will not interfere with his regular pastoral duties.

The Cuba Mission Annual Conference, which was to have been held on January 29 under the presidency of Bishop McMurry, was unable to meet at that time on account of a railroad strike. April 8 has been fixed as the new date for its meeting.

Rev. H. B. Alsup, of Marksville, La., is meeting with encouraging success in the work of his difficult field. The pastor's salary has been fixed at an amount double that of last year, and there are many indications of interest throughout the charge.

The work of the new year has begun with bright prospects at Pascagoula, Miss., where Rev. J. H. Moore is pastor. The people are interested in the work of the church, and there is a spirit of expectancy that is sure to result in great spiritual blessings.

Rev. L. Hoffpauir, of Sulphur, La., is rejoicing over the bright prospects for the work of this year. There have been a good many accessions to the church already, and there are indications that this will be the best of the five years he has served this charge.

Dr. R. H. Bennett, Secretary of the Department of Ministerial Supply and Training, passed through New Orleans on Saturday of last week, en route to Austin, Texas, where he had an engagement for Sunday. We greatly appreciated his call at the Advocate office.

We hear good reports of the work at Corinth, Miss., under the leadership of Rev. O. W. Bradley. The congregations fill the house at both morning and evening services—a sure sign that the preaching is first-class. Thirty-one have been added to the church this year.

Brother L. P. Bailey, of Coldwater, Miss., has been taking the Advocate since 1891. We appreciate all the more, therefore, his kindly expressions concerning the value of the paper, as contained in a recent letter renewing his subscription for another year.

The National Conference of Social Workers will be held in New Orleans, April 14-21. Between three and four thousands delegates are expected to be in attendance, among whom are some of the most distinguished workers in the field of social welfare in the world.

Rev. Jno. F. Foster is preaching to large congregations at Franklin, La., and his prayer meeting services are unusually well attended, according to a report that recently came to us. A prayer meeting attendance of more than fifty is worthy of special mention anywhere, nowadays.

Rev. W. E. Akin was not among strangers when he went to the Olive Branch charge, Louisiana Conference, this year. He served those good people three years ago, and they received him again as a brother beloved. He is expecting this to be a good year in the work of the Loord.

Dr. J. W. Cunningham, said to have been the last surviving charter member of the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Louisville, Ky., in 1845, passed away at the home of his daughter at Monrovia, Cal., on January 13. He was in his ninety-sixth year when he died.

Miss Jessie Dickens, daughter of our pastor at Pachuta, Miss., was married on January 11, at her home, to Mr. Dewey Calvert, of Meridian, Miss., Rev. Geo. H. Thompson, presiding elder of the Meridian District, officiating. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes to the young couple.

Rev. H. Wade Cudd is now living in a newly-purchased parsonage at 2816 Judson Street, Shreveport, La. He serves the Queenshorough Church in that remarkably prosperous North Louisiana city, and his work prospers. He has received about 30 new members into the church since Conference.

Rev. Claude P. Jones, pastor of the Fayette charge, Mississippi Conference, has issued a church bulletin, which contains much that is of interest and value to the membership of the churches he serves. We note, among other interesting items, that there are two superannuated ministers within the bounds of the charge—Rev. W. W. Cammack and Rev. J. W. Bell.

Noonday services will be held every day during Lent, at some convenient down-town point, under the auspices of the New Orleans Protestant churches. Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, the distinguished English preacher, will be the speaker during the first week. Rev. W. B. Hogg, of Little Rock, Ark., is expected to be the speaker during one week of the series.

We are authorized by Dr. Franklin N. Parker to say that he was elected Acting Chancellor of Emory University, following the resignation of Bishop Candler, and that he has not, in any sense, committed himself to the permanent position. We take the liberty of saying, however, that it will be a source of very great gratification to the church at large for Dr. Parker to become the permanent head of this great educational institution.

We learn from the Daily Town Talk, of Alexandria, La., that the Pineville Methodist church, of which Rev. C. V. Breithaupt is pastor, is enjoying unusual prosperity. Seventy members have been received within the past five weeks, and there is a marked spirit of enthusiasm among the people. A new Sunday school room is being planned for, made necessary by the growing attendance, and a room for social and recreational purposes will be provided.

Mrs. E. J. Leslie, formerly of Ruston, La., but now living at Provencal, La., writes that the Advocate now takes the place of the Sunday morning sermon, since, unfortunately, there is no regular preaching service in the town.

In the early morning of Wednesday, January 28, 1920, Mrs. Sallie Linfield Redding, wife of the late Chas. A. Redding, of Terry, Miss., passed peacefully to her reward in Heaven. She leaves two sisters, Miss Annie E. Linfield and Mrs. B. F. Jones, two brothers, Rev. W. L. Linfield and Col. R. P. Linfield, three sons, W. L., C. A., and P. H. Redding, and three daughters, Mrs. E. C. Swittenberg, Miss Maggie Redding, and Mrs. Eugene Birdsong, to inherit the rich fragrance of a consecrated life and its beautiful example of Christian self-denial. We extend sincere sympathy to those who have been bereaved by the death of this noble woman.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The District Conference for the Lake Charles District, Louisiana Conference, will convene in Lake Arthur, Tuesday, March 2, at 7:30 p. m.

Every charge is entitled to five delegates, and each church is entitled to have one delegate. The Charge Lay Leader is an ex officio member.

This conference is called early for several reasons; but the main reason is in view of the evangelistic campaign ordered by the General Conference.

We must lay our plans for the year's work. Let every pastor be present, and have at least one delegate present. If possible, elect the minute man from your charge as delegate, as we expect some one from Nashville to be present to assist in the plan of organizing the minute men.

Elect your delegates, send me the list as soon as elected, and I will inform the conference host, Brother S. L. Riggs.

Let us pray for the leadership of the Holy Spirit in this conference. The one leading note will be that of evangelism. In this we need the power of the Spirit, above all else.

"Not by might nor by power; but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." H. W. BOWMAN, P. E.

Obituaries.

RALPH AUBREY, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. McIntosh, was born Aug. 17, 1915, and died Jan. 7, 1920. His parents dedicated him to the Lord in baptism, Dec. 19, 1915, Rev. G. A. Harmon officiating. He joined the Methodist Church under the ministry of Rev. J. C. Chambers on Dec. 19, 1919.

He leaves his parents, several brothers and sisters, and a host of friends and loved ones to mourn his departure.

As a result of a severe attack of illness in early life he was never well, but with all his afflictions he was bright and cheerful, making life worth while even though he must suffer. He won many friends among the people of the town, and his playmates at school all loved him.

He was a faithful Sunday school pupil and took a lively interest in his class.

He quietly passed to his reward on the morning of Jan. 7. The funeral was held at the church in the presence of loved ones, the entire public school, and a host of friends, and his remains were laid to rest in the city cemetery.

His sojourn on earth was indeed short, but his preparation for eternity was complete; he was ready when the Lord called.

May the blessings of Almighty God abide upon the loved ones who remain, and may each and every one put their trust in God through Christ.

FROM MONTROSE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: The Rev. John A. Moore, presiding elder of the Newton District, was with us on February 8 and 9. He preached two able sermons on Sunday, to the delight of all those who heard him. He is a very fine exegete, as well as an efficient presiding elder. He held our first quarterly conference on Monday morning. We did not have a full attendance of the officials from the two churches on the charge, but those who were present seemed to be optimistic, and hopeful of a good year in the Master's work. The pastor's salary has been increased above that of last year. The prospect for this year is fine.

HILARY S. WESTBROOK.

YOUR PART AND MINE IN THE GREAT REVIVAL.

By Robert B. Eleazer.

On the human side, the one factor which, more than any other, will insure the success of our approaching church-wide evangelistic effort will be the hearty participation of the rank and file of the membership. And this for two reasons. First, because there can be no real revival of our people which does not impel them to go out after others. Failing of this result, any apparent revival will be more seeming than real. Indeed, it is for this more than for anything else that we need reviving. Too many of us have lost the evangelistic spirit. We have ceased to be "fishers of men," if, indeed, we ever were. We have forgotten that Jesus said, "As the father has sent me into the world, even so send I you into the world." The only revival, therefore, that will really count must be a great church-wide, every-member revival of personal, intense, evangelistic zeal.

In the second place, the power of the revival to win the unconverted will depend in relatively small degree upon the preaching and in very large degree upon the one-to-win-one efforts of the membership. For the most part, the unconverted will not come under the influence of the preaching at all except at the earnest invitation of some Christian friend. And having been brought into the atmosphere of the revival, his decision again will in most cases hinge upon the influence of some friend. It is not too much to say, therefore, that in the last analysis the success of the whole plan rests with the individual member—with you and me.

Let us, then, prepare for it by an earnest and sustained effort to become possessed of the mind of Christ, by means of prayer, Bible study, and the infilling of the Holy Spirit, that we may worthily do our part as ambassadors for Christ and co-workers with God. With that preparation and with that spirit, our efforts can not fail of glorious results. Otherwise, it will be no revival for us nor for those for whom God may hold us responsible.

ABOUT RHEUMATISM

What Thousands Have Found Gives Relief From This Painful Trouble.

Rheumatism is a constitutional disease, manifesting itself in local aches and pains, inflamed joints and stiff muscles. It cannot be cured by local or external applications. It must have constitutional treatment.

Take a course of the great blood-purifying and tonic medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, which corrects the acid condition of the blood on which rheumatism depends, and gives permanent relief. This medicine combines, with excellent alteratives and tonics, what is generally conceded to be the most effective agent in the treatment of this disease.

If a cathartic or laxative is needed, take Hood's Pills. Purely vegetable.

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using the well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

CHARTER.

STATE OF LOUISIANA,
PARISH OF ORLEANS.

BE IT KNOWN, That on this Thirty-first day of December, Nineteen Hundred and Nineteen.

Before me, JOSEPH LAUTENSCHLAEGER, a Notary Public in and for the Parish of Orleans, State of Louisiana, duly qualified, personally came and appeared the several persons whose names are hereinafter subscribed, all of full age of majority, who declared that availing themselves of the laws of this State, relative to the organization of corporations, they do hereby covenant and agree to form themselves into a Corporation for the objects and purposes, and under the following stipulations to-wit.:

ARTICLE I.

The name and title of this Corporation shall be the "RELIABLE AUTO SALES COMPANY, Inc." It shall enjoy corporate existence for a term of 99 years from date, unless sooner dissolved. It shall have, enjoy and exercise all rights, powers and privileges now granted by law, or hereafter granted, to corporations of this character, especially the right to hold, receive, purchase, alienate, sell, mortgage, pledge, rent or lease property, real, personal and mixed, in fact anything permitted by the law necessary and convenient for carrying out the objects and purposes of this Corporation.

ARTICLE II.

The domicile of this Corporation shall be in the City of New Orleans, Louisiana, where all citations, or other legal process, shall be served on the President and in his absence on the Secrtary-Treasurer.

ARTICLE III.

The objects and purposes of this Corporation are hereby declared to be the buying and selling of Autos, trucks, tractors and all their parts and accessories, and everything pertaining to that line of business; also the operation of a general garage, and anything else that may be necessary to or incidental to said business.

ARTICLE IV.

The Capital stock of this Corporation is hereby fixed at the sum of TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS, divided into 100 shares of the par value of One Hundred Dollars each, to be issued in the manner and for the consideration prescribed by law. All shares to be full paid and non-assessable. The Capital stock may be increased when found necessary by a vote of 2-3 of all the capital stock at a meeting called for that purpose.

ARTICLE V.

All the Corporate powers of this Corporation shall be vested in and exercised by a board of Directors to be composed of Three Stockholders, two of whom shall constitute a quorum. The following named stockholders shall constitute the first Board of Directors, viz.: Will J. Morgan, 244 Carondelet Street; Henry J. Prados, 5338 Perrier Street; Rufus H. Prados, Bay St. Louis, Miss., with the said Will J. Morgan, as President; Rufus H. Prados, as Vice President, and Henry J. Prados, as Secretary-Treasurer, and they shall hold their office until the first Monday of January, 1921, or until their successors are elected and qualified, on which day the election shall take place, or as soon thereafter as possible.

All stockholders' meetings, including the annual meeting for the election of officers and directors shall be preceded by written notice, delivered personally or mailed to the last known addresses of the stockholder, 15 days before such meeting; provided the stockholders shall always have the right to waive such notice.

If any vacancy occurs on the Board of Directors the stockholders shall name or elect a successor to fill the vacancy until the next general election. The election of Directors shall be by ballot, and each stockholder shall be entitled to one vote, in person or by proxy, for each share of the Capital stock owned by him.

ARTICLE VI.

No stockholder of this Corporation shall have the right to sell or pledge his stock, without first offering same to the stockholders, through the officers of this Corporation, upon allowing said stockholders TEN DAYS to purchase same, at BOOK VALUE, or receives same in PLEDGE, as may be desired by the owner of said stock, and no transfer of stock shall be binding upon this Corporation unless actually made on the books of the Corporation, in the manner required by law.

ARTICLE VII.

The Charter of this Corporation may be modified or altered, or the Corporation may be dissolved, the capital increased or decreased, or liquidated in the manner as is now or may hereafter be prescribed by law.

THUS DONE and PASSED, at New Orleans, La., on the day and date first before written, in presence of Emannel L. Weil and Orrin Beegle, competent witnesses of lawful age, residing in this Parish, who herennto sign their names with said Appearers and me Notary.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL COUNCIL AND THE INTERNATIONAL ASSOCATION.

By Rev. E. B. Chappell, D.D.

For a number of years two international organizations have been operating in the Sunday school field in the United States and Canada, namely, the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations and the International Sunday School Association. The former of these is an interdenominational body composed of the editors and publishers of Sunday school periodicals and of the general and departmental secretaries of about thirty denominations. The latter is an independent body whose charter gives it the right to perpetuate itself in any way it may see fit. Connected with the International Association are various state and provincial associations, which, although practically autonomous, are constituted on the same general plan as the wider organization.

At the annual meeting of the Sunday School Council in January, 1919, a movement was inaugurated looking to such a reorganization of the International Association as would make it more nearly a medium of interdenominational co-operation. The Committees on Reference and Counsel of the Sunday School Council and the International Association were instructed to take the whole matter under consideration and report their findings to their respective bodies. The committees, after a careful study of the entire situation, worked out a plan which was submitted to the Council at its annual meeting in St. Louis, January 28 and 29, and, with some minor modifications, adopted. This plan therefore only awaits adoption by the International Association to become operative.

The main features of the plan are as follows:

1. The International Executive Committee is to be composed of (a) twenty members elected by the International Sunday School Convention; (b) one member appointed by each state, provincial and national association having a Sunday school enrollment of 500,000 or less; (c) one member appointed by each of these bodies for every additional 500,000 or major portion thereof, and (d) a number of members equal to all of the above to be appointed by the affiliating denominations. The representation of the denominations is to be on the basis of Sunday school enrollment, except that each denomination is to be entitled to at least one member. It is provided that in addition to the above, the Executive Committee, upon nomination of the Board of Trustees, may elect twelve members for special fitness irrespective of denominational or geographical relationship.

2. The various state executive committees are to be constituted on precisely the same basis as that of the International Committee.

3. The plan also provides that the Sunday School Council, hitherto composed entirely of denominational representatives, shall be so reorganized as to comprise, in addition to the denominational representatives, the general executive and departmental secretaries and superintendents of the International Sunday School Association and its auxiliary associations, the members of the International Lesson Committee and such other groups as the Council may determine.

A careful study of this plan will make it clear that its implications are far-reaching in their significance. Many questions at once arise as to denominational responsibility for national and State programs and budgets, the co-ordination of denominational and International programs and the adjustment of relations between international and denominational field workers. These must all be carefully studied before any action is taken committing our church officially to the adoption of the plan.

For it should be clearly understood that the action taken at St. Louis brings us under no obligation whatever to enter into the proposed affiliation. Indeed, it is our opinion that our General Conference is the only body that has the right to authorize either the General Sunday School Board or the various Conference Boards to relate themselves officially and organically to such an organization as is proposed. For this reason and for others which need not be stated here, most of the representatives of our church in the Sunday School Council did not vote for the action taken at St. Louis. We felt that it would be improper for us without previous instruction to take any action which even by implication would appear to commit our church to a measure so far-reaching in its aims and its possible consequences.

The whole matter, therefore, is to be reported to the General Sunday School Board for transmission to the General Conference with such recommendations as the Board may see fit to make.

Meanwhile the relation of our church and our Sunday school workers to the International Association and the various State associations remains just what it has been hitherto.

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

"Khaki Chats" is a monthly magazine published by Chamberlain-Hunt Academy, a Presbyterian institution at Port Gibson, Miss. In the January issue is an editorial in which a neat compliment is paid to Port Gibson Female College, as follows:

"Located in the city of Port Gibson, only a few blocks from Chamberlain-Hunt Academy, is a school for which C. H. A. has formed a strong attachment. Port Gibson Female College was established in 1843. It is under the control of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Perhaps no denominational college for women has a more favorable and pleasant surrounding than P. G. F. C. Its location, covering an entire block in the prettiest section of the city, is ideal.

"The college at present is in a process of growth which far surpasses that of any period during the rapid and prosperous development of this stable Christian institution. The major part of this success is due to the incessant work and untiring labors of the president, Dr. Rolfe Hunt, and the capable corps of teachers that he has gathered around him. We predict for Port Gibson Female College the brightest future of any institution in the South."

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.
By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

If any one doubts the value of the Membership Campaign, write to Rev. W. W. Woollard, of Grenada, and ask him what it did for his school.

One trouble about this making a campaign for members and teaching evangelism is, we hate to do something we have not been doing in the past.

Would that we could be still and hear the thunder and feel the throb of omnipotence in the command of our risen Lord, "GO TEACH." The world would not be reeling like a drunken man to-day if this command had been obeyed in any large measure from the time it was given until to-day.

Take time to tell to the readers of the Advocate what your school is doing for others and some one else will take notice and do as well as you are doing.

I had the pleasure of spending the 7th and 8th at Hattiesburg with Rev. J. C. Chambers, Mrs. Brame, and Rev. B. F. Lewis. We held services in the three churches Saturday and Sunday, and Sunday afternoon representatives from all the churches met at Court Street for a general rally. The pastors, superintendents, and teachers are reaching out to bring in every soul in this growing young city. Four presiding elders in the Mississippi Conference have promised Brother Chambers to do their utmost to bring their districts to the third rank standard this year. Brother Chambers thinks these four elders are big men. He is right.

Does your school want to take a "special" of $50 or more? Write to Mrs. W. T. Boswell, of New Albany, and ask her to give you one. The following schools have taken specials recently: Robinsonville, Iuka, New Albany, Okolona, Senatobia, and Clarksdale. The total amount promised for the year is $590. Give missionary instruction, take a special and thus give your young people a world vision. Evangelize and send the glad news to the uttermost parts of the earth; all else is secondary.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

At the District Officers' Meeting all the districts so far have agreed to try and make each district 100 per cent by Conference. This makes a big program of work, but if we try, we can make a big impression upon it in a few months.

The first Sunday I had the pleasure of being with the good people at Hazlehurst. Brother Graves starts off well. His folks are talking a new church and I do hope they can and will build a creditable building.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday a city-wide institute was conducted. Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, of Sardis, Miss., Rev. B. F. Lewis, of Jackson, Mrs. S. S. Brame, of Jackson, and myself composed the team. The institute was departmentized and met in the different churches at the same time. In this way I feel that we came in closer and more definite touch with more of the workers than we could meeting at any of the churches all the time.

Brother Gladney acquitted himself splendidly. The workers were captivated by him and his message. His work will abide. He always does good work. May the blessings of God attend him.

Brother Lewis filled his part of the program full. He created much interest and enthusiasm in the work. I am always glad to have him with me. I feel he was enabled to do much good from the comments made to me.

Mrs. Brame is a credit to the Board and those who are fortunate to have her with them will be the gainers. The school at Court Street was especially helped by her visit. They will soon be 100 per cent, which is a fine forward step.

All the schools in Hattiesburg are growing. I am so glad. This means much for the work there.

The new preachers are taking well and the one returned is wearing well. The work seems to be moving forward all along the line.

Capitol Street, Jackson, is challenging First Church, Brookhaven, to an attendance contest. Watch the paper for some interesting reports. Both schools are near the same size and are both growing.

We have at last opened our office and are at home to our friends at Room 3, Buie Building, Jackson, Miss., about one block from the depot and two doors from the Edwards House.

Pray for the work and workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

FROM HICKORY AND DECATUR.

I am glad to say we are moving along very nicely on the Hickory and Decatur circuit. Each place is having preaching service twice a month, and seems to enjoy having two services instead of one. Our first quarterly conference will convene with the Hickory church on February 25, and all the official board is expected to be present, as that will be the time when the pastor's salary is to be made.

By the way, I wish to inform that pastor down on the coast that he is not the only one who has some of the elect women as members of the board of stewards. At the fourth quarterly conference of Hickory and Decatur circuit last year, October 8, we elected three women of the Hickory Methodist church as stewards to serve for the year 1920. They are: Mrs. Ruby Brown, Mrs. Marie Hopkins, and Miss Lora Bell Gilmore, all very efficient workers in the church.

W. L. BLACKWELL, Pastor.

Drugs Excite Your Kidneys, Use Salts

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers, Drink Lots of Water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your howels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—Adv.

Letters From Rheumatics.

Possibly you have imagined that you could not get your own consent to write a testimonial letter, but if you have ever experienced the excruciating pains of rheumatism you can at least appreciate the feelings of those who have been relieved of this terrible disease by drinking the Mineral Water from the justly celebrated Shivar Spring. This water overcomes many diseases, including Indigestion, Gout, Uric Acid Poisoning and Liver and Kidney diseases, but no patrons of the Springs are more enthusiastic in their praise of the water that those who have been relieved of their rheumatism. Hundreds of letters like the following have been received by the Management:

Dr. Crosby, a South Carolina physician, writes: "I have tested your Spring water in several cases of Rheumatism, Chronic Indigestion, Kidney and Bladder troubles and in Nervous and Sick Headaches and find that it has acted nicely in each case, and I believe that if used continuously for a reasonable time will give permanent relief. It will purify the blood, relieve debility, stimulate the action of the Liver and Kidneys and Bladder, aiding them in throwing off all poisonous matter."

Dr. Avant of Savannah writes, "I suffered for years with a most aggravating form of Stomach disorder, and consulted a number of our best local physicians, went to Baltimore and consulted specialists there and still I was not benefited. I had about despaired of living when I began using Shivar Spring Water, and in a short time I was entirely relieved."

Mr. Rhodes of Virginia writes: "Please send me ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water quickly. I want it for Rheumatism. I know of several who were relieved of Rheumatism with this water."

Editor Cunningham writes: "The Water has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken for Rheumatism. Am entirely free from pain."

Mr. McClam of South Carolina writes: "My wife has been a sufferer from Rheumatism and after drinking twenty gallons of your Mineral Water was entirely relieved of the horrible disease."

Mr. Carter of Virginia writes: "Mrs. Carter has had enlarged joints on her hands, caused by Rheumatism. Shivar Spring Water removed every trace of the enlargement. The water is simply excellent."

If you suffer from Rheumatism or any curable disease, accept the guarantee offered below by signing your name. Clip and mail to the

Shivar Spring,
Box 17F, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:—I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water. Comb Sage Tea in Hair to Darken It

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Keep Her Locks Dark, Glossy, Beautiful.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through hair taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. —Adv.

SPECIAL RULING ON REINSTATEMENT OF WAR RISK INSURANCE.

Under a new and very liberal ruling of far-reaching importance to millions of former service men, issued by Director R. G. Cholmeley-Jones of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, with the approval of Secretary of the Treasury Carter Glass, War Risk (term) Insurance, regardless of how long it may have been lapsed or canceled, and regardless of how long the former service man may have been discharged, may be reinstated any time before July 1, 1920.

The only conditions are:

1. Two monthly premiums on the amount of insurance to be reinstated must accompany the application.

2. The applicant must be in as good health as at the date of discharge, or at the expiration of the grace period, whichever is the later date, and so state in the application.

The new ruling is the most important liberalization of War Risk Insurance since the passage of the Sweet bill, and is designed for the special benefit of service men who failed to reinstate their insurance prior to the new law, and who have been discharged more than 18 months.

Ex-service men may still reinstate their lapsed term insurance at any time within 18 months following the month of discharge by complying with the same conditions. Within three months following the month of discarge reinstatement may be made by simply remitting two months' premiums without a formal application or statement as to health.

Reinstatement may also be made after 18 months following discharge, as follows: If the insurance has not been lapsed longer than three months, by complying with the conditions outlined in (1) and (2) above. From the fourth to the eleventh month, inclusive, after lapse, by complying with the same conditions, and in addition submitting a formal report of examination made by a reputable physician substantiating the statement of health to the satisfaction of the Director of the Bureau.

In announcing the new ruling, Director Cholmeley-Jones desires to emphasize the fact that War Risk (term) Insurance or U. S. Government (converted) Life Insurance may now be made payable to any of the following new and enlarged group of beneficiaries:

Life Insurance, now or at any time within five years after the formal termination of the war, parent, grandparent, step-parent, wife (or husband), child, step-child, adopted child, grandchild, brother, sister, half-brother, half-sister, brother through adoption, sister through adoption, stepbrother, stepsister, parent through adoption, uncle, aunt, nephew, niece, brother-in-law, sister-in-law; persons who have stood in the relation of a parent to the insured for a period of one year or more prior to his enlistment or induction, or the child or children of such persons, parent, grandparent, step-parent, or parent through adoption of the insured's wife (or husband).

War Risk (term) Insurance may be converted into United States Government Life Insurance, now or at any time within five years after the formal termination of the war by proclamation of the President.

United States Government (converted) Life Insurance, including Ordinary Life, Twenty Payment Life, Thirty Payment Life, Twenty Year Endowment, Thirty Year Endowment and Endowment at Age 62, may now be paid in a lump sum at death, if such method of payment is designated by the insured.

Is Your Blood Starving For Want of Iron?

Modern Methods of Cooking and Living Have Made an Alarming Increase in Iron Deficiency in Blood of American Men and Women

Why Nuxated Iron so Quickly Helps Build Up Weak, Nervous, Run-Down Folks — Over 3,000,000 People Annually Taking It to Increase Their Strength, Power, Energy and Endurance.

Which kind of man are you?

Which kind of woman are you?

"Is your blood starving for want of iron? If you were to go without eating until you became weak, thin and emaciated, you could not do a more serious harm to yourself than when you let your blood literally starve for want of iron—iron that gives it strength and power to change food into living tissue," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital.

"Modern methods of cooking and the rapid pace at which people of this country live has made such an alarming increase in iron deficiency in the blood of American men and women that I have often marveled at the large number of people who lack iron in the blood, and who never suspect the cause of their weak, nervous, run-down state. Lack of sufficient iron in the blood has ruined many a man's nerves and utterly robbed him of that virile force and stamina which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life.

"I strongly advise those who feel the need of a strength and blood-builder to get a physician's prescription for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—or if you don't want to go to this trouble, then purchase only Nuxated Iron in its original packages and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the package."

In commenting upon the value of Nuxated Iron as a means for creating red blood strength and endurance, Dr. George H. Baker, formerly physician and surgeon, Monmouth Memorial Hospital, New Jersey, says: "What women need to put roses in their cheeks and the spring-time of life into the step is not cosmetics or stimulating drugs, but plenty of rich pure red blood. Iron is one of the greatest of all strength and blood-builders and unless this iron is obtained from our food it must be supplied in some form that is easily assimilated if we want to possess power, energy and endurance. I have found nothing in my experience so effective for helping to make strong, healthy red-blooded men and women as Nuxated Iron.

Manufacturer's Note: Nuxated Iron which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated and does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

LAXATIVE for Aged People

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Notice to Auxiliaries of Mississippi Conference.

The annual meeting of the Mississippi Conference will be held in Jackson, Miss., March 2-5, in Galloway Memorial Church. It is earnestly hoped that each auxiliary in the Conference will send a delegate to this meeting. Presidents will please attend to this as early as possible, and send names of delegates to Mrs. William Hemingway, 554 N. President Street, at their earliest convenience.

Mrs. J. H. McCoy and Dr. W. B. Beauchamp, of Nashville, will be present at some time during the meeting to address the body on our Home and Foreign work and the Centenary.

May we all do our part to make this the best annual meeting in our history; and may God richly bless our efforts in the work of His kingdom!

Mrs. H. L. McCLESKEY,
Conf. Cor. Sec'y.

Pass Christian Making Start

A message comes from Mrs. Susie Ford, of Pass Christian, telling of the good work, and very necessary work, being done by the women as a Local Aid Society. We trust that this shall be a stepping stone to larger things, and that in due time the members will see the way clear to become a Missionary Society, as so many others have done in the past.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

A Message from the Supt. of Supplies.

Dear Friends: I want to thank you for your co-operation in making the past year the most successful year of the Department of Supplies. Eighty-one per cent of the auxiliaries reported sending boxes, the total of which amounted to $3,236.30, an increase of 182 per cent over the year 1918.

Our aim, at the beginning of this New Year, is to refurnish the Louisiana room at Scarritt Bible and Training School. This room was named for our State. Every woman in the Missionary Society will take pride in having our room look as well as any in the school.

As I understand, this room has never had new furniture, but has been furnished with the furniture discarded from other rooms. Through the efforts of Miss Cox, while a student there, new beds were purchased for the room. Through the generosity of some of the auxiliaries in the Alexandria and Monroe Districts a new rug has been added to the room. Miss Gibson writes that one hundred dollars will finish refurnishing the room.

As the Council meets at Kansas City, April 1, and a great many visitors will be at the school, we are very anxious to complete the room by then. It is only two months before April 1, so we will have to act quickly if we accomplish this. Any donation which you wish to give to this may be sent to Miss Maria L. Gibson, Scarritt Bible and Training School, Corner Norledge and Askew Avenues, Kansas City, Missouri. If you send any donations, please drop me a card at once that I may keep in touch with the work.

Thanking you again for your help and co-operation in the past year, I remain,

Yours sincerely,
(MRS.) H. L. BAKER.
La. Conf. Supt. of Supplies.

A Letter From Miss Randle.

Songdo, Korea.
December 10, 1919.

The Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference.

My Dear Friends: Those of you who have used a typewriter a great deal, and only those, know how much you have done for me. Thank you very, very much for the beautiful Corona typewriter which you sent to me. I feel as if I have a magic wand; and when I express a wish and wave my wand, it comes to pass. You were all so good to me before I left home, and now you have done this big thing besides. Since the Bible says it is more blessed to give than to receive, you are most blessed people. You have made me very happy, and you have given me something that will always be a comfort and pleasure to me. When I write now I feel sure that people will have no trouble in reading my letters, and it is a pleasure to write. If I could say all the things that I want to say, you most certainly would receive a long letter. But under the present conditions if I did write the things I want to write, you would never receive this letter.

Not long after our conference, I wrote to you and told you about my language study and my new appointment. The seventeenth of November, one year and four days after beginning regular study, and fourteen months and two days after my arrival in Korea, I took my second year written examinations; and during the same week I took the second year oral examination. In the spring I hope to take the examinations for the third year. Of course I could not have done quite so much with my studies if the work of the missionaries in this country were normal. The school to which I was appointed has been closed all the time, except for a few weeks, for almost a year.

We have three churches in this city. Mr. Wasson and I are the only foreigners who attend my church. When he is absent, I am the only foreigner. I felt a little queer at first, but now I am accustomed to being the only foreigner in the crowd. I play the organ for the services. We have a choir down there, and they think it is dreadful if they do not practice every time I am at the church. We practice an hour after prayer meeting and after Sunday evening service, a half hour after morning service, and from 6:30 to 9 o'clock Saturday evening. We have been practicing Christmas songs ever since I came here: I suppose they will not need to practice except on Saturdays when there are no special programs to prepare. The men in this country generally sing better than the women. On account of the secluded lives which the women have lived, they are extremely timid. It is indeed a joy to work for and with these people. I am glad all the time that I am here.

It is needless to say that I think of you, my good friends, very often; very nearly everything I have is a reminder of you. Am sure that you have done a wonderful work during the past year, and I hope that the coming year will see a continual increasing in the doing of good works; then it is inevitable that your joy will be full.

Thank you again for the typewriter and for all the kind things you have done for me. With love and best wishes to each of you, Gratefully yours,

PAULINE GLASS RANDLE.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY FOR KIDNEYS, BLADDER, URIC ACID
Through failure of kidneys to act, through congestion, inflammation, any person's condition is ripe for disease to fasten its hold upon the system.
At Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., there has been tested for the past few years a new remedy for kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles, rheumatism, gout, and such ailments as follow, and so many cases, both acute and stubborn, have yielded to this wonderful remedy that Dr. Pierce decided to name it Anuric, and arrange for its distribution to the public through medicine dealers everywhere. You will find it many times more active than lithia, dissolving uric acid as water does sugar.
Obtain a bottle of these tablets today from your druggist. Simply ask for Anuric Tablets (anti-uric acid) and notice the gratifying results.

PERSONAL MENTION

Black-Draught a Family Medicine

Some Kind of Stomach Trouble with Cramps and Terrible Pains Made This Oklahoma Man's Life Miserable Until Black-Draught Relieved Him.

Chickasha, Okla.—Mrs. J. W. Walker recently said this: "We use Black-Draught as a family medicine and think it is the only liver medicine made. My husband makes it up and uses it as a tonic as well as a laxative. I use it for headache, sour stomach, a full heavy feeling after meals, which I suppose is indigestion, and it certainly does me a lot of good.

My husband had some kind of stomach trouble—we don't know just what. It would strike him just any time in the day and cramp or pain him just terribly bad. Someone told him how to make a tea of the Black-Draught, which he did. It did him so much good, it removed the cause and cured him. Since then we have praised the Black-Draught to our friends, and gladly do so."

Seventy years of successful use has made Thedford's Black-Draught a standard, household remedy. Every member of the family at times needs the help that Black-Draught can give in cleansing the system and preventing or relieving the troubles that come from constipation, indigestion, lazy liver, etc.

Try Black-Draught. Sold by all druggists.—Adv.

To Relieve Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy, and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial. FROM POTTS CAMP, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Here I come, after a long absence, with a few lines from Potts Camp charge. We (Mrs. Burns, the five children and I) arrived here on December 1, just after the last session of the North Mississippi Conference.

We were met at the train by quite a goodly number of the people of the little city, a few of whom we had chanced to know before, though the majority of them were strangers. But they were so kind to us that it was but a short while until we began to feel very much at home with them, and immediately were made to know that we were among friends.

Well, the favors which were shown us were too numerous to mention. Enough to say that we have been well taken care of, even from the very first. But, unlike our good Brother Stephens, of New Albany, the Baptist turkey has not yet shown up. But my! chicken, ham, sausage, potatoes, canned goods, and so many good things, even a hog, a real, live hog (this by a good Baptist brother), and, Carley, you ought to have been here and heard him squeal, and the children laugh at the very thought of having a hog.

We are well pleased with the outlook for the year, on this most splendid charge. No better people are to be found anywhere than here. They love the church, are loyal to their pastor, and, above all, are religious.

Our elder, Brother J. H. Holder, was with us on January 8 for the first quarterly conference. The stewards were in fine shape with their part of the work, and after a most excellent and inspiring sermon by the "beloved," and a good dinner, the business session was held. The pastor's salary was made at quite an advance over the previous year, by nearly 50 per cent. Most of the churches have arranged to pay by the month, and are meeting their obligation well. There is a movement to remodel the parsonage completely, and other material interests are being well looked after, not the least of which is the Advocate, the fruits of the effort at this point being the enclosed check for $46 to put the paper in every Methodist home in the town. The Sunday school work is in fine shape here at the home church, and at Winburn. We are getting in order the work at other points, and will soon have schools in operation at every preaching place.

The Woman's Missionary Society is doing things in the right way, as it is capable of doing them here, and will show fruits very much worth while in the work they are doing. The work for the young people is being looked after well.

The Epworth League is well organized, having the Senior, Intermediate, and Junior departments in operation. We are expecting great things during the year.

Pray for us as we try to make this the best year in our history.

With very best wishes for the success of the Advocate, its editor, staff, and readers, M. A. BURNS, Pastor.

How Many Women Are Like This?

Can anything be more wearing for women than the ceaseless round of household duties? Oh! the monotony of it all—work and drudge; no time to be sick; tired, ailing, yet cannot stop. There comes a time when something "snaps" and they find themselves "simply worn out," and to make matters worse, have contracted serious feminine disorder which almost always follows the constant overtaxing of a woman's strength.

Then they should remember that there is no remedy like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—the experience of these two women establishes that fact:

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—"After the birth of my last child I had such painful spells that would unfit me entirely for my housework. I suffered for months and the doctor said that my trouble was organic ulcers and I would have to have an operation. That was an awful thing to me, with a young baby and four other children, so one day I thought of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and how it had helped me years before and I decided to try it again. I took five bottles of Vegetable Compound and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and since then I have been a well woman, able to take care of my house and family without any trouble or a day's pain. I am ready and thankful to swear by your medicine any time. I am forty-four years old and have not had a day's illness of any kind for three years."—Mrs. H. KOPNIG, 617 Ellis Blvd, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Sandusky, Ohio.—"After the birth of my baby I had organic trouble. My doctor said it was caused by too heavy lifting and I would have to have an operation. I would not consent to an operation and let it go for over a year, having my sister do my work for me as I was not able to walk. One day my aunt came to see me and told me about your medicine—said it cured her of the same thing. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and they have cured me. Now I do my own housework, washing and ironing and sewing for my family and also do sewing for other people. I still take a bottle of Vegetable Compound every spring for a tonic. I recommend your medicine to others who have troubles similar to mine and you can use my letter if you wish."—Mrs. PAUL PAPENFUSE, 1325 Stone St., Sandusky, Ohio.

ANNUAL STATE MEETING OF WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF LOUISIANA CONFERENCE, M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

The Louisiana Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, will be held at Lake Charles, February 24 to 27 inclusive. The attention of all the auxiliaries of the State is directed to the fact that this is but a short while off, and that the names of delegates should be forwarded without delay to Mrs. Seaman A. Mayo, Chairman of Entertainment Committee.

The evening of February 24 will be devoted to a reception, which is to be given the visiting ladies by the Lake Charles society. The regular business sessions begin the following morning, and continue through the 27th. A most interesting and instructive program has been arranged, and it is expected that this conference will prove to be very profitable to the workers of the State. Among those who will have part on the program are the following persons, whose names are familiar in Methodist circles:

Mrs. J. H. McCoy—Home Department Secretary.

Miss Althea Jones—Council Supt. of Children's Work.

Miss Clara Chalmers—Candidate for Foreign Field.

Deaconess Annie Alford—Head Resident Co-operative Home, of Houston.

Deaconess Helen Gibson—Head Resident, St Mark's Hall, New Orleans.

Deaconess Rosa Breeden — Girls' Club Worker. St. Mark's Hall.

Deaconess Ella Hooper—Head Resident, Wesley House, McDonald School, Houma, La.

Deaconess Eliza Iles—Church Deaconess, Beaumont, Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Stockwell—Returned missionaries from Africa.

Miss Julia Reid — Candidate for Foreign Field.

Rev. Martin Hebert—Presiding Elder of Houma District.

Deaconess Aletha Graham—Mary Werlein Mission, New Orleans.

PROGRESS ON THE ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT.

My Dear Brother Carley: I am nearing the end of my first round on this district. It has, indeed, been one of the best of my life. The boards of stewards have increased the assessments for our pastors on most of the charges, some as much as six hundred dollars and many as much as three hundred. We have had an increase in our membership of two hundred and more members. Great revivals have been and are now going on. The outlook for a general revival is promising and we are expecting the greatest year in our history.

Yours very truly,
HARRY W. MAY.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

IN EVERY CITY.

A recent news item a little out of the ordinary was to the effect that for a week a pack of wolves had been prowling through the streets of Duluth, and that their depredations were ended only after the citizens had armed themselves and joined with the officers of the law in killing or capturing them. Upon reflection, however, we are not so sure that the invasion of wolves is an unusual thing. We read of them almost every day, even in New Orleans. Other cities, too, have their packs. But they are of a different species from those in Duluth—they are in the guise of men, and they destroy human souls. Would that they, also, could be exterminated!

BETTER BUY.

According to a newspaper report, the tenants of a six-story apartment house in New York formed a syndicate and bought the building when they learned that a twenty per cent increase in rentals was contemplated. It is not to be supposed that the purchase price was below the market—what must the rent have been? We are beginning to think that it should always be specified in contracts that the price paid is for use only, and not for ownership; otherwise, the unsophisticated might think that he was acquiring the title in fee simple. The only thing we cannot understand in the above story is why the owners should have been willing to sacrifice the rents for the sake of such an insignificant transaction as a sale.

WANTED—THINKERS.

More men work with their hands than with their heads. The reason is to be found, perhaps, in the fact that physical labor is infinitely easier than intellectual toil. The hands take hold of things—pieces of matter which give a characteristic physical reaction; the mind deals with ideas—vague, intangible, elusive forces that have their being in a realm altogether spiritual. The hands may become so well trained that they perform their tasks almost automatically; but a definite act of concentration is necessary whenever a thought process is to be carried out. The manual laborer can regulate his hours by the hands of the clock; the thinker works in a field where time is purely relative. The lengthening shadows tell the workmen that he may lay his tools aside and wait for the coming of another day to continue his task; the thinker knows nothing of morning, noon and night, except that his faculties become weary after long stretches of application and he rests that he may renew his labors as soon as may be. Men who work with their hands minister to bodily needs; those who work with their heads serve the mind and spirit. The world needs both—and both may be found in one—but a shortage of "heads" is an hundred times more serious than a shortage of "hands." We know that a good many "hands" are on a strike; what are our "heads" doing?

NO WRECK IN SIGHT.

We do not believe that the world is on the verge of destruction. We read the newspapers every day; we dip into magazines and reviews occasionally; we read a book now and then; we take advantage of such opportunities as we have to hear thoughtful and distinguished men discuss conditions as they exist to-day. We read with our eyes open, and we listen with attentive ears, and, having done so, we do our best to correlate fact with theory. We are not blind to the evils of the present age, or to the dangers that are threatening the overthrow of the most cherished institutions of our civilization—no man in his right mind can be so obtuse as not to know that we are at a critical juncture in the world's history. But we are not dismayed, we are not faint-hearted, we are not overwhelmed by pessimism. Revolutions are not new things under the sun—and reformations sometimes come out of them. Civilizations have arisen, flourished, and passed away—but a better civilization has always taken the place of those that have been destroyed. The troubles that have seemed to presage ruin have invariably given place to better things. We are not unaffected by the turmoil of the times and the tendencies toward evil that are so powerfully affecting every phase of our life, and we are tremendously concerned that we shall do all in our power now to stem the current of unrighteousness. We have no disposition to stand idly by with the croaking comment, "Let us see." We believe good men and women should throw themselves courageously and wholeheartedly into the fight for the triumph of righteousness. And, thank God, we believe they are doing that very thing. Never before has there been such intense, such passionate determination on the part of those who stand for the right to see that right prevails. And it is this that gives us courage and faith and hope. God has not abandoned the world, and his people have not ceased to labor. To human eyes, the odds may seem to be heavily against us; but the invisible hosts of Heaven are fighting on our side—and the victory will be won. After the storm, the sun shines out and the rainbow appears, and then a new light shines on the faces of men and we catch the melody of a new song in their hearts. God through Christ has spoken, and his words ring in our ears every day as the hallelujah chorus of an anthem coming down from the skies, "—and the gates of Hell shall not prevail against it." The redeeming purpose of God runs throughout the course of human history, and that purpose will not be denied.

MAKING AMENDS.

One of the hardest things in the world to do is to make amends for an injury done, or a loss inflicted. The trouble usually is not that we object to any material cost that we may be put to, but that we dislike exceedingly to acknowledge that we have been in the wrong. Some people go so far even as to make the statement, "I never apologize," a part of their code of ethics. There is only one ground upon which we may rightfully defend such position—the ground that we have never given offense. Very few of us are so impregnably placed.

ACCOMPLISHING THE IMPOSSIBLE.

The death of Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary on Friday of last week, at his home in Washington, D. C., is worthy of special mention because it recalls the labors of a man who accomplished what was apparently an impossible task—the discovery of the North Pole. The story is, that the casual reading of a book dealing with arctic life aroused in him a passion for the discovery of the Pole that sustained him through many years of trial and disappointment until he had achieved his ambition. He spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in fitting up ships and equipping exploration parties; he made eight trips before his goal was attained; he suffered all the agonies that bitter cold and near-starvation could inflict, and more than once was almost hopelessly lost in the barren wastes of the arctic region. His own courage almost failed him at one time—but he never gave up. The story of his achievement is well known. After having made the great discovery, he had to substantiate his claim under the most rigid scientific inquiry because another professed to have reached the Pole ahead of him. But he won against all odds, and he is now universally accorded the honor that was justly his. The lesson of his life is the lesson that every young person especially should study until he has learned it well—the lesson expressed so tersely in the saying, "Where there is a will, there is a way." Difficulties disappear before the onslaught of determined men.

CHEAP AT THAT.

A recent estimate of the amount necessary to enforce Constitutional prohibition places it at $50,000,000 a year. Doubtless some of those who are constitutionally opposed to prohibition will point to this as an example of the outrageous taxes that will follow the enactment of this superlatively meritorious piece of legislation, and they will wail long-drawn-out lamentations over the burdens that prohibition imposes. But they will be wasting their woe on the desert air, so far as those who care for real facts are concerned. We dare affirm that ten times this amount would not be too much to spend in order to save the actual loss in dollars and cents that the country suffered every year under the whiskey regime. The labor turned into productive channels alone will produce many fold that comparatively insignificant sum. Prohibition to cost $50,000,000 a year! Yes, and cheap at that.

THE WOMEN ARE OPPOSED.

The National League of Woman Voters, in session in Chicago last week, passed a resolution in opposition to compulsory military training. We should have been surprised and disappointed if they had not taken some such action. It is very easy for those who have their hearts set on the establishment of a great militaristic program for this nation to devise legislation by which their ends can be attained; but the mothers of the land have no desire to see their sons deliberately trained in the arts of war. It is not a question of patriotism—that has been put to the test more than once—but of a cold-blooded proposition to make every man a trained fighter in a world that is crying for peace. Our boys can fight if they have to—ask the Huns; but we do not want to make them do it.

STEWARDSHIP.

By Edna Abels Salassi.

"Where are the talents I gave thee:
Talents of earth's golden store;
Talents of time and of substance;
Mental gifts—all these and more?"
List to the voice of the Master—
Kind, yet insistent, His plea—
How shall we answer this question
He's asking of you and of me?

"Where are the talents I gave thee?
O, art thou using them well,
Or are they loaned unto demons,
To people the regions of hell?
Thou art for me, or against me:
Thou 'rt sowing, or scatt'ring abroad:
And knowest thou not that each talent
Is sacred—a trust from thy God?"

"Where are the talents I gave thee?
Tho' they be many or one,
Each has a definite mission"—
No soul the issue may shun,
For, "By their works ye shall know them"
The Master has said long ago;
And the answer—the true, living answer—
Each life's daily record must show.

Slidell, La.

AFTER LONG YEARS OF PREACHING.

When I entered on my first pastorate at Woodbridge I thought I could never last Sunday after Sunday for six months, and now I can say that God has helped me to break the bread of life to souls for nearly sixty years. He has still work for me to do, and I mean to do it. I thought at first when I became a Christian I could make all the world believe in my Savior. I had a great conception of the power of my own persuasion; I have less now, but more faith in the Holy Spirit. I shall never forget the first morning after I had seen Christ on the Cross, how I looked out from my bedroom window and saw a corn porter who worked for us going along the street, and I thought I would make him and all the other porters Christian. I tried and found it more difficult than I imagined. I went and preached to the fishermen in the North End; still it was difficult! I went and preached to villages four and five miles off, and it dawned upon me how very difficult it was. Then I preached in a small village chapel, and still it was difficult. So I have found all the way through. Still with trimmed expectations I have gone on, and thank God for all the help given in Woodbridge, Wanstead, Weston, Tolmers, Adelaide, Markham, Clinton. I might have worked harder. I might have been more unceasing in prayer. I might have used more tact and forbearance. I might have seized more opportunities of service. But regrets are unavailing. I can only seek to use the last days better.

An aged man may even be a sermon to others. He can either be a warning or an inspiration. For myself I would rather be an inspiration. I can speak of my gratitude to God for all his goodness and guidance. Life has been full of mercy. It has been full of variety. It has been richer in results than I ever expected or dreamed. I have seen more of God's world and my fellows than I ever thought to see, have been brought into association with better and greater men than I ever imagined would be my lot, and been permitted to do more useful and extended work than I ever could have imagined possible. I want to express gratitude.

Of all the sad sights in the world, that of an old man still unconverted, still hopeless and godless, is the saddest. Perhaps a sadder is that of a minister who has lost his early enthusiasm to declare God's goodness to his fellows. I hope I have not lost my enthusiasm, for I love the pulpit as much as ever. I remember also another one who, at eighty-five passed away, my dear old friend Dr. Newman Hall, who had not lost his enthusiasm. For years I had spent nearly every Saturday afternoon with him, and at last on his death bed he condensed in a few words the object of his life. It was as he drew me down on his death bed to give me a farewell kiss. Said he, "Tell every minister to preach Christ crucified. There is nothing better to tell them, for Jesus is to me now a thousand times more precious than ever." He had not lost his enthusiasm. Yes, he knew that Christ had been the strength of his arm and the doctrine of the Cross the sharp ax to bring down the evils in souls. I know the same. Hence once more I lift up Christ as the only Savior. I remember hearing of one who at eighty found Christ, and he was so earnest in talking to others and giving away tracts that he led over two hundred to seek Christ before he died. He tried to make up for lost time. Let me make up to-night for lost time now. If in the past I have failed to grip you, or lacked earnestness, or if I have not presented Christ clearly, or not had love enough in my tone, let me once more place lovingly before you my Savior. His words are "love," his work is "he served," his presence is "I give eternal life."—Fred Hastings.

THE REUNION OF EPISCOPAL METHODISM.

By Rev. John W. Boswell, D. D.

I began to look into the history of Methodism about twelve years after the division in 1844. I was too young to form any kind of an opinion without evidence. Hence, though a Southern boy thoroughly identified with Southern interests, it cannot be justly said that I was prejudiced. From that day to this, as occasion required I have studied the matter from as many angles and as thoroughly as I was capable of doing.

I have studied Episcopal Methodism from the standpoint of the men who organized the church in 1784, and of those who framed the Constitution in 1808. Up to the latter period, while the church was fairly well governed, it was without a Constitution. The General Conference, then as now, was the governing body, but it was nothing more than a mass-meeting, all the preachers in full connection being members; and it worked without any restrictions. The Conference of 1808 provided for a delegated body which equitably distributed representatien, and responsibility. It also gave us the six Restrictive Rules under which the General Conference has worked from that day to this.

To-day Southern Methodism is not only the best, but the only exponent of original Methodism in the United States. Only once in all its history has it enacted a piece of radical legislation, and that piece was not prohibited by any one of the Restrictive Rules. I am sorry I cannot say as much of our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church, for, as I understand, they have been operating for years under regulations clearly violative of the Third Restrictive Rule. They elect missionary bishops who are not General Superintendents, and by law have divided the church into areas (or sections) and name bishops for given areas instead of letting the bishops divide the work among themselves as the general superintendents have a right to do. Our own General Conference came perilously near to doing the same thing at its last session.

The way was opened at the General Conferenee of 1844 for almost any kind of legislatlon in regard to the Episcopacy. At that session the Northern delegates, who were in the majority, in the controversy that culminated in the division of the church, took the position that the Episcopacy is the creation of the General Conference, and the bishops are so far subject to the will of the body that they can be deposed or otherwise disposed of with or without cause. With that idea firmly fixed in mind, they proceeded to depose one of the bishops without preferring a charge against him, and without any sort of trial. This was done over the protest of the Southern delegates, who held to the original idea of the Episcopacy.

If there were no other reasons against reunion, the action of the General Conference of 1844, extra judicial, and effected by a domineering majority who have never relented nor changed their views, would be quite sufficient to keep me just where I am—in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. And here I propose to stay as long as possible, "with malice toward none, and charity for all."

I know that the statements here set forth are pooh-poohed in many circles, as ancient history. So it is, but it is part of the history of the present-day church, and the things and facts that made the history resulted in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. I for one am not ready to repudiate our fathers whose faith and courage brought Southern Methodism into existence. I am glad that the Constitution as originally framed is still in force and that we are governed by it. In defending it I no more lessen my self-respect or discount my intelligence than two millions of others who live under it and have promised to obey it.

In accepting the Plan of Unification proposed by the Commissioners, do we surrender our position? We do, on more points than one. We surrender our plan of itinerant general superintendency, and adopt the area plan of Northern Methodists, with something added, principally the confirmation of bishops by the General Conference elected by the Regional Conferences. This is destructive of the independence of the Regional Conferences, for it virtually says: "You can have only such bishops as meet our approbation." And the plan to all intents and purposes handicaps, if not destroys, any initiative on the part of the bishops to plan and carry on the work according to their godly judgment. I can see, under such circumstances, how a man can be an executive, but I cannot see how he can be a general superintendent.

In this communication I have dwelt only on one point. Other points of interest may be considered in the future.

ARMY CHAPLAINS.

By John A. Randolph, Chaplain U. S. A.

The following statement on Army Chaplains is prepared for our church press at the request of Dr. E. O. Watson, the Secretary of the General Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains.

A strong effort is just now being made to put the chaplains of our Army in a position such as is held by chaplains in armies of other countries and in our own Navy.

The legislation which Congress is asked to give us is so manifestly just and so necessary to the efficiency of the religious work in the Army, it is desired to give the matter the widest publicity.

The essential features of the proposed legislation are found in the bill introduced in the Senate by Senator Capper of Kansas and in the House by Cougressman Hull of Iowa. This bill provides:

(1) For the organization of a Chaplains' Corps to be administered by chaplains.

(2) For the promotion of chaplains on the same terms as other staff officers.

(3) For the appointment of one chaplain to every twelve hundred of the authorized personnel of the Army.

It is desirable to add to these another section providing for an enlisted personnel for the Chaplains' Corps. Now it is practically impossible for the chaplain to get competent assistants, for the reason that any man qualified for such a position is in such demand that the chaplain cannot get him.

Briefly the reasons for this legislation are as follows:

(a) Now chaplains are selected, examined, assigned, inspected, promoted, reported upon and retired by officers of other branches of the service, and, with the exception of an occasional chaplain on an examining board, chaplains have nothing to say in the matter. It is maintained that the religious work in the Army is as much the work of specialists as is medicine or dentistry, and that the ministers engaged in that service should administer, under competent authority, the affairs of their own department.

(b) Under present conditions there can be no such thing as esprit du corps among chaplains. There is no organization. The chaplains are just so many clergymen scattered throughout the army with no means of building up esprit or of cooperating in their work. No such condition exists in any other department of our army.

(c) It is claimed that putting chaplains on the same footing as to promotion with other staff officers is but a just recognition of their work. The experiences of the World War demonstrated that they are in as much danger as other staff officers. They had more casualties than any other staff corps in our army in France, in proportion to numbers. No one will claim that the religious instruction of our young men is a whit less important than the other instruction they get. There is no position in the army or out of it where personality counts for so much as in the chaplaincy. Men of strong personality and other superior endowments seek a field where they can do a man's work. The discriminations against chaplains under present law are a hindrance which will prevent the securing of the best men for the future and the keeping of a number that we have already. In our Navy fifty per cent of the chaplains have field rank. The Capper Bill asks for higher grades for only thirty per cent of the chaplains of the Army.

The chaplains' work has been studied during the past three years as never before. In the Army and out of it, men who have the best interests of our young men at heart, men who are best qualified to advise in regard to religious matters, have studied this question from every angle and they are unanimously in favor of the principles embodied in the Capper Bill. Not only do they favor the measure, they urge its enactment into law.

The General Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains urges the friends of our young men in the Army to bring this matter to the attention of their Senators and Congressmen, and that without delay.

A CONTENTED SUPERANNUATE.

Dear Brother Carley: To-day is my natal day; am seventy years of age. Three-score years and ten make a long life, humanly viewed. Whatever more may come to me will be borrowed time. I don't borrow many things, but I am going to borrow all the years I can. A good woman, at church this morning, said she hoped I might live seventy years longer. I demurred at that. That was too much of a wish. That would look too much like getting a corner on life. My borrowing capacity will never be equal to such a strain.

I spent the day at Madison, worshiping with the popular and gifted young pastor, Rev. J. F. Campbell, and his splendid congregation. It was a fine day, a fine sermon and a spiritual service. It was good to be there. I had enough sense to refuse to preach. The people had not come out to hear an old, worn-out superannuate. They had come to hear the new preacher, whose fame had already gone out far and near—Jim Campbell didn't disappoint them. It did my heart good to see the eagerness with which the hearers hung on the message. A great year with large success is in store for them.

Mrs. Bennett, of Madison, asked me if superannuation had made me restless and dissatisfied as it had done so many of the old preachers. I assured her that I was delighted with it. It is the most delightful experience of my life. When the Mississippi Conference by its unanimous vote said that I had done enough work, and deserved rest I was happy, and I have been ever since. There has not been a heavy hour for two months. My heart has been full of praise to God for having been so good to me. He has been very close to me, guiding and helping, through forty-five years of strenuous work. I have served all grades of works—weak circuits, strong circuits, weak stations, strong stations, a weak district and two strong districts. Ten years of presiding eldership gave me the severest strains of my life. I lost but two quarterly conferences in the ten years. I had to contend with many things, such as personal sickness, sickness in my home, swollen streams, railroad wrecks and quarantines. But I never stopped to consider whether I could get there or not. My business was to be there, and I made up my mind to be able to give a sufficiently good reason for my absence to satisfy everybody. I walked 7½ miles, packing two valises, to fill one appointment. Whenever I failed to show up it was because it was humanly impossible to get there. My first trip to Georgetown to hold quarterly conference was possibly the worst trip I made in the ten years' service. I got to Hazlehurst on Friday night in one of the worst snow, sleet and hail storms I ever saw. I had written to a liveryman to have a team ready for me early Saturday morning. The next morning was bitterly cold, the whole earth was covered with ice, the roads were covered with fallen timbers, with telephone poles and wires strewn everywhere. It was a forbidding sight. I got in touch with the livery man, and asked why the horse and buggy had not been sent to my hotel. He said it was impossible for me to get to Georgetown. He had not thought of my attempting to do an impossible thing. I told him to send the team at once. I would decide for myself. I couldn't tell whether or not it was impossible until I made an honest effort to get there. In driving the sixteen miles many a pole and wire did I move from one side of the road to the other; many a tree blown across the road did I have to flank by driving through woods and across logs. It was almost equal to Ben Hur in his chariot drive. But I got there; I did the impossible. Never having been there before I didn't know which was the Methodist church. I mistook the Baptist church for it. The Methodist church was a quarter of a mile away. I never saw it. I drove to the Baptist church looking for the Methodist stewards and the pastor. But they didn't put in their appearance. By the time it was clear to me that nobody was coming to the quarterly conference, I was very cold and hungry. I hitched up and drove to a near-by home. A young man who knew me asked me to get out of the buggy and get to the fire as soon as possible. He introduced me to Mr. Walter Catchings, who asked me to be seated by the fire and warm myself. I was almost stiff from cold. In a few minutes Mr. Catchings caught that I was there to hold quarterly conference. He said to me, "Are you the new presiding elder?" I answered in the affirmative.

"Why, sir, please pardon me for this indifferent treatment; I thought you were the Protestant Methodist preacher, living a few miles back up in the woods." This discovery that the presiding elder had come injected new life into the family circle, and in an hour or so I was asked into the dining room. A dinner fit for the gods was spread. Such spreads have been the joy and yet the bane of presiding elders always. After eating dinner I went a short distance to Brother Frank Catchings' home, and there by a good fire he and I held the quarterly conference. The pastor, Brother J. N. Ware, did not attend the meeting. Question 8: "What has been raised the present quarter for the support of the ministry, and how has it been applied?" Five dollars was the answer, and applied to the presiding elder. That division was very short.

After such long and strenuous service, why shouldn't I be delighted to have an opportunity to rest? I was not forced to superannuate. Nobody had to suggest it, or even hint at it. Of my own free will and accord I asked for it. I am proud of the fact that I am on the "honor roll." I have had mighty few honors bestowed on me. I am wearing this one proudly. I am an old man, and I know it. Nobody needs to tell me. I have seen many of the old brethren protest against superannuation, and so many who were restless and complaining about it that I imagined it was something to be feared and shunned. But, brethren, hear me. I know. It is a delightful thing. Don't be afraid of it. You can go and come as you like. The young preachers will let you preach some for them if you keep sweet. I have had more invitations than I could accept. I can preach as well as I could twenty years ago. Of course, I think so. Is there any old preacher who doesn't think that way about his preaching? No matter how well I may preach, I know I am too old to meet the demands of the up-to-date situation. Let us show the rich and mellow fruits of grace in our old age.

I am busy writing life insurance. If you want a policy or know any one who does drop me a few lines, please.

FIGURES DON'T LIE.

By Rev. E. S. Lewis.

Maybe they do not. However, they are sometimes so handled that you are made to wonder. Annual Conference reports are strange things. I have just been going through the reports made by the pastors at the recent North Mississippi Conference and I have found some very interesting things. One of the things of striking interest is that such a large number was received into the church on profession of faith in the Delta charges. Indianola led the Conference in the number of additions on profession of faith, followed by Clarksdale, Fulton circuit, Itta Bena, Kilmichael and Tremont. Quite a number of the Delta charges received from twenty-five to forty on profession. The pastors in this rich, growing Delta are not content to gather the fruits of others' toil, but they are going out after men, as Andrew did, and are bringing them to Jesus.

We all, pastors and people alike, are challenged to undertake big things this year for Christ and the church. The times are electric with wonderful possibilities. This ought to be a banner year for the church, and many are waiting with expectant hearts before the Lord.

But there are some funny figures in the reports made at our last Conference. Take, for instance, the Aberdeen District. They began the year, according to the reports, with 10,165 members. They received 810 and lost 350, making a clear gain of 460. They report, however, a loss of 667, showing a discrepancy of 1,127. These are the figures, and figures don't lie. But the Aberdeen District is out of balance 1,127 souls.

Look at the Sardis District. They began the year, according to reports, with 6,718 members. They received 492; and lost 153. They had a net gain of 339, but they report a loss of 954, showing a discrepancy of 1,293, which represents a membership far larger than any two charges in the district—out of balance again. Every district is out of balance. The reports in table 1 of the published Minutes show a loss of 600 members the past year; yet if you take the membership of a year ago and add to it the net gain according to the published reports, you will find that our total net gain for the year is 2,758. Out of balance 3,358 souls! What if these were members of your family, your Sunday school pupils, your choir or your board of stewards? Would we not go out after them? What are we going to do about it? Lost—3,358 souls!

AN OMISSION IN THE MINUTES.

I see from the "late" Minutes of the Mississippi Conference that the treasurer's report of the Board of Finance is partly omitted: the names and amounts paid each claimant do not appear. I am sorry that they do not. The treasurer paid every claim in full, and each claimant received from the General Board, at St Louis, an additional amount.

Chairman Conference Board of Finance.

REPLY TO THE COMMITTEE ON EVANGELISM.

Mr. Editor: As no article from either one of the Mississippi Conferences has been permitted to appear in the Nashville Advocate in response to the criticisms of the action of these two bodies with reference to the "Standard Plan," published in that organ, editorial and otherwise, and claiming a right to be heard, I offer you this article for publication in the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The manuscript was sent to the Nashville Advocate but the editor returned it, giving as his reason that the Minute Men have nothing to do with the previous discussion. The reader can judge for himself whether or not the point is well taken. V. C. CURTIS.

Being one of those who signed the resolutions protesting against the adoption of the "Standard Plan" by the North Mississippi Conference, I make the following reply to the strictures of the Committee on Evangelism, published in The Christian Advocate, February 6:

1. I speak for myself only and have no authority to speak for the others who signed the resolutions nor the Conference that adopted them without a dissenting vote.

2. No "indictment was made against the committee." The committee is not mentioned in the protest. That very point was discussed when the resolutions were drafted. It was unanimously agreed that the statements should be so guarded as not to impugn the motives of any one. We did not question the spirituality of any member of the Commiltee, but we did seriously question the spiritual results of the published "Standard Plan," if put into effect.

3. The resolutions were not passed primarily for publication, but were a solemn protest against the enforcement of the details of the "Standard Plan" in the North Mississippi Conference. Since they were matters of public record, Dr. Lipscomb acted within his personal rights in sending them to the Advocate.

4. We accept the explanation given by the Committee and regret that a similar statement was not included in the "Standard Plan," as that would have prevented misunderstandings and confusion. But we must confess surprise at the seeming spirit of the article in which the resolutions of the Committee were embodied. It is hard for us to conceive of so dignified body as our General Committee on Evangelism, charged with the grave responsibility of directing the greatest of all campaigns for two millions of people, answering a solemn protest against a defective plan, with a sneer, when that protest had passed two Annual Conferences without a dissenting vote.

5. The preachers of the North Mississippi Conference are united in their desire and prayers for a genuine revival of Holy Ghost religion and are willing to make sacrifices to that end. They welcome suggestions and plans from the regular constituted agencies of the church, of which the Committee on Evangelism is one; but they insist on the right to direct these affairs in their own respective charges, because they have been charged with that responsibility by the Discipline of the church.

6. There seems to be confusion as to who is in charge of the campaign. We read in the "Standard Plan" (page 18): "The Centenary Propaganda has produced a revival. It is clearly the duty of the Centenary Commission to conserve its own products. The Centenary Commission has no disposition to usurp the work delegated to the Committee on Evangelism created by the General Conference. Hence, after a thorough conference the Committee on Evangelism and the Centenary Commission agreed to combine and promote a church-wide revival."

"The following is the plan of organization:

"Joint Committee.

"The Joint Committee on Evangelism shall be composed of three members from the Committee on Evangelism, three members from the Centenary Commission, three members who are members of both Committees, and three others who have no membership in either, the Associate Director of the Missionary Centenary, and the Secretaries of the Department of Home Missions. This joint committee shall carry out the policy of the Centenary Commission and the Board of Missions for a church-wide revival."

The foregoing would indicate, and we would expect, that all the activities of the other departments pertaining to the Evangelistic campaign would be under the direction of this Joint Committee, or at least, there would be an understanding with reference to the general plan. But when complaint was made to the Home Mission Secretary about the arbitrary appointment of the chairmen of Minute Men who were to take part in the campaign—they having charge of the speakers to fill vacant pulpits and report not to the pastor, nor the presiding elder, but to the district chairman, and he in turn report to Nashville—we were informed by Dr. Goddard that "We have no knowledge of or no control over the work in other departments of the Centenary; * * * none of these are organically connected with the Evangelistic Committee." The Standard Plan says (page 19), "The local church Evangelistic Committee shall be composed of the local church cabinet, the Evangelistic Committee of the local church, and such others as these may desire to add." The Chairman of the Minute Men, by virtue of his commission from Nashville, is a member of the cabinet and is, therefore, a member of the Church Evangelistic Committee. I was asked by the Conference Missionary Secretary to assemble the District Cabinet to make nominations for chairmen for this district, but before this meeting was called, I received a list of chairmen who had already been appointed, from the Secretary of Minute Men in Nashville. These appointments were made without any further consultation with me or any of the pastors of the district. Some of those on the list were outspoken in their opposition to revivals, saying they did not believe in revivals nor regeneration, but thought the church was a good thing and we ought to get the people into the church in any way we can. Some were not even members of the church, and the moral characters of some of the others were under a shadow. Of course, in the list there were some good men. Supposing the Conference Secretary to be the representative of the Commission, I made complaint to him about the character of men who had been appointed. In a few days I received a letter from the Secretary of Minute Men, informing me if I would "furnish evidence in due form" he would have the commissions revoked. I was to get up "evidence in due form" for a quasi court sitting in Nashville to revoke the commissions of some who had been appointed without my knowledge or consent to fill the vacant pulpits of this district. I suppose the names must have been taken from a list that had been appointed last spring to help raise the money. However, this is only a supposition. And if it is true, that some one sent in a list to help raise money, no one is justified in thinking they are the proper ones to take part in an evangelistic campaign, having charge of the speakers. Experiences of this kind, and certain rumors, which were not without some justification, having reference to those who did not fall into line at once, such as, "Their future leadership is threatened," "It is time for the official axe to be used," "They will feel the weight of Episcopal authority," and letters to the presiding Bishop that were all but dictating to him, were not conducive to produce harmony and inspire confidence.

7. We cannot have much sympathy with the card system to get new members, described in the "Standard Plan," when a large per cent of those who are already members seem not to have God in their thoughts, but vain pride, love of sensual pleasure, greed for gold and sins even more flagrant seem to be predominant in their lives. We would call to repentance those in high places as well as those in the humbler walks of life before we would tabulate a list of other prospective members. We do not believe that a genuine revival can come to any church till its members repent of their sins and make restitution for their wrongs. I believe these are Methodist doctrines; I am sure they are Bible doctrines. But it is said with reference to repudiating historic Methodism, that "The only utterance which we have ever seen which would seem to lend even a color of justification to the charge is a statement that was not made either by the committee or a member of the committee, and which the committee does not now approve and never has approved." It would seem that any one should be pardoned in supposing that this was an authoritative statement, as it was an editorial in the Centenary Bulletin, which was the official organ of the Centenary Commission. Then the utterances of Dr. Goddard, while not so objectionable as to their literal statements, but which seemed to have the same spirit and import, and which appeared about the same time, had to to be considered. The quotation mentioned in the protest was from the July number of the Centenary Bulletin and was as follows: "* * * the ancient creeds and dogmas will not be brought out of the limbo of neglected things and set up as controlling principles * * * and there will be few tears and no shouting at all." Dr. Goddard said (printed speech distributed in June): "The activity of the lachrymal glands is not now and never has been a sole test of spirituality, the opinion of some good folks to the contrary, notwithstanding. The Holy Ghost does not make men weep * * *". "The appeal will not likely be, 'come and go home to heaven;' it will more likely be, having accepted Christ, 'come and let us make heaven out of this world and inevitably land you in the eternal heavens by and by.' It will not be, 'come and flee a devil's hell,' but, 'come and help us get hell out of this world and thereby save yourselves from the hell beyond.'" "It may not shock predatory wealth as did Francis of Assisi, but it will lay upon the conscience of the rich man his duty to bless the world with his wealth." "It will not make such a fierce attack upon the unspiritual leadership of the church as did Martin Luther * * * but will likely cause some disturbance in that direction." In view of the similarity of the spirit and import of these quotations, it should occasion no surprise when it was supposed that the committee approved the former as well as the latter.

8. We are opposed to controversy and surely this is no time to inject unpleasant personalities into the discussion of "how to run a revival."

While we do not think that the "Standard Plan," as published, is the method to run a revival in our charges, we certainly have no ill-will towards any member of the Committee because we differ as to methods. I am sure that we all are striving for the same end, and while there are times when frankness is necessary, there is never a time when brethren are justified in being estranged because they do not agree on some particular plan. The Committee says they have never intended to interfere with the pastors, so the real difference seems to have vanished. For our part we have no unkind thrusts to make, but expect to do our best under the leadership of the Holy Spirit and the assistance of the brethren to bring about the desired revival.

A sincere and cordial invitation is extended to any member of the Committee, or any representative of the Committee, to come into the Greenville District and assist in the revival. We will welcome suggestions and will appreciate assistance, but of course will expect the several pastors to direct the meetings in their own respective charges.

I hope this article will be received in the same spirit in which it is written and which it is intended. V. C. CURTIS.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTICE.

The Conference Journal for 1919 has been mailed out to all the preachers. Any one not receiving these in a reasonable length of time may drop a card to Dr. A. F. Watkins, Jackson, Mississippi.

The editors tried their best to get out a Journal this year without mistakes, but in spite of us one slipped in. The name of New Augusta, J. C. Ellis, preacher in charge, was omitted from the list of appointments in the Hattiesburg District. It is to be regretted and we beg pardon.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D. D.

When I took Sister Steel to the hotel in New Albany, I said, "Now, my dear, you will see how your venerable superannuated companion has to fare, knocking around the country, and stopping at such places." It was not long before she turned the tables on me, and intimated that if by knocking around the country I got such fare, she would not object to some of the knocking around herself! Mr. Ivey, the big-hearted proprietor of the hotel, made our stay a very delightful memory by his courteous hospitality. I have sometimes thought of getting me a pocketknife with a sawblade to use on hotel steak, such as I had to pay 90 cents for in the dining room of the Union Station, in Memphis; but bless your life, Bro. Ivey's steak almost melted in your mouth. Tom Holloman could have eaten it before he rode Susannah in the "perade." If it wasn't delicious steak, it was fat quail!

New Albany is a flourishing little North Mississippi city, located in a fine farming section, and enjoying a good degree of prosperity. We have a fine people there, and the pastor of our church, Brother Stephens, stands high in their regard. We need a new church, and everything points to our having it before long. I spent a week there, giving my lectures on the Bible to large and appreciative audiences. The people are genuine Bereans in the interest they took in hearing about the Word of God. I was greatly encouraged to be told that more people were reading tho Bible, and reading it with a better knowledge of how to use it, than at any former time. That is exactly the object I have in view in giving these lectures. One of the pleasant features of the occasion was the large attendance of little people, boys and girls. They stayed with us to the end, and when I left many of these boys and girls came up and thanked me for my message. You expect this of older people, but it is unusual in the little folks, and indicates fine home training. I believe it is hard to beat old Mississippi when it comes to those homely virtues which are the bed-rock of our American society.

Unfortunately, Brother Stephens got down with the "Flu" before I left, and when I got home, it floored me. I thought a superannuate was immune, but it looks as if in Louisiana he is immune from nothing. So here I am, still indoors. The doctor gave me 'orrid medicine, and Sister Steel effectually bossed be, making me keep my arms under the cover. I resorted to poetry for pastime, and read some to the doctor. It finished him. He hasn't been back since. So I have found out how to keep the doctor off. Even Sister Steel shied away when I began to reel it off in her presence. Well, I am sorry for this age that can't appreciate the flights of genius!

The Commissioners have done their work. I have no doubt it was the best that they could do; but that best is so bad, in that it destroys the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, root and branch, that I am praying the Lord to bring to naught the counsel of Ahithophel. I hope the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church will either reject the "Constitution," or so modify it, that we will have to reject it. The mass of our Southern people don't want union with the Northern Methodists, because it puts us under a majority who are hostile to everything we stand for. It is not the brotherly way to settle this matter, to steam-roll the business through. I am not averse to a close affiliation with other churches. I am for the Interchurch Movement, because it does not destroy denominational autonomy. The first item of their "Constitution" safeguards the denominational title to property. The proposed Constitution turns all our property over to the control of the Northern majority. They took it away from us once, and they will do it again.

SIGN SEEKERS.

By Rev. H. W. Bowman.

Sign-seeking seems to be an inherent part of human nature, that does not cease with the rolling centuries. Wherever we look in the history of the race, irrespective of his age, color, or nation, man has been given to seeking for signs of the favor or disfavor of his God.

As children, we made cross marks and spit on same when we turned back. We would not bring a hoe, or spade or other garden tool through the house, as it signified that a death would occur. The screech owl's unearthly note sent shivers up and down the spine, as we wondered who would die in the community. But crossing the fingers behind the back, always offset his evil design. The bathing of the lip from a certain hollow tree, whose hollow was a certain distance from the ground, and was on a certain side of the tree, and was in a certain position to other trees, and at a certain time of the moon, and at midnight, was sure to produce a luxuriant growth and hasten the manly appearance.

The Master was asked to "shew a sign from Heaven." We are still seeking for signs, signs of the great revival which we have been desiring and for a long time praying. Signs are everywhere. Where is the revival?

One sign is, "We put over the Centenary;" we observed the rules, we made good. Another says it is bound to come, because God has promised us his blessing when we bring our tithes into his storehouse. But we have not yet brought them in. It is only in promise. The Louisiana Conference has paid about 50 per cent of the first year's pledge.

Still another sign has appeared: The Superannuate unprovided for is the hindering cause; if he is provided for, the revival will come. It is another star whose magic influence is based on the swelled income of the fund for superannuates. I am in favor of the deepest and most extensive campaign for these worthy men, and it is a shame that the Centenary leaders were not wide enough in vision to take them in. But the point is, that this is but another index that we are still seeking signs; and the answer of the Master to those who has sought him to give them one, is still applicable.

A faithless generation, with a lost vision of God, seeketh after a sign; but no sign shall be given it.

There is a sign, not yet appearing, that tells the fact of his opening the windows of the heavens and pouring out of his blessings. I pray for that sign to appear.

The winds of God are always blowing, but if you wish to go forward, you must keep your sails unfurled.—Old Eastern Proverb.

The Church

As a whole, is interested in this great soul-saving effort. We are not divided, though some may not help much. But every one who loves his Lord and his church

Must Awake

To the possibilities of this great movement. There may be preferences as to details of method, but no division as to the things necessary

To Personal Salvation

We do not serve men en masse, but one by one. Philip must find Nathaniel. This church-wide movement is expected to enlist all who love and are loyal to Jesus Christ. No one else can be my substitute, nor yours.

DOROTHY GRACE HARMON

Born Thanksgiving Day (November 28, 1918)—Passed December 8, 1919. Little daughter of Robert Howe and Grace Noble Harmon.

I see her as I saw her last, her winsome baby face
A pink, white-petaled flower in the cap of dainty lace;
Her lovely eyes were on the West with sunset tints aglow—
(Was she in training then for Light her gaze so soon would know?)

She nestled high in loving arms for all of us to see;
The darling daughter of our son, the first grandchild was she.
Though dear and dearer eye my lads, yet joy surpassing sweet
To have the longed for little girl our circle to complete.

Then bright and blissful days were ours (Alas, they seldom come!)
Blest days to linger in our hearts, to lead us nearer Home!
And through them all, 'mid ev'ry scene, whatever might befall,
Our little Queen with baby hands held sceptre o'er us all.

For just a little time we had her, precious Loan of God!
For O, to-day her tiny form lies under sacred sod;
But not her spirit—Thank God, No! Immortal hope He gives:
Somewhere—quite near the Father's throne—our darling baby lives!

For never in my life or ken was there a little maid
So all alert, so full of life, so brightly unafraid;
And what had Death to do with her? That cruel mortal foe
Was barren of a single "sting" to lay our baby low!

For surely God who made us, each with loving human heart,
Must satisfy our longing souls for those from whom we part.
He must fulfill—in justice to His own creation's worth—
A life such as our baby's was, so short a time on earth!

"A babe in glory," (some one says) "is babe forevermore."
I do not know. I want her life to go on as before.
And yet! I'd have her wait awhile beyond those gates of pearl,
To see her as I saw her last, just precious baby girl!

And we, bereft, walk thorny path with bruised and bleeding feet;
We try to be more worthy of the one we hope to meet.
We never see a baby now but through our lens of tears,
A dearer, sweeter face shines forth — our angel babe appears!

Thy comfort, Lord! That when have passed these weary pilgrim days,
We'll clasp again our darling with her same sweet baby ways.
We'll think of her as smiling o'er the "prettles" of the sod,
(For so she called the flowers) in the summerland of God.

THE ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN FOR 1920.

The Ultimate Goal:

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE IN EVERY METHODIST HOME IN LOUISIANA AND MISSISSIPPI.

The Immediate Goal:

TEN THOUSAND PAID-IN-ADVANCE SUBSCRIBERS BY MARCH 15th.

The Object:

TO HELP ALL OUR PEOPLE TO BECOME INTELLIGENTLY INTERESTED IN THE WORK OF THE CHURCH AND EFFICIENTLY ENGAGED IN PROMOTING ITS INTERESTS BY INCREASING THEIR INFORMATION AND MINISTERING TO THEIR SPIRITUAL LIFE.

What the Advocate Is:

A SIXTEEN-PAGE RELIGIOUS NEWSPAPER, PUBLISHED FIFTY-TWO TIMES A YEAR, OWNED AND CONTROLLED BY THE LOUISIANA, THE MISSISSIPPI, AND THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

The fifty-two issues aggregate 832 pages a year—some advertising, but mostly reading matter. Some of its features are:

Brief editorial comment upon matters of interest, and discussion of important movements and measures in the church and in the religious world generally

Helpful and interesting contributed and selected articles on various subjects.

The Home Circle—a department devoted especially to the children and young people. containing clean stories and poems, and many interesting and valuable bits of information.

Departments devoted to the interests of the Sunday school and the Woman's Missionary Society.

Many brief but interesting reports of the work of local churches throughout the three Conferences.

A column or more each week of notes that deal largely with people and events.

Full official announcements of quarterly conferences, and many other important official notices.

SOME THINGS THAT EVERY INTELLIGENT METHODIST OUGHT TO KEEP INFORMED ABOUT THIS YEAR:

The Evangelistic work of the Church.

The Plan of Unification.

The Educational Campaign.

Constitutional Prohibition and Other Moral Reforms.

The Issues Involved in the Interchurch World Movement.

THE ADVOCATE WILL FURNISH THE INFORMATION.

THE COST: AS LITTLE AS COULD BE EXPECTED— $1.50 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

This is less than three cents a week! There are fifteen Conference organs in our church; the subscription price of eight of them is $2.00 a year, and the price of one is $2.50 a year. The New Orleans Christian Advocate wants to maintain its present price of $1.50—but it needs the ten thousand paid-in-advance subscriptions by March 15 to do it.

NOW IS THE TIME FOR EVERYBODY TO HELP—ARE YOU HELPING?

There are 160,000 Methodists in Louisiana and Mississippi; surely 10,000 of them will willingly give $1.50 for their church paper for one year.

THE CAMPAIGN IS ON! SUCCESS IS ASSURED IF WE GO TO WORK! LET'S AT IT!

10,000 by March 15!

The Home Circle

CLIMBING UP THE HILL.

Never look behind, boys,
Up and on the way!
Time enough for that, boys,
On some future day.
Though the way be long, boys,
Fight it with a will;
Never stop to look behind
When climbing up a hill.

First be sure you're right, boys.
Then with courage strong,
Strap your pack upon your back,
And tug, tug along;
Better let the lag-lout
Fill the lower bill,
And strike the farther stake pole
Higher up the hill.

Trudge is a slow horse, boys,
Made to pull a load,
But in the end will give the dust
To racers on the road.
When you're near the top, boys,
Of the rugged way,
Do not stop to blow your horn,
But climb, climb away.

Shoot above the crowd, boys,
Brace yourselves and go;
Let the plodding land-pad
Hoe the easy row.
Success is at the top, boys,
Waiting there until
Brains and pluck and self-respect
Have mounted up the hill.

HOW BESSIE WON THE BASKET.

Oh, such a careless, thoughtless and disobedient little girl as Bessie often was!

If you had lived in the house with her, these are a few of the questions which you would hear her ask every day:

"Who knows where my hat is?" "Has anybody seen my pencil?" "Fanny, where is my slate?" "Can't you tell me where my rake is?"

"Where are you going, Fanny?" she asked one morning, as her sister was leaving the room with a basket and a pair of scissors in her hand.

"To help Ben cut the flowers," Fanny replied.

"I think you might wait for me; and, Fanny, you said you would get me a little basket like yours; when will you give it to me?"

"I can not wait for you. When you have finished adding up those figures, you may come to the garden; but, remember, Bessie, you are not to come until your slate and books are put neatly away on the shelf. And, as for the basket, you shall have that as soon—" Fanny went out without finishing.

Bessie looked after her. What did she mean by not finishing what she was saying? But there was one thing sure, the longer she sat doing nothing, the longer it would be before she could go into the garden; for Fanny would send her right back if she came before the work was finished.

"Three and two are five, and five are ten," and so on till it was finished and proved correct. Then down went slate and pencil, and over to the open window bounded Bessie.

As she stood with one foot on the piazza, the memory of Fanny's words came back to her, and she stopped. She almost wished she had forgotten. Perhaps the flowers would be all cut. Oh, dear, what a bother!

"I just believe I'll wait till I come back to pick it up; Fanny'll never know, and it won't make a mite of difference.

"You're just going to act a story, Bessie Gray; and that's as bad as telling one with your tongue!" she said to herself. And, going back into the room, she picked up the slate, gathered the books from the table, and ran off with them to the library closet, to the particular corner of the shelf where they belonged.

But that corner was already occupied, for in the very spot where she had been going to lay the books stood the loveliest little basket, in the bottom of which lay a slip of paper on which was printed quite plainly:

"For the little girl who remembered to put away her slate and books—and, remembering, did it."—Annie L. Hannah, in the Christian Observer.

HOW THE FIRST BOOKS WERE MADE.

After the fall of the Roman Empire and after the time of Charlemagne, at the beginning of the Middle Ages, the olden-time books were forgotten by most men then living. Even so, some copies of the old books were saved, and one kind of book-making went on as usual. This was the making of wonderful copies of the Bible and writings of the early Church Fathers in the monasteries. Every monastery had its own little publishing department. The place in the monastery where the monks worked at book-making was called the Scriptorium, and it was only the older monks who were trusted to do this kind of work.

The copies of the Bible—and in fact, all the books made in those days—had leaves of parchment, and the printing was, of course, all done by hand by the use of a stylus. Those exquisite pages were illuminated in colors, and in every book there were beautiful, painted illustrations. Many of the hand-made books are still in existence and are carefully preserved in both private and public libraries and museums. When one is sold, it brings a fabulous price.

Often many monks used to work at the same time in copying a book. They tell us that one monk would read aloud while twenty others copied on parchment sheets what he read; thus twenty copies of the same book would be in process of making at the same time. It was not the custom to make copies of the Bible in this way because the Bible did not sell so readily as smaller, less costly books.

We are told, too, that the most beautiful copies of the Scriptures were made by monks who for years worked alone in their cells, printing by hand, painting and illuminating the precious pages all for the glory of God.—Epworth Herald.

A TRUE CAT TALE.

A cat that had several times been deprived of her kittens hid a litter of them in my aunt's barn. Cries could be heard from some quarter, but the kittens could not be found.

Between their mother and the family cat was a feud of long standing; and for this reason my uncle and the maid used to drive the mother away. My aunt never did so.

Pussy learned, at length, to make for the door when she heard footsteps, and also to look behind her. If she saw my aunt's face, she turned back.

One day auntie said to her, "Old cat, where do you keep your kittens? I haven't seen them yet." Immediately she went to the woodpile and called, and out came all the babies for inspection.—Selected.

OGLU AND HIS FIRST STICK OF CANDY.

Little Oglu lived in the far-away Northland. His home was built of great blocks of snow. But he did not mind that, for he was dressed in the furs of wild animals which his father had killed.

One day, Oglu's mother had a surprise for him. She knew how much little boys liked candy, so she had prepared a stick of candy for her little son. But it was different from the kind your mother would give you.

Oglu's father helped his mother to make it, too. He had been hunting, and killed a reindeer and a bird. Perhaps you may think he should have brought home some sugar if there was to be any candy. But Oglu's mother smiled when she saw the reindeer and the bird, and carefully took the feet of the bird and began to pull out the bones. Then she blew up the bright, red skin until it looked almost ready to burst. She tied the end so that the air could not get out until she was ready to fill the skin with melted fat from the reindeer.

After the fat was poured into the strange-looking pouch, she set it away until it became very hard, then she gave it to Oglu. How happy he was to get it! He enjoyed his first stick of candy just as much as you enjoyed the first candy you ever ate.—Sunshine.

There are such things as spontaneous flashes of suggestion that come on the inspiration of the moment, but they come to those who have previously meditated long and earnestly on the questions involved; and even so, those exalted moods in the Christian life in which the soul mounts up on wings like an eagle come to those who have toiled along the road of faithful daily service.—Bryan Collier.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

DR. G. CAMPBELL MORGAN IN NEW ORLEANS.

Several notable happenings occurred in New Orleans last week. In the first place, there was a revival of the Mardi Gras celebration, which had fallen into "innocuous desuetude" during the war. The preparations for the celebration were not on as elaborate scale as usual, but the great Rex parade was given on Tuesday, and thousands of people, from the city itself and from a distance, thronged the streets, in spite of inclement weather, to view the spectacular procession. There was a general feeling that the old Carnival spirit was lacking, and there is some doubt as to whether or not the celebration will be continued in the future; but it was a notable event this year.

In the second place, General John J. Pershing was the honored guest of the city for two days. His coming was heralded beforehand, as it was fitting that it should be, as an event long to be remembered in the history of a city not unaccustomed to visits from celebrities. The people of the city honored themselves in showing honor to the great leader of our overseas army—a leader who proved himself worthy of the distinction he has achieved as one of the great commanders in the greatest war the world has ever known. It was fitting that he should be welcomed by the great crowds who delighted to do him honor—and tens of thousands of people, men, women and children, took advantage of the opportunities they had of seeing the illustrious leader of the American Expeditionary Forces.

In the third place, Maurice Maeterlinck, one of the most distinguished dramatists of modern times, spent a day in the city. He was not greeted by the popular demonstrations that marked the appearance of General Pershing, but he arrived in the Mayflower, the private car used by the presidents of the United States in their tours over the country; he was met by a company of prominent citizens, representing the business, intellectual and cultural life of the city; he was the recipient of every social courtesy that could be extended to him; and he was given columns of space in the newspapers, one of which sent two of the most capable members of its staff to board his train fifty miles away in order to interview him concerning his views upon questions that are interesting the thinking world to-day.

In the fourth place, Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, one of the best known ministers of the gospel in the world, came to New Orleans to deliver a series of addresses on subjects growing out of Biblical interpretation. No official notice, so far as we are aware, was taken of his arrival by the city authorities or by the organizations representing the civic, social and business life of the city; no crowds thronged the streets to catch a glimpse of the distinguished preacher; he delivered an address on Wednesday morning, to which the public generally was invited, free of charge—and there were fewer than a hundred people out to hear him; he spoke every evening for a week in one of the leading churches of the city—but the auditorium was not filled to capacity on any of the occasions when it was our privilege to hear him; the newspapers gave no more space to him than they give to scores of local happenings every day.

We do not know what these indications of public interest signify, or whether they signify anything at all or not. The Mardi Gras celebration represented the hilarious side of social enjoyment—and multiplied thousands did homage to Rex; the visit of General Pershing was the occasion of a patriotic outpouring of the people—and they proved their devotion to their country and their country's hero; the presence of Maeterlinck appealed to the widspread interest of intelligent people in the intellectual and philosophical problems of life—and that interest was shown in no uncertain way; the coming of Dr. Morgan was in connection with definite religious work—and comparatively few showed concern. "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

We do not propose in this account of Dr. Morgan's visit to New Orleans to discuss the theological views advanced by him in his various volumes dealing with such matters, but simply to express our opinion of him as a preacher of righteousness and interpreter of the fundamental principles of evangelical Christianity, as we had opportunity to form that opinion while listening to the addresses it was our privilege to hear. Limiting our statement as above, we do not hesitate to say that we have never heard his superior, and seldom his equal, as a preacher with power to grip the attention of those who are willing to think sympathetically with one who is attempting to interpret the supreme issues of life. Dr. Morgan is a great preacher; as we listened to him, we attempted to discover the secret of his power.

He has a striking personal appearance. He is considerably past middle age, but there is no sign of physical decay. His hair is gray, but it is abundant, and it crowns a head that of itself is suggestive of unusual intellectual endowments. He is rather tall and slender, an impression which is heightened by the strictly clerical garb he wears. His voice is not powerful, but it is clear in tone, with a carrying power that enables him to be heard by the entire congregation. It has the quality that we have come to associate with those who have grown up in England, though there is not the slightest sign of affectation. His enunciation is perfect—a virtue that cannot be claimed by all public speakers.

But personal appearance does not explain power; it may attract attention and predispose for or against, but it does not stir the mind and heart. In studying the man and his message, we were struck in the very beginning by his knowledge of the Bible. That is not to be wondered at on the part of one who has given oneself wholly to the presentation of its teachings, but it is an accomplishment altogether too rare even among those whose calling presupposes intimate familiarity with both the Old and New Testaments. Dr. Morgan, without the slightest display of learning, gives the impression of being so perfectly at home in the Inspired Writings, of having such comprehensive knowledge of their contents separately and in their relation to one another, that the hearer feels at once that he is in the presence of a man who is qualified to speak. There is an old saying that knowledge is power; the truth of that saying is never better demonstrated than in the case of the preacher who knows the Book upon which he is dependent for his message. We especially commend the suggestion contained herein to all young ministers.

Another secret of the power of this great preacher is the utter simplicity of his message. We presume there is no question as to the ability of Dr. Morgan to speak in terms of the abstract if occasion should require; but in the presentation of the gospel his evident determination is to make the way so plain that the wayfaring man, "though a fool," need not err therein. So simple is his message in fact that the casual listener might be inclined to think that it lacked the preparation the theme demanded; but a little reflection, accompanied by the attempt to reduce to similarly simple terms any of the great teachings of Jesus, will amply demonstrate the fact that such results can be attained only by the most profound reflection. After all, simplicity is one of the marks of true greatness. The highest tribute that can be paid to a great speaker is in the feeling that the hearer himself could have delivered the address equally well if he had been called upon. "Beaten oil" is the result of prolonged labor.

Still another element in explanation of the power of Dr. Morgan is his singleness of purpose. It is his own statement that he has but one mission in life—to try to interpret the Scriptures in a helpful way to those to whom he may chance to minister. He may be interested in social reform, industrial welfare, political progress—he probably is—but he confined himself on the occasions when we heard him to the one theme of the relation of the individual to Christ. Some men may achieve greatness in many things—but power is developed by the concentration of energies in one direction. Some men try to excel in many different lines of work; most of us are not ambitious enough to excel in one. When we can say, "This one thing I do"—and mean it with all our hearts—we may know something of the power of those who have moved the multitudes.

The last element in the preaching of Dr. Morgan that we call attention to, is his tremendous earnestness. He is not a dilettante in dealing with men's souls—he means business. He is not vehement of speech, and there is nothing cyclonic in his manner; but there is a certain dynamic intensity in the tones of his voice and in his comparatively few gestures that leaves no doubt as to where his heart is. Not even the most indifferent of listeners—and we saw none such—could apply the effeminate phrase, "a nice little speech," to his briefest utterance. His message deals with the eternal verities, and his own soul throbs with the awfulness of its meaning. Those who hear him believe in his sincerity, whether they accept his teaching or not. So will the world believe any man who puts himself—all of himself—into what he undertakes to accomplish.

It is a worthy tribute to the man and his message that his audiences grew in size from the very first. The preacher has not lost his place in the modern order.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"All goes well," is the cheering note that comes from Rev. B. F. Bullard, of Houlka, Miss.

Brother J. C. Bell, of Trenton, Miss., is another of the "Old Guard." He has been taking the Advocate since about 1872.

"We are making some progress along all lines on the Chatham charge," writes Rev. Geo. W. Warren, of Chatham, La.

Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, the newly appointed Centenary Secretary for the Louisiana Conference, has reached New Orleans and taken up his work.

Mrs. Lenora Boswell, wife of Dr. John W. Boswell, formerly editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, died on Tuesday, February 24, 1920.

A Fifth Ecumenical Conference of Methodism has been called by the Executive Committee of the Eastern Section, to meet in London in September, 1921.

Rev. C. C. Evans, our pastor at Canton, Miss., has the pleasure of serving a church that is well organized in all departments and that is actively at work.

Rev. Walter M. Campbell, of Belzoni, Miss., in sending us a fine list of subscribers from his charge, remarks that he is serving a fine people. We agree with him heartily.

Rev. C. C. Norton, a local preacher who served as a supply in the North Mississippi Conference last year, is pursuing his studies in the Graduate School of Emory University this year.

We learn from the South-Reporter that our congregation at Holly Springs, Miss., is planning to install a new pipe organ at an early date. It will be a fine instrument, with all modern appliances.

We came across this interesting item recently:

of the seven new missionaries sent to Belgium recently, five came from Little Rock, Ark. That city has no greater claim to distinction than this fact.

In requesting us to change the address of his Advocate, Rev. C. T. Barton writes from Long Branch, W. Va., that he has been transferred to the East Oklahoma Conference and stationed at Pensacola, Okla.

Mrs. B. F. Chambers, of Beach, Miss., in instructing us to send the Advocate to her son, takes occasion to say that the paper has been going to her home for forty or fifty years. The roll of the "Old Guard" is a noble one.

Dr. S. A. Steel's new book, containing three of his great lectures, has just been issued from the press. It is interesting and profitable reading—well worth the dollar it costs. It may be had of the author, whose address is Mansfield, La.

A great revival is being planned for this year at Bunkie, La., where Rev. Geo. Fox is pastor. Reliance is placed in the promises of the gospel and in the power of the preached Word. We pray that there may be a great ingathering for the Kingdom.

Dr. Marion Browning, who had planned a trip to Cuba, but was unable to leave at the appointed time on account of delay in securing his passport, now has the necessary papers and will make the trip a little later. He is at present living at China, Texas.

Our pastor at Main Street, Water Valley, Miss., Rev. L. P. Wasson, is preaching to growing congregations, and all the work of the church is prospering. A great revival is the earnest desire of the church this year, and it is being prayed for and worked for.

The Minutes of the Louisiana, the Mississippi, and the North Mississippi Conferences reached our table about the same time. They are all splendidly arranged and printed, and they contain a great deal of valuable information that is thus made easily accessible.

We rejoice with Rev. R. S. Walton and his good people of Winnfield, La., over the fact that the walls of their new church are just about completed, and that the roofing material has been ordered. The building when completed will be a credit to the community.

Dr. A. Gordon Bakewell, a distinguished Episcopal minister of New Orleans, died last Sunday afternoon, in the ninety-seventh year of his age. He had been rector of Trinity Chapel since 1884. Probably no minister in the city was more widely known or more greatly beloved.

Rev. J. R. Countiss, the great president of Grenada College, has announced that the North Mississippi Efficiency Conference will be held at the College, June 1-4. The program has been mapped out, and the speakers invited. We doubt not that it will be a great occasion.

Dr. A. C. Millar, editor of the Arkansas Methodist, has planned a trip over a large part of South America, beginning the latter part of this month. He is a trained observer and an interesting writer. We predict that many good things are in store for the readers of the paper which he edits so ably.

Our work at Jena, La., is making great progress under the leadership of Rev. Henry T. Young. Great revivals are being planned for and, under the blessing of God, they will come. The first quarterly conference increased the pastor's salary about 100 per cent above the figures for last year.

An interesting bulletin, issued by our church at Rolling Fork, Miss., has come to our desk. It contains a strong appeal by the board of stewards to the membership of the church for systematic and liberal support of the pastor—a subject in which our laymen are becoming more and more interested.

Rev. G. A. Morgan is meeting with encouraging success in his third year as pastor at Jonesboro, La. In addition to many kindnesses in the way of "poundings," etc., the salary has been fixed at $1400, and there is talk of a new church at Jonesboro. A Senior Epworth League has also been recently organized.

Our church at Hazlehurst, Miss., is steadily making progress in all lines of work. The membership is showing a gratifying growth, and the church is materially prosperous. The pastor's salary has been increased from $1500 to $2400 within two years. Rev. W. W. Graves is in his second year as pastor.

We take the following from the Arkansas Methodist: "The new pastor (Rev. W. B. Hogg, of Winfield Memorial Church, Little Rock) has made a very favorable impression on his church and on the city, and on favorable occasions is preaching to a crowded house." Brother Hogg is well known in Mississippi and Louisiana.

We have received a copy of the "Centenary Booster," a sprightly paper published by the students of Centenary College, Shreveport, La. It was doubly interesting to us because of our former connection with the institution—an institution which, we believe, is destined to play a large part in the development of Louisiana Methodism.

Rev. H. N. Harrison, of Slidell, La., was a pleasant caller at the Advocate office on Monday of this week. He reported that the local survey of the church has just about been completed, and that the Sunday school is splendidly organized and doing effective work. The congregations are good. On account of an epidemic of influenza, however, all public gatherings have been suspended for the present.

Rev. Alonzo Early, Louisiana Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, honored the Advocate office with a call on Saturday of last week. He spent last Sunday in the city, preaching at Carrollton Avenue in the morning and at Louisiana Avenue in the evening. He reports that great interest is being taken in the approaching meeting of the Wesley Bible Class Federation at Shreveport, March 16-18.

The Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, of this city, celebrated the anniversary of the dedication of the original building, now used as a Sunday school building, on Wednesday evening of last week. After an interesting program had been rendered, refreshments were served and a delightful social hour was spent. This church has had a remarkable development since the erection of this first building more than thirty years ago.

The Methodist church at Marion, Miss., on the Lauderdale charge, Mississippi Conference, was destroyed by a cyclone on Dec. 7, 1919. The pastor, Rev. Otto Porter, writes that the membership, which is small, is making a faithful effort to rebuild, but that outside help is needed and would be greatly appreciated. Those who are able to help this worthy cause are invited to send their contributions to Brother Porter at Lauderdale, Miss.

At a church conference held on a recent date, our congregation at Winnsboro, La., unanimously decided to build a modern church, to cost not less than $40,000. This was a great day for Winnsboro Methodism, and we rejoice with the pastor, Rev. S. D. Howard, and all those who have entered so heartily into this great enterprise. Such movements grow out of faith and prayer; and they are carried to completion by the same forces.

We learn from the St. Louis Christian Advocate that Dr. Frank Seay, professor of New Testament Greek in Southern Methodist University, died of pneumonia, following influenza, on February 14. Dr. Seay, although still a young man, had achieved distinction in his chosen field of study, and he was looked upon as one of the most brilliant of the younger scholars of our church. The University and the church at large have suffered a great loss.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. E. S. Lewis, Greenville, Miss., 7; Rev. A. A. Simms, Johns, Miss., 2; Rev. R. T. NOTICE

To The Preachers of the Mississippi Conference:

Up to the present, the Treasurer of your Conference Claimants' Fund has received but $328.10. Please push this important collection. Do not let anything prevent your taking your collection and sending the amount to your General Treasurer, W. D. Davis, Brookhaven, Miss., designating Local Work, to which it will be applied. Do not fail—"the King's business requires haste."

Chairman of Board.

LIVING THE CHRISTIAN LIFE.

Look at that parish. There is a little band of men and women, clergy and laity. No one hears of them outside their own area, any more than they did of the Master outside Nazareth. And yet their secret lives, each led in its own sphere—why, I see it in parish after parish in the East End—influencing and affecting the whole of its surroundings. That is the visible church doing its work, the invisible work of that church in the world. Or, going into one of our households, I see one member standing true and firm when all else are against him or against her. Silently and gradually the whole of that household is influenced for the highest and the best. Yes, if you are that one you are doing the invisible work of the visible church in your area. I see a little band of church workers going into a factory and deciding that they will live there, feel there, work there—God only knows what it must cost them—for the sake of trying to spread a higher influence among that which is often so low and so lowering. They are doing the invisible work of the visible church in their area.—E. E. Holmes.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

MRS. NANNIE M. LIVERMAN, daughter of Mr. Charles and Mrs. Lucy E. Hungerford, was born in Georgia during 1845, and her parents moved to this State and settled in Keachie, in 1861, and here she spent most of her life. Sister Liverman was deeply pious from childhood; she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in early life and lived consistently through life. I first met her in 1877, while on the Shreveport District. I was in her mother's family and found them all pious. I married her to Brother Liverman, on February 25, 1880. They were in the active work five years after their marriage. Brother Liverman was superannuated in 1884. She went with him where his work demanded, and proved herself an efficient pastor's wife, and was successful as a mother. The children under her charge are all religious and some of them useful in the church. She was affectionate in the family and to friends. Her last thirty years have been in widowhood, and without doubt an example to all in sobriety and deep piety. She was a "Life Member of the American Bible Society," and sold many Bibles. She sent many Testaments to the soldiers during the late war. God's blessings rest upon her memory and works and sanctify them to his purpose and his richest graces upon the family and friends. Thus the meek and godly pass away and we can with joy give them up.

ROBERT RANDLE.

Monroe, La., Feb. 13, 1920.

MRS. ELIZABETH CURRIE was born on August 9, 1843. She married J. M. Currie, on June 30, 1858. To them were born thirteen children. She departed this life on February 1, 1920, leaving six daughters and two sons, 61 grandchildren, 46 great-grandchildren and 6 great-great-grandchildren. God has called a noble woman to her reward, for her life was a life of service, always faithful to her church, joyfully responding to its every call. Her charities were many, and, like Dorcas of old, she did much for the poor and needy. Wherever there was trouble she went to speak words of comfort and cheer. Her children and grandchildren were devoted to her, and during her last illness she had every comfort and care that loving hands could administer. Oh, how we will miss Grandmother Currie! May we strive to follow her example, for her life was an appeal to us to live more nobly; and may her going be the means of drawing us all nearer to Him. The funeral service was conducted by Brother E. H. Cooley, pastor of the Methodist church at Raleigh, Miss., and she was laid to rest by the side of her companion in the cemetery, there to await the resurrection. Her friend,

MRS. H. W. REYNOLDS.

Taylorsville, Miss., Feb. 13, 1920.

The subject of this sketch, MISS LULA COWAN, was born March 8, 1883, and received the summons to meet her God, February 7, 1920. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life, and in many respects was a great help to the church. She was willing to do what she could—noble in thought, high in purpose, possessing a great heart that radiated love and kindness wherever she went. One of her greatest pleasures was to attend church as long as she was able and take part in the song and prayer service. She had been in ill-health for several years, but with Christian fortitude and patience she had borne her suffering. Loved ones worked heroically to lengthen the span of life, but God said, "It is enough—come up higher." She was laid to rest in the family cemetery beside her lamented father, who was thrown from his buggy and killed about eight months ago, a large concourse of grief-stricken relatives and friends being present to mourn her departure. May God bless and sustain the aged mother, the three brothers and sister that she leaves behind.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas God in his wisdom has called our dearly beloved friend and member, Mrs. Elizabeth Currie, to her Heavenly home and the Methodist Ladies' Aid has lost one of its most beloved and faithful members; therefore be it resolved:

1. That we humbly bow to God's will, but most sincerely lament her death.
2. That we cherish the memory of her Christian character and her devotion to every phase of church work, and her generous response to every appeal of charity, and especially her loyalty to Christ.
3. That the Ladies' Aid, the Methodist Church and our community have lost a most consecrated Christian.
4. That our hearts go out in deepest sympathy to the bereaved relatives, and we commend them to the Christ, who alone can give comfort to the broken-hearted, and peace to the soul.
5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Signal, the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy be spread upon the minutes of the Ladies' Aid.

CHARTER.

STATE OF LOUISIANA,
PARISH OF ORLEANS.

BE IT KNOWN, That on this Thirty-first day of December, Nineteen Hundred and Nineteen, Before me, JOSEPH LAUTENSCHLAEGER, a Notary Public in and for the Parish of Orleans, State of Louisiana, duly qualified, personally came and appeared the several persons whose names are hereinafter subscribed, all of full age of majority, who declared that availing themselves of the laws of this State, relative to the organization of corporations, they do hereby covenant and agree to form themselves into a Corporation for the objects and purposes, and under the following stipulations to-wit.:

ARTICLE I.

The name and title of this Corporation shall be the "RELIABLE AUTO SALES COMPANY, Inc." It shall enjoy corporate existence for a term of 99 years from date, unless sooner dissolved. It shall have, enjoy and exercise all rights, powers and privileges now granted by law, or hereafter granted, to corporations of this character, especially the right to hold, receive, purchase, alienate, sell, mortgage, pledge, rent or lease property, real, personal and mixed, in fact anything permitted by the law necessary and convenient for carrying out the objects and purposes of this Corporation.

ARTICLE II.

The domicile of this Corporation shall be in the City of New Orleans, Louisiana, where all citations, or other legal process, shall be served on the President and in his absence on the Secrtary-Treasurer.

ARTICLE III.

The objects and purposes of this Corporation are hereby delared to be the buying and selling of Autos, trucks, tractors and all their parts and accessories, and everything pertaining to that line of business; also the operation of a general garage, and anything else that may be necessary to or incidental to said business.

ARTICLE IV.

The Capital stock of this Corporation is hereby fixed at the sum of TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS, divided into 100 shares of the par value of One Hundred Dollars each, to be issued in the manner and for the consideration prescribed by law. All shares to be full paid and non-assessable. The Capital stock may be increased when found necessary by a vote of 2-3 of all the capital stock at a meeting called for that purpose.

ARTICLE V.

All the Corporate powers of this Corporation shall be vested in and exercised by a board of Directors to be composed of Three Stockholders, two of whom shall constitute a quorum. The following named stockholders shall constitute the first Board of Directors, viz.: Will J. Morgan, 344 Carondelet Street; Henry J. Prados, 5338 Perrier Street; Rufus H. Prados, Ray St. Louis, Miss., with the said Will J. Morgan, as President; Rufus H. Prados, as Vice President, and Henry J. Prados, as Secretary-Treasurer, and they shall hold their office until the first Monday of January, 1921., or until their successors are elected and qualified, on which day the election shall take place, or as soon thereafter as possible.

All stockholders' meetings, including the annual meeting for the election of officers and directors shall be preceded by written notice, delivered personally or mailed to the last known addresses of the stockholder, 15 days before such meeting; provided the stockholders shall always have the right to waive such notice.

If any vacancy occurs on the Board of Directors the stockholders shall name or elect a successor to fill the vacancy until the next general election. The election of Directors shall be by ballot, and each stockholder shall be entitled to one vote, in person or by proxy, for each share of the Capital stock owned by him.

ARTICLE VI.

No stockholder of this Corporation shall have the right to sell or pledge his stock, without first offering same to the stockholders, through the officers of this Corporation, upon allowing said stockholders TEN DAYS to purchase same, at BOOK VALUE, or receives same in PLEDGE, as may be desired by the owner of said stock, and no transfer of stock shall be binding upon this Corporation unless actually made on the Books of the Corporation, in the manner required by law.

ARTICLE VII.

The Charter of this Corporation may be modified or altered, or the Corporation may be dissolved, the capital increased or decreased, or liquidated in the manner as is now or may hereafter be prescribed by law.

THUS DONE and PASSED, at New Orleans, La., on the day and date first before written, in presence of Emannel L. Weil and Orrin Beegle, competent witnesses of lawful age, residing in this Parish, who hereunto sign their names with said Appearers and me Notary.

COLLEGE REVIVAL.

Last fall, I arranged with Rev. J. L. Neill to conduct a revival in Grenada College. The Standard Plan of the Evangelistic Committee was secured, a survey of the student body was made, listing those not church members and those not sure of the conversion, so that we might know the work before us. Sometime before the meeting began, four-minute addresses were given daily by members of the Y. W. C. A., and all chapel services were made distinctly evangelistic. As a result, the ground was well prepared for the work of the preacher. In fact, the night before his arrival one student was gloriously converted in her room, giving such testimony as is rarely heard even from the lips of mature Christians.

While no high-pressure methods were used at any time, the sermons of Brother Neill were earnest and Scriptural and the work done was not of a type to result in reaction or misgivings. Penitence was manifest and conversions were clear-cut and definite. As a part of the statistical results, there were seven who joined the student volunteers for life service; forty-four signed for part-time service; fifty-four pledged themselves to tithing, while one hundred per cent of the boarding pupils became members of the church. Other results equally fine cannot be tabulated.

May the revival fires spread from our schools like those that went out from Oxford in the days of the Wesleys and Whitefield, and may they bring results to America and to the world as glorious as those brought to England under the leadership of the man whose warming heart raised the temperature of the civilized world.

A NOTE FROM INDIAN BAYOU, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Despite the bad weather and condition of the roads, together with other hindering causes, a new church is now going up at Hebron, which is on the Indian Bayou charge. In addition to this, I hope to see soon, and be able to report also, a new parsonage and another new church. Fraternally,

A GREAT SORROW.

Dear Brother Carley: The many friends who have been associated with Mrs G. C. Jones, of Belen, Miss., in the Woman's Missionary Conference of North Mississippi, will be grieved to learn of the death of her only child, Lulu. The sad news came that she had died suddenly in New York, where she was pursuing her studies in art and expression. Much of her time had been spent away from home in school, for her ambition was lofty and her ideals were high. She longed for perfection in her life preparation. Having had home influences when young that were distinctly religious, and devotion of loving parents lavished upon her, she had developed into a beautiful Christian character with splendid endowments, and was destined to wield a great influence for good. In the language of her sorrowing mother we say, "It is hard to give her up, but we bow to our Heavenly Father's will and he will sustain." Let prayers go up that God will sustain and comfort Sister Jones.

Sick Chicks Saved

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 5252 Reefer Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., is giving away free a valuable book entitled "White Diarrhoea and How to cure it." This book contains scientific facts on white diarrhoea and tells how to prepare a simple home solution that cures this terrible disease over night and actually raises 98 per cent of every batch. All poultry raisers should certainly write Mr. Reefer for one of these valuable FREE books.—Adv.

FROM SAUCIER, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: The first quarterly conference for the Saucier and Lyman charge was held Friday evening, February 6. Our presiding elder, Brother W. M. Sullivan, preached a great sermon to a large and appreciative congregation, after which the conference was held. Reports were up-to-date. An increase of $400 over that of last year was made for the pastor's salary. Our congregations are growing and the outlook for a good year is very encouraging.

WONDERFUL SHOWING IN WINONA DISTRICT.

S. L. Pope, presiding elder of the Winona District, has met with wonderful success in his first round of quarterly conferences. He has won the hearts of the people everywhere by his consecration, personality, devotion to duty.

Probably the most remarkable increase in the salaries of the preachers that has taken place in any district in Southern Methodism at any one time, has taken place in this district. They as as follows: Belzoni, $700; Carrollton, $380; Swift Town, $250; Winona station, $200; Dublin circuit, $1044; Moorehead, $550; Ruleville, $1000; Drew, $250; Indianola, $600; Inverness, $137; Schlater, $150; Tutwiler, $700; Greenwood, $400; Sunflower, $400; Webb, $400; Total, $7,863 increase for the district, with two charges to be heard from.

The reports from the preachers also show 275 sermons preached, 651 homes visited, 110 prayers in homes by ministers, 10 family altars reported, 15 communion services, 97 members received.

Brother Pope writes that he has secured the services of Bishop Kilgo for the dedication of the Itta Bena church, on April 18, and to conduct the district conference at Indianola, April 20-23.

McKibben, at Lambert, is well on his way for a new church; McGehee and Campbell are planning new churches for Indianola and Belzoni; Tucker, at Greenwood is planning a revival with Rev. Mr. Walker on April 25. The Elder says, "The temper of the district is good, and prospects look like a good year."

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

CATARRH DOES HARM

Whether It Is of the Nose, Throat, or Other Organs, Get Rid of It.

Catarrh of the nose or throat when it becomes chronic weakens the delicate lung tissues, deranges the digestive organs, and may lead to consumption. It impairs the taste, smell and hearing, and affects the voice. It is a constitutional disease and requires a constitutional remedy.

Take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which by purifying the blood removes the cause of the disease and gives permanent relief. This alterative and tonic medicine has proved entirely satisfactory to thousands of families in three generations.

If there is biliousness or constipation, take Hood's Pills,—they are a thorough cathartic, a gentle laxative.

EAT IT ALL.

You are likely to be afraid when seated before a large dinner or before a particularly delightful meal, lest you may suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, heart burn or some of the other disagreeable after effects. We are prone at times to forget our stomachs and our rashness causes us trouble. A simple natural aid at times when your organs rebel will not only avoid temporary discomfort but will also give comfort and rest to the tired, over-worked, mistreated organs and smoothly pave the way to strength.

RELIABLE VADCO REMEDIES

VADCO Dyspepsia Remedy is a harmless though immensely comforting and effective corrective. A teaspoonful just after meals or whenever needed will bring immediate relief and by aiding the stomach in its work, restore it to strength and health. It is simple to take and pleasant to taste. Not over 5 per cent. alcohol. Call your druggist and try a bottle or send 50c for your stomach's sake to Van Antwerp's, Mobile, Ala., and a bottle will be sent you by mail.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

Our District Officers' Meeting at Port Gibson was well attended and perhaps the most enthusiastic meeting we have ever had in the Port Gibson District. The work was thoroughly discussed and we feel that our officers understand the work better than they ever have before. We came away from the meeting feeling that we would be able to do many things for the advancement of the cause of Christ this year.

May 4 and 5 the Conference-Wide Elementary Conference will be held at Capitol Street, Jackson, Miss. Presiding elders, preachers, Sunday schools superintendents, Elementary superintendents and Elementary teachers are all cordially invited. We are planning to have a real helpful program. We will make an effort to have demonstrative work from each department. There will be Departmental Conferences on Organizations and Methods. Miss Kennedy will be with us.

At each of the District Officers' meetings, it was decided to try to make a rapid tour of each district, touching each charge, in the interests of the District Institute, Sunday School Day, and the District Standard.

This will call for many volunteer workers. In due course of time we will make an effort to build these teams. I believe that you will meet us more than half way, and with this feeling in my heart I believe we will succeed.

If you have not put your name on Dr. Bulla's mailing list for the Evangelistic leaflets, you are missing some very fine stuff. I trust you may yet do this.

The Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board is now at home to the Sunday school workers at Room 3, Bule Bldg., Jackson, Miss. If you come to town, call on us; and if we can be of service to you, let us know.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Leaflets for Circuit Sunday School Works.

The Field Secretary is now prepared to supply the workers of the Conference with the leaflets listed herewith, all of which have to do with the work of the circuit Sunday school: Keeping Open All the Year; The Story of Miss Joella; Religious Education in a Rural Community; Solving the Country Church and Sunday School Problem; A Circuit Teacher Training School; Big Enough for a Big Job; The Average Membership of the Circuit School; How Some Presiding Elders Have Helped the Sunday School to Better Things; A List of Books for Circuit Sunday School Workers to Read; Some Possible Sources of Help for Your Problems; Elementary Work in the One-Room School; Plans of Work for Organized Bible Classes (Round Table Leaflet with questions for discussion).

Other leaflets which will be available at an early date are as follows: The Four Times a Year Circuit Institute; A Standard Institute Program for Circuit Schools; A Success Talk for Farm Boys About Books; Singing in the Country School; Report blank for use in Circuit Institutes.

15 EGGS A DAY FROM 23 HENS, IN WINTER

Mr. Duni's Hens Increased Every Day. Plan is Easily Tried.

"We have 23 chickens and hadn't had an egg all winter. In five days after feeding Don Sung, we got four to five eggs a day; in three weeks, we were getting 10 to 12 eggs a day; in five weeks we got 15 to 19 eggs a day."—John Duni, Box 102, Cherry Valley, Pa.

Mr. Duni started giving his hens Don Sung in January, in zero weather. He now keeps his hens busy in cold weather, when hens usually stop laying. A trial costs nothing. Here's our offer:

Give your hens Don Sung and watch results for one month. If you don't find that it pays for itself and pays you a good profit besides, simply tell us and your money will be promptly refunded.

Don Sung (Chinese for egg-laying) works directly on the egg-laying organs, and is also a splendid tonic. It is easily given in the feed, improves the hen's health, makes her stronger and more active in any weather, and starts her laying.

Try Don Sung for 30 days and if it doesn't get you the eggs, no matter how cold or wet the weather, your money will be refunded by return mail. Get Don Sung from your druggist or poultry remedy dealer or send 50 cents for a package by mail prepaid. Burrell-Dugger Co., 462 Columbia Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.—Adv.

TO THE PASTORS AND EPWORTH LEAGUERS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Mississippi Conference Epworth League Conference will hold its 18th annual session at Vicksburg, June 15-18. The theme of the programme will be, "Evangelism." We are very anxious to have as many of our pastors and presiding elders present as can possibly be with us, so make your plans now to attend.

There was mailed from the Central Office at Nashville, literature to all pastors for making the Epworth League Survey, February 8-15. This literature was late getting out, and if you have not already made your survey, please do so as soon as possible and report to your district secretary; in other words, as nearly as possible carry out the plans given you by the Central Office. We are very anxious to have this survey, not only where there are Epworth Leagues, but in all churches where there are no Epworth Leagues, so that we may have the number of young people there are between the ages of 16 and 30. We especially appeal to the pastors to have the survey made where there are no Leagues as well as where there are Leagues.

If you need the services of the District Secretary for organizing new Leagues, the help will be gladly given. The list of the officers, including District Secretaries, is given for your information.

Officers Epworth League Board, Mississippi Conference.

ROLLING FORK, MISS., AND ELSE.

Dear Brother Carley: It seems to be quite fashionable to talk about the weather these days, and there is no cause for marvel at this, for the weather is so changeable that it presents itself as a brand-new subject each day. I suppose it would be difficult to find a place where the weather makes a greater impression on the people than the Delta, for when it rains, we bog through the mud, and when it is dry we suffocate with dust.

For the past fifteen months or more, we have suffered very little from dust, but we have been blessed (?) with a superabundance of mud, yet we are growing. The building of sidewalks, residences, and business houses; the installing of a municipal light plant; the building a better water system; improving our telephone facilities—all give our town the appearance of a busy place.

This building boom is not restricted to Rolling Fork, but Cary, our other preaching place, is building also. And the building that is going on at these two places is not only of material things, but our church work is progressing. Under the efficient superintendence of Mr. J. G. Parham at Rolling Fork, and Dr. H. S. Goodman at Cary, our Sunday schools are steadily improving. Within the last few months, there has been a marked increase in church attendance.

Our presiding elder, Rev. J. R. Jones, was with us, February 8 and 9. He preached two excellent sermons on Sunday, and held our first quarterly conference for the current year, in a very pleasing manner. The stewards assessed $2,000 for the pastor, and spoke of the future of the church only in terms of optimism.

On February 10, in response to a cordial invitation, we attended the quarterly conference at Anguilla, where the indefatigable J. E. J. Ferguson is entering very auspiciously on the fourth year of his pastorate at that place. The pastor, his wife, church officials, and a few elect ladies had planned a banquet in the parsonage for the conference occasion. The weather was very inclement, so but a small company was present, but the occasion was a delightful one. After the feast, the church work generally was discussed, and the quarterly conference was held. The stewards assessed $2,000 for their pastor. That is an advance from $700 in the four years that Brother Ferguson has served the Anguilla charge. The finishing of a neat little frame church, begun by Brother E. L. Alford, at Anguilla, and the building of the Kate Field Memorial Church at Anguilla, which is a perfect little gem, and does credit to the builders, are monuments to him of which he may well be proud.

I am sure that Brother Jones will not object to my saying, at this juncture, that he told me that there is an advance to date on pastors' salaries in the district of approximately $5,000, and he is quite sure there will be a total advance on the entire district of $6,000.

With regards to you, and all in your sanctum, and with wishes for a year of great success to the Advocate, I am, Yours fraternally,

T. J. O'NEILL.

ADVICE FOR YOUNG GIRLS AND MOTHERS

Helena, Ark.:—"I wish I could tell to every girl on the verge of womanhood, especially those who are troubled with irregularity and suppression, my experience. At the age of fifteen I had several months of suppression, then typhoid fever set in and later I developed a hacking cough. The doctor gave me up. But someone kindly advised my mother to give me Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and I can truthfully say that it saved my life. They gave me just two bottles of it, but the first few doses gave visible results and in five weeks from the time they first gave the 'Favorite Prescription' to me I was able to do almost as much work as before I was ill. I felt like a new person.

"I have recommended 'Favorite Prescription' personally to other young girls and have never seen a case where it did not benefit, and eventually cure."—Mrs. Eliza Wallace, 201 Perry St.

Jackson, Miss.:—"I was weak, nervous and run-down in health in my early married life and seemed to have inward trouble. I took several bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and found it to be just the tonic my system required. The 'Prescription' gave me renewed health and strength and I take pleasure in recommending."—Mrs. E. A. Holliday, 946 Central St.

New Orleans, La.:—"For years my only ailment has been sluggish liver which caused me to be habitually constipated and to suffer severely with sick-headaches. The greatest relief I have ever had has been from Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They are not only effective but they are mild and do not cause the slightest distress. I am no longer a sufferer with sick-headaches, thanks to Dr. Pierce."—Mrs. Josephine Cassidey, 5249 Laurel St.

Ousts Rheumatism.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expells the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. Ask your druggist for it, or write Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.—Adv.

A CENTURY OF SERVICE.

In 1820 a good old-fashioned doctor in North Carolina prepared an ointment for skin eruptions. It met the needs of his patients, and has likewise met the needs of millions of other doctors' patients. Gray's Ointment, the compound he prepared, is now rounding its hundredth year of honest, good old-fashioned service and value. It is very effective for sores, boils, cuts, bruises, burns, stings, eczema and the many similar forms of skin eruption. It soothes the pain, cleanses the wound, kills the germs and begins healing. If your druggist can not supply you send his name to W. F. Gray & Co., 800 Gray Bldg., Nashville, Tenn., and a liberal sample will be sent you.—Adv.

Sage Tea Darkens Hair to Any Shade

Don't Stay Gray! Here's a Simple Recipe that Anybody can Apply with a Hair Brush.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is muussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Adv.

To Relieve Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of parmint (double strength), and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy, and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial. Uric Acid in Meat Clogs the Kidneys

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

FROM SUMMIT, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: On December 12, I arrived at Summit and found that my predecessor, Brother W. T. Griffin, had done a good work. The local Summit board had already organized, and the fifth day I was here gave me a month's salary in advance, which they expect to do through the year. Summit is a four-point work, with gravel roads to all the churches except a few miles, and that is being finished. These roads look good to a man used to "gumbo mud" in the Yazoo Delta.

The ladies have spent $150 inside the parsonage, and more to follow. They had a delightful supper prepared on my family's arrival, December 27.

We have Junior and Senior Epworth Leagues, and four Sunday schools. On Christmas morning we had a sunrise prayer service, and God's presence was wonderfully felt. Our mid-week prayer service is increasing in interest, in numbers, and the Sunday school interest and attendance are unusually good.

On Sunday, February 1, the stewards had a get-together meeting at Summit, with five visiting stewards and all the local board present. We had a very pleasant and profitable meeting. Our congregations are good. Our first quarterly conference was held on the night of February 4. The grand total of the financial report was $642.42. The pastor's assessment was increased $600. Eight visiting preachers were present.

After quarterly conference, it being the pastor's birthday, my wife served a luncheon at the parsonage that all present seemed to enjoy. Brother Enoch Carruth presented a nice gold fountain pen to the pastor for the local board, which I prize very highly. Brother J. T. Leggett cut the cake, and Brother Bunyard, the local Baptist pastor, acted as toastmaster.

Last but not least, we are to begin a revival here on February 15. Brother Jas. V. Bennett doing the preaching. We are expecting God to come in great power and save souls. Let the brethren pray for the services.

PLEASANT RECOLLECTIONS.

Dear Brother Carley: I have just been reading "Recollections of Rev. J. D. Newsom," by Rev. Isaac D. Borders, and it brings to my memory scenes of my early childhood, when dear Brother Newsom would come to spend the night with my dear old grandfather, who has long since gone to Heaven. I remember riding on his horse with him to our country church, three miles from our home, and he gave me the first Sunday school papers that I had ever seen. I read them with great interest and learned the little prayer, "Now I lay me down to sleep," and decided to kneel down and repeat it at night. I feel that this led to my early conviction and afterwards conversion. The memory of this dear servant of God will always be sweet to me. I know that grandfather and he sit together in heavenly places talking of Christ Jesus.

Grandfather was an old retired circuit rider and I think Brother Newsom felt towards him as a son taking counsel of a father. Little they knew that they were making deep impressions on the little child that played around them, but their memories are sweet to me as I walk down the pathway of life. I am sure these dear friends have long since clasped hands in glory and are still singing the praises of the Savior they both loved so well.

NOTES FROM MANGHAM, LA.

We have just held our first quarterly conference. Our new "beloved" was present and "made good." Everybody fell in love with Brother Atkinson. Our official board kindly advanced the assessment for ministerial support $430 over that of last year. The Mangham charge now carries an assessment of $2,500 for the pastor and the presiding elder. My people have raised a purse to purchase a new car for their pastor. A new stove for the kitchen, an elegant buffet for the dining room and a cabinet mantel for the parlor are some of the latest things added to the parsonage. Arrangements are being made to repaint our home, which is one of the very best in the Louisiana Conference. We are fortunate to be in the hands of such excellent people! Mrs. Alford has been selected by our Missionary Society to represent them at the State Conference; they will furnish her the money for expenses. Yours truly,

J. MARTIN ALFORD.

"MAKING MEN."

Dear Brother Carley: In your Editorial Comment, "Making Men," you bring to mind much food for thought. Whilst you admit that you do not know where the trouble is, at the same time you have, in a measure, answered the question from the simple fact that you have sifted the probable cause down to three sources.

I believe that all right-thinking men will agree with me when I say (as you suggest) that the lack of "making men" lies in the home, in the school, and very much so in the religious training. I do not think that it would be putting it too strong to say that 90 per cent of our homes do not give the proper training in good citizenship, duty to country, etc., nor do I think it will be a discredit to say that 95 per cent of our common schools, and 98 per cent of our "great" (?) schools are not doing much in the making of men, and I know I am safe in saying that 99 per cent of our people fall completely in giving the most needed of all—Religious Training.

Let us hear from some who are able to show up the wrong, and to impress upon us the application of the remedy.

Obituaries

MRS. EGLANTINE SPELL departed this life on December 10, after a long illness. She was born in Vermillion Parish, May 3, 1849, was converted when a mere child, and joined the church of her parents at Indian Bayou, La. In December, 1864, she was married to Monroe Spell. To them 15 children were born, of whom one daughter and eight sons survive. Sister Spell leaves one brother, Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir, and one sister. She was always submissive to the will of God, and was often heard to shout His praises. She loved the old-time religion, and the old songs were her delight. Her body was laid to rest beside her husband and children, in the old Indian Bayou cemetery, on December 11, the service being conducted by Rev. C. B. Powell, pastor of the Indian Bayou Methodist Church. Brother Ivy Hoffpauir sang the old song of her choice, "O Come, Angel Band." It was sweet melody to those present.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

TAKING TIME TO HURRY.

A good many of us would probably gain much if we would learn the simple lesson that it usually takes time to hurry. We can plunge headlong into an undertaking, feeling that there is no time to lose—a perfectly proper feeling—and yet lose so much time by failure to understand the situation and by poor preparation for the work in hand, that we become guilty of the very thing we sought to avoid. With all our hurrying, let us remember to take plenty of time for it.

PERFECTLY DONE.

According to a recent press report, the Massachusetts State Commission on the Necessaries of Life, after a carefui investigation, has declared that the basic reason for the high price of shoes lies in the price of leather, and that the manufacturer, the leather jobber, the tanner and the packer have been the greatest gainers, the retail dealers having made little if any more profit than in 1913. The Commission may be right—we know nothing about it—but we are sure of one thing: the difficult art of "passing the buck" has been perfectly practiced in this case, the important thing in said art being the lodging of responsibility on "the other fellow." We dare say each class mentioned in the finding of the Commission could, in turn, clear its skirts of any wrong-doing.

ONE THING THE MATTER.

It would be a presumptuous man who would undertake to enumerate the ills that afflict the world to-day. Certainly one of the most evident, however, is the misuse of wealth, to which the attention of the people has been directed in all ages. We have no disposition to hold those serious-minded, conscientious men who have treated their possessions as a trust for the benefit of their fellow-men, responsible for the follies of those who are lacking in sense and propriety both; but popular prejudice against plutocrats is always strengthened by the vulgar displays of rich fools. We do not know whether there is any truth in the report or not, but we read the other day that a wealthy woman, widow of an American millionaire, who was recently married to a member of the royal family of Greece, had as a part of her trousseau 90 pairs of shoes and 45 dozen pairs of stockings, for which she paid $40,000. To the ordinary hard-working, home-loving citizen of any nationality, it is difficult to realize that anybody could be willing to spend so much money for purely personal adornment, especially at a time when practically all of Europe is on the verge of starvation. Five dollars a month will save the life of a starving Armenian orphan—and a woman spends $40,000 for shoes and stockings! That is one of the things that are the matter with the world to-day.

PROHIBITION THREATENED.

We have maintained all along that those who are opposed to prohibition would leave no stone unturned to bring the Eighteenth Amendment into disrepute and to nullify every effort to enforce the provisions of the Federal law. The fact that the Amendment was adopted in the regularly prescribed way, by an overwhelming majority, does not seem to have any weight with those who prefer to have their own views become the law of the land. As they were persistent and flagrant violators of the law before prohibition became effective, so now they are deliberately undertaking to set aside the action of Congress and of the more than three-fourths of the legislatures of the States. We presume that the anti-prohibitionists have unlimited funds to support them in their fight—it has been generally understood that they have millions of dollars at their command. It is unfortunately true that money can accomplish wonders against apparently insurmountable obstacles. A system of propaganda can be carried on by means of it that will reach to the most remote sections of the nation; and adroit lawyers and publicity agents can be employed who are able to prepare statements that would "deceive the very elect." We merely wish to warn our readers to be on their guard against the propaganda that is now being carried on under all possible guises, the sole purpose of which is to destroy the effectiveness of national prohibition. Unless we are constantly on guard, there is real danger that an artificial reversion of feeling will be brought about that will nullify the legislation we have fought so hard and so long to have enacted.

RAILROADS IN PRIVATE HANDS AGAIN.

On March 1, the railroads passed again into private ownership. It will be readily understood that the period of Government ownership was so abnormal in many ways that a satisfactory test of such ownership was impossible. It was a military necessity for the railroads to be taken over by the Government, and the management had to be in keeping with such necessity. It is true that there was considerable dissatisfaction with that management, and many criticisms—some of them justifiable, perhaps—were directed against the Railroad Administration. There has been a strong feeling in some quarters that those who were opposed to Government control did not hesitate to do what they could to bring such control into disrepute. Be that as it may, the fact remains that the question of the better way is still unsettled. But the private owners have a magnificent opportunity to justify the claim they have made all along that they could render better service to the public than could the Government. They have had ample opportunity to study the situation from a kind of detached point of view, and they should have gained much knowledge. We await the outcome of the new-old order with much interest—and with the hope that there will be great improvement in railway service.

A HEIGHT AND A FALL.

Major Rudolph W. Schroeder, test pilot at McCook Field, established a world's airplane altitude record last week, reaching a height of 36,020 feet. But at that height the oxygen-supplying apparatus failed to work, the aviator became unconscious, and his machine fell more than five miles. In an almost miraculous way, he regained consciousness long enough to effect a safe landing, and then lapsed into unconsciousness. A simple lesson from this dramatic happening applies to the spiritual realm: we may make high attainments in the spiritual life, but if we lose touch with the source of spiritual strength, a fall is inevitable. Happily for us, we are not dependent upon any mechanical device for our supply of divine grace. We may have it always if we will.

OPPORTUNITY.

A familiar phrase is, "taking advantage of opportunity." The suggestion is that opportunities come sauntering along every day with the hope, perhaps, that some quick-thinking, nimble-fingered gentleman will reach out and seize them before they pass beyond reach. There may be something in this suggestion—opportunities do sometimes deliberately and, as it were, insolently flaunt themselves in the face of those with whom they fain would keep company. But, as a rule, the man who wants an opportunity goes out and looks for it. There is a plenty of them—we firmly believe that—but they have a kind of way of skulking along in out-of-the-way places and dodging behind corners. Sometimes the best way to get hold of one is to gather together the raw material and make it. Since we have come to think about it, we believe that is the best way, after all.

A PITY.

It is not necessary for us to reaffirm our interest in the work of the Near East Relief. We have given it such encouragement from time to time as we were able to give, and we shall continue to do so. But we cannot refrain from saying that it is a pity that so worthy a cause should be willing to lend its name to the iniquitous institution of horse racing in order that it might add to its receipts for its sacred work. We can understand how the need of money for the starving orphans of Armenia might make it appear that any method not condemned by law is justifiable to secure the urgently needed funds, and we have no harsh word to say of those who sponsored a "Near East Handicap" or something of that kind, at a local race track recently; but we regret that this organization should have given any semblance of approval to a "sport" that is confessedly dependent upon gambling for its maintenance. We believe in the Near East Relief, and we shall continue to support it; but we do not want to see it mixed up with horse racing.

GREATNESS.

By C. B. Scudder.

The flowers made fragrant by the frost,
The roots that deepen in the drought,
The souls that trust when all is lost,
And build again faith's firm redoubt,
These in enduring greatness grow,
They drink life's fountain to the full,
Jehovah's secret place they know,
And laugh at the impossible.

THE SPIRITUAL STATUS OF CHILDREN.

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

PART I.

Calvinism, in its iron-bound creed, taught that, from the foundation of the world, a certain number of men and angels were elected, by the unchangeable decree of God, to be saved; and a certain number were reprobated to eternal damnation, and no individual of either of these specific numbers could, by any effort of his own, change or alter God's unchangeable decree. Since all men were once infants, children, very naturally, must be included in both classes; so the Primitive Baptist Church, being thoroughly Calvinistic and conscious of her consistency with her own creed (which cannot be said of other Calvinistic churches), did not hesitate to proclaim from her pulpits the logical sequence of such a "horrible decree:" "There are infants in hell a span long." But such teaching became repulsive to the intelligence and moral consciousness of all thoughtful people; so, when Arminianism arose, enunciating the doctrine of a universal atonement and the consequent possible salvation of all men, it found ready acceptance among thinking people, and modified and softened the hardness of the doctrinal systems of all the denominations which had adopted the creed of Calvinism. Presbyterianism, urged irresistibly by the sentiment of her own membership as well as that of the world, within recent years so altered her creed by an interpretative footnote as to admit to heaven infants dying in infancy, but with the distinct understanding and definite arrangement that none but elect infants shall die in infancy which, indeed, is a convenient arrangement to escape the logical inference of their Calvinistic creed. The Missionary Baptist Church, in preaching that all children are born into the world in a lost condition, presents a similar aspect of Calvinistic teaching. In fact, Calvinism so long dominated the theological systems of the church that even Arminianism with its modifications of the creeds of the world was not able to swing itself entirely away from Calvinistic teaching. Hence, the doctrinal exponents of Methodism, which alone of all the churches represents Arminianism in the world to-day, disclose a tinge of Calvinism in their writings when speaking of the spiritual status of children. It might be more accurate to say that the exponential expressions of these writers and authors evince a decided tendency toward the amended doctrinal standards of Calvinism concerning the relation of children to the kingdom. As an evidence of the truth of this statement, I quote the words of one or two writers of Methodist theology. Doctor Watson says: "The benefits of Christ's death are coextensive with the sin of Adam, hence all children dying in infancy partake of the free gift. Infants are not indeed born justified; nor are they capable of that voluntary acceptance of the free gift which is necessary in the case of adults; but, on the other hand, they cannot reject it. The process by which grace is communicated to infants is not revealed; the manner doubtless differs from that employed toward adults." Doctor Raymond asserts: "Children are born into the world sustaining, through the atonement, such relation to the moral kingdom of God as that they are proper subjects of God's regenerating grace, and those dying in infancy come into actual possession of all those blessings."

Thus, it is easily discernible that the creeds of all the churches, except the Articles of Faith of Methodism, are thoroughly Calvinistic in their expressions concerning the spiritual status of children, and even Methodist theologians, as indicated in the above quotations, have not escaped the contagion of Calvinism which has warped the doctrinal thoughts of the Christian world through the centuries.

The attention of the reader is directed to the statements in the above quotations. Dr. Watson says, "The benefits of Christ's death are coextensive with Adam's sin, hence all infants dying in infancy are partakers of the free gift." The question here arises, Do infants which do not die in infancy partake of the free gift, and if not, is there virtue in dying that only infants dying in infancy partake of the free gift? Note again: "The process by which grace is communicated to (dying) infants has not been revealed; the manner doubtless differs from that employed toward adults." While, as he says, the process of communicating grace has not been reavealed, yet, at the same time, he assumes that the process of communication is through the process of dying. I have to say, however, that the manner of communicating grace to dying infants is identical with the process of communicating grace to infants that do not die, viz., through the atonement of Jesus Christ. If the word "dying" be eliminated from the statement of Dr. Watson, I am willing to accept what he says about the difference in the manner of communicating grace to infants and adults because the communication to adults is through the medium of faith, while the process of communication to infants, living as well as dying, is upon the basis of the atonement, since they are incapable of exercising faith. Dr. Raymond also predicates the communication of grace upon death, for he says, "Infants are proper subjects of God's regenerating grace, and those dying in infancy come into the actual possession of all those blessings."

However, some modern Methodist writers have come to recognize the impossibility of maintaining the position of these earlier theologians, and are beginning to discern the inconsistency of their teachings with a universal atonement which, of course, is coextensive with the sin of Adam. For instance, Dr. John W. Boswell, Assistant Editor of our Sunday School Literature, in a sermon published in the columns of the Christian Advocate (Nashville), expressed his thought on the relation of children to the kingdom in the following words: "That relation is a saving relation. If this be not true, the opposite is, viz., children are born under condemnation and, dying in infancy, are lost. There are two alternatives: One is that infants have no moral nature and can neither be saved nor lost. Annihilation must follow. The other is that infants are saved by some special provision of the atonement. This is mere presumption. There is no intimation of such a thing in the Word of God." I might add that neither infants nor adults can be saved on presumption, but all must be saved on the plan of salvation which has been revealed in the Bible, and to go beyond that is presumption indeed. I am not sure that I understand precisely what Dr. Boswell means by the term "saving" relation. If he had said saved relation, his meaning would have been clear. Assuming, however, that the latter term conveys his thought, it is evident that he does not entertain the conception of the relation of children to the kingdom as was held by the older Methodist theologians. If I am correct in this interpretation of the significance of Dr. Boswell's language, he is an example of the modern trend of thought in Methodist theology concerning the spiritual status of children in their relation to the kingdom.

So, then, I may tabulate the diverse credal attitudes of the churches and their theologians on this vital subject as follows:

1. Primitive Baptist: "There are infants in hell a span long because some infants dying in infancy are non-elect." To know this to be true involves the presumption of remarkable powers of prevision; but, to say the least of it, it is entirely consistent with the main proposition of predestinarianism, the fundamental principle of Calvinism which has crystallized itself in the creeds of all the churches, except Methodism, but which they no longer dare to preach to intelligent congregations.

2. Presbyterianism: "All infants dying in infancy are elect." This connotes, of course, the proposition that no non-elect infants die in infancy. Unless some special revelation has been given them, I am unable to comprehend how our Presbyterian friends know the truth of either of these propositions, both of which indicate the possession of more than ordinary wisdom.

3. The Missionary Baptist Church: "All infants are born into the world with their souls already lost, and those dying in infancy are classed with idiots and insane and are saved upon the same basis—their incapability to reject the truth." This might very properly be termed negative salvation.

4. The Old Methodist Theologians: "All infants dying in infancy are saved by some mysterious operation of divine grace whereby they are prepared for heaven." The chief trouble with this theory is that it is only a surmise conceived as a solution of an imaginary theological difficulty which does not exist, having for its support no scriptural basis whatever. Dr. Boswell, to whom reference has already been made, truly says: "There is no indication of such a thing in the Word of God. It is only presumption." Salvation by presumption is absurd in the extreme, and I think I am safe in challenging the world to produce a single passage of scripture to sustain the advocacy of the old theologians in their presumptive theory of "dying grace."

5. Present-day Methodist Theology: All children born into the world are, by virtue of the atonement of Jesus Christ, born in the kingdom, and those dying in infancy go to heaven. No mysterious operation of divine grace is necessary to prepare them for heaven because, being already members of the kingdom on earth, they have a right to the heavenly kingdom. The thing that places them in the spiritual kingdom at birth, admits them to heaven at death, viz., the atonement of Jesus Christ.

The "horrible decree," as taught by the Primitive Baptists, that non-elect infants, in case of death, are lost, is based upon the doctrine of unconditional election; the teaching of Presbyterianism that no elect infants die in infancy is based upon a theory invented to escape the logical consequences of the "horrible decree" of Calvinism; the doctrine of the Missionary Baptists that all infants are born into the world lost, and dying in infancy are to be placed in the same category with idiots and insane, is false; the "dying grace" theory of the old Methodist theologians is without scriptural support—and all of them are based upon a limited atonement. The only doctrine consistent with a universal atonement, as taught by the Methodist Church, is the doctrine that all infants are born into the world inside the kingdom and, in case of death, go to heaven by virtue of that fact.

THE PROPOSED PLAN FOR THE UNIFICATION OF AMERICAN METHODISM.

By Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon.

The Commission on the Unification of American Methodism has completed its work. With the statement that the proposed Constitution of the Methodist Church is the best possible under our instructions and under the circumstances which confronted us, we have laid this Constitution before the Church. It now goes to the General Conference for approval or rejection.

There can be no doubt that we face a solemn hour in the history of Methodism. For if the two Methodisms do not come together on this basis, they are not likely to come together in the lifetime of the men who have labored for six years on this Commission. For one, the writer of this paper believes that we have departed in no essential particular from our instructions, but have kept faith with the great church which we represent.

It is certain that there will be objections in certain quarters to certain essential provisions of the report of the Commission. It is not claimed that this is a perfect document. But it is claimed that it is the best possible under our instructions. And it is hoped that when the membership of the two churches come fully to understand it, they also will see that we have done our best. It should be remembered in this connection that when, after laboring for four months, the Constitutional Convention of 1787 laid the proposed Constitution for the United States before the American people, it did not fully satisfy anybody. Fifty-five delegates were at one time or another in attendance; but only thirty-nine signed the finished instrument. Some ardent patriots did everything in their power to prevent its adoption by the States. Patrick Henry went so far as to declare that the conduct of the delegates to the Philadelphia Convention should be investigated. He even wanted George Washington, "who saved us by his valor," to give a "reason for his conduct." But wise men were ready to acquiesce. Hamilton, who openly expressed his disapproval of the Constitution, gave his support, declaring that it was impossible "to deliberate between anarchy and convulsion on one side, and the chance of good" on the other. Benjamin Franklin urged unanimity of action, even if the Constitution did not suit everybody. "The older I grow," he said, "the more apt I am to doubt my own judgment." And so in many things he stood ready to defer to the judgment of the majority. I do not doubt for one moment that we have here, in the proposed Constitution for a re-united Methodism, an instrument which if put into operation will prove as epoch-making in the affairs of the church as the adoption of the Federal Constitution has proved in the affairs of the nation. Immediately above, Hamilton was quoted as saying that it is impossible "to deliberate between anarchy and convulsion on one side and the chance of good" on the other. It would be absurd, of course, to say that these are the alternatives before American Methodism to-day; but candidly I do not see how it is possible for broad-visioned and forward-looking men to deliberate very long between a dis-united and divided Methodism on the one hand and the chance of a unified and harmonious Methodism on the other. For myself I stand for the Unification of American Methodism on the basis of the proposed Constitution. And I thank God that I do!

Especial attention is called in this article to the ample provisions which are made for the protection of minorities. The Southern Church is in this, the interested party. We go into the union with a membership of something more than two million; the Methodist Episcopal Church has a membership of something less than four million. Our people had a right to expect that their commissioners would very carefully guard the interests of the minority in this Constitution. And it should be said that the commissioners of the Methodist Episcopal Church were just as careful in this matter as we were. They agreed to every suggestion made by us in the interest of protecting minorities. And what is more, they themselves suggested ways in which the interests of the minority might be protected. There has been a fear in some minds that if we went into this union we would be utterly swallowed up and that in a few years a strong Northern majority might be in position to disregard concessions which they have made and undo provisions which have been agreed upon for the protection of the minority. Indeed one was heard to say: "Personally I should be entirely satisfied with the proposed plan, if only I knew it would not be changed in a few years." Well, I feel sure that most readers of this article will be convinced that every protection possible has been given, and that it may very justly be charged that the re-organized church, operating under this Constitution, will be exceedingly conservative in the matter of making Constitutional changes.

Study carefully the following points:

1. There are six White Regional Conferences—three predominantly or wholly northern, and three predominantly or wholly southern. The three Southern Regional Conferences are as follows:

(1) Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, W. Virginia, Kentucky, North Carolina and that part of the Holston Conference of the two Churches lying in Tennessee.

(2) Tennessee with the exception of a part of the Holston Conference as indicated above, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi.

(3) Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico and Arizona.

These Regional Conferences have been arranged as indicated for several reasons—for convenience of railroad travel, because of homogeneity of interests, and also in order to give a proper "balance of power"—forgive the word—in the General Conference. Each of these Regional Conferences is to have not less than one hundred delegates in the General Conference, and no Regional Conference can have more than one-fifth of the total membership of the General Conference.

2. The full power of the Regional Conference over distinctively Regional affairs gives large protection to the minority.

This, by way of illustration, enables a Regional Conference to own and control such educational institutions as Emory University in Atlanta, Georgia, and Southern Methodist University in Dallas, Texas. The unfortunate history of Vanderbilt University and its loss to the church were in the minds of our commissioners when this provision was written into the Constitution. It is also provided that "each Regional Conference shall have power to elect from time to time the number of bishops allotted to it and said bishops shall be confirmed by the General Conference and ordained by the bishops, unless two-thirds of the members of the General Conference, present and voting, shall object to said confirmation." This guarantees to every section of the church proper representation in the College of Bishops and the kind of episcopal oversight that such Regional Conference finds to be best. That is to say, each Regional Conference is to elect its own bishops from among its own men and these bishops are to reside in that part of the church by which they were elected—except in special cases satisfactory to all concerned.

The General Conference is given power to retire bishops for inefficiency or unacceptability. And it ought to have that power. An inefficient or unacceptible bishop ought to be retired just as an inefficient presiding elder or an inefficient pastor or an inefficient missionary secretary ought to be retired. But note carefully this proviso: "Provided, that it shall require a two-thirds vote to retire a bishop without the concurrence of the Regional Conference in which his official residence is fixed." If before the year 1844 there had been some such provision as this in the Constitution of American Methodism, the North would not have felt itself called upon to take such extreme measures as were taken in the case of Bishop Andrew, and it is at least possible that American Methodism might not have been bisected at that time.

3. The provision made for voting by Regional delegations in the General Conference very carefully guards the interests of the minority. Study carefully this paragraph taken from the report of the Commission:

"Whenever a majority of each of two Regional delegations in the United States shall so request, a vote shall be taken on any pending motion or resolution, including amendments to the Constitution, by Regional delegations, and it shall require the concurrence of two-thirds of the Regional delegation voting as one body, to adopt said motion or resolution, provided, however, that no motion or resolution shall be adopted that does not receive a majority vote of the members of the General Conference present and voting."

That is to say that if any Regional delegation in the General Conference feel that the rights and privileges of the Jurisdiction which they represent, are in danger, they may join with one other Regional delegation in requiring that the vote on any pending motion or resolution, including amendments to the Constitution, shall be taken by Regional delegations, each Regional delegation voting as one body, and it shall require the concurrence of two-thirds of the Regional delegations in the United States to adopt said motion or resolution. Is it not increasingly evident as we proceed with our study of the proposed plan for the Unification of American Methodism, that the interests of minorities have been very carefully protected?

4. And in this connection let attention be called to the fact, mentioned incidentally above, that the number of delegates from each Regional Conference in the General Conference is limited at both extremes. There can never be less than a certain number and there can never be more than a certain number. There shall never be less than one hundred delegates from each White Regional Conference; and "the number of delegates from any one of the said Jurisdictions shall not exceed twenty per cent of the total membership of the General Conference." It will be remembered that there are six White Regional Conferences. It is provided, therefore, that no one Regional Conference shall ever have a preponderating influence in the General Conference. It can never have more than one-fifth of the total membership of the General Conference. The wisdom of this is immediately evident.

5. The careful manner in which hasty legislation is guarded against is specially seen in the provision for amending the Constitution. The concurrence of the Annual Conferences and the General Conference is, of course, required—a two-thirds vote of the General Conference being necessary, and three-fourths of all the members of the several Annual Conferences present and voting. Besides, if any two Regional delegations in the General Conference request it, then the voting shall be by Regional delegations as indicated above. It is quite evident that if the two Methodisms adopt the proposed Constitution, each church will enter into the union with the feeling that its rights and interests are very carefully guarded. For it will be very difficult for the East to carry through a measure which is disapproved by the West, and it will not be easy for the North to carry through a measure which the South believes to be hurtful to its interests. And all this will make, not for a divided church, but for a united church moving forward as a mighty army of the Lord against the forces of iniquity.

6. One who has studied this Constitution has observed that power is given to the General Conference to "change the boundaries of the Regional Jurisdictions." The fear may arise in the minds of some that this gives to the General Conference the power to do away with the arrangement whereby the church is to have, at the beginning, six White Regional Conferences—three Northern and three Southern. There are no grounds, whatsoever, for any such fear, for observe (1) "that the boundaries of a Regional Jurisdiction shall not be changed without its consent for a period of three quadrenniums succeeding the adoption of this Constitution." That is to say that for twelve years following the adoption of this Constitution the boundaries of the Regional Jurisdictions are absolutely fixed, unless the Regional Conference itself shall consent to the change. This is a wise provision. It gives an opportunity to try out carefully the arrangements herein made, and prevents an early effort to change the boundaries of a Regional Jurisdiction before, in the actual workings of the church, it has been demonstrated whether or not the best possible arrangements have been made. And observe (2) the following provision: the General Conference "shall not take away territory from any Regional Jurisdiction without its consent, save by the concurrent vote of two successive General Conferences." In view of these provisions may I not ask: Where are the grounds for fear that we of the South are shortly to be swallowed up and forgotten? I will confess that one objection that I have to this Constitution is that it has made changes too difficult. I apprehend that in certain sections of our own church it is going to be seriously objected to on this very ground. And it was only because our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church trusted us and believed us fully, when we assured them that, no more than they, do we desire to perpetuate sectionalism in the United States, and, no more than they, do we desire to create a group of little churches in a Great Church, that they consented gladly to write into the Constitution these various provisions which give such large and satisfactory protection to minorities.

7. The last item I will mention is a provision which the Southern members of the Commission did not ask for and could not ask for. It came out of the magnanimity of the brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It is this: The first General Conference of the re-organized church is to be composed of eight hundred delegates—four hundred from the Northern Church and four hundred from the Southern Church. Thus, just as in the preparation of the proposed Constitution for a re-united Methodism, we have sat together, an equal number from each church; so in the first great General Conference of the Methodist Church we are to sit together, one minister from the Southern Church for each minister from the Northern Church, and one layman from the Southern Church for each layman from the Northern Church. Is not this fair? Is it not more than fair? Is it not evident that our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church are entirely willing to trust us? Is it not time that we should give evidence that we are entirely willing to trust them?

"HOW MUCH YOU SORRY?"

By Brother T. B. Holloman.

The above question I recall among the stories of my childhood. An Indian had lost his wigwam by fire; shortly afterwards he met a white man, friend, who referred to the misfortune, saying, "I'm mighty sorry for you, Jack," whereupon the red man said, "You sorry how much—five dollar?" Jesus tells of a certain man who went down from Jerusalem to Jericho and fell among thieves, who stripped him of his raiment, wounded him, and left him half dead; by chance a priest came that way and looked upon him, saying—doubtless—"Poor fellow!" and passed on the other side; then came a Levite, who also looked upon him and said, "Poor fellow!" and passed on the other side; next came one of those strangers, "a Samaritan, who, seeing him, went up to him, bound up his wounds, pouring in wine and oil, set him on his own beast, took care of him,"—had compassion which reached down to the very last penny in hand, with orders for future care if need be. Sorry $5! When I was a lad my father sent me on a mission some sixty miles from home, and where I was a total stranger. At the end of the second day I found that I had lost my way and, Joseph-like, was wandering in the fields; and, boy-like I began thinking of the possibilities of a night in the woods, and thereupon began to seek a shelter, only to be refused not only once or twice; as the darkness thickened, I called at an humble cottage by the way and asked for lodging, to be greeted with a cheerful "come in—we'll do our best"—a young couple with first babe cooing upon its mothers breast; a living room, two shed rooms, one a kitchen, the other for friends; no Brussels carpet, with corresponding entertainment; but no hospitality with liveried servants has ever been extended to this writer above the welcome to that simple meal and little room by the wall. Sorry five dollars? Yes; but not a penny would they accept.

"I was a stranger and you took me in."—"Given to hospitality"—and "In as much as ye did it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, you have done it unto me."

Mansfield has been more noble than them all in her hospitality to her "worn-out" guest; no formal "Depart in peace; be you warmed and filled," but, "Let us build you a house—a home—that we may have you in our midst." And, by the way, if our great church doesn't get ashamed of herself and take better care of such fellows as Sam Steel and Bunk Adams it won't be the fault of Luther Todd in his campaign for the Superannuate Endowment Fund.

How many of the Advocate subscribers will read the appeal on the 3th page, issue of February 12th, to feel convinced that we have been content to say, "Poor Carley!" and then pass by on the other side? Few of us can plead not guilty—most of us are Jubalums.

Henry, have you ever had experience with the flu? It's the sneakenest greediest pest that ever came my way; it has no more respect for good, honest, clean, country folks than for those who fill up the slums and low places of our cities. One case appeared in our neighborhood high school last week and now its thicker than hops all round. In the rooms opposite us is a family of father, mother and six children; one of the boys came home with a "bad cold." but now its "flu," and all are having their turn. Then the little German parasite, or Irish Mike-robe found his way into our apartments with the result that this preacher is learning many lessons and taking many stunts in the arts of the trained nurse, domestic science department and good housekeeping. If it keeps up many days, he'll be ready to serve as chef in some Waldorf or other great hostelry—it's his to observe the sick and do many things. And these drawn-out stories are the result of a visit this morning from some neighboring young men who had heard of our extremity and came saying, "What can we do? for we have heard of your need." Others had sent saying, "We are sorry; if you need us send word" (as though a fellow could nurse nine people, ranging from a babe six months old to a grandmother, and have time to send anywhere, and more especially when there was no one to send). But these boys (God bless them) came, took off their coats, grabbed two axes and made the chips fly, so that Jack Frost may do his worst for a season without disturbing our comfort. The worst is past with some, others are resting comfortably, so we said, "Thank you boys; the clouds are rifting and you needn't expose yourselves." Now Mansfield can't treat Sam Steel, with all his high steeple experiences, better than these boys have done for this forgotten man, lost in the woods of Yazoo—none of your "Poor fellow, I'm sorry for you," but "Just let us help to the last pennyweight of our ability." As for myself I am still saying, "It's better to be born lucky than rich." Good luck to the Advocate force; if the "flu" slips in, just send for the doctor.

Phoenix, Miss., Feb. 14.

AN EXPLANATION.

Dear Brother Carley: I note in your issue of Feb. 26, the following introduction to the article of Rev. V. C. Curtis:

"Ma Editor: As no article from either one of the Mississippi Conferences has been permitted to appear in the Nashville Advocate in response to the criticisms of the action of these two bodies with reference to the 'Standard Plan,' published in that organ, editorial and otherwise, and claiming a right to be heard, I offer you this article for publication in the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The manuscript was sent to the Nashville Advocate but the editor returned it, giving as his reason that the Minute Men have nothing to do with the previous discussion. The reader can judge for himself whether or not the point is well taken. "V. C. CURTIS."

Permit me to say that Brother Curtis does not give the full statement of the facts in the case. I have received only two articles from Mississippi Conferences on the question involved. One was from Dr. R. A. Meek. I returned his article with the following note:

"January 12, 1920.

"Dr. R. A. Meek,
Sardis, Miss.

"Dear Brother: We return your article for the reason that we do not desire to consider for publiction anything of a controversial nature on the action of the Mississippi Conferences until the meeting at Jackson, Miss., shall have materialized or failed to materialize on the 22d of this month. After that date if the Mississippi Conferences feel that they should have a hearing in the Advocate we shall gladly consider any expression from them, either collectively or individually.

"With best wishes, I am

"Yours fraternally,

"T. N. IVEY."

The only article which we have received since then is the article by Brother Curtis. I returned it with the statement that it injected a new question (the Minute Men) into the discussion and with the request that he eliminate this part of it and return the article. I have not heard anything from him since. The columns of the Advocate are open as they have been to the Mississippi Conferences in this matter, but we must insist as per our notice in the Christian Advocate that discussion on either side must be limited to the original points involved. Fraternally,

T. N. IVEY.

IN MEMORY OF REV. T. J. EMBREE.

Rev. T. J. Embree was born at Livington, Tenn., December 15, 1861, and died at Slidell, La., December 7, 1919. He was educated in the common branches and finished the academic course at Athens, Tenn., in 1880, and began his life work as a school teacher. He believed in strict obedience to school rules and good order in the school room, as it takes both to make a success at that occupation; and yet we never found him harsh or unkind to his pupils, for he had a kind and friendly disposition and a natural talent for winning the esteem of young people and children; by gaining their love and confidence he was able to lead rather then drive. He was well-read, had a fine memory and great patience with any who naturally wanted to advance.

Brother Embree was twice married. He married Miss Brenna Tally on January 4, 1888. To this union were born two sons, Frank W. Embree, of Palestine, Tex., and Tom, Jr., of Henderson, Tex. On December 21, 1902, he married Miss Nonnie McMain, of Elmer, La., and two living children survive this union, Pauline, aged 7 years, and Finley, aged 4 years.

Brother Embree was reared a Presbyterian, but in early life he embraced the Methodist faith and became an active member in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Later, he became cold and indifferent, and backslidden in heart and life, and for many years was neglectful of his duty to his God; but through it all he held firmly to the Methodist faith and felt God's hand so true to a lost soul that he never spoke lightly of God's goodness to lost men, or doubted God's power when we meet the conditions. Even when a lost sinner he said he enjoyed a laugh and joke with men, but could not take a part in light conversation concerning the King of kings.

In 1910 God wonderfully got hold of Brother Embree and he fully surrendered his life and talents to him who doeth all things well, and answered the call to tell a lost world about Jesus and his power to save. From that call he never wavered, but proved to a lost and gainsaying world that Jesus is mighty to save, and strong to deliver all who are bound by sin and want to be redeemed by the precious blood of Christ.

Brother Embree entered the ministry in a business-like way. He said he had lost so much of his early life he would love to live to redeem the time and bring as many to God as he could, and to rear his children and be a blessing to his family; but if God ordered his lot otherwise, it was all right, for his time and talents were in God's hands and he would follow wherever the Master led.

His trimphant death on Sunday morning, December 7, 1919, proved that his life had not been lived in vain, and that he had not trusted in a God who does not reward faithful servants. Just a few weeks before he left this world, and while his mental vision was clear, he called his faithful wife to him and told her that he was perfectly resigned to God's will and that all was well with him and that everything was straight in his past life. Glory to God, his promise is true; God's Word says, "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow, though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." No pastor was ever held in greater esteem or more greatly loved than was Brother Embree; and that love was proved to him in his last illness among the people of Slidell. Praise the Lord for a people who show their faith by their works. We feel sure God will reward these faithful servants.

When Brother Embree was accepted into the Methodist Conference he took the correspondence course through the Vanderbilt University and finished it in four years. He was sent to the Ringgold charge and served it two years, then to Plain Dealing where he served four years; the last four years of his life he spent on the Slidell charge. During these last four years he served both his God and his country, as he was one of the Committee on war work; and no man gave more freely to his time and substance than did Brother Embree.

M. ROSSITTER.

THE INTERCHURCH WORLD MOVEMENT.

By Rev. G. S. Harmon.

Much has been written and said about the Interchurch World Movement. Some of it has been wise; some otherwise; some through crass ignorance; and a good bit from bitter prejudice.

The Movement was born in the heart of a distinguished Presbyterian preacher who conceived the idea that just as the Allies co-operating together won a notable victory, which none of them could have done separately nor all of them operating independently, yet without losing their national characteristics or autonomy, so might the churches, co-operating together in many of the things which all are seeking to do separately, secure a tremendous advantage against the forces of evil without forfeiting their denominational integrity.

Responding to a call issued by the Foreign Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church, South, more than a hundred of the outstanding preachers and laymen of the leading denominations held a meeting in New York in December, 1918, and agreed that the highest efficiency could be secured by such a co-operative movement. A call was sent forth from that meeting which resulted in the gathering at Cleveland, Ohio, in the spring of 1919, of over five hundred preachers, members of boards, and laymen representing twenty-eight denominations. After much discussion and thought, the Movement was launched in faith and prayer, and it has grown by leaps and bounds. With few exceptions the great evangelical churches have accepted the Interchurch Movement, and the personnel of its official corps both at headquarters and throughout the States, consists of many of the most prominent and successful preachers and laymen drawn from practically all the evangelical churches of the nation, who believe it to be one of the mightiest movements inspired by the Spirit of the Living God within the history of the church.

Concisely stated, the Interchurch World Movement has for its object nothing more nor less than to provide a means by which the various evangelical churches of North America may come together for co-operation in dealing with the world problems which confront the church to-day, so that waste efforts may be eliminated and that the full force of their energies may be concentrated on the service they are called upon to render humanity. It is an instrumentality of education, of co-operation and co-ordination of administrative agencies which is designed to serve, not supplant.

The Interchurch World Movement is not seeking to promote a union of the churches. It is not attempting to bring about a combination of ecclesiastical bodies. It does not propose a merging of any organization with another. It does not ask any denominational organization to give up any of its distinctive features or relinquish any of its doctrines. It does not invite or want any church to surrender a single one of its rights. It is not an authoritative body, but rather an advisory one. It has no ulterior motives, but is perfectly frank and fair in all the statements of its plans and purposes.

For practical purposes the Interchurch Movement is a co-operative clearing-house through which all the churches working together may do a world's job which none can do single-handed, nor all working independently. At least it hasn't been done. With one hundred and fifty-eight organizations at work in the United States the statisticians report less than fifty million of the more than one hundred million population as members of churches, and about fifty per cent of those who do belong as merely nominal members, and something like seventy-five million non-attendants. And in the foreign fields barely the fringes of the mighty billion of Christless heathen have been touched. Those churches and individuals who boast of their exclusiveness and ability to work alone would better look the world facts and the world needs in the face.

The Interchurch World Movement has set itself the task of discovering and grouping the facts concerning the world's needs; of building a program of inspiration and education based on these facts. The facts are being ascertained by means of a world-wide survey and the needs of the world as revealed by this survey are, through the churches, being budgeted in terms of men and money sufficient to meet them. A great spiritual campaign will seek the enlistment of the entire life of consecrated men and women.

In the financial campaign the Movement does not seek to displace or interfere with the autonomy and responsibility of administration of the co-operating churches. The funds raised among the co-operating constituencies are to be sent directly to the regular treasurers of those bodies, and funds not received through regular denominational treasurers will be distributed on a pro rata basis. Large financial campaigns heretofore have cost from seven to twelve per cent of the total. It is expected that the cost of this campaign will be about four per cent, effecting a considerable saving to the co-operating churches. Several churches that have already had financial campaigns for funds for the next five years are entering on other phases of the Movement.

The immediate expenses of the Movement are being met through credits established by the boards of the co-operating denominations. These boards do not advance money, but they do provide credit on which the Movement can borrow. More than twenty churches operating separately would spend a vast amount of money which would not be noticed, but when their interests are brought together under one clearing-house agency it naturally attracts attention.

Criticism has been brought to bear upon the Movement for leasing the Greenhut Building in New York for three and one half million dollars for a period of ten years. This was a master stroke of business ability, not only securing adequate quarters for every department of the Interchurch Movement under one roof, but giving an opportunity through sub-rental of portions of the building to reduce the rent of the Movement to a minimum, compared to the rent and expenses of many church organizations in the same city. Several great business concerns have already offered the Interchurch people a handsome bonus for the lease, and the building could be disposed of any day for largely more than the lease price.

It has also been suggested that because New York, where the Interchurch Movement has its headquarters, has less than half a million church members among its population of six million the Movement should first give itself to converting that place; which is equivalent to saying that the headquarters of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, located at Nashville, should close its great Publishing House, Board of Missions, Board of Education, Epworth League Board and all other of its activities until Nashville is converted, and "they say" that Nashville is "some wicked city."

If the Interchurch Movement possessed elements of danger and tendencies that are hurtful, it is inconceivable to think that some of the bishops, editors, members of the Board of Missions and of the Board of Education, presiding elders, pastors and laymen of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, would have entered heartily into its organization and are enlisted in its promotion. And this is equally true of the Presbyterians, Northern Baptists, Episcopalians, Congregationalists and many others of the denominations whose prominent leaders and people have endorsed and are promoting the Movement.

With its Rural and City and Foreign Surveys; its great evangelistic efforts; its Life Work and Spiritual Resources Departments; its Financial Campaign, and other features, all wrought out through the co-operating denominations, the Interchurch World Movement is destined to accomplish vast results in the Master's Kingdom.

IF YOU

Have made the survey of your church families, your Sunday school constituency, your Epworth League, and your community, according to the Standard Plan.

THEN YOU

Have the information you have long wanted and needed. The facts are in hand; and you have found facts to be very convincing things. You have the names and addresses of the unchurched in your community.

WILL YOU

Now meet those people face to face, take them by the hand, look them in the eye, and in Christ's name beseech them to be reconciled to God? Your own spirit will quicken and glow

WHEN YOU

See how readily these hungry hearts respond to your diligent and loving interest in their salvation—some of them have wondered why you have not spoken to them before. They may have said: "No man cares for my soul." Now they know one does—

IT'S YOU.

HOW THE INDIVIDUAL CAN AID IN PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT.

By Daniel C. Roper,
Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

"How can I, an individual, aid in the enforcement of the prohibition laws?"

Noting the nation-wide appeal issued by the Bureau of Internal Revenue for the co-operation of "all good citizens" in the administration of the National Prohibition Act, this question, doubtless, has arisen in the minds of many who are willing and anxious to be of service and yet lack immediate knowledge of bow best to proceed. My purpose, in this article, is to answer it.

First, let us determine what is meant by "good citizen." The "good" citizen is not the exceptional citizen; he is the man wbose respect for law and order is inborn. He is the one of the majority of the great and sovereign American people, in whom I have ever-abiding faith. As director of an agency which in the last year has collected more than $6,000,000,000 in taxes, I know whereof I speak when I say that the average citizen is the honest citizen. Without the whole-hearted co-operation of our citizens generally, the task imposed upon the Commissioner of Internal Revenue as chief enforcement officer of the prohibition laws would, indeed, appear tremendous. But experience of a few sbort months has proved that my confidence in seeking their support has not been misplaced.

The situation which confronts us may be described in few words. The period of controversy has passed. Prohibition is here. It is a part of the Constitution of the United States. And the 18tb Amendment has been established and will be obeyed by the people as all other laws of the United States are respected and obeyed.

I base my conviction upon the knowledge that every thougbtful citizen is interested in enforcing the laws of this country. Upon such sentiment depends the maintenance of our institutions and the protection of life and property. Without it there would result chaos and anarchy.

Tberefore, it is my belief that the Bureau of Internal Revenue, in tbe enforcement of the prohibition laws will meet with no insuperable difficulties, but rather that its troubles will lessen with each succeeding month.

Big accomplishments may be summed up as the result of individual effort plus organized endeavor. Enforcement of the National Prohibition Act is centralized in the Bureau of Internal Revenue, but responsibillity for its effectual administration extends to tbe officers, wbose sworn duty it is to uphold tbe Constitution of the United States, of every State, city, county and town within tbe broad confines of this country, and, in tbe final analysis, to the American people tbemselves. The people, through tbeir representatives in Congress, and in the State legislatures, have beld that prohibition is necessary; they have made it a part of the supreme laws. But the Bureau of Internal Revenue is not resting under tbe comfortable assumption that passive acquiescence is a statute by the believers therein will bring about the objects to be attained. Our appeal is for the active co-operation of the law-abiding citizen.

There are many ways by which service can be rendered. Encouraged by tbe splendid co-operation of the clergy of America in creating a right public spirit towards tbe administration of tbe tax laws, I have recently addressed to 125,000 clergymen of every denomination a letter urging their support and that of the members of their congregation in the administration of the prohibition laws.

"Your own church members," I said, "will give unhesitating adherence to the prohibition laws; but it is necessary that they do more. To coordinate and give force and direction to their individual efforts, it is strongly urged that a committee of law enforcement be appointed to receive all complaints of violations of law, and to lodge such complaints, togetber witb the evidence obtained, with the proper authorities. The active support of such a committee backed by the influence of your members, will be a very great help to local officers—Federal, State and county—in enforcing the law. Whenever any officer fails in his duty, public sentiment should secure his removal."

If, as it is boped and believed, this suggestion is adopted by the churches of the country, it may be truly said that we have enlisted in the cause of prohibition enforcement an all-powerful army of the righteous-minded. To organizations interested in the enforcement of prohibition—and this may be said to apply to every board of trade, cbamber of commerce, civic, social and religious organization in the country—I bave offered the following suggestions:

"1. Organize and work for the development of a strong, bealthy public sentiment in favor of obedience to law in general and the prohibition law in particular. This can be accomplished through sermons from the pulpit, and by means of public lectures and addresses; through articles written by prominent men in each locality and published in newspapers and pamphlets, as well as througb the efforts of teachers in the public schools.

"2. Support the local officials in the performance of their duties under the law. Advise these officials that all good citizens are looking to them for effective and impartial enforcement of the law. Encourage officers who perform their duties faithfully, and vigorously condemn those who fail to perform their duty.

"3. In some States and municipalities the law and ordinances do not permit of full co-operation between local and Federal officers. In such instances, outside organizations can render great service by endeavoring to have the laws of their States and their municipal ordinances so changed and strengthened as to require effective co-operation between local, State and Federal officers.

"4. Organizations sbould keep in close contact with the Federal Prohibition Director, and his assistants, in their States; keep tbem advised as to enforcement results, and co-operate with them in correcting defective administration."

Membersbip in such organization is open to every law-abiding and responsible citizen. In them lies tbe opportunity to be of real service. Organized for public welfare and representing tbe best in their community, the influence of sucb bodies in urging obedience to tbe statutes will have far-reaching effect.

"What of the work of the Bureau of Internal Revenue?" may be asked. Within the Bureau there has been organized an agency for the enforcement of probibition whose activities will reach the farthest boundaries of this country and its possessions.

In each State is a Federal probibition director. Also the country bas been sub-divided into ten units in charge of as many Federal supervising agents. Under each of these officers is a force of Federal officers for the enforcement of the law. Successful admistration, bowever, must be measured largely by the manner in which other than Federal authorities meet their requirements.

In local communities—State, county and municipal—local officers are expected to take the initiative—to keep their own house in order. If they neglect this duty, the Federal prohibition officers will enforce the law and also bring to the attention of the law-abiding citizens of such communities the failure or dereliction of the local officers to assume tbeir responsibilities.

Enforcement must be general. It must be uniform. Those who violate tbe prohibition laws will be made swiftly to suffer tbeir penalities. The hand of the law is far-reacbing, and will be exercised witb justice to all and favoritism to none. As an officer of tbe Federal Government I can bave no different standard with respect to the enforcement of prohibition than witb respect to the enforcement of any other law.

But, as I have said, no law can be effectively enforced witbout the assistance and co-operation of the law-abiding elements. To every right-thinking man and woman is given his or her part, whicb is to observe the law, to insist on the observance of the law by others, to aid by advice, information and outspoken encouragement, the enforcement officers of the municipality, the State and the Nation. Here lies for every one an important opportunity to demonstrate the qualities of good citizenship and to promote the cause of Americanism against every encroachment of lawlessness and disorder.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

The source of modern idolatry lies in a wrong conception of God. The revelation of God contained in the Bible so far transcends any mere human statement as to His Being and Person, that I wonder that any should be led astray by the latter. One modern cult says, "God is love." St. John said the same; but he did not mean that the God of Christ and his church was a mere abstract passion, a vague, indefinite fancy without personality. No, he meant that Love was the essential, the supreme expression of our Heavenly Father as an existent, living person or being.

Another pretentious school cries out—"God is Mind." No doubt God's thoughts are not as our thoughts and these are crytallized in nature and grace. But God is not any one mental nor passional phenomona. He is all in all, and only stands perfectly revealed to the world in the life, person and teaching of his Son, our Lord. Here let us rest our faitb and be satisfied, not turning after vain idols. Surely he was a person—"the express image and likeness of the Father"—and not a fad, nor a mere quality of mind or heart.

He wrote what some judged a very instructive article on boys, in which he seems to have forgotten that he ever was one. For he took the amazing ground that from fourteen to seventeen, boys had no conscience. Then this doctrinaire placed all boys in the same class and forthwith proceeded to elucidate. Now, the boys I have known and loved and taught were as different in disposition, temperament, talents and gifts, etc., as a wren from an eagle. Traits of cbaracter that were highly developed in some, were dormant in others. But don't tell me a boy has no conscience! They have all sorts and varieties of consciences. Tbe average boy's conscience is a vivid thing; when guilty of some forbidden act, he feels mean all the way tbrough, mind, soul and body. Boys are only men in embryo, and men are only boys, full-fledged or partly so. If you don't believe me, watch both at play.

A superannuated preacher deserves all he gets and more. He deserves more considerate thought, a less maudlin sentiment, at the bands of his friendly advocates. To represent him as a veteran of tbe Cross with tropbies and laurels crowning bis baloed bead and tben in few added paragraphs plead for him as though he were a shivery mendicant lying at the gates begging, is a shame and—well, it just isn't true. During the last twenty-five years the Louisiana Conference has been honored by a noble band of heroic ministers who have been placed on the retired list; and if any one of these ever had more pain, want, or suffering, than is incident to advanced age, I have not known him, nor known of him. The ministry of a true man weaves itself into the hearts and memories of the people and the tender friendships of bygone years are not forgotten. Of course the church should provide for them, and tbis provision should be on the grounds of service in years and deeds; but a richer heritage is theirs, held in memory's storehouse.

Now a little personal touch to empbasize my point. Of the class wbo joined the Louisiana Conference in 1883 at Mansfield, there remain three still in active service, Dan Barr, Henry Boltz and Steve Davies. Of the last mentioned modesty forbids me to say much, but if the church does not provide for us when the "drums beat for returning," you just watch us live on. There will be a grievous famine in tbe land when we shall not have food, raiment and shelter. This is not written boastfully, but ratber as a counter statement to some of the arguments made for our veterans that lack the real spirit of virile manliness.

THE BY-AND-BY BOY.

He lives in the house of things-never-done,
The by-and-by boy I know—
The lights of the windows are broken and out,
And they let in the rain and snow.

In-a-minute's the schedule he works on, you see,
And duty waits on a side track;
His intentions are good—there's no fault found with them—
The doing's the thing that they lack!

"And what happens," you say, "to the by-and-by boy?"
Let any one answer who can—
Unless he soon changes his name, he becomes,
'Tis certain, a Too-Late Man!

THE SPIRIT OF THANKFULNESS.

"I do think that Thanksgiving is beautiful," said pretty little Mrs. Winship, looking up from her fleecy knitting. "It does one so much good to try to actually count up one's blessings. I think I am thankful for everything as it comes along, but when I come to think up my mercies as I do at Thanksgiving I'm so thankful I can hardly bear it."

"Humph!" said Miss Ann, with a ring of bitterness in her voice; "it's all very well for you to talk about thankfulness, and to feel it; you've had nothing to do but beautiful things all your life long. Helen Winship, you ought to be thankful. Think of the difference in our lives; you are dainty and pretty as a picture; you've been petted by everybody all your life. You have always had a beautiful home, and never had hard work to do. But I was homely as a hedge fence in January always; no one ever kissed or petted me, I suppose you think I don't care for those things, but I used to long for them so it seemed to me my heart would break. You may well be thankful from the depths of your heart, but I fail to see any cause for my being so."

Mrs. Winship's eyes filled with tears, and her voice was very tender. "I know it, Annie," she said, going back to her friend's girlish name, "I've ever so much to be thankful for, a thousand times more than I deserve. I wish I could share some of it with you; but, dear, I've a thought for you. Because you have gone without, you know better than I do, for instance, how other hearts ache for the things they go without, and how much you can do. It is more blessed to make others happy than it is to be ourselves, is it not, Annie?"

Miss Ann dropped her sewing and looked out of the window. Rob and Annie, her dead brother's children, were coming down the street; she had taken them four years ago when they were left orphans. She remembered now, as she watched them coming along toward the house in a grave, unchildlike fashion, how Annie had cried for a pretty white apron that she could wear once in a while, and Rob had pleaded, with something like a quiver in his boyish voice, for some clothes that didn't look as if they belonged to his great-grandfather. Had she ever bestowed upon them any of the petting and loving ways she had so longed for herself in her young days? It seemed to Miss Ann that the scales fell from her eyes.

"I've treated those children just exactly as I've been complaining that I was treated," she said, turning to Mrs. Winship.

"But you will not any longer, will you, dear?"

"I've been a blind, selfish woman, but my eyes are opened now, and I don't believe I'll shut them so again. You can go home now, Helen. You've been a good angel to me, but I want to be alone now for a little while to think it out. But you may be sure of one thing. I'm thankful for you, if for nothing else."

So Mrs. Winship went home, and Miss Ann went up to her own room, shut the door, and bolted it. She never told any one what she thought or did the hour she was shut up there, but when she came out she called the children to her.

"I want you to get ready to go down the street with me," she said. "Thanksgiving is coming, and I think we must have some new clothes for it. Rob, you need a new suit, I believe, and Annie, you shall have some white aprons for every day, and a pretty new dress for best. Can you both be ready in fifteen minutes?"

"Oh! Aunt Ann, are you really going to buy me a new suit?" asked Rob.

"Yes, my boy, that is what I intend to do."

Rob hesitated a moment, then put out his hand. "I can't tell you how much I thank you," he said, "but I'll work just as hard as ever I can, truly I will, to help pay for it. I've got fifty cents that I've been saving toward getting it myself, and I will give it to you now."

"No, Rob, I want to get the clothes for you myself, so keep your money for a knife or anything else like that you want."

"Oh, Aunt Ann, can I get a knife?" cried Rob.

"If you want one, you may, and if your fifty cents won't get a good one, I'll give you enough more."

Rob looked at his aunt in amazement for a moment, then, obeying a sudden impulse, he threw his arms around her and gave her a vehement, boyish hug, after which operation he turned a couple of somersaults on the kitchen floor.

"I had to, or I should a-busted," he said to Annie afterward.

"Well, well," said Aunt Ann, looking as flustered as couldd be, "why, really, what is the boy doing! I guess, Annie, we will have to look for a new doliy while Rob is getting his knife, won't we? Why, bless me, child, what are you crying for?"

"I can't help it, I'm so happy," sobbed Annie. "I've wanted a nice, pretty doliy, so it most seemed to me I couldn't bear it."

Well, that was only the beginning. Miss Ann never did things by halves. She taught herself to be tender and loving, and instead of thinking about herself all the time and murmuring at her troubles, she turned her attention to those about her, and tried to give pleasure to others.

"I'm thankful with all my heart and soul," she whispered to Mrs. Winship as she came out of church Thanksgiving Day.

"I do actually believe Aunt Ann is growing pretty," said Annie to Rob. "Seems to me she is."

"I believe so, too," he answered. "Anyhow, she is good."

And Miss Ann, who happened to overhear this conversation, "thanked God and took courage."—Christian Intelligencer.

HER WORK.

A mother once said to a popular teacher who had been adored by her pupils for a score of years: "What a wide and beneficial influence you have exerted, while I have been cooped up at home, managing servants, dosing the mumps and measles and patching and darning! How narrow my life looks beside yours!"

"Narrow!" cried her friend. "Think how you have sent forth into the world every morning your husband and your flock of boys and girls, full of health and cheer! What a model home you have created for all your friends to see! It is I who have lived a narrow life, rather than you. What is the slight touch which I may have given to a thousand or more lives compared with the deep, determining influence which you have wielded over the half dozen in your home?"

"Is it possible that you can think so?" exclaimed the tired mother, incredulously.

"I know so. I have watched your children in school. They radiate everywhere an atmosphere of love and light, and it was you who gave it to them."—Herald and Presbyter.

THE WORLD'S LONGEST TUNNEL.

The Simplon Tunnel is the longest tunnel in the world, being over twelve miles in length. The boring of this famous tunnel through the Alps occupied ten thousand men almost ten years, and cost over fifteen million dollars. The wonderful feature of this tunnel is the immense distanco below the top of the mountain through which it runs. The tunnel climbs up into the heart of the Alps, and yet at the highest point there is over a mile of the lofty peak above it. It could have run nearer the top of the mountain, but that would have made the grade too steep for the trains to climb. On the Swiss side, the entrance to the tunnel is 2,249 feet above sea level, and on the Italian side it is 2,079 feet. The Alps are pierced by two other tunnels, the Saint Gothard and the Mont Cenis.—From "Items of Interest," in Kind Words.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

LOUISIANA BIBLE CLASS FEDERATION.

The Louisiana Bible Class Federation will hold its annual meeting at Noel Memorial Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., March 16-18. A splendid program has been arranged by the indefatigable Sunday School Field Secretary, Rev. Alonzo Early, generous hospitality is assured by the good people of Shreveport, and interest in the approaching meeting is growing daily. It is confidently predicted that this will be one of the most enthusiastic and successful meetings in the history of the Federation.

Busy pastors and laymen, men and women, are finding it increasingly difficult to attend all the meetings held for their special benefit in connection with causes in which they are greatly interested. Almost every week, it seems, there is a call to go somewhere for a conference or an institute or something of the kind. Some of these calls it is impossible to respond to, but we hope as many as can possibly do so will go to the Shreveport meeting. After all has been said and done, it remains true that it is through the Sunday school that we have the most effective point of contact with community life in developing Christian character and in strengthening religious work. Even if the old idea, that the Sunday school is simply a place for children, still obtained, it would be one of our most efficient means of establishing the Kingdom of God on earth. But the modern Sunday school embraces every age in its program, and it is second to no other organization in the church in importance and usefulness. We cannot afford to do less than throw all our energies into the work of making it increasingly useful in the development of our religious life. Perhaps we can afford to neglect some things—but the Sunday school is not one of them.

A FINE IDEA.

There was recently held at the Baptist Bible Institute in New Orleans a Workers' School, for the special benefit of the Baptist preachers of the State who labor in the rural sections. This gathering was planned by Dr. George H. Crutcher, Corresponding Secretary of the Louisiana Baptist Convention, and the expenses of those in attendance were defrayed by the Executive Board of the Convention. According to a statement appearing in the local press, the idea back of the gathering was to give these preachers in rural sections, whose opportunities and privileges are limited, some acquaintance with the life of a great city, in order that they might have a broader view of the problems of modern conditions, and thus be better equipped for leadership among the people whom they serve.

We cannot do less than commend the Baptists for their aggressive interest in the establishment of their faith throughout the South, and their willingness to invest large amounts of money in their enterprises. They seem to know exactly what they want to do, and they are going about the doing of it in a most determined and business-like way. They realize that they must have trained leaders for their work in all communities, and they are making it possible for their preachers in the humblest circumstances to come into contact with the outstanding leaders of their denomination. About 150 country preachers were in attendance upon the School just held—who can estimate the influence of such a gathering upon these men from the rural sections? We are thoroughly satisfied that it will be worth to the Baptist Church much more than the amount spent to make it possible. Other churches might very well adapt the idea to their own needs.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Wm. I. White, of Crawford Miss., is serving his present charge for the second year. He reports that the outlook is encouraging.

The work at Keener Memorial, Baton Rouge, La., moves on encouragingly, according to a recent report from Rev. J. W. Booth, the pastor.

Rev. W. B. Baker, of Verona, Miss., gives an encouraging account of the work in his charge. The outlook for the year is good in every way.

Brother W. A. Wilkinson, of Woodville, Miss., has been a continuous subscriber to the Advocate since 1866. We are proud of our noble company of the "Old Guard."

We learn that a considerable sum of money is being expended for improvements on the parsonage at Bucatunna, Miss., where Rev. John W. Ramsey is pastor.

We learn with sorrow of the recent passing away of Mr. L. P. Cochran, an honored citizen of Marshall County, Mississippi, and loyal member of the Methodist Church. He was buried at Holly Springs on Feb. 20.

Mrs. J. R. Countiss, wife of the distinguished president of Grenada College, Grenada, Miss., was in New Orleans last week to be with her daughter, Mrs. S. C. Tecot, during an attack of the "flu," which, we are glad to say, proved not to be serious.

Rev. J. B. King, of Benton, Miss., says he enjoys working for the Advocate—and we are willing to vouch for his ability to get results. He has already secured more than the quota of subscriptions assigned his charge, and there are "more to come." Good!

Central Church, Columbus, Miss., is making splendid progress under the leadership of Rev. T. E. Gregory. The Sunday school is doing fine work, the spiritual interest is deepening, the membership is growing, and the financial side of the work is prosperous.

We are authorized by Rev. J. M. Morse, presiding elder of the Jackson District, Mississippi Conference, to announce that Rev. J. T. McVey has been released from the Lake City charge, and that Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D., has been appointed preacher in charge.

Brother J. G. Cammack, formerly a member of the Mississippi Conference, but now living in Los Angeles, Calif., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate speaks of the fine county and the fine people who live there—many of whom were originally from Mississippi.

Brother Jno. P. Rembert, of Longview, Texas, in renewing his subschiption for two years, remarks that these renewals carry him through his forty-fifth year as a subscriber to the Advocate. He is a former Mississippi laymen, though he has been in Texas for eight years.

The recent meeting at Centenary College, Shreveport, La., conducted by Dr. R. S. Stewart, was a most inspiring and helpful one. It was the testimony of the student body that the earnest messages of the preacher had brought them into closer touch with spiritual things.

Sister Mary J. Pipkin, of Lookout, La., has been a reader of the Advocate since 1862. Although she is now in her ninety-second year, she still reads it with interest and appreciation. In her letter she adds a prayer for the office force and all the readers of the paper, for which she has our grateful thanks.

Mr. J. G. Kennedy, formerly a leading layman of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church of this city, but now of Jackson, Miss., dropped in at the Advocate office a little while on Wednesday of last week. He gave a fine account of the work of Galloway Memorial Church, of Jackson, which he now attends.

We have received from Rev. Claude M. Simpson, presiding elder of the Gainesville District, North Texas Conference, the printed report of the district work for the first quarter. It is interesting reading. We are especially glad to see that definite reports were made by the pastoral charges concerning the efforts to extend the circulation of the Texas Christian Advocate—the official organ of the Conference.

Dr. A. J. Cauthen, Missionary Secretary of the South Carolina Conference, reports that there has been an increase of $10,000 in the assessment for ministerial support this year as compared with last year in the Florence District, an increase that is attributed largely to the influence of the Centenary Movement. The average salary in the Florence District is $2112, not including the presiding elder's salary, which is $4000.

Dr. A. C. Millar, editor of the Arkansas Methodist, accompanied by his son, George D., spent a day or two in New Orleans last week preparatory to taking ship for an extended trip to South America. Panama, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, and Chile were to be included in their itinerary. The trip will probably take seven or eight weeks. It gave us great pleasure to have them call at the Advocate office while they were in the city.

The many friends of Mrs. Gayle C. Beanland, formerly Miss Lillian Williams, will be glad to know that she is delighted with her work at Doula Cameroun, West Africa, where she and her husband are engaged in missionary work in connection with the American Presbyterian Mission. Mrs. Beanland as Miss Williams was one of the best known primary teachers in Mississippi. Her father, Rev. W. M. Williams, is one of the leading members of the Mississippi Conference.

We take the following note from the Pacific Methodist Advocate of February 19: "A gentleman who heard the Rev. J. Loyd Decell in the special services at Coquille, Oregon, says that he is a very great preacher, full of evangelistic fire and power. California has already learned this. Brother Decell is already easily one of our leaders in the West." Such high commendation is no surprise to those who are familiar with Brother Decell's efficient work in the Mississippi Conference.

The District Bulletin of the Columbia District, North Mississippi Conference, of which Rev. W. L. Duren is presiding elder, is full of interesting and valuable information and helpful suggestions. Here is an item: "One of the pastors in the District visited forty-three homes and found that only two of them had family prayer; only two church papers were taken; twelve of these homes did not even ask a blessing at the table; and there were twenty-four persons over ten years old who were not members of any church." Among things to be stressed immediately, the presiding elder mentions Sunday schools, the Conference organ, and the Centenary pledges.

At a special meeting of the Board of Missions on February 25, the Board appropriated $500,000 of the Centenary funds raised for reconstruction work in Europe to carry on that work with special reference to immediate relief in Poland and Czecho-Slovakia. The Board also passed a resolution urging Congress to respond to the appeal of President Wilson to help the starving peoples of Europe and Asia. The Executive Committee of the Board has requested Bishop James Cannon, Jr., to act as chairman of a committee to investigate conditions in these countries and to cable recommendations for immediate action by the Executive Committee. Bishop Cannon will be assisted in this investigation by our newly appointed workers to Belgium, Dr. Sloan and Professor McKnight.

One of the most interesting things we have come across in a long time is the digest of the preachers' reports of the Greenville District, North Mississippi Conference, for the first quarter, ending Feb. 15. Among the items of information, are the following: number of churches in the charge; members received on profession of faith and by certificate; present total membership; number of prayer meetings held; number of pastoral visits made; number of Sunday school pupils; number of Woman's Missionary Societies, with the number of members; number of church papers taken; amount assessed last year and this year for pastor's salary, with the amount paid this year; the amount collected on the benevolences. Rev. V. C. Curtis is the enterprising presiding elder of the Greenville District.

CHANGE OF DATE FOR TWO IMPORTANT MEETINGS.

Conditions have arisen unexpectedly which make it necessary to change the date for the meeting of the representatives of Conference Boards of Finance from April 23-24 as previously announced, to May 7-8, Planters Hotel, St. Louis, Mo.

Also, and for the same reason, the Annual Meeting of the General Board of Finance is changed from April 26-27 as previously announced, to May 10-11, Planters Hotel, St. Louis, Mo.

"SHOP TALK."

We have used the general heading, "Shop Talk," in connection with the following paragraphs because we want to say several things about the circulation of the Advocate that we believe will be of interest to all our readers. We do not mean to suggest, however, that the matter herein is not of importance also. We have set out to increase the circulation of the paper to a point where it will worthily represent the great constituency which it serves. We are steadily going ahead, and we want everybody to help in every way possible. We are glad to say that we are receiving most encouraging practical sympathy and co-operation.

That Minimum of 10,000.

It was clearly understood by the Publishing Committee in inaugurating the campaign for a minimum of 10,000 subscribers by March 15, that it would require at least that number at the regular subscription price of $1.50 a year to meet the requirements of the situation. The special "Every Family" proposition that was made later, by which a considerable number of new subscriptions was added to our list, did not in any degree lessen the financial stress through which we are passing in common with all other periodicals. For that reason we are not counting these subscriptions at the special rate in the 10,000. We hope none of our friends will so count them.

Results of the "Every Family" Proposition.

We give below the results of the "Every Family" proposition as they have been tabulated to date. In some cases the figures include the membership of more than one church in a charge; in others, a single church is represented. There are still a few churches to be enrolled—those which had taken definite steps looking to the acceptance of the offer before it was withdrawn, but which have been somewhat delayed in carrying out their plans. The list at present is as follows:

Bernice, La., Rev. W. A. Mangum, pastor..... 83
First Church, Baton Rouge, La., Rev. N. E. Joyner, pastor 359
Trinity Church, Ruston, La., Dr. R. H. Wynn, pastor 211
Holly Springs, Miss., Rev. W. R. Lott, pastor..121
Eunice, La., Rev. P. H. Fontaine, pastor..... 53
New Albany, Miss., Rev. J. E. Stephens, pastor.123
Franklinton, La., Rev. J. B. Fulton, pastor (by T. M. Babington) 101
Pleasant Hill, La., Rev. P. O. Lowrey, pastor.. 61
Pontotoc, Miss., Rev. H. P. Lewis, pastor..... 86
Florence, Miss., Rev. C. H. Strait, pastor..... 30
Fernwood, Miss., Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, pastor.124
Epworth Church, New Orleans, Rev. J. E. Selfe, pastor 65
Ruleville, Miss., Rev. W. S. Shipman, pastor... 83
Jonesboro, La., Rev. G. A. Morgan, pastor..... 38
Grenada, Miss., Rev. W. W. Woollard, pastor..135
Lucedale, Miss., Rev. J. L. Greenway, pastor.. 51
Rosedale, Miss., Rev. Jno. W. Robertson, pastor 36
Drew, Miss., Rev. W. N. Duncan, pastor..... 73
First Church, Water Valley, Miss., Rev. L. P. Wasson, pastor 168
West Point, Miss., Rev. Carroll Varner, pastor.159

Dubach, La., Rev. J. A. McCormack, pastor.... 28
Port Gibson, Miss., Rev. M. L. Burton, pastor.. 55
Tunica, Miss., Rev. C. A. Parks, pastor..... 50
Potts Camp, Miss., Rev. M. A. Burns, pastor... 46
Sumrall, Miss., Rev. H. Mellard, pastor..... 69

The following lists were sent in before the minimum of 25 was fixed:

Pass Christian, Miss., Rev. Jno. L. Sutton, pastor 8
St. Joseph, La., Rev. R. F. Harrell, pastor (by W. R. Baker) 22
Mangham, La., Rev. J. M. Alford, pastor..... 20

The Conference Quotas.

In carrying out the recommendation of the Publishing Committee with reference to the 10,000 subscriptions by March 15, the Boards of Christian Literature of our three Conferences included in their reports the allotment of the number necessary from each Conference to the Districts, with the request that these allotments be apportioned to the charges by the District Stewards. The reports of these Boards were adopted by their respective Conferences, and, therefore, are the action of the Conferences themselves. It was definitely understood that the allotment included renewals as well as new subscriptions, except in the Mississippi Conference, where only the new subscriptions are allotted. It is necessary to secure the specified number of new subscriptions in addition to all the renewals in order for that Conference to meet its quota. The apportionment is as follows:

Louisiana Conference.

(Including renewals and new subscriptions)

Alexandria District 300
Baton Rouge District 300
Lafayette District 300
Monroe District 350
New Orleans District 300
Ruston District 350
Shreveport District 400

Total.....2300

North Mississippi Conference.

(Including renewals and new subscriptions)

Aberdeen District 516
Columbus District 436
Corinth District 550
Durant District 588
Greenville District 450
Holly Springs District 400
Sardis District 400
Winona District 400

Total.....3740

Mississippi Conference.

(New subscriptions only allotted)

Brookhaven District 160
Jackson District 160
Hattiesburg District 155
Meridian District 160
Newton District 155
Port Gibson District 155
Seashore District 155

Total.....1100

In reference to the above, we cannot forego the remark that the apportionment to the various pastoral charges of the Districts is so small in most cases that practically no difficulty ought to be experienced in securing the full number. We are sure that the number allotted could be largely increased in a great many cases.

How About The New Orleans?

The Alabama Christian Advocate, after having gained the largest circulation of any Conference organ in the church, approximately 25,000, has issued the following appeal to its friends to keep it in the lead:

"Considering the fact that only a few years ago the Alabama Christian Advocate was about to suspend publication, the fact that its friends rallied and have given it the largest circulation of any Conference organ in the church, shows what team work can do. Other papers have learned the secret and all our Conference organs are reaching out after a larger field of usefulness. The Wesleyan, with the State that claims to be the Empire Commonwealth of the South back of it, is seeking and deserves a larger circulation. The St. Louis Advocate has for its patronizing Conferences, Missouri, Southwest Missouri, St. Louis, Illinois, Denver. Dr. Smith has had on a campaign to push his circulation to the top. He is meeting with great success. The Texas Advocate, with eight Conferences, occupying a territory large enough for the population of a mighty empire, is reaching out for first place. The North Carolina Advocate, with the big circulation of nearly 20,000, is trying to turn us down and go ahead. What are we going to do about it? Will the good pastors and people of Alabama and West Florida Methodism, after having won first place, be content to let North Carolina, or Wesleyan, or Arkansas, or St. Louis, or Texas, or some other of our splendid contemporaries, push us out and win the honors? A little pleasant rivalry can do no harm, and may help all of our papers. We are telling our friends the facts, so that if they want the old Alabama to continue in the lead they may get busy and send us speedily as possible a few thousands more of readers, else we may have to give first place to some other journal."

We congratulate the Alabama Christian Advocate upon the magnificent circulation it has reached under the able editorship of Dr. Branscomb, and we hope that it will continue to increase; we have the same wish, too, for the Wesleyan, the St. Louis, the Texas, the North Carolina, the Arkansas, and all the other splendid Conference organs that come to our table. But we wonder that our good friend, Dr. Branscomb, did not think to include the New Orleans Christian Advocate as the possible winner of the circulation crown. Without calling in question the quality of the Methodism served by our contemporaries, we simply remark that we have, according to the latest statistics, 161,804 Methodists in Louisiana and Mississippi who are second to none in their loyalty, intelligence, faithfulness and ability to do things. We are not making any boasts—but we miss our guess if the old New Orleans does not begin to catch up with the leaders as the months go by. We know the mettle of the preachers and people who claim the New Orleans Christian Advocate as their "home paper."

Our Circulation.

We are sure our readers will be interested in knowing our circulation figures at the present time. In looking over the record kept by the Business Manager, we find that we have sent out papers each week this year as follows:

January 1.....7350
January 8.....7850
January 15.....8250
January 22.....8250
January 29.....8400
February 5.....8650
February 12.....8900
February 19.....9150
February 26.....9400

We must call attention to the fact, however, that these figures include the subscriptions received on the "Every Family" proposition—subscriptions received at a rate that, as matters have developed, have added to rather than lessened our financial burdens. We have by no means nearly attained the minimum goal of 10,000 subscribers as contemplated in the campaign instituted by the Publishing Committee. The whole plan involved that number AT THE REGULAR RATE OF $1.50 A YEAR. If all of us could have foreseen the advances in cost still to come when the campaign was proposed, it is altogether likely that a considerably larger number would have been asked for as absolutely necessary. WE HAVE NOT REACHED THE GOAL OF THE CAMPAIGN UNTIL WE HAVE AT LEAST 10,000 SUBSCRIBERS AT $1.50 EACH. LET US NEVER FORGET THAT.

MRS. LOUISA B. MARTIN, died January 21, 1920, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. N. B. Hunter, in Waterproof, La., at the age of 88 years. She was the fourth daughter of Peter and Agnes Hunter. Her parents, with others, moved to Waterproof by flatboat in the early days before either steamboats or railways had ever been invented. She married Louis P. Turner, January 9, 1853. To this union four children were born, two dying in infancy. Just as the dark cloud of Civil War overshadowed us, her companion died in 1860. Left alone with a little daughter, now Mrs. Hunter, and a little son, the late Mr. Z. York Turner, she had to struggle through that awful period that sorely tried the souls of men. Her slaves were freed and property confiscated and she and her little children had to refugee to Charlton Hall plantation, "between the lines," as it were, where anxieties daily increased. After the close of the war, she met and married Capt A. P. Martin. They again established a home in Waterproof, where Sister Martin ever proved a blessing to those about her. Capt. Martin died in 1909, thus again leaving her alone, but surrounded by a loving daughter, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, nieces and other loved ones who strove to make her declining years happy. She joined the Methodist Church at the age of 22, and ever lived a consistent member of same. Her Christian duties were faithfully performed and she was never happier than when ministering to her pastor or his family. She remembered when the Louisiana Conference was small enough to be entertained in Waterproof, in 1855. Her hospitality was unbounded, and on Sunday afternoon her home was usually the gathering place for the young people of the town, of all creeds. She was beloved by white and black alike and never hestitated in her charities, no matter what the race or condition. Her going was as peaceful as only the passing of a Christian can be. For months an invalid, she longed for the "Sweet fields of Eden." Sister Hunter writes her going was so peaceful with "Bless the Lord, oh, my soul, Bless the Lord," almost constantly on her lips. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." It won't be long till we meet "Over there in the sunbright clime." May the blessings and comfort of her dear Savior and ours be with and cherish the stricken loved ones. So live that when your summons comes, you, too, will be ready and anxious for the Savior to say, "It is enough, come up higher."

Her friend and former pastor,
R. A. DAVIS.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 23.

The subject of this sketch, MR. J. WILLIS WRIGHT, was born January 13, 1849; and received the summons to come up higher November 28, 1919. He professed faith in Christ and united with the M. E. Church, South, early in life. He served his church as steward for 40 years or more. No pastor ever had a better friend than Brother Wright. He suffered a great deal for three years before he died, but without a murmur. He seemed to be perfectly resigned to God's will. It was our privilege to visit him quite often in his last days, and it was an inspiration to us to hear him talk of the bright future awaiting him. In his departure the church sustained a great loss, though our loss is his gain. The home-going of a Christian is precious in the sight of the Lord Jesus. Brother Wright was a faithful steward, a diligent worker, tender and sympathetic, carefully looking after all the interest of the church. He was married, December 26, 1876, to Miss Leona Robinson, who died in January, 1885. To this union were born five children, three boys and two girls, all living except one of the girls. He was married the second time to Miss Clemmie Hightower, May 11, 1893. To this union were born seven children, all living. The writer, assisted by Brother L. M. Lipscomb, conducted the funeral services in old New Hope church, where he had been a member for 50 or more years; then we quietly laid his body to rest beside his first wife to await the resurrection morn. A true and faithful man has finished his task here and entered upon the rest of God's true children. Servant of God, well done; we shall meet again where there is no more sickness, pain or death.

W. J. WOOD.

Little WILLIAM MATTHEWS, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Matthews, was born May 12, 1916, and departed this life December 24, 1919. His death came as a shock to all of us, as he was sick only a few hours. God permitted him to live with loved ones and friends long enough to entwine himself about their affections as a precious child always does. To have to give up a loved one at any time is sad. We are sometimes prone to ask the question, Why does God come and take our little one's from us? The answer then comes, He has a place in Heaven for them, for Christ says, "of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." Were it not for the privilege of meeting our loved one's in Heaven, as we can't bring them back to us, the ordeal would be unbearable. But thank God for that privilege! The funeral service was conducted at the home at Bude, Miss., by the writer, after which the little form was carried to Brookhaven cemetery and laid away, to rest to await the resurrection morn. May God bless and comfort the loved ones and friends.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Easily and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes but a moment to prepare, and really there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Where Drugs Fail

Many chronic diseases fail to respond to drug treatment, even in the hands of the best physicians, whereas acute diseases usually respond readily. When a disease has become chronic, drugs often seem to do as much harm as they do good, for the system rebels against them. It is just this class of cases which derive the greatest benefit from Shivar Mineral Water. If you suffer from chronic dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning or other curable conditions due to impure blood do not hesitate to accept Mr. Shivar's liberal offer as printed below. His records show that only two in a hundred on the average, have reported "no beneficial results." This is a wonderful record from a truly wonderful spring. Simply sign the following letter:

IF BACK HURTS USE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if Kidneys feel like lead or Bladder bothers you —Meat forms uric acid.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twings, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

GRENADA COLLEGE REVIVAL.

The faculty and student body of Grenada College decided early in the session that they would carry out the Standard Plan for the Evangelistic Campaign in the colleges. It was the privilege of the writer to be the guest of the college during the campaign and give such assistance as he could in making it a success.

There are many reasons for giving this statement to the New Orleans Advocate, but chief among them is the desire that each pastor in the North Mississippi Conference may know something of the results of the meeting in order that those results may be properly conserved when the girls return to their respective local churches at the close of school.

Two services were held each day for exactly a week, beginning Wednesday night, February 4, and closing Wednesday at noon, February 11. Fourteen services were held. The morning service each day was at the chapel hour and lasted for only thirty minutes and the evening service was at 7 o'clock and held in the study hall, lasting for an hour, the girls remaining in the hall after the service was over for their study period. An opportunity was given at the close of the night service each day during the meeting for public profession on the part of those who had been converted at any time during the day. There were 84 clear-cut conversions, and no one could look into the faces of any of these girls or take them by the hand without knowing that they were really "new creatures in Christ Jesus." Fifty-five girls decided to become Christian stewards and tithe their income; nine volunteered for special missionary work, seven in the foreign field and two in the home field. There were twelve additions to the church, eight to the Methodist Church, who were baptized and received into the church by Rev. W. W. Woollard, pastor of the Grenada Methodist Church. Four asked for membership in the Baptist Church and their names were turned over to Brother Stanley, pastor of the local Baptist Church in Grenada, who baptized and received them into the church. The meeting closed with every girl on the campus a member of some Christian church, but above everything else, a professing Christian.

The details preceding the special services were handled by the faculty and student body, led by Brother Countiss and the .Y. W. C. A. Cabinet. The revival was on in full force before the special services began. I was told on reaching the campus that one of the girls awoke during the preceding night under deep conviction for sin. She was saved before the meeting opened.

I have very little fear for the spiritual lives of these girls as long as they remain on the campus, but I do dread, for some of them, the influences they will have to face when they return to their homes, and I wish every pastor in the North Mississippi Conference could have heard the frank statements made by some of the girls concerning the situations they would have to meet when they got back with the girls with whom they had been "chumming" at home, and I trust before they return to their homes all of these chums will have been gloriously saved as a result of the spring Evangelistic Campaign.

I give here an experience which will show the situation as felt by some of the girls themselves. At the Saturday night service, one of the finest girls on the campus was saved, but a few minutes after the service closed came back sobbing as if her heart would break, and stated that after getting to her room she got to thinking about the little organization to which she belonged in her home town; that she had taken dancing lessons for four years and it looked as if she just had to dance when she went back home. She stated that she knew she had been saved that night and she did not know what on earth to do because she knew she could not be a Christian and dance. Among other things, I asked her if she really felt that she could not go to heaven if she danced and she stated that she knew that she could not. After talking with her some two or three minutes, the crying instantly turned into laughter as she said that she did not want to dance anyhow.

Only one opportunity was given to the girls for public testimony and the girl referred to above, in giving her testimony said she was never so happy in all of her life and that it "just beat dancing all to pieces." The testimony of another girl was that she had grown six feet taller spiritually during the meeting and did not know what on earth would happen if she kept on growing.

Every student on Grenada College campus will be ready to assist the pastor and Sunday school superintendent in religious work during the summer, and I appeal to you to use them to the fullest extent, which I feel sure you will be glad to do.

Surely no man in the North Mississippi Conference has such a tremendous responsibility on his shoulders as has Brother Countiss. The uncertainty of labor sends him some mornings to fire the furnace, other mornings to milk the cows and absolutely everything conveivable between these two items and that of teaching a few college classes and being president of the college. He seems always to be in a good humor and never slights any of his work, and some day will surely have said to him, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." Mrs. Countiss is a veritable mother to the girls and it looks as if the Lord might have as definitely called these two choice spirits into this particular work as He ever called one into the ministry or foreign missions. To Fortify the System Against Grip

Take LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE Tablets which destroy germs, act as a Tonic and Laxative, and thus prevent Colds, Grip and Influenza. There is only one "BROMO QUININE." E. W. GROVE'S signature on the box

The Spirit of God ever whispers: "Be not high-minded, but fear. Remember that you are running a race, and the prize is not yet won. Keep yourself under, both body and soul; bring yourself into subjection, lest, after all, you be a castaway." So speaks the Spirit of God to the souls of Christians, even the most saintly, while they are yet in this world.—Selected.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle

HAVE YOU SCROFULA?

Now Said to Be as Often Acquired as Inherited.

It is generally and chiefly indicated by eruptions and sores, but in many cases it enlarges the glands of the neck, affects the internal organs, especially the lungs, and if neglected may develop into consumption.

It causes many troubles, and is aggravated by impure air, unwholesome food, bad water, too much heat or cold, and want of proper exercise.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the medicine that has been used with so much satisfaction by three generations, is wonderfully successful in the treatment of scrofula. Give it a trial.

If a cathartic or laxative is needed, take Hood's Pills,—there is nothing better for biliousness or constipation.

EAT IT ALL.

You are likely to be afraid when seated before a large dinner or before a particularly delightful h, lest you may suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, heart burn or some of the other disagreeable after effects. We are prone at times to forget our stomachs and our rashness causes us trouble. A simple natural aid at times when your organs rebell will not only avoid temporary discomfort but will also give comfort and rest to the tired, over-worked, mistreated organs and smoothly pave the way to strength

RELIABLE VADCO REMEDIES

VADCO Dyspepsia Remedy is a harmless though immensely comforting and effective corrective. A teaspoonful just after meals or whenever needed will bring immediate relief and by aiding the stomach in its work, restore it to strength and health. It is simple to take and pleasant to taste. Sunday School

FACTS ABOUT THE LOUISIANA FEDERATION.

What It Is.

It is an organization of the Wesley Bible Class Workers of the Louisiana Conference and it holds an annual meeting for three days. Its meeting is the only real representative gathering of Louisiana Methodists which is State-wide. All ages of Methodists are represented; men, women, boys and girls, preachers and laymen. This year we are inviting the Elementary workers to join us and Miss Kennedy will have charge of an Elementary Conference for their benefit. The meetings are open to everybody.

Why It Is.

The meetings are for the purpose of receiving inspiration and acquiring information. It is to help Methodist Sunday school organized Bible Class workers get a better conception of the greatness of their task and to get ideas as to how to accomplish things worth while.

When It Is.

March 16, 17, 18—the very best time of the week and of the year. Draw a red ink line round those dates on your calendar and make your plans to be there. The meeting begins at 2:30, Tuesday afternoon and closes at 12, Thursday noon.

Where It Is.

At Shreveport. If you will look on the map of the State, you will see that it is easily accessible, having many fine railroad lines from every part of the State. There are enough trains going in every direction every day, so that a large crowd can be easily accommodated. There are many miles of model roads, so that many will attend the Federation coming in automobiles. We are urging those near by to use their autos.

Who Are To Go.

Presiding elders, pastors, Sunday school superintendents, officers and teachers, and a representative of your Bible classes and Elementary department. The most important one to go, is YOU.

As To The Program.

Read the program published last week and you will see that it is full of splendid things from the opening to the close. It has inspirational addresses and schools of method for every department. You cannot help but be pleased with it.

Some Of The Benefits.

No one can estimate all of them. It may mean the revolutionizing of yourself and your class, perhaps of your entire Sunday school. Bring a willing mind and an earnest heart and you will undoubtedly receive help, and upon your return to your own school be a great help to others. One of the finest benefits is the genuine Christian fellowship, the like of which is experienced at no other meeting of which we know. Come and test it and you will be as sure of it as we are.

As To Arrangements.

The meeting will be in Noel Memorial Methodist Church, of which Rev. W. W. Drake is the pastor, and free entertainment is to be given by the generous-hearted people. The chairman of the Entertainment Committee at Shreveport, is Judge G. W. Banks, whom you should notify at once that you are going. It is very important that this committee get your name as a delegate. Notify the committee not later than March 10.

As To District Recognition.

On Wednesday afternoon, each district in the Conference will be assigned special pews in the auditorium and from these districts some one will give the number of Wesley Bible Classes in the district enrollment of the Wesley Bible classes and enrollment of other Bible classes not enrolled and registered.

Lastly.

First—Make up your mind to go. Second—Go. Third—Be sure to register after you get there. Bring at least three things with you, yourself, your heart and a smile. Having these you will be sure to enjoy this great occasion.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Suppose your boy should go to a strange city to cast his lot among the people and your church was too helpless to look after his soul—what would you think about it?

Is your church too weak and indifferent to look after the new people that have moved into your town? If it is too lazy to seek and save the lost, it is time to cry aloud and spare not.

The February number of the Church School is worth its weight in gold to the teacher that has a desire to improve. Ask your superintendent for the copy you ought to have. Dr. Chappell's editorial is the call of a prophet of God. He has the vision of a seer and the compassionate heart of a saint.

Cursed be he that doeth the work of the Lord negligently. This should be written upon walls of our churches and upon our doorposts. This applies to much of the work we bring to the Lord as a reasonable sacrifice. May God help us to put our all into his service.

If you have six hundred sheep and are sheltering and feeding only three hundred, how long will the flock last? What kind of a shepherd is it that makes only a passing comment when the wolves devour a dozen or more of the choicest lambs? This is not an imaginary picture.

The Greenwood church has in it untold possibilities for good. Brother Tucker and his superintendent, Brother W. E. Beall, see their opportunity. They are organizing with the view of bringing in five hundred people into their Sunday school. Fifteen of the teachers have ordered books to study, that they may be better prepared to do the great work of teaching. All agreed to study Evangelism. A group of fine young women are eager to take the course in leadership. A few years ago the church building at Greenwood was one of the best in the Conference; it is now entirely inadequate to serve the purpose of teaching religion or giving religious education.

The following churches agreed to study Evangelism at the prayer meeting hour: Sunflower, Ruleville, Webb, and Marks. We have got to teach evangelism systematically and constantly if we have any number of our people to practice evangelism. We must teach Missions regularly and under the power of the Holy Spirit if we make our people really missionary. I pray that some one of our liberal churches will ask the Sunday School Board to hold a Sunday School Conference some time in May to last two or three days. We must get our Sunday school people together if we make the progress that other Conferences are making. We must do this if we mean to give our children and young people the instruction they deserve. Write me if you think your church will help get behind such an undertaking.

THE MOST AND BEST.

The importance of economy has been impressed on our minds in recent years. We want to know that we are getting the most and best for our money, no matter what we spend it for.

In the matter of medicine there is probably no more economical course of treatment than Hood's Sarsaparilla and Peptiron—a real iron tonic—taken in conjunction, one before eating and the other after.

The combination of these two great medicines brings into co-operation such well-known substances as sarsaparilla, iron, nux and pepsin, best for the blood, nerves and digestive organs.

This combination is especially recommended in cases that are scrofulous, or rheumatic, anemic and nervous, or where the blood is both impure and pale, deficient in iron.

In cases where a laxative is needed Hood's Pills should be taken.—Adv.

Bear Creek in the afternoon and had the privilege of meeting this loyal little band. The Utica school, with what they promise to do, grades 85 per cent; they have promised to make their school 100 per cent, and I feel that they will do it. The school at Bear Creek is inactive just now. I trust the way will open for them to start up again soon.

I attended the first quarterly conference at Capitol Street Wednesday night. It was a fine conference. They are making great plans for the coming year and I feel sure that God will help them to carry some of them out. Contests between Capitol Street and Brookhaven have awakened an interest that did not exist before. They have each scored one Sunday, and both their schools report a larger attendance than ever before. I am glad this has stimulated both schools to greater things.

The latter part of April and the first of May we hope to make a rapid tour of all the charges in the Conference in the interest of the Sunday school work, and if there are any Sunday school workers who would like to help us in this effort, please let us know.

Write us your tronbles and your victories. Use the Sunday School Board; we are here really, truly to serve all of the work and the workers. Pray for me. JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

AT WORK AT D'LO, MISS.

Notwithstanding inclement weather and sickness, our school as a whole shows an increase in average attendance, while our married ladies' and gentlemen's classes have increased at least 25 per cent within the last two months. Our offerings remain good, the average weekly contribution for the past quarter being $20.73.

We have completed the "Visitation Campaign," with encouraging results, and are now preparing for the "Evangelistic Campaign." During this time we will have a 3-minute, soul-stirring talk each Sunday by a member. The warmth from the spiritual fires has already been felt.

Our aim is to win every lost soul in D'Lo for Christ. Pray for us.

S. G. ARMSTRONG, Supt.

THE LADIES' AID SOCIETY, AT HERMANVILLE, MISS.

For a time, our work was at a standstill, but now every member is awake, with the realization of what is before them. The success of two recent undertakings of the Ladies' Aid Society was apparent in the goodly returns.

At an apron party given at the home of Mrs. S. H. Cleveland, our efficient president, about sixty-five dollars were received. The funds being raised now will be used in painting and repairing the church and parsonage. Not less pleasing were the results of the "Valentine Shower," when gifts of furnishings for bedroom, dining-room, and kitchen were received for the parsonage.

Our membership is steadily growing, even reaching into the communities of other churches which have no organizations of their own.

The ladies of the Society find great pleasure in knowing that Mrs. T. A. Ferguson, wife of our beloved pastor, is ever ready to lend a helping hand; and the success of our undertakings is, in no small measure, due to this fact.

Our leader will soon be moving away from town, but not so far that we will need to give up her services as president. For this we are thankful, as it would be difficult to find another who could take her place.

Mrs. C. N. BRIDGER,
Correspondent.

FROM SALLIS, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I thought a line or two from me would not be out of place from this part of the work. On our return here for the third year, we were received again by the best, biggest-hearted, most loyal people that are to be found anywhere.

Brother R. O. Brown, the faithful presiding elder of the Durant District, being detained at home on account of illness, sent Brother A. C. McCorkle to hold our first quarterly conference. At the 11 o'clock hour on Saturday, the 14th inst., Brother McCorkle brought us a strong and stirring message on the subejct of the Superannuate Endowment Fund. He then proceeded, after refreshments, to hold the quarterly conference, the board of stewards making a $122 salary for the presiding elder and a $1000 salary for the preachers in charge, which is $222 over last year. The finances are in advance of any former year. At the conclusion of the service on Sunday, our church here was dedicated.

We are starting better this year than any former year. The prospects are bright for a glorious year.

Yours sincerely,
T. L. OAKES, P. C.

APPRECIATION OF THE VETERANS.

Dear Brother Carley: On February 14, I had an interesting and profitable experience—I sat for awhile and listened to a conversation between Revs. W. W. Simmons and T. W. Adams. Yes, it was interesting indeed to listen to their past experiences and get their ideas of preaching and preachers. Brother Adams was in the cabinet ten years and Brother Simmons eight years, and of course they have had ample opportunities to learn some things. While they are not on the "effective" list, their hearts are in the work and they are interested in every movement of the church. Brother Adams was visiting his daughter here and plying his trade as advertised in the Advocate. His health has improved since Conference. Brother Simmons has been confined to his bed for two or three weeks, but at this writing is able to sit up a part of the time. My hat is off to these "war-horses," who have grown gray in the harness and who worked and sacrificed so much more than the average preacher of to-day does. J. A. WELLS.

FOUR QUESTIONS WITH MYSELF.

1. How long would it take to make my community really Christian if every other follower of Christ worked at it and prayed about it just as I do?
2. How long would it take to make my whole nation really Christian if all Christians gave their prayers and efforts and money toward it just as I am doing?
3. How long would it take to make disciples of all the nations if all other Christians were to give this great program of Christ the place in their lives that it has in mine?
4. Have I any moral right to expect or demand of other Christians, or even of preachers and missionaries, any service or sacrifice for Christ that I am unwilling to give myself?

The work of winning the world to Christ is my work as really and as fully as it is the work of any one else. Let me not avoid or shirk it.—J. Campbell White.

OVERWORKED WOMEN SHOULD HEED THIS ADVICE

New Orleans, La.:—"My mother has always relied on Dr. Pierce's medicines for use in her family. When I was a girl, thru over-work I became in very poor health. I lost in flesh, became very weak and nervous and my limbs and back ached all the time. I suffered from functional irregularity and was a physical wreck when my mother had me take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and just a few bottles completely restored me to good health."—Mrs. E. Giesler, 710 Octavia St.

Killed by Poisons

All scientists agree that poisonous products in the blood are climinated by the kidneys and liver. The kidneys act as a kind of filter for these products. When the kidneys are changed or degenerated, by disease or old age, then these poisons are retained in the body. Dr. Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N.Y., says that you should drink plenty of water to flush the kidneys. Then procure Anuric. This Anuric drives the uric acid out. Scientific men have learned that in gout, also rheumatism, poisonous uric acid crystals are deposited in or about the joints, in the muscles—where inflammation is set up.

Geneva, Ark.:—"I had a bad spell of kidney and bladder trouble. Was in a sanitarium twice and had medicine from two doctors and took four or five different kinds of kidney and bladder medicines. I then bought Anuric Tablets, and I am cured sound and well—have no symptoms of my old trouble. Can walk two miles and back and do my housework and washing, am 'tough as a pine knot.' Anuric is the best medicine I ever tried My husband, too, says it is fine."—Mrs. Jennie B. Langdon, Route 1, Box 63.

END OF EIGHT YEARS MISERY

Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Recovered.

Newark, N. J.—"The doctor said I had an organic trouble and treated me for several weeks. At times I could not walk at all and I suffered with my back and limbs so I often had to stay in bed. I suffered off and on for eight years. Finally I heard that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was a good medicine and tried it with splendid effect. I can now do my housework and my washing. I have recommended your Vegetable Compound and your Blood Medicine and three of my friends are taking them to advantage. You can use my name for a testimonial."—Mrs. Theresa Coventry, 75 Burnett St., Newark, N. J.

Obituaries

On October 28, 1919, little OLLIE, daughter of J. F. and F. E. Hill, was called by the death angel to take up her abode in heaven. We cannot say this of all who are called, but Jesus took a little child in his arms and blessed it, and said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven," and we have no doubt as to where Ollie is. Had Ollie lived two days longer, she would have been six years old. Her name was placed on the Cradle Roll of the Mount Olivet Sunday school in her infancy, and she was a member of the Card Class when the death angel called her home. Ollie had just begun in literary school when the fatal illness, which was only of a few days' duration, took hold on her, and she bore the same without a murmur. She was preceded to heaven several years by a little brother, who was taken at about the same age as she. Father, mother, and one brother are left to mourn her sudden taking away, which seems almost unbearable, but at the same time we must remember that "The Lord giveth, and that he taketh away," and that he has only taken his own, who will await our coming.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, God in his wisdom has seen fit to call to eternal rest our beloved friend and sister, Mrs. J. L. Burrow, who has for many years occupied a very important place in our midst, maintaining under all circumstances a character untarnished and a reputation above reproach, therefore be it resolved:

First—That we, the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Byhalia, Miss., feel that we have sustained a great loss; but in our grief, we rejoice that our loss is her eternal gain, that she has passed from death unto life.

Second—That the life of this faithful member, loving wife and mother, constant friend and helper, may prove a daily inspiration to her loved ones and to the members of our Society.

Third—That we extend to the family, who will so much miss her dear face and motherly advice, our deepest sympathy.

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions be sent the family, a copy to the Nashville Advocate, a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and a copy to the South-Reporter for publication.

Signed by: Mrs. J. L. Yeary, Mrs. Walter Shinnault, Mrs. C. T. Floyd.

FROM ACKERMAN, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We can never know to-day what to-morrow will bring; life is uncertain, death is sure. At the last session of North Mississippi Conference, Bishop J. C. Kilgo read us out for Ackerman charge, and on Wednesday, December 3, 1919, we found ourselves in the good town of Ackerman. We made our way to the parsonage, and found there a number of ladies, anxiously waiting to welcome the new pastor and his family. Upon arriving at the parsonage, we were introduced to the good people there, and shown a good, warm fire. After a few minutes of pleasant conevrsation, and a hearty welcome by all, we were left alone. After the good people had gone, we took a stroll through the parsonage and found it well furnished, and many tokens of love and appreciation; upon entering the dining room, we found the table ready spread with a most delicious dinner.

We have never been more pleasantly situated then we are here at Ackerman. The people are exceedingly kind to us. They have already brought us under many obligations to them. When we had to leave Corinth, we did so with a heavy heart, because we loved those people there, but we have already learned to love these people. May God in His goodness enable us to show them at least in some degree that we do love and appreciate them.

Carley, we have lots of people here who love God and are doing their best to serve Him. We have a good live Sunday school at all of our churches, each one doing some very fine work. Twice a month I am blessed with the privilege of sitting with the Bible class in Ackerman, of which J. Lem Seawright is teacher, and more than once have I been moved to tears as he talked to us of God and His goodness to us. We have one Woman's Missionary Society, that is doing some good work in helping to put more spiritual life into the church, and at the same time they are keeping the parsonage well furnished. At their first meeting in January they adopted an orphan at our orphanage, in Jackson, Miss. They are now clothing their new adoption.

Our first quarterly conference was held yesterday (February 23). It was a great day with us, everybody in a good humor and good spirits. Everybody seemed to be interested in the great work of the church. Eighteen out of twenty-two official members were present. They gave the pastor a raise in salary of more than 25 per cent over that of last year, with everything paid in full to date.

We must not forget to tell you about our four junior stewards. They are less than fifteen years of age, yet they are stewards in the great M. E. Church, South. They are from Weir, Miss., and were all in their places. They made their own report, which was 100 per cent. It was something new to our presiding elder pro tem., Brother A. C. McCorkle, who was acting for our presiding elder, Rev. R. O. Brown, who was ill with the "flu." Yet he recognized them, and after finding out the kind of work that they were doing among the children, he said that if he had to do without one of the two, that he would do without the Epworth Leagues. McCorkle would make a good presiding elder; while here he gave us two very fine sermons, to the delight of all.

God is doing great things for us. We have received eight into the church, and baptized two infants since Conference. Thus, we are moving on, working, hoping, expecting, and praying for a great revival in all of our churches this year.

Fraternally,
A. L. DAVENPORT.

HE HAS FAST HOLD.

There is a simple child's story which always seems to me to convey a profound and too often forgotten truth. It is the tale of the boy who, with his father, was climbing some steep and dangerous place and to whom a voice from below suddenly called up: "Have you fast hold of your father?" "No," was the immediate answer, "but he has fast hold on me." That is the first, the main thing—not the sense of our keeping hold of God (if it were all, how weak, how ready to fall we all should be!), but rather the sense that our Heavenly Father has hold of us, and that, because he is greater than all, no one is able to pluck us out of his hand.

"And so I go on, not knowing.
I would not if I might.
I would rather walk in the dark with God
Than walk alone in the light;
I would rather walk with God by faith
Than walk alone by sight."

—George Milligan.

Comb Sage Tea in Faded or Gray Hair

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft

FROM THE MONTPELIER CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: I want a little space in the Advocate to tell about three great things.

First, about what a great charge the Montpelier charge is: As no doubt you know, at the North Mississippi Conference in Aberdeen I was assigned to the Montpelier charge, Aberdeen District. As our parsonage was burned Conference week, I didn't have a parsonage to move into; so, as I own a house in Winona, with the consent of all concerned I moved to Winona. I went to work on my charge and found six fine churches, and the best people in the Conference. I received a great welcome, and was very much pleased with the outlook. Everybody seems to be optimistic.

Secondly, on the first Sunday in February Brother Jaco was with me and preached three fine sermons for me on the Centenary work; on Monday morning following, Brother Dorsey, our presiding elder came to us and preached a very fine sermon and held a great quarterly conference for us. The good people raised the preacher's salary, and also bought a nice parsonage at Woodland. We hope to get possession of it in a few months. Brother Dorsey did us fine work as an elder—he is a great man.

Thirdly and lastly, not least however, we announced some weeks ago that we would have our revival meeting at Woodland, to begin the third Sunday in this month. We very fortunately secured the services of Brother C. E. Hendley, of Artesia, Miss., to do the singing for us. The pastor did the preaching and Brother Hendley did the leading in song; and the good people of Woodland worked with us and we had a great revival meeting—received five members on profession of faith. The Lord was with us in great power. We had the best singing I ever heard in my life; Brother Hendley is one of the finest singers in the South. Everybody did everything they could for the meeting. It was good to be there.

We are praying for a great revival at every church on our charge. Brother Hendley has kindly consented to sing for me in one other meeting on my charge this year; it is a great treat to any preacher to have him. Pray for us that this may be the greatest year of our ministerial life.

Fraternally,
T. J. HALFACRE.

Winona, Miss., Feb. 23.

FROM THE BENTON CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: Please allow me just a little space in the Advocate for a few lines from the Benton charge. We arrived here in December, and I filled my first appointment on the fourth Sunday in December. We found a fine people here (Yazoo County people, you know), and they gave us a cordial reception. We are delighted with the work and believe we are going to have a good year. Brother Morse, our good presiding elder, was with us on the 12th inst., and preached us a fine and helpful sermon from 2 Cor. 12:9: "My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness." Brother Morse is not only a good presiding elder but also a good preacher; his sermons are always good. After the service, the ladies served a fine dinner and, believe me, everybody enjoyed it. After the repast we held our quarterly conference. It was a pleasant occasion. The presiding elder urged the stewards to give a raise on the pastor's salary. This was readily agreed to, and a raise of $200 over last year was made. These people believe in taking care of their pastor.

I expect to secure more than my quota of subscribers to the Advocate. It is my purpose to more than double the number. We are earnestly praying for great revivals in all our churches.

Wishing you and all the Advocate readers a prosperous year, I am,

Yours sincerely,
J. B. KING.

Indigestion

DO YOU KNOW that indigestion can be cured, permanently cured, so that you can eat any kind of food that you crave? It has been done not only once, but in almost every case when Chamberlain's Tablets are used. An instance: Mr. J. EDITORIAL COMMENT

UNSEEN BURDENS.

Some of the most heavily laden souls carry burdens that cannot be seen. A smiling face may hide a heart that is quivering in anguish—a cheerful word may conceal a consuming sorrow. It is well, perhaps, that it is so. If we could see all the burdens under which our friends labor, our own hearts would break with the agony of their woe. How blessed to remember, though, that an Unseen Helper gives strength for the unseen burden! With His help, all burdens become easy.

LINING UP.

Race track gambling in Louisiana is doomed. We have taken occasion several times lately to call attention to the evils of such gambling, especially as it is practiced in New Orleans, and to make mention of the fact that various representative organizations of the city are urging the adoption of legislation that will effectually stop it. The latest action of this kind was taken by the Members' Council of the Association of Commerce on Thursday of last week, when a resolution protesting against the vice was adopted by an overwhelming majority. The interest taken in this matter is indicated by the fact that a standing rule of the Council, to the effect that a resolution introduced at one meeting must go over for action until the next, was set aside and the resolution was adopted "with a whoop," as the report of the proceedings in one of the daily newspapers expressed it. The forces are lining up rapidly and powerfully; therefore, we say that horse racing is doomed in Louisiana.

CONSISTENCY.

Consistency in matters of principle is naturally looked for and expected in people who profess to have regard for the opinions of their fellow-men. The habit of "saying one thing, and doing another," very quickly brings into disrepute even the most likable individual. Many a man has lost his influence in a community because his practice was not in keeping with his profession. And yet there is constantly danger of our forgetting the fact that even our most trivial words and actions have their part in the sum total of the things by which people judge us. We might almost say that it is the little things that determine the estimation in which we are held by our friends generally. It is only the principle of consistency in all things that will enable us to maintain our character as well as reputation through the long days of trial. Consistency is a virtue, however, only when it keeps us in the right.

A NEWS ITEM.

"Prohibition does not prohibit"—but we noticed in a great Southern daily a few days ago that the fact that two men had been arrested and fined in a near-by city for being intoxicated was counted worthy of space as an item of news. In the "wet" days, of course no mention would have been made of it. The prohibition law is not perfect, but it seems to be working pretty well.

A FAITHFUL SERVANT.

The recent final financial statement of the National War Work Council of the Young Men's Christian Association furnishes full and exact information as to the extent and nature of the work performed in behalf of our naval and military forces, both overseas and at home. From April 26, 1917 to December 31, 1919, the total receipts amounted to the huge sum of $161,722,649.42. Of this amount, $129,082,917.43 was expended in carrying out the various forms of work that the Association had undertaken, leaving an unexpended balance of $32,639,731.99. The reasons for this balance are to be found in the fact that the naval and military forces have been demobilized much more rapidly than was originally contemplated, that the Government has assumed responsibility for much of the work formerly done by the Association, that the French Government has generously remitted the large item of railway transportation, and that salvage operations overseas have been remarkably successful. The statement is too voluminous for reproduction, but it furnishes indisputable proof that this great organization kept careful account of all funds entrusted to it, and that it expended them carefully and wisely. We have heard some criticism of the Association's work, of course; but here we have a satisfactory report of its activities. In spite of all that has been said to the contrary, we cannot escape the conviction that it has been in all things a faithful servant; it deserves, therefore, the commendation of those in whose behalf it labored.

GONE, BUT NOT FORGOTTEN.

A press dispatch from London announces that Oxford University has abolished Greek, as a compulsory subject of study, from its curriculum. It is hard to tell from the account whether the students received the announcement with joy or sorrow—"two hundred undergraduates attired in ancient Greek costumes and carrying rose bowls, in imitation of Greek vases, marched through the town." We are of the opinion, however, that the celebration was one of joy. The sentiment against the study of the "dead languages" has become so strong of late that the teachers of the classics are almost without an occupation—and the average undergraduate is glad of it. But we cannot forget the debt we owe to the ancients, whose learning and wisdom have been handed down to us in the wonderfully flexible and sonorous Greek language, and we have not the slightest doubt that the time will come again when the study of Greek will be revived with as much enthusiasm as men showed during the Renaissance. Perhaps it is as well not to make the study compulsory; the inherent love of beauty and of learning will keep the language alive through all the centuries, and when the utilitarian conception that education is for the sole purpose of enabling one to make a living has passed away—as it ought to disappear, and will—men will turn again to the esthetic subjects of their own free will and accord. "A thing of beauty is a joy forever."

A FORTUNATE CITY.

Mining experts who have examined the situation have recently declared that the city of Richmond, Va., is situated over a vein of coal amounting to billions of tons. It is impossible, of course, to predict what this good fortune may mean for the future industrial development of the city, but we may rest assured that it will constitute one of its great material resources for years to come. It is estimated that it will require from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 properly to develop the newly discovered field, but it is not thought that there will be any difficulty in securing the necessary amount of capital. When we remember that Richmond (along with all other cities) is in easy reach, also, of the infinite resources of Heaven, we cannot but wonder what its future will be. It will find its millions of dollars to dig its treasure from the earth below; will it take advantage of the riches above that are equally accessible? For that matter, most of our cities would do well to turn their attention to the skies for awhile—the source whence all true treasure comes. Fortunate Richmond? Yes, and fortunate all cities which look to Heaven for their wealth.

A POOR KIND OF SYMPATHY.

According to published reports, no male employee of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago may marry unless he is receiving a salary of at least $125 a month. An official of the bank gave the following explanation: "Before prices took the war-time jump, the bank would permit employees getting only $1000 a year to marry. But now the line is drawn at $125 a month, unless the prospective bridegroom can show the chief clerk that his bride has a job and will keep on working, or that their families will help them. We do not want our employees to step into a situation where they may find themselves in desperate need of money, and we are afraid a marriage on short funds is likely to put a man in that situation." We suppose sympathy of any kind is to be duly appreciated; but it is a poor kind of sympathy that causes a great financial institution to forbid its employees to marry because they might get into financial difficulties, while at the same time it continues to pay salaries that it frankly says are not sufficient to support a family. It is a fundamental teaching of morals that a man is worth more than money—but the business world does not seem to have grasped the truth as yet. A practical expression of genuine sympathy would be the raising of salaries to the point where a self-respecting man could afford to marry without losing his position. There is something tremendously wrong in an industrial system that makes it impossible for the laborer to take his place in the divinely sanctioned social order as head of a family.

THE SPIRITUAL STATUS OF CHILDREN.

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

PART II.

The position that, in case of death, infants are in need of some mysterious operation of divine grace to fit them for heaven is shot through with Calvinism and has its basis in the doctrine of original sin or depravity. The unscriptural idea underlying the whole conception is that depravity, or the inherited bias or tendency to sin, excludes from the kingdom and, therefore, from heaven; so, the theologians, in order to escape, according to their erroneous reasoning, the logical consequence of the doctrine of depravity which, as they have mistakenly conceived, is the damnation of dying infants, invented the "dying grace" theory. The question may be asked, Do you reject the doctrine of depravity? I reply, I do not, because all men know it to be true by experience. Besides, it is taught in the Bible as evidenced by this one quotation: "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men; for that all men have sinned." Rom. 5:12. Many similar passages from Holy Writ might be produced to establish the fact, as well as the doctrine, of depravity. No, I do not repudiate the doctrine of depravity, but I do reject, with all the expulsive powers of my soul, the erroneous and exceedingly dangerous conclusions and inferences which theologians have deduced from it, viz., exclusion from the kingdom with the logical sequence of eternal damnation of infants dying in infancy, and, hence, the necessity of the invention of the "dying grace" theory. The truth is that, while all men are born into the world handicapped by the evil tendencies of depravity, no one is excluded from the kingdom by depravity, and no one is responsible for it except Adam, the progenitor of the human race. As an individual of the race, I may and do suffer as a result of Adam's sin, but I deny my responsibility for it, and in view of the atonement, I refuse to accept the teaching of any man who would exclude my child from the kingdom because of Adam's sin. The truth is, depravity or original sin, if you please, does not, as theologians have falsely assumed, exclude from the kingdom or anything else. The only result of depravity is to render men prone to evil, but men are not personally responsible for this proneness; and the only thing which excludes from the kingdom is sin, meaning thereby personal transgression. Depravity in itself is only the accummulation of ancestral inheritances through the centuries which makes personal transgression easy—that's all.

The theologians, erroneously assuming that the removal of the natural tendency to sin is essential to inclusion in the kingdom, have also postulated upon this theory the necessity of Regeneration, or the New Birth; whereas, it is not depravity, but the taint consequent upon personal sin which necessitates regeneration. It is easily within the terrain of the perceivable that if depravity necessitates the New Birth, depravity is eradicated by the same operation of grace; but both observation and experience demonstrate, beyond reasonable controversy, that the inborn tendency toward sin remains in the regenerate and is not removed even by a second work of grace, as is claimed by our "second blessing" friends. This inherited tendency toward sin is that twist in the grain of human nature, a part of the physical and moral constitutions of men, which can be removed only by the process and dissolution of death. It is more than remarkable that, in all of their mental peregrinations, the theologians did not discover the real truth that the atonement of Jesus Christ is a solution for the whole problem. If they had made this glorious discovery, they would never have been under the necessity of inventing the "dying grace" theory to solve for them their doctrinal perplexities—perplexities, indeed, which had no existence except as they were conceived by the minds of men.

Since, as we have seen, only the stain of personal sin, of which small children and infants are incapable, is the only thing which necessitates regeneration, it follows that they do not need to be regenerated in the same sense as adults. It is true, Jesus said, "Ye must be born again," but it must be remembered that he was not talking to a child, but to a full grown man, Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews. When speaking of children he said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." That is, children belong to, or are members of, the kingdom. On another occasion, placing a little child in the midst of the disciples, he said, "Except ye be converted and become as this child, ye shall not enter the kingdom." In other words, the adult must be converted to bring him into the same relation to the kingdom as the child already holds. Yet, the theologians tell us that the child must be regenerated to get into the kingdom. Now, it must be candidly admitted that when the child arrives at the years of discretion, the exact period depending upon the degree of knowledge attained and the training received, something must happen, but it cannot properly be called regeneration, since regeneration implies cleansing; but the child has not sinned and, therefore, needs no cleansing. What then? Coming to the period of accountability, this is what happens: Either the child accepts, rejects, or neglects to accept, Jesus Christ as a personal Savior. If he rejects, or neglects to accept, either act constituting sin, he passes out of the kingdom and now needs to be regenerated to enter the kingdom from which he was excluded by his own act. If he accepts, he merely remains in the kingdom of which he is a member, not by regeneration, but through the atonement.

I have said that children are born into the world already inside the kingdom by virtue of the atonement of Jesus Christ. Now, let us see what the Old and New Testaments have to say of the spiritual status of children, for, after all, the Bible must be accepted as the end of all controversy. Even before his birth, Samuel was dedicated to God—1 Sam. 1:11. On the eighth day after birth, according to the commandment of God, Isaac was circumcised in recognition of his membership in the kingdom—Gen. 21:4. Many other instances could be cited from the Old Testament, but these two will suffice as an example of all. Turning now to the New Testament, we find the following examples: John the Baptist was filled with the Holy Ghost from his mother's womb—Luke 1:15. In Matt. 21:15, 16, we read that when the priests protested against the acclaim of praise offered to Jesus by the children in the temple, Jesus replied, "Have ye never read, Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise?" Then, there are the instances, to which reference has already been made, of the child in the midst, and of Jesus saying to his disciples, who would have forbidden the mothers from bringing their children to him, "Suffer the children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Writing to Timothy, Paul said, "From a child thou hast known the holy scriptures which are able to make thee wise unto salvation." We cannot fail to recall, in this connection, the many household baptisms, which, of course, included the children, performed by the apostles for no assignable reason other than that the children were members of the kingdom. So, from these examples, the irresistible conclusion is forced upon us that children are born into the world as members of the kingdom, and we baptize them in recognition of that fact. Furthermore, St. Paul taught the same blessed truth in his letter to the Romans when he said: "Therefore, as by the offense of one, judgment came upon all men unto condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." Evidently, the Apostle here intends to teach that the atonement is as wide in its scope as was the sin of Adam; otherwise, the atonement is a failure, and the doctrine of the Baptists that all children are born into the world lost is true. But I thank God that I believe with all my heart that the atonement is co-extensive with the sin of old father Adam, and, therefore, if the sin of Adam put the children out of the kingdom, the atonement of Jesus Christ, who on every possible occasion did not hesitate to reveal his love for the children, put them back in the kingdom which is their birthright, despite the Calvinism of all the churches, and the efforts of all the theologians with Calvinistic tendencies to cast them out.

The Calvinistic error in regard to the children, hoary with age, ignores the fact that the grace of God is older than the fall of Adam and that when he fell, he fell on the cross of Christ with all his posterity with him. Therefore, the evangelistic efforts of the church should be directed, not toward the conversion of childhood, but toward directing it in the path of life where its baby feet were set from the day of birth by the grace of the atonement of Jesus Christ.

A PLAIN STATEMENT IN REGARD TO THE ACTION OF THE JOINT COMMISSION ON UNIFICATION WHICH WAS RECENTLY IN SESSION AT LOUISVILLE.

By Thos. D. Samford.

(This article by Judge Samford, a distinguished member of the Joint Commission, is reprinted from the Alabama Christian Advocate at the request of several of our readers.—Editor.)

Editor Advocate: Since I have been a member of the Joint Commission for the unification of the Northern Methodist and Southern Methodist Churches I have consistently refrained from making any statements for publication in regard to any progress made or lack of progress made as the result of the labors of this Commission. What little I have had to say I have said in the Commission and to the Commissioners, and have left all statements to be made by and through the regular authorized channels. But so many inqulries have been made of me as to what was accomplished and as to what was done by the Commission at its recent meeting in Louisville, and so many statements have gone out from Louisville and elsewhere in regard to that meeting which I consider misleading and mystifying, I really deem it my duty to my church, and especially to the membership in the two Alabama Conferences, to make a candid statement on the subject.

It would take a paper of much greater length than I have the time now to write or than you have the space to print to give anything like a full statement of the subject; suffice it to say: we have met a number of times in a number of places covering a period of several years, first and last, and the discussions in the Joint Commission, to say nothing of the endless talk in the separate Commissions, will fill several large volumes and thousands of printed pages, and there has never been a single paragraph finally agreed upon which either Commission has indicated a willingness to adopt and recommend to its church or its General Conference.

It is true that a majority of the Joint Commission at Louisville adopted a carefully worded resolution transmitting a so-called plan to the respective General Conferences of the two churches, but the plan was in no sense endorsed nor recommended by either Commission; and the well-nigh unanimous comment by the Southern Commissioners formally stated in the Commission and out of it, in effect, was: this plan does not meet our views and we do not recommend it, but, a number of the Commissioners added, it is the best plan under all the circumstances we are now able to conclude, and we simply transmit it to the General Conference for whatever action it may see fit to take. The solemn truth is, the two churches are so widely at variance in many respects along certain lines, it must be apparent to every thoughtful student of the situation that the effort at unification is premature and that an unnatural, inharmonious and forced compact is in no true sense an agreement and will do more harm than good. If a real, genuine unification of the two churches is ever to come, haste must be made very slowly.

It must be said, the Commissioners have been painstaking and laborious and have devoted a great deal of time and thought to the solution of the many complex problems involved in the subject of unification, and they all deserve the thanks of the church for their earnest and unselfish efforts to work out a feasible plan, but, in my humble judgment, they just have not been able to do it. And instead of passing a resolution merely transmitting a patched-up plan, which neither Commission recommends, we sought to report that we have made an earnest effort but have simply failed to agree on any feasible plan which we are willing to endorse. I believe the plan, which for convenience I shall designate as the Louisville plan, is neither within the letter nor the spirit of the resolution of the General Conference of our church authorizing the appointment of the Commission. For this reason I voted against even the resolution merely to transmit. Bishop Denny, Bishop Ainsworth, Dr. Dickey, Judge McGowan and I voted in the negative. It was stated that if Judge White had been present he would have voted in the negative. A number of others voted to transmit who frankly stated they were opposed to the plan and reserved the right to oppose its adoption by the General Conference and the church.

Many objections to the plan in relation to various subjects will doubtless be elaborated from time to time. For the present I make mention of that one involving the status of the colored members in the reorganized church, as this is the one concerning which the church seems most interested. On this subject the plan to be submitted contained what many believe to be an absolute and almost total yielding to the demands of our Northern brethren. I almost used the word "surrender," but "yielding" is perhaps a more respectful word to use, and certainly nothing has been done nor said from the beginning to the end of the negotiations which has not been in the highest degree brotherly and Christian. I hope, therefore, I may not say or write anything that will be out of harmony with that spirit. I will briefly state the process by which the yielding was done.

When we first met at Baltimore the Southern Commission formulated a statement setting forth the basic principles upon which it felt justified in conducting the negotiations. One of these was that we must recognize race consciousness. This was accepted to mean the most decent and comprehensive statement of the South's conception of the negro problem. No further progress was made at this meeting on this subject. It will be remembered that the Oklahoma resolution specifically suggested that the Southern church felt that the colored membership should be constituted into a separate organization with a General Conference of its own and without representation in the General Conference of the proposed reorganized church.

At the second meeting months afterwards at Traverse City a majority of a sub-committee suggested a very limited representation of the colored membership in the General Conference of the proposed reorganized church, but the Joint Commission handled the subject very delicately and proceeded no further, doubtless fearing a rupture, a majority of the Southern Commissioners at that time being unwilling to make the concession insisted upon by the Northern brethren. At that time the Northern brethren were insisting more on the principle of colored representation in the General Conference than on the amount, and the Southern Commissioners had not yielded their stand on the "basic principle" of "recognition of race consciousness."

At the third meeting in Savannah in January, 1918, the Northern Commissioners—or a certain number of them—proposed a very limited representation of the colored membership in the General Conference, the supreme law-making body of the church. After a lengthy and notable debate on the subject the Southern Commission by a majority vote yielded the principle, and it was accordingly agreed that the colored membership of the Northern church should have and be limited to ten delegates in the General Conference.

The Joint Commission thereupon adjourned at Savannah to meet a few weeks later at St. Louis. At the St. Louis meeting the Northern Commission backed out of their Savannah agreement. The Savannah agreement was only tentative, of course, and they had a right to back out. The St. Louis meeting came to an abrupt close and no agreement had been reached.

Subsequently in May, 1918, the General Conference of the Southern church convened in Atlanta and reaffirmed the Oklahoma resolution containing the suggestion in regard to the status of the negro in the reorganized church and provided for the continuance of a Commission, which Commission is composed largely of the members of the old Commission.

This new Commission or revised Commission, upon invitation of the Northern brethren, met in joint session at Cleveland in July, 1919, and there the Northern Commission stated frankly, clearly and emphatically that they would not negotiate except upon a basis of proportionate representation for the colored membership. This was not agreed to at the time by the Southern Commission and an ad interim committee of fourteen members was appointed to meet and restate the entire plan, including the status of the negro. Thereupon, the Joint Commission adjourned, apparently having accomplished nothing except to appoint a committee.

The ad interim committee subsequently met at Richmond and appointed a sub-committee of four, who drafted a plan which was transmitted to the Joint Commission, but without recommendation. The Joint Commission met in Louisville in January, and out of the deliberations there came the plan which I have referred to as the Louisville plan. In this plan it is proposed to give the colored membership in the proposed reorganized church full proportionate representation in the General Conference — the supreme law-making body of the church; and to give to the colored Conferences in the proposed reorganized church the same proportionate voting power as the white Conferences have on all constitutional questions which must be sent down to the Annual Conferences for passage.

Now, this is a very vital question in our church, South. It is the same question, or a part of the same question, which in another form separated the two churches back yonder in the days of our fathers. It is still fresh in the minds of a large part of the older membership of the Southern church, who have during all these years worshiped and enjoyed their religion in the church as it is. I was not willing and I am not willing to shock all these old saints to the point of thrusting them out of the church which they have loved and supported through times which tested their faith and loyalty. I was not willing and I am not willing by any act of mine to reflect upon the memory of our sainted dead who suffered humiliation and sacrifices unutterable to build the M. E. Church, South, which is to-day one of the most virile and spiritual forces on earth.

I have been during all the years of my manhood in thorough sympathy with our Southern Anglo-Saxon civilization, which has wrought a pure type of Americanism which is now the greatest bulwark of our republic. This Anglo-Saxon civilization, for the best interest of both races, and in furtherance of peace and harmony and good will, and, I believe, too, the glory of God, has provided separate accommodations for the white and black races on street cars, railroad trains, places of amusement and all public gatherings; separate schools and separate churches, separate marriage laws and a practical disfranchisement of the immature and ignorant colored voter; and this Southern civilization has unalterably decreed that this immature and undeveloped race shall not make the laws for our Government. Now, I was not willing and I am not willing to stand for all this as a Christian citizen and eviscerate it and proclaim it all wicked and unworthy by favoring the very policy in church government that I have resolutely opposed in social life and civil affairs.

I have been a steadfast friend to the colored people as a race and as individuals. Everybody who knows me and knows my life knows this to be true; and I believe my convictions on these questions are not only for the social, political and religious betterment of the white race, but for the black race as well. I will not here elaborate my views on these questions, but I have thought them out in the fear of God and face to face with conditions which I think I understand.

Again, the adoption of the Louisville plan, in effect, would be little less than a shameful and unforgivable desertion of the C. M. E. Church, which was set apart and instituted by the Southern Methodist Church, and which for half a century has been the closest ally of our church among the colored people, and the membership of which to-day constitute the most conservative element among the colored people of the South. I will not now further discuss this phase of the subject; but I believe it will loom large in the minds and hearts of the people before they will consent for such injustice to be done.

I am glad the Louisville plan was not recommended by our Commission, for I do not believe it will be acceptable to the church.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

TRIBUTE TO NEWSPAPER WORK.

It has often been said that the religious papers of the country are not adequately appreciated and that most of them have a rather trying experience in these days of the high price of paper and the high cost of printing. On the other side of the case is a rather unusual illustration of how some people do appreciate the work of some religious publications.

The Watchman-Examiner, a leading religious publication of New York, with more than 100 years of age back of it, recently announced that it would have to increase its subscription price 50 cents a year to cover partly the increased cost of paper. Some generous-hearted subscriber, whose name has not been published, fearing that this would lessen the circulation of the paper, sent to the editor his check for $5000 with the request that it be used for the purpose of enabling the paper to continue its subscription rate without advance. The editor announced that if another $5000 check should be forthcoming for the same purpose, it would be possible to carry on the work for another year without any increase in the rate of subscription. And the following week's issue brought forth the announcement that the second check for $5000 had been received.

The Manufacturers Record has been in existence for a good many years. It has seen the ups and downs of religious and secular papers alike, but it has never before found a case where two men from an unselfish desire to advance the interest of a publication voluntarily contributed $5000 each to the cause. The fact that two men have done this in the case of the Watchman-Examiner is a hopeful sign that the religious papers of the country are at last to come into their own, with a recognition on the part of the public of their very great value to laymen as well as to ministers. Perchance there is also an awakening realization on the part of the people to the full value of all good newspapers. We hope so.—Manufacturers Record.

He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.—Ps. 23:3.

MRS. D. C. LANGFORD—AN APPRECIATION.

No language that might be used to portray the virtues or tell of our appreciation of a consecrated Christian life, would be considered extravagant in expressing the love and appreciation of all who knew her, for Mrs. D. C. Langford. She was born in 1854, and was first married to Mr. Henry Bryan, who died in 1882. In November, 1883, she was happily married to Rev. D. C. Langford, of the Mississippi Conference. For 31 years she was the wife of an itinerant minister, sharing all his joys and sorrows, his successes and failures, his trials and triumphs. During all these years she was a blessing to him, his home and his children.

As stated at the funeral service, when the time came for Brother Langford to ask for the superannuated relation, it was a real honor to the town of Morton that he and his wife should select that place in which to build their home and spend their remaining days. The people loved them and felt that their presence was a real benediction.

On the afternoon of October 21, 1919, Sister Langford suffered a fainting spell in the cemetery while working about her husband's grave. She soon revived, and that night told those who were with her to go to sleep, that she felt much better. Sometime during the night her spirit took its flight for its home on high.

When the message came to me the next morning telling of her departure, after the first shock of the sad news I said, How greatly she was blessed—no long days and weeks and months of suffering, no weary waiting on this side looking to the other shore longing to depart. She went to sleep in the evening, and in the morning awoke in the Father's house.

She loved God and loved His church and was always found in her place at every service if able to be present. She will be greatly missed by the church, the Missionary Society and the good people of Morton, but by none more than her pastor.

TOO MUCH MUSTARD.

By Rev. James H. Felts.

Mr. Editor: We have too many doctors. A doctor is a necessary nuisance, and an abomination in the sight of Christian scientists; nevertheless he is a luxury not to be denied the poorest sufferer. Most of them are honorable, industrious, faithful. Many of them are really capable. All of them practice on us poor mortals from the cradle to the dissecting room. Some of them are pretentious quacks, fattening on the credulity of the "dear people." But there are doctors and doctors. Modern "movements" are furnishing a most luxuriantly bountiful crop. Just now they are telling us how to hasten the "millennium dawn" at so much per hasten. A blind faith may accomplish wonders. A "faith without works is dead"—a worthless something. That is the prize pole.

The ordinary pastor (that means most of us) is being flattered, courted, complimented, called the key man; impelled, cajoled, encouraged, pushed, shoved, sought, deluged with mail, posters, signs, methods, calls to world movements and world meets; belabored, implored, besought, instructed, distracted. He is called Up-to-date, Down-to-date or Out-of-date, according to the readiness and success of his response to the multitudinous calls of the doctors.

He is instructed to observe certain days, such as Children's Day, Mothers' Day, Fathers' Day, Father and Son Day, Anti-Saloon Day, Temperance Day, Sanitation Day, Swat-the-fly Day, Oil-the-mosquito Day, Law and Order Day, American Day, Good Literature Day, Better Orchards Day, Thrift Day, Good Roads Day, Better Babies Day, Education Day, Uplift Day, and all the other days, including T. B. Day, Hospital Day, Woman's Day (she already has it), and (Have you any more "caps," Mr. Devil?) I am listening for Tombstone Day, Insurance Day, Organ and Piano Day, and P.E. Real-estate Week. (It would not show proper respect and appreciation to observe less than a week for the P. E.'s.) I desist. No one man can name them all without taking the rest cure. "The live pastor is doing it." Alas, poor Domine! Peace to his ashes!

The end is not yet. He must raise all the money these doctors (specialists) are sent out to raise. When a new finance doctor (a few happy exceptions) is born, he goes to his desk, "calls the dogs—Burleson woods—and says: "Now Tige, if I don't tree a coon, it's your fault. You know the trail, the habitat of the game. Bark, old fellow." But these operating specialists come high. Tige has barked till he is so hoarse he can't whine. Also, his feet have gotten tender. All he can do is "grin," wag his tail and look like six-bits at a fashionable cafe.

We have a growing list of specialists in, around, and near our own church more numerous than Solomon's concubines, and he had so many he couldn't name them all. "Stars of the first magnitude," as busy as a new P. E. They all have the "no cure, no pay" remedy, and they range from the Interchurch World Movement to obliterating, wiping out, forever destroying the imaginary line between Yankee Doodle and Dixie. We ordinary pastors are told, by mail, that every "live one" is attending this special Con-fer-ence, Meet, Institute, Convention, Assembly, Congress, regardless of the fact that they often meet the same date hundreds of miles apart. "The leading doctors" are at both places ;"at one and the same time." Two such calls are before me now. Beats the fancy circus rider of former years. She rode two horses at once, but they were close together, and headed the same way, at the same rate of speed.

It begins to seem to me that every fellow who can hatch an idea, even from borrowed eggs, calls a conference, publishes a paper, sends out literature, and proceeds to uplift. I have been uplifted till the air is getting too thin for me to breathe. Some of these experts can hatch a non-fertile, stale egg, give it a World Movement, and "she goes." Who is financing this H. C. of Uplift? Another drive coming? "Bark, Tige."

"Friend 'o mine," when Jesus Christ in the human heart fails to make a man generous, liberal with his finances, fraternal in his spirit, loyal in his attitude, missionary to the core, clean in his citizenship, progressive in his work, awake to the growing demands of His kingdom—all the calls of all the doctors in all creation will be without avail. There will be nothing left but Christian Science. As that is neither Christian nor science, not even good nonsense, what is a fellow to do? If he does nothing, he is an unmitigated donkey; if he tries all, be is an unadulterated donkey; if he is against Union, he is a prejudiced donkey; if he is for Union, he is a bootlicking donkey. One donkey figured in sacred history as somewhat stubborn, refusing to advance—just stood his ground. And the angel of the Lord was there. Believe I will try that plan—just stick to my hush in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. It's sure good enough, broad enough, progressive enough for me. Besides, I doubt if God is in these great, noisy, pretentious World Movements any more than He is in that form of Spiritism that has gripped England, and has landed in America. Prayer, consecration, New Testament giving, a heart hungry for Christ, a vision colored by Calvary, a well ordered agency through which to speak and work is just about enough for any man. It takes no legion of specialists to tell us these things. Just a few men could "spy out the land." A few more could handle our finances, and they ought to be laymen. Most of our specialists would render the church better service in the pastorate. Laymen could and would do their work better. We need real, live, progressive business men in the "departments" of church work. Fewer salaries and larger would get them. The Laymen's Movement will never move till laymen are put at the head, heart and feet of it. We could command the best talent if we would. They wouldn't call on the preachers to do the work for them, either. Hear it?

They were eating and talking. One of them was carelessly pouring while talking. The talk was chiefly hot air, the stuff poured tabasco. Between breaths of hot air he injected tabasco-covered food. Hot air, hot sauce, and food mixed. Silence, save for a peculiar intake of breath. Tears gushed, muscles contracted, stomach heaved, mouth "flew open," food turned for a moment like clothes in a patent washing machine—then came the deluge. When he was able to speak again, he said, gently, but fervently, "Too Much Mustard." Well, that is about what I think of most of these movements, shovements, pullments. More Christian simplicity and less confusion of tongues would certainly help some. So it seems to me. Selah.

After these "few, feeble remarks," I await the coming of the next specialist, expert, movement, wondering if Job knew.

Nothing seems to be more characteristic of the present age than the spirit of change and progress to be found in the business and material world. Modern means of locomotion and communication have so affected men's thoughts and methods that the world hardly seems the same place that it was a score of years ago. Now, if the work of the church is to keep pace with the needs of the world, it stands to reason that its policies and practices must adjust themselves to these altered conditions.

For a number of years past, perhaps a hundred, the chief policy of Methodism has been to propagate the gospel by evangelistic means—the church depended almost entirely upon its ministry for increase in its membership and influence. To-day, we are beginning to realize that Christian education and social service work must be given places side by side with the work of the pulpit. The world is coming to a clear conception of the brotherhood of man and the consequent duty of expressing loving kindness through deeds of mercy to those who have no claim upon us, save that of common brotherhood. Now if the world at large can, through its manifold charitable organizations, show itself aware of this fraternal principle, would it not be a shame for the church to fail to recognize it? Indeed, it seems to me, that if the church is to live, it must fight some of its battles against evil with the modern weapons of the institutional church, which provides not only for men's spiritual needs, but for their social and physical betterment.

Fifty years ago, the churchman who advocated the erection of a Methodist Hospital for the Mississippi Conferences would have been laughed to scorn. To-day, the intelligent thinker is forced, by the progress of the times, to recognize the demand for such an institution. Methodism has often led the vanguard of Christian progress in mission fields, and in many important moral battles here at home, such as the great fight for prohibition. Then does it not seem strange that in the recognition of the need of church hospitals it should be, even now, behind most other denominations? We see that it is all the more peculiar that this should be the case when we remember that Wesley, the great founder of our church, recognized and made use of the principle of reaching men's hearts through ministry to their diseased bodies. But long ere this, we find the Master Himself giving much of his best service to heal the sick and afflicted. He was not only the Great Physician of souls, but also of broken and bruised bodies. Then, in later times, we have had wonderful practical demonstrations on the mission fields of how the gospel may win its way into hearts and homes that would otherwise be closed to Christianity. Why, then, can any true Methodist fail to see the need of denominational, Christian hospitals?

We are glad to believe that most of our church members are awake to the necessity of having a great Methodist Hospital for the Mississippi Conference. The movement was set on foot more than a year ago. The work has advanced as far as the selection of the following committee: I. W. Cooper, Chairman; C. W. Crisler, Secretary; Rev. P. D. Hardin, Mr. John A. McLeod, Mr. L. N. Dantzler, Mr. G. S. Otis, Mr. C. W. Cochran, Rev. H. B. Watkins, Rev. L. L. Roberts, Rev. H. M. Ellis, Rev. J. T. Leggett, Rev. J. S. Wise, Rev.

W. H. Saunders, Mr. James Hand, Mr. W. M. Buie, Rev. J. M. Morse, Mr. S. E. Moreton.

This committee has had several meetings, and has selected, in Hattieshurg, a building site. Within a few weeks, the committee expects to put on a drive, in the bounds of the Mississippi Conference, for half a million dollars, to buy and equip this great institution. If we are to have the Hospital, we should have one of the best in the land—one of which we may be justly proud, because it will be ready to give the most efficient service and will represent the love and loyalty of all forward-looking Methodists.

Several facts have heen thoroughly demonstrated to us hy the national and other "drives" which have been so successfully put through within the past few years. One of these proofs is that we have only to catch the vision of the need and the beauty of any great enterprise and our people are amply ahle and willing to handle the financial part of the work. Let us pray God that he will give Mississippi Methodists the necessary vision to accomplish this great end.

The experience of leaders in all these financial drives has shown another thing—that the spirit of co-operation, which is the vital principle of all business, must he active throughout the entire campaign. Without the full, earnest, prompt co-operation of the ministers and laymen of our churches, the Committee can not expect to succeed. But it surely is not too much to hope and believe that Mississippi Methodists will arise to the greatness of the occasion and by munificent gifts prove themselves worthy of their "day and generation," and of their great church.

AN URGENT APPEAL FOR THE SUPERANNUATES.

My Dear Brother Carley: At the recent session of the North Mississippi Conference, the Board of Finance asked the Bishop, and the Conference unanimously endorsed it, to appoint a man to go into the field to raise two hundred and sixty-five thousand dollars for our superannuates; the first fifteen thousand to be used in meeting and supplying the immediate needs of our superannuates, this being unusually great and urgent, caused hy the cost of living. While everything that keeps body and soul together has advanced, their income last year (1919) was even less than the previous year. The other two hundred and fifty thousand is to be used as an endowment fund. This request of the Board was granted, and Bishop Kilgo appointed Brother A. C. McCorkle to go and seek relief for these helpless and dependent ones.

Even the preachers seem to be unusually interested and the laymen were enthusiastic, and I understand that one or more of them said "that if the preachers did not make some move to relieve the present distress and prevent future want among themselves, that they, the laymen, would take up the matter and appeal to the people for relief for the helpless and dependent ones." Such enthusiasm among our laymen was indeed encouraging.

The Conference man is in the field, hut the unusual wet winter has made it hard for him to get his message of facts to the people; but with the opening of spring and hetter weather conditions, he will be able to go most anywhere. And of course the brethren will do everything to make his coming worth while. Give him a chance, brethren, to present the cold, naked facts to the people and surely they will do the rest. My dear brethren, if you ever expect to become interested and do anything for this fund, now is the time. What we do should be done quickly, if we meet this urgent need and hush this cry of want. Why should we wait for Brother McCorkle to come and tell it all? Can't we and won't we have the way well prepared for him? I am of the opinion that we have hundreds of laymen in the North Mississippi Conference who, if they knew the actual condition of the worthy ones, would be only too glad to help. Won't we speak for these who cannot speak for themselves? And do we remember them and this great effort we are making, in our prayers in the home circle and in the public congregation? God help us as pastors to help and not hinder, for it is very easy for pastors to get in the way of the success of anything of this kind. If he, the pastor, has a sub-normal temperature, we may not be surprised at the zero condition of his congregation. May God help us, my brethren, to warm up to this great undertaking for Christ's sake, for the sake of neglected and sometimes suffering humanity. Why should these men and great women, who have made this country what it is, fit to live in, he hrushed aside and made to stand at the hack door of a great and rich church and beg for a crust of bread, yea, glad to get the crumbs that fall from the rich man's table? Are such conditions satisfactory to the active ministry, and the laity of the North Mississippi Conference? I think not. I earnestly helieve that when our people are informed of the actual conditions that prevail, they will gladly bring relief. God grant that they may! W. S. SHIPMAN,

President of the Board of Finance, North Mississippi Conf.

STATISTICS.

By Rev. M. L. Burton.

The Journal of the Mississippi Conference, 1919, is out, and a creditable piece of work indeed. In looking over its pages, however, especially the pages devoted to statistics, one is reminded that things human are never absolutely perfect. When it comes to making a statistical report, it seems that errors will creep in. It is not my purpose to enter a wholesale criticism, hut to state the case, and suggest a remedy.

At the Conference at McComh, the Bishop advised withholding that part of the statistical report referring to membership, until the elders could supervise and correct. So we assume that the membership table for 1918 is correct. Taking that as a basis, we find that Crawford Street, Vicksburg, in 1918, reported 574 members, and in 1919, 567 members, when the report shows that 64 were received by profession and otherwise, 9 removed, leaving a net gain of 58, and a total membership of 632. Again, Jackson, Galloway Memorial, reported in 1918, 1563 members. In 1919, 1655 members, a gain of 92, when the reports indicate 203 received, and 61 removed, leaving a net gain of 142, and a total membership of 1705. Central, Meridian, reported 1179 members in 1918: In 1919, 1279 members, a gain of 100; the report shows 181 received, 71 removed, leaving a net gain of 110, and a total membership of 1289. Do not think these are sinners above "other Galileans," for we find numbers of instances, but these three are enough. One station reports a loss of 98, whereas it should be a net gain of 8, according to the report. One circuit reports a loss of nearly 300, another 140, and another 104. One district is nearly 500 members short, where there should be a gain.

These reports are made hy the preachers, turned over to the auditors, then to the statistical secretaries, who copy, and then to the editor. The preacher may make the mistake, the statistical secretary may make the mistake, the typesetter may make a mistake and the proofreader let it get by, but it matters not who makes the mistake, it is nevertheless a mistake, and a serious mistake when it comes to counting the membership of a church.

The remedy that I would suggest, would he the appointment of a man whose business it should be to check the membership column of the pastor's report, and where a discrepancy occurs, call the pastor's attention, and have it corrected before report goes to the statistical secretary. Then let the statistical secretary verify his totals, and we will get a more correct record of our membership.

CENTENARY DISBURSES $395,000 TO RAISE PREACHERS' SALARIES.

In practically all the Conferences of our church the mission charges have been graded A-B-C, according to the period during which it is expected that they will remain missions. As a result of the Centenary, which has turned back to the Conference Boards ten per cent of all money collected, all married preachers in our connection who are members of the Conference, with few exceptions, now receive a minimum of $1000 per year. Before the Centenary we had 3943 preachers who received less than this amount.

The Centenary has recently disbursed $395,454.94 to the Boards for the purpose of raising salaries. Some Conferences have not yet received their portions, but checks will be mailed them as soon as the treasurers' bonds are made.

MEETING OF BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The regular annual meeting of the General Conference Board of Education will be held in Nashville, Tenn., April 27, 28, 1920.

W. E. HOGAN, Assistant Sec'y.

How glad the dawn of each new day,
Since I have learned to know
That Love doth ever point the way
'Tis right for me to go.

Though many paths at time appear,
Perplexed I need not be;
The shining cross doth still make clear
The one right path for me.

Serene, nor fearful of regret,
I take the path Love shows;
The end I may not see, but yet
My guide is God, who knows.

"He went about preaching the gospel of the kingdom"

By teaching and example Christ lays upon his Church the supreme duty of Evangelism.

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest"—Evangelism.

"Pray ye the Lord of the harvest, that he send forth laborers into his harvest"—Intercession and Life Service.

"If ye have not been fatihful in the unrighteous mammon (money), who will commit to your trust the true riches? If ye have not been faithful in that which is another's, who will give you that which is your own?—Stewardship.

The Centenary revival presents Christ's full message—of Salvation, Prayer, Stewardship, and Life Service.

It means the regeneration of the individual and the entire consecration of himself, his time, his talents, and his possessions to Christ and the tasks of the Kingdom of God.

NAMING THE FINGERS.

This is little Tommy Thumb,
Round and smooth as any plum;
This is busy Peter Pointer,
Surely he's a double-jointer.
This is mighty Tohy Tall;
He's the higgest one of all.
Tbis is dainty Reuben Ring;
He's too fine for anything.
And this little wee one, maybe,
Is tbe pretty Finger-baby.
All the five we've counted now.
Busy fingers in a row,
Every finger knows the way
How to work and how to play;
Yet together work they hest,
Eacb one helping all the rest.

THE NAUGHTY BLUE JAY.

"I do wish I was pretty like Cousin Eleanor," Dora Bell said wistfully as she looked at her own plain face in the mirror.

"My little girl must remember that 'handsome is as handsome does,' though," Dora's motber answered smilingly as she calmly brushed the brick-red curls.

"Yes, but I'd like to be 'handsome is' and 'handsome does' both," Dora said deeidedly.

Mrs. Bell tenderly kissed the little face upturned to hers. "But if you had to cboose, dear," she asked, "would you rather be good or be pretty?"

Dora was silent. She was thinking very hard. "Don't answer me now. Tell to-morrow morning," her mother said.

She finished dressing the little girl for school, and then she told her a nice surprise. "Grandpa's downstairs, and he's going to walk to school with you this morning."

"Oh! oh!" Dora eried happily.

A few minutes later her grandfather and she started merrily down the street. It was nearly half a mile to the schoolhouse, and before they had gone a quarter of the distance something happened which Dora will never forget as long as she lives. They were passing a high brick building, when they saw a beautiful bird perched upon the branch of a maple tree ahead of them.

"O Dora! Look at the pretty hlue jay," grandpa said quietly.

It was a bird not quite so large as a dove perhaps, but very handsome.

Dora, who dearly loved beauty in all its forms, feasted her eyes upon it. Its feathers were an exquisite shade of blue, just the shade Dora liked. And, oh, what a dear little erest adorned its head! Suddenly the hird flew restlessly to another treo and then to another and back again. All the while it uttered a loud, screeching sound that was most disagreeable.

"The noise is alarming those sparrows," grandpa said softly as he pointed up. "Look, look!"

Almost before the words were out of his mouth the thing had happened. The hlue jay had discovered the sparrows' nests on the window cornices of the high building. Quick as lightning it flew up to them and began tearing them down. The father and mother sparrows were crazy with grief and fear. They chattered and scolded and pleaded, but the blue jay was relentlessly cruel. It tore down nests, destroyed eggs, tumbled out unfeathered birdlings to the pavement, and killed right and left without merey. When it had done all the harm it could there, it flew off in seareh of other mischief.

"The blue jay is one of the most cruel birds we have," said grandpa as he and Dora resumed their walk. "He has no friends among birds. He has only one useful trait. Like nearly all birds, he does destroy many injurious insects. This is the one thing in his favor. He is a great eoward, fights only with weaker birds than himself, and runs even from his equals. He spends nearly his whole time looking for nests of birds smaller than himself. When he has found them, he does just what you saw him doing this morning. Whenever you notiee a hlue jay make his appearance in a neighborhood, you will presently hear the other birds cry with fright."

"What a hateful thing!" Dora exclaimed indignantly.

"He's very beautiful," grandpa said admiringly as the blue jay flew in front of them again.

"I think I'd rather be good than beautiful, though," the little girl replied softly under her hreath.—Exchange.

A BIT OF ROYAL DISCIPLINE.

The following story relates to a bit of insubordination on the part of King Edward when a child.

One day at the Windsor Palace he stood at a French window looking out upon the gardens when he should have been studying. The governess remonstrated with him, but to no avail. Finally she told him that if he did not learn the lessons she would have to put him in a corner.

"I won't learn," answered the youngster; "and I won't stand in a corner, for I am the Prince of Wales!" At this he kicked vigorously at the window and broke two panes. The governess at once sent for his father, the Prince Consort, and told him the whole circumstance.

"Sit down there," said Prince Albert to his son, pointing to an ottoman, "and wait till I return." When he came back he carried a Bible.

"Listen, now," he admonished the boy, "to what the boly Apostle Paul says to you and other children in your position. He then read Gal. 4:1-2: "'Now I say that the heir, as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from a servant, though he be lord of all, but is under tutors and governors until the time appointed of the Father.' It is true," continued Prince Albert, "that you are the Prince of Wales, and if you conduct yourself properly you may beeome a man of high station, and even after the death of your mother may become King of England. But now you are a little boy, who must obey his tutors and governors. Besides, I must impress upon you a saying of the wise Solomon in Prov. 12:24: 'He that spareth the rod hateth his son, but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes.'" At this he gave the heir to the British throne a tingling chastisement, after which he stood him up in the corner, saying: "You will stand there and study your lesson till Miss Hillyard gives you leave to come out. And never forget that you are now under tutors and governors, and that hereafter you will be under a law given by God."—Pacific Baptist.

FAMOUS ARTISTS.

In the year 1755, when Paris was at its gayest and people gave no thought to the terrible days to come, throngs attended the annual exhibitions of the paintings of Jean Baptiste Greuze. The eighteenth century was a very artificial age; the galleries were filled with pictures of dainty shepherdesses and gallant shepherds whose gay apparel would never have withstood a shower. In the latter half of the century simplicity became the fad, and Greuze pictures of cottage life fitted the taste of the times.

People had no praises high enough for the artist, and he had quite as good an opinion of himself as had the public. After he came to Paris he was convineed that nothing save the jealousy of his fellow artists could stand in his way to fame. After a stay of two years in Italy he thought to distinguish himself as an historical painter, and when called upon for a picture to be presented in the Academy should he be elected a member, he chose to paint an historical event. Great was his chagrin when he learned that he had been elected on the merits of his earlier pictures of cottage life.

Greuze will always be known, not by his historieal pictures or his domestic ones, but by the beautiful heads of boys and girls. "Innocence," the "Listening Girl" and "The Broken Pitcher" are ones with which we all are familiar. The end of Greuze's life was a very sad one. The Revolution put him out of favor, his noble patrons going to the guillotine. A few of his pupils were faithful to him, but his last years were spent in poverty.—Exchange.

A MORNING PRAYER.

I thank thee, Lord, for sleep and rest,
For all the things that I love best.
Now guide me through another day,
And hless my work and bless my play;
Lord, make me strong for noble ends,
Protect and hless my loving friends.
Of all mankind good Christians make,
All this I ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:

Louisiana Conference—Rev. J. M. Henry, D. D., Rev. J. F. Foster, Rev. S. J. Davies.

Mississippi Conference—Rev. C. W. Crisler, Rev. J. T. Leggett, Rev. J. R. Jones.

North Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. H. Felts, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, Rev. J. W. Dorman.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

LET THE CAMPAIGN CONTINUE.

Although March 15 was the date originally fixed by the Publishing Committee for the close of the special Advocate Campaign, information coming to the office shows that a great many pastors have not yet been in position to carry it out. In some cases, this has been due to sickness; in others, to inclement weather and consequent bad roads; in others, various causes have interfered with the work that was directed by the Annual Conferences to be done in circulating the Conference organ. In view of these facts, we earnestly hope that those who have not yet made the campaign will not imagine that the time has passed for doing so. We are far from the goal set by the Publishing Committee, and the need is altogether too urgent for us to stop short of it.

We do not want to be too insistent about this matter; but we wish all our friends would seriously consider the situation as it exists. The Advocate is published solely because the Conferences feel that there is a real need of a church paper for general circulation among the people. There is no profit accruing to any individual through its publication—it is managed solely in the interest and for the benefit of the church. In normal times it has been self-sustaining; but everybody knows that the cost of everything is so out of proportion to what it was a few years ago that prices have advanced enormously. Our people are paying more for practically everything they buy, EXCEPT THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE—it is still being sold at $1.50 a year. The only possible way that we can see by which that price can be maintained is to decrease the cost per unit by increasing the volume of production—and we are not sure that that will accomplish it. But it is the only resource we have at present, and we are utterly dependent upon our friends to increase the subscription list at the full price.

We cannot feel that the Campaign has really been successful until a real effort has been made in all pastoral charges to secure subscriptions. If for any reason a canvass is not made, a proper presentation of the matter from the pulpit would probably secure gratifying results. We feel that it is only right that the members of every church in Louisiana and Mississippi should at least have the opportunity to subscribe to the Advocate; they cannot have it unless the matter is brought to their attention. A real campaign will enlist a very large percentage of all our pastors in the three Conferences.

ARE WE AT IT?

The time for the evangelistic campaign throughout the church is at hand. We have been thinking about it, praying about it, talking about it, writing it—but are we at it? This is a serious question. There is always danger that we neglect the thing itself for details connected with it. We must do a certain amount of preliminary preparation for the accomplishment of any great task; but we ought not to spend all our time on preliminaries.

We rather suspect that the revival is going to begin inside the church. In fact, we feel sure that it will begin there if it assumes very large proportions. We have small sympathy with the view that the great majority of church members are cold and indifferent in their religious life; we believe that most of them are earnest and sincere in their efforts to live right and render service to God and their fellow-men. Even then, there is lacking the holy enthusiasm that is characteristic of those who have been "revived" in their religious experience. The restoration of the "joy of salvation" to those who have not felt the thrill of intimate fellowship with the Divine for a long time, will start a glow in the church itself that will inevitably attract many from the outside.

We need to be at the revival by prayer, self-examination, and renewed consecration of our own lives as individuals to the service of God and the church. Might and power have their place in the accomplishment of any undertaking, but it is by the operation of divine grace within the heart that people are stirred to fruitful religious endeavor. If our own hearts are not so stirred, we cannot do very much toward "starting" a revival in our churches and communities.

We do not believe that the future of the church is dependent upon our having at this time what we have been calling "a widespread revival;" a faithful remnant will be preserved in any case, who, sooner or later, will comply with the conditions that will restore it to its proper place in the life of the people. But it is not the preservation of the church as an organization that we are concerned about—it will be preserved in spite of what we do, if not because of it; we are concerned about the salvation of men and women who are looking to the church for spiritual help and guidance. The church is called upon to function in a normal way in these abnormal times. We have not the figures at hand for our own denomination, but recent statistics of the Methodist Episcopal Church show a loss of more than 71,000 in the white Conferences in the United States in 1919. Various explanations are given to account for the loss, but the fact remains that that church is numerically weaker than it was twelve months ago.

What are we doing? What are we expecting to accomplish? Have we any plans? Do we expect a revival? ARE WE AT IT?

DEATH OF REV. J. B. FULTON.

The death of Rev. J. B. Fulton, our pastor at Franklinton, La., on Thursday of last week, was a great shock to the church and his many friends throughout the State. He was stricken with influenza about ten days previously, and was thought to be making satisfactory progress toward recovery; but pneumonia developed and his weakened system was unable to withstand the additional shock.

Brother Fulton was just in the prime of life, and was giving full proof of his ministry in the important town of Franklinton, where he was greatly beloved. One who is in position to know whereof he speaks, informed us that unusual success was attending his work this year, and that all departments of the church were steadily going forward under his capable leadership. His death will be a great loss, not only to the community in which he labored, but also to the larger work of the church throughout the State.

Brother Fulton is survived by his wife and seven children, to whom we extend heartfelt sympathy in their great sorrow. The remains were carried to Campti, La., for interment, accompanied by members of the family and Rev. F. N. Sweeney, pastor of the Franklinton circuit. The funeral services were in charge of Rev. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District.

We hope to have a suitable memoir for publication in due time.

DEATH OF MRS. JOHN W. BOSWELL.

We stopped the press February 26 to insert the telegraphic announcement of the death of Mrs. John W. Boswell at the home of her son in Nashville, Tenn., on February 24. This announcement brought sorrow, we are sure, to hundreds of our readers, to whom the name Boswell is a synonym of faithfnluess, loyalty, consecration, Christian character. Dr. John W. Boswell is one of the saints of Methodism. At present Assistant Sunday School Editor, he has for many years occupied important and responsible positions in the work of the church. As editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate he won his way to the hearts of thousands who were not privileged to know him personally. His clear thinking, perspicuous writing, devotion to the truth, loyalty to the Southern Methodist Church, lovable disposition, are outstanding characteristics of his life. In the great sorrow that has come to him he may be assured that he has the loving sympathy of a host of friends, known and unknown, who remember him and his children tenderly in their prayers at a throne of grace. His own faith will sustain him in his sorrow—but the tender love of his friends will comfort him in the hours of his loneliness. He has treasures on both sides of the River.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. W. J. Wood of Duck Hill, Miss., reports that everything goes well on his chargo.

Dr. John T. Sawyer preached last Sunday night at the Canal Street Presbyterian Church, and reports having had a most delightful service.

We learn from the Brookhaven Leader, that 304 students have been registered at Whitworth College this term—the largest enrollment in its history.

Rev. Dan Kelly, one of the Mississippi Conference evangelists, will assist the pastor, Rev. T. H. Mills, in a meeting at Amite, La., beginning on May 19.

Brother T. P. Price, of Greenwood, Miss., has been a subscriber to the Advocate for forty-four years. He is entitled to high rank in the "Old Guard."

"I am expecting a great year," writes Rev. M. L. White, of DeKalb, Miss. He is hard at work himself, and he finds that the people are ready to co-operate with him.

Rev. H. B. Vandenburg has made a good beginning on his work at Standard, La. He is diligently trying to secure at least his quota of subscriptions for the Advocate.

"We are learning to love the people here more and more," writes Rev. A. L. Davenport from Ackerman, Miss. All indications point to a fine report from Ackerman this year.

The Class Meeting Advocate is a newly established monthly publication in Philadelphia, Pa., devoted to the specific work of restoring the old-time class meeting in Methodism.

In spite of much sickness in his family, Rev. A. T. McIlwain, our pastor at Senatobia, Miss., is able to report that the work is moving along well. The pastor's salary has been increased $400, making it $2000 this year.

Mrs. C. W. Bailey, of Big Creek, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, takes occasion to say that she endorses fully the position of Dr. Jno. W. Boswell concerning the unification of American Methodism.

Rev. Carroll Varner, of West Point, Miss., is serving a well organized church. The Sunday school, the Woman's Missionary Society, and the board of stewards are worthy of special mention for the fine work they are doing.

We learn from an exchange that Rev. J. D. Swaggerty has been appointed assistant pastor of Wesley Memorial Church, Atlanta, Ga. Brother Swaggerty, some years ago, was in charge of the music at First Church, Shreveport, La.

It has been definitely announced that Dr. H. A. Boaz has accepted the presidency of Southern Methodist University. His successor as Secretary of the Board of Church Extension will be elected at the meeting of the Board in April.

At the recent session of the Lake Charles District Conference, Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpauir, who was located at his own request to enter evangelistic work, was unanimously recommended for readmission into tbe Louisiana Annual Conference.

Dr. I.W. Cooper, president of Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., has announced that Bishop Jno. C. Kilgo will preach the Commencement sermon for the College on Sunday, May 9, at 11 o'clock. The editor of the Advocate will deliver the Commencement address on Monday evening, May 10, at 8:15 o'clock.

The second round of quarterly conference appointments for the Meridian District, which reacbed us too late for insertion in this issue, will appear in full next week. The first few dates are as follows: Meridian, Central, Mareh 14; Meridian, Fifth Street, Mareh 14; Daleville, at Soule Chapel, March 21; Meridian, Hawkins Memorial, March 21.

"City growing, church growing, preacher happy," is tbe way Rev. J. Tillery Lewis deseribes the situation at Charleston, Miss. A teacher-training class has recently been organized in the Sunday scbool, with all the teachers as members, and the board of stewards has made arrangements to pay the pastor a living salary. No wonder Brother Lewis is happy.

A note from Rev. Harry W. May, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference, brings the gratifying information that the recent meeting at Oakdale, where Rev. J. Lambuth Evans is pastor, was a great success. Rev. Dan Kelly preached five times to great congregations. There were 24 accessions to the church at the two services on Sunday.

Rev. W. L. Duren, presiding elder of the Columbus District, North Mississippi Conferenee, has sent a special eard to every preacher in his district calling attention to the apportionment of eacb cbarge in the campaign for securing subscriptions to the Advocate. This is a fine thing to do—one that is sure to bear fruit. We commend this plan to all coneerned.

The Sixty-Third Anniversary of the National Association of Local Preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America will be held at Upland, Indiana, next fall. Any local preacher in America who is interested in this organization can get full information coneerning it by communicating with the secretary, Rev. D. H. Kenney, 2020 Poplar Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

A personal note from Rev. J. A. Moore, presiding elder of the Newton District, Mississippi Conference, states that the work of the district is going forward satisfactorily. Substantial increase has been made for ministerial support, the total being in the neigbborhood of $6000 in advance of last year. The preachers are hopeful and are planning for a great year in revival work.

Rev. J. G. Snelling, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, went to Washington City last week to appear before tbe War Work Commission of our cburcb in the interest of the new building enterprised in Algiers. He was successful in having $20,000 appropriated—an action eminently proper, since the Algiers church is in position to minister effectively to the men at the Algiers Naval Station.

Rev. J. S. Purcell and family, of Crystal Springs, Miss., have been greatly afflicted by the disease that bas come to be looked upon as a scourge—the influenza. All of them were in bed at one time, some of them seriously sick, and one little girl succumbed. Our deepest sympathy goes out to them in their sorrow, and we are sure that the prayers of many friends will ascend in their behalf.

Rev. T. B. Cottrell is serving his fourth year as pastor at Mt. Olive, Miss., and the prospects are that it will be the best of the four. The first quarterly conference was held reeently, with good reports from all departments, the pastor's salary being increased $200 over last year. The presiding elder, Rev. W. B. Jones, transacted the business of the conference with dispach, and preached two fine sermons, to the edifieation of the hearers.

Rev. A. H. Parker, of Belcher, La., bas just recovered from a seven weeks' illness from pneumonia, following influenza. He has not preached a sermon since the fourth Sunday in December, though he bopes to be able to fill his appointments regularly now. Rev. J. M. Brown, one of the honored superannuate members of the Conference, who lives at Belcber, has been rendering most helpful service during the illness of the pastor.

Announcement bas been made that the conference under the auspices of the Interchurch World Movements scheduled to meet at Hattiesburg, Miss., on Mareh 10-12, has been combined with the conference at New Orleans, March 15-17. The change was made on account of the comparatively small number of Mississippi ministers who were in the territory of the Hattiesburg conferenee, it being equally convenient for them to assemble at New Orleans.

Rev. Harry W. Rickey, the pastor, does not hesitate to declare that Lafayette is the best town in the Lake Charles District, Louisiana Conference. In substantiation of his claim, he mentions a Sunday school with fourteen elasses that fills the church, the best attended Epworth League in the district, one of the best organized Woman's Missionary Societies he ever saw, and the doubling of the pastor's salary in two years. He evidently has good grounds for his claim.

We regret to learn that Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr., our faithful pastor at Bonita, La., has been ill most of the time since Conference, having spent eight weeks in bed. In spite of it all, however, the work has gone on as well as could be expected under the circumstances. The people have been exceedingly kind to the preacher, seeing to it that all his needs were provided for. Plans are being made for revival meetings just as soon as conditions are favorable for holding them.

We regret to learn that Rev. S. L. Riggs, of Lake Arthur, La., has had illness in his family practically all of this year. His wife is receiving medical treatment in New Orleans, and his son, Leonard, has just lately recovered from pneumonia following an attack of influenza. Brother Riggs was the host of the recent session of the Lake Charles District Conference, which was a pleasant and profitable occasion in spite of the fact that the attendance was cut down somewhat on account of sickness.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., has an unusually exacting work at Homer, La., the center of one of the greatest oil fields in the country. Thousands of people are coming and going all the time, and conditions are not especially conducive to religious activities. It is Brother Doss's opinion that a special man should be appointed to the work in the oil fields—in which opinion we agree with him fully. It is all one man can do to look after the interests of the church in the town itself. The board of stewards at Homer has fixed the pastor's salary at $2500 for this year.

We learn from the Oxford Eagle, of recent date, that Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, our pastor at Oxford, Miss., is preaching very fine sermons to large congregations—information whien is not surprising to those who know Brother Lipscomb's ability. We learn from private sources that the work of the church at Oxford is prospering in every way. Dr. W. S. Leathers, Dean of the Medical School of the University, is chairman of the board of stewards—a wide-awake man in any position. Dr. Alfred W. Milden, professor of Greek Language and Literature in the University, is superintendent of the Sunday school, and under his inspiring leadership, the school is making splendid progress. It is a matter for congratulation that our work in this important educational center is so well manned.

AN URGENT MATTER.

The Manager of the Advocate is revising the mailing list. In doing so, he finds hundreds of subscribers who are in arrears from one to three months. These names will have to be dropped unless the renewals are received promptly. We cannot continue to send the Advocate to those who give no indication that they want it. The shortage of paper has become alarming, and the price of what can be had is so far in advance of previous prices that it is a serious problem to meet bills promptly. There is an actual loss on papers sent to those who do not renew their subscriptions. We earnestly ask every subscriber to look at the label on his paper—the date of expiration is given thereon—and if he is in arrears, to send his renewal promptly. It is a small item to the individual—but the aggregate means much to us. The Manager is sending out statements to those whose subscriptions have expired within the last three months. We hope no one will disregard the statement when it is received. The terms of subscription are $1.50 a year in advance. It is impossible to do business on a safe basis on any other terms. Please send in your renewals at once.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions reeently: Rev. T. B. Cottrell, Mount Olive, Miss., 9; Rev. H. B. Vandenburg, Standard, La., 3; Rev. M. L. White, DeKalb, Miss., 2; Rev. Thomas H. Mills, Amite, La., 5; Rev. A. T. Mellwain, Senatobia, Miss., 2; Rev. J. L. Lay, Calhoun, La., 4; Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, Biloxi, Miss., 4; Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., Homer, La., 19; Rev. J. M. Wyatt, Shelby, Miss., 7; Rev. John W. Chisholm, Brandon, Miss., 2; Rev. Jno. F. Foster, Franklin, La., 5; Rev. Claude P. Jones, Fayette, Miss., 2; Rev. W. J. THE SHATTERED VIOLIN.

A distinguished musician ordered a manufacturer of violins to make for him the very best instrument possible. He told him to use the best material, to take all the time he needed, and to utilize his most efficient skill in its construction. At last the violin was completed and the manufacturer sent for the musician to come and give it a trial. But when he came and drew the bow across the strings his face became clouded, and lifting it up he brought it down upon the counter and smashed it to pieces. Then handing the price to the manufacturer he left the shop. But the manufacturer was not satisfied with mere pay. His reputation was at stake. So gathering up the fragments he skillfully put them together again. After he had succeeded in remodeling the instrument out of the pieces, he sent once more for the musician. This time as he drew the bow across the strings the frown of disapproval did not appear, and he told the manufacturer that at last he had suceeeded in making the very kind of an instrument he had so long desired. "Now what is your price?" he inquired. "Nothing at all," was the reply. "It is the same violin you smashed to pieces some time ago. I put the fragments together and out of them you have been able to prodnee this beautiful music." God can take the fragments of a shattered life and so put them together by his omnipotent graces that under the touch of the Holy Spirit there will go forth music good enough for earth and sweet enough for heaven. Oh, the life reforming and heart-regenerating powers of the Holy Spirit!—C. N. Broadhurst.

LORENA GILLIS, wife of Earl B. Gillis, and daughter of Benton M. and Minnie Bales Carruth, was born in McComb, Miss., February 5, 1892, and died at the place of her birth, July 7, 1919. For twenty-seven years, five months and two days her earthly life proved a blessing in home, church and community. She united with the church of her parents, the Methodist Church at Osyka, Miss., in 1908, during the pastorate of Rev. J. S. Parker, who preceded her to heaven. Two years later the writer became her pastor, and during a pastorate of three years he found her a modest, quiet and refined Christian girl. On February 1, 1914, she was married to Earl B. Gillis, a Christian young man of the First Baptist Church at McComb. To this union there was born one child, Earl B., Jr., who was but three weeks old at the time of his mother's death. For two and a half years prior to her death, the writer was again her pastor, and found the woman a strong Christian worker as the girl was. She was a teacher in our Sunday school at Centenary, McComb, at the time of her death. Her life was not light and frivolous, but was concerned about the higher things. She lived a victorious life and died a triumphant death.

"How well she fell asleep!
Like some proud river, widening toward the sea;
Calmly and grandly, silently and deep,
Life joined eternity."

To her devoted parents, loyal husband and hopeful son, together with loved ones, friends one and all, we extend our sympathy and pray for their reunion in Heaven.

DR. WILLIAM WARREN ROBERTSON, son of J. F. and Rhoda Ellis Robertson, was born near Hazlehurst, Copiah County, Miss., May 14, 1864, and died on the New Orleans to McComb train, September 29, 1919, being 55 years, 4 months and 15 days old. Dr. Robertson united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, during his student days at Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn. From the medical department of this institution he graduated with honors in his early manhood, and located at McComb, Miss., where for 28 years he engaged successfully in the practice of his profession. Five years before his death he was the efficient postmaster at McComb. At McComb, Miss., on the 28th day or November, 1889, he was married to Miss Blanche Bishop. For nearly thirty years they walked up life's way. Their home was blessed with four children: Mrs. Harry Schroeder, Miss Mai Clare, William and Warren Ellis. His devoted wife, their four children, and his three sisters and three brothers yet remain to "follow on." At the time of his death, and for a number of years before, he was a member of the board of stewards of Centenary Church, McComb. He loved his church and attended regularly upon its ordinances. He was always "the pastor's doctor" when in the regular practice and his friend and counsellor after retirement to the post-office. Dr. Robertson was a man of strong conviction, easily placed upon any question at issue, always true to his friends and fair to his opponents. Some time before his death, in conversation with his former pastor, twice presiding elder, and long-time friend, the Rev. J. T. Leggett, he expressed the opinion that he would not live long and gave assurance of his rightness with God. This testimony was given to the writer, his pastor then, more than once. So to us the end came suddenly, an unexpected, crushing blow to his family, yet:

"Death cannot come
To him untimely who is fit to die;
The less of this cold world, the more of heaven;
The briefer life, the earlier immortality."

His body was borne from the altars of Centenary Church, and placed in its last resting place in the New Cemetery, to await the resurrection morn. "Alas, my brother!" "Friend, All Hail!" J. LOYD DECELL.

MRS. ADA PENNINGTON, daughter of Matthew and Jane Hearn, was born three miles west of Holly Springs, Miss., March 5, 1857, and died at her home at Mahon, Miss., January 25, 1920. She joined the Methodist Church in the summer of 1875, and lived a consistent member of the same until death. She married J. W. Pennington, December 16, 1875, by whom she is survived together with their two daughters, Mrs. N. M. Mims and Miss May Pennington, of Mahon, Miss. It is said of her by all who knew her that she was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother, a helpful neighbor and a modest Christian character. And none knew her but to love her. Her pastor,

Sage and Sulphur Darkens Gray Hair

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.—Adv.

Exchange Your Old Body For A New One

You can do it in three weeks and thereby renew your health. This article is written by a physician who has seen it demonstrated in numerous cases and explains how it is done.

Listen: If your weight is one hundred and thirty-three pounds your body contains eighty pounds of water, for according to standard medical books the human body contains sixty-seven and one-half per cent of water. Now, disease is invariably caused by impurities which we call poisons, and these are readily dissolved by the right kind of natural mineral water. Drink ten gallons (eighty pounds) of Shivar mineral water (use no other water for twenty-one days), and you will have exchanged your old body for a new one, so far as the soluble part of it is concerned. The impurities will be dissolved and pass away. If you suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, rheumatism, kidney or liver disease, uric acid poisoning, or other curable conditions due to impure blood, accept Mr. Shivar's liberal offer which appears below. Read the following letter carefully; then sign and mail it:

Shivar Spring,
Box 17-J, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:—I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give it a fair trial in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and, if I report no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

EAT IT ALL.

You are likely to be afraid when seated before a large dinner or before a particularly delightful meal, lest you may suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, heart burn or some of the other disagreeable after effects. We are prone at times to forget our stomachs and our rashness causes us trouble. A simple natural aid at times when your organs rebell will not only avoid temporary discomfort but will also give comfort and rest to the tired, over worked, mistreated organs and smoothly pave the way to strength.

RELIABLE VADCO REMEDIES

VADCO Dyspepsia Remedy is a harmless though immensely comforting and effective corrective. A tea-spoonful just after meals or whenever needed will bring immediate relief and by aiding the stomach in its work, restore it to strength and health. It is simple to take and pleasant to taste. Not over 5 per cent alcohol. Call your druggist and try a bottle or send 50c for your stomach's sake to Van Antwerp's, Mobile, Ala., and a bottle will be sent you by mail.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

You have until the first of April to take a Missionary Special in your Sunday school. Most of the specials are only $50.00 a year. Write Mrs. W. T. Boswell, New Albany, and ask for one before it is too late.

A lack of interest on the part of a teacher is often a lack of information; study one of the Teacher-Training books and see if your interest will not increase.

When a man trifles with God's work, he is trifling. The only promise that God makes to such is a curse.

How many of our Bible classes desire to hold a Wesley Bible Class Federation this year? A request from a hundred classes would help to bring it to pass.

We have a larger number of schools striving to attain the Third Rank Standard than at any time in the history of our work. Do you desire to have your school in this list?

Mr. Marvin Geiger of Webb is one of the most enthusiastic superintendents in the Conference. He is delighted with the graded lessons. His school expects to attain the Third Rank Standard by the 20th of April.

Those who attended the fifth Sunday meeting at Tula came in spite of cold, wind, snow, and rain. Brothers Holder and Lott launched the meeting Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Fant and I joined them Friday at noon and the working presiding elder kept us busy for three days. Mrs. Fant organized a Woman's Missionary Society and set up the Beginners' and Primary Departments in the Sunday school. Three of the teachers ordered books to study. The people agreed to add five rooms to their building and furnish them for the purpose of giving the children religious education. Brother Holder is breaking his best record.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Wesley Bible Class Federation is before the mind of all the Methodists of Louisiana, and it should be. This great meeting of our church has a right to the best patronage and support of our people. If we can get the delegates from our Bible Classes to attend this school of methods, it will be a blessing to the church and Sunday school for years to come.

There is to be a meeting of the Interchurch World Movement at New Orleans the same week, and many of the pastors are planning now a way in which they can attend both meetings. You know my interest in the Federation, and yet I must not be blind to this great World Movement. If the Methodist pastors fail to get the vision of this great Interchurch World Movement, the cause of Christ will suffer, and perhaps indefinitely. But let me say this to you, dear pastors and Sunday school superintendents: It will be absolutely necessary for you to make a most careful selection of delegates to the Wesley Bible Class Federation if you cannot be present all the time. We are all very sorry the two meetings are coming the same week.

Will see you at Shreveport, Tuesday, March 16, 17 and 18.

Cordially yours,
ALONZO EARLY.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

We have had some weather the past week that has prohibited any public gatherings. In spite of this, Mrs. H. D. Owen, of Vaughan, Miss., is putting in the Cradle Roll in their Sunday school.

Piles Cured in 6 to 14 Days

Druggists refund money if PAZO OINTMENT fails to cure Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Protruding Piles. Stops Irritation; Soothes and Heals. You can get restful sleep after the first application. Price 60c.

All of the classes in the Brookhaven Sunday school that were unorganized have been organized. Mrs. L. H. Owen has been made Director of Teacher-Training. Two classes have been organized, consisting of the teachers and the Elementary Department, under Mrs. C. S. Butterfield, and the teachers in the other departments under Mr. W. D. Davis. This is a very fine movement. I feel sure that God will bless them in their efforts.

The District Institutes are going to be held earlier this year. We desire to have the Sunday school workers from as many schools as will volunteer to go to the neighboring charges and present the claim of the District Institute. We are trying to make the District Institutes practical and helpful, and are making an effort to have programs arranged that will increase the efficiency not only in organizations but spiritual advantages for the workers.

I am pleading for help. We have a very few fine letters coming to the office. We not only desire letters of this type, but those who are having difficulties we would like to hear from. If we can help you, we desire to do so.

The Sunday school programs have been ordered for every charge, to be sent to the pastor; if yours does not reach you in ample time, please notify me.

We are making every effort to make this the best year we have ever had.

Mrs. Catchings, the superintendent of the Georgetown Sunday school, reports that they are going to strive to make their Sunday school 100 per cent. This is a fine feature and I feel sure that the making of the school 100 per cent will bring a new life and power to the church.

Rev. J. H. Jolly, of Heidelberg, reports that he thinks that the school at Heidelberg will reach 100 per cent by the District Institute.

Do not forget to pray for the workers. Tell us your successes, tell us your troubles. Let us help you in your work. Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

E. J. Reefer, the poultry expert, 2253 Poultry Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., is giving away free a valuable book entitled "White Diarrhoea and How to Cure It." This book contains scientific facts on white diarrhoea and tells how to prepare a simple home solution that cures this terrible disease over night and actually raises 98% of every hatch. All poultry raisers should certainly write Mr. Reefer for one of these valuable FREE books.

FROM PORTERVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We arrived at this place on Jan. 3, and found a good fire and a nice dinner waiting at the parsonage. I have completed my second round on the charge, which is composed of five appointments. I have been in the homes of seventy-two families, and have never met a more generous and hospitable people anywhere. They have given us two splendid showers which we appreciate to the fullest. We are expecting our presiding elder, Rev. G. H. Thompson, on the 7th, to hold our first quarterly conference, which we hope will be a spiritual uplift to the entire charge.

The people at Porterville are planning to paint and remodel the church; the good people of Briggs Chapel are discussing the rebuilding of their church, which burned two years ago.

We are planning and praying for a great revival all over this work, and we ask the prayers of all.

Give Stomach What it Needs

The Alkaline Effect of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Usually Corrects the Stomach Faults that Provoke Attacks of Indigestion or Dyspepsia.

To sit back after a good meal and know there is not going to be sour risings, gas, drowsiness and discomfort is the logical result of using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets immediately after eating. Most people believe they can trace each attack of indigestion to the something they ate and can still "taste." And it surprises them, invariably, to note how quickly relief comes after using one or two of these tablets. Whether it is highly seasoned food, rich pastry, the heavy hearty foods or some one particular offender the relief comes just the same. Those who are susceptible to attacks of indigestion or dyspepsia should try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets as they supply the stomach with an alkaline effect just as it does naturally when it is working in a perfectly healthy condition.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are so widely known and used that you can get them in any drug store in the United States and Canada at 50 cents a box.—Adv.

FROM JEFFERSON STREET, NATCHEZ.

Dear Brother Carley: I am sending you a note which I have deferred writing until our plans were more complete for this great old church.

Last evening we closed a contract with the Moller Organ Co., at Hagerstown, Maryland, to install a $7500 instrument. This is an achievement the good ladies have worked for for some time, and I am sure will be a means of inspiring our people to take much pleasure in the services of the sanctuary and the worship of the Lord. This instrument will have the Echo and the Chimes, and will be equipped with three manuals and will be one of the finest instruments in this part of the State.

We have also let the contract for much interior finishing and improvement, new painting of all the walls, new lights and other decorations, which will make this one of the most beautiful auditoriums to be found anywhere in the whole church.

At the last meeting of our official board the reports revealed the fact that the general condition of the church is better than ever before in its history. At the close of the last Conference year a good sum was carried over to meet the needs at the very start of the new year. The Sunday collections have been gratifying, all the bills paid up to date, and the allowance for the support of the ministry sufficiently advanced to meet the needs caused by the advance in the cost of living. Our people are at work to advance all the interests of the church, and we hope to have a real revival as soon as possible.

Brother J. R. Jones, our new presiding elder, was with us on his first round early in the year, and found his way to the homes and hearts of the congregation, and preached us two inspiring and helpful sermons. His management of the business of the church soon revealed to our officials that he is a man of affairs, and that the church's interest will move forward under his leadership. The emphasis he puts on the spiritual matters of the Kingdom is evidence that he realizes it is the business of the church to convert people, cultivate Christian character and spread righteousness throughout the land. The preachers and people of the district are ready to rally to his leadership, and you may look for a forward movement in the bounds of the Port Gibson District.

The appointments in the district made by the Bishop and his cabinet are all proving to be good. The pastors that remained for another year are making good; those who remained in the district, but moved to other pastorates, have hit a high mark; and the new ones who came into the district are meeting with very gratifying success. May we all pray and work for the greatest revival the church has ever had.

If the church ever needed a revival, it is now, and I am sure that God knows we need it and is ready to give it if we meet the demands. If it does not come, we can blame none but ourselves as churches and preachers. The good father did not have to be begged to take the prodigal in when he came home, and God will not have to be persuaded to pour out the Holy Ghost on the ministry, on the church and on the people. We must have the power, but we will have to get right with God.

W. H. SAUNDERS.

OUR DAILY INTERCESSION FOR MARCH.

All loyal and well-informed Methodists are now thinking and praying over the revival. Our prayer suggestions for the month have to do entirely with the salient phases of this most timely and important task of the church.

Day.

1. That the Holy Spirit may guide all pastors in laying plans for reaching the persons listed in the Survey.
2. Evangelistic Committee in the local church.
3. Unidentified Methodists.
4. Unconverted people who prefer the Methodist Church.
5. Unsaved persons who have no church choice.
6. That conviction may come upon the unsaved for whom the local church is directly responsible.
7. Sunday Afternoon Prayer Service: For divine direction in selecting the committees suggested in the Standard Plan for Evangelism.
8. Conference evangelistic campaign directors.
9. District evangelistic campaign directors.
10. Presiding elders.
11. Evangelistic director in the local church.
12. Evangelistic: General, conference and district.
13. That Pentecostal power for preaching may come upon pastors.
14. The revival campaign in Cuba.
15. The revival campaign in Mexico.
16. The revival campaign in the Texas and Western Mexican Missions.
17. The revival campaign in the Brewer Indian Mission.
18. The revival campaign in Brazil, Africa and our Oriental fields.
19. Spiritual awakening in Europe.
20. That the desire and purpose to bring the unsaved to Christ may possess the entire membership of the church, beginning with ME.

First Week, March 21-28.

That the Family Altar may be established in every Methodist home.

Epworth League sunrise prayer meetings.

Daily prayer meetings of Bible classes and other groups.

General themes for prayer during the week:

1. That the Holy Spirit may anoint all workers;

2. That the Holy Spirit may convict sinners in and out of the church.

Second Week, March 28-April 4.

That pastors may clearly present Christ's doctrine of Christian Stewardship.

That Committees securing pledges to the tithe may be given heavenly wisdom and power.

Continued group prayer-meetings.

General themes for prayer during the week:

1. That church membership may not be substituted for the surrendered life.

2. That the members of the church may have the witness of the Spirit, and the church become a witnessing church.

3. That the young people of the church may discover the divine plan for their lives.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Conference at Lake Charles.

The recent Annual Meeting of the Conference Woman's Missionary Society, held at Lake Charles during the last week of February, was a splendid success in every way.

There was a large number of delegates in attendance, also visitors who added greatly to the joy of the occasion.

Lake Charles is a beautiful little city situated in the romantic country of the Teche and stretching around the shore of the gentle lake from which it gets its name. Many typically hospitable Southern homes lend charm to the spirit of the place, making all who were entertained during the Conference feel that they had spent pleasant days, days of refreshing and re-creating. The missionary women of Louisiana will a long time remember with grateful thanks the genial and untiring care of the pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Holmes, and of the many hostesses who welcomed them into their dwellings. Such a lovely reception was tendered the guests on the first evening of their arrival, by Mr. and Mrs. Moss; after this evening was spent with its charming program of song and story, and of greetings for old friends and many new acquaintances, there were no more strangers, but a bond of good fellowship established for the busy days to follow.

The presence of a "Council guest" was missed by one, but going a long way to fill the place was the presence of five of our sweet deaconesses. Their talks at the noon-day quiet hour and at other times, were an inspiration to us. To hear the reports of the useful work done by our deaconesses in their many fields of service makes one glad for a way to help, by prayer and by gifts to the work.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Stockwell, our own Louisiana missionaries to Africa, are at their home in Lake Charles for a season because of health conditions; their presence at the meeting was an unusual privilege. The conditions of life in Africa were made very real to us in a stereopticon lecture given by Mr. Stockwell. "I was sick and in prison and ye visited me not" has been long the cry of the Dark Continent to enlightened America.

The Rev. Mr. Lutz, chairman of the Loulsiana Conference Committee on Evangelism, addressed the Conference, giving much information, and bespeaking the best of effort in the oncoming evangelistic campaign throughout the church.

The Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Holt, showed by her report a good percentage of increase in most of the divisions of work; especially encouraging is the steady growth of the "Pledge" every year. This report will be published in full in this issue, or the next, of the Advocate.

The Treasurer, Mrs. J. J. Holmes, of Minden, could not leave her home, because of sickness in the family, so her account of the work was read by Mrs. Holt. Mrs. Holmes has served as treasurer of the Conference Society for 28 years, and has done such thorough work that it is with true gratitude we think of it, and with regret we learn that circumstances prevent her holding this office longer. A gift was sent to Mrs. Holmes just to remind her a bit of the love and esteem the women have for her.

The Superintendent of Young People, Mrs. Cunningham, brought forcefully to the minds of her hearers their responsibility for the family altar, their responsibility to awaken in the lives of young people a true and complete stewardship, their responsibility to show young people how the church needs them first—other organizations should have the surplus.

The Young People of Mansfield were awarded the loving cup for the best work done this year.

The Superintendent of Junior Division, Mrs. Elmer Drew, was absent unavoidably; her report showed some good things being done for and by the Juniors. The children of Oakdale brought the "Cup" up with them and triumphantly took it home again.

The work done by the Superintendent of Mission Study and Publicity, Mrs. Wynn, has appealed to us all through the year: it is through her that we have received much of our literature, that the "Woman's Page" in the Advocate has had timely assistance: and that mission study has become more extensive than ever before.

Mrs. W. W. Holmes has lent force and enthusiasm to Social Service; besides the presentation of a fine summary of the year's work, a real demonstration of a community club for Negroes was given at the Colored Methodist Church. The delegates attended en masse and were pleased with the program rendered. Some of the topics discussed for the edification of the colored race are along practical lines, such as health talks, talks on ventilation, on how to care for the home, how to become a better citizen, the town beautiful, etc. Surely much good can be done by careful handling of such subjects, and by a tactful and kindly example of the good will of our own people toward them.

A talk given by Mrs. A. I. Townsley on "State Censorship for the Moving Pictures," was listened to with keen interest, and a request was made to have the information on this subject printed in leaflet form and circulated through the auxiliaries for arousing interest in, and action for, better shows. A committee was appointed, with the State Superintendent of Social Service as chairman, for seeking the co-operation of other church organizations, of clergymen, of school teachers, and of federated club women, to the end that we might obtain State censorship of our moving pictures.

The excellent report of Superintendent of Supplies, Mrs. Baker, will speak for itself in a later issue of the Advocate.

Our President, Mrs. Niebergall, presided over all sessions of the Conference with untiring care and gracious comment as the work of the officers and of all committees was reviewed in order. The real message of the President to the women of the State was to do to-day's work so well that the work of the morrow may reach its fullest fruition, and that as mothers and as women of the Methodist Church we give ourselves unstintingly in prayer that our young women and young men may give themselves in the life service for which the church is calling.

The Conference officers for 1920 are: President, Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, 57 Neron Place, New Orleans; Vice-President, Mrs. R. H. BACK HURT ALL THE TIME

Mrs. Hill Says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Removed The Cause.

Knoxville, Tenn.—"My back hurt me [illegible], I was all run down, could not eat and my head bothered me, all caused by female trouble. I was three years with these troubles and doctors did me no good. Your medicine helped my sister so she advised me to take it. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the Liver Pills and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and now I am well, can eat heartily and work. I give you my thanks for your great medicines. You may publish my letter and I will tell everyone what your medicines did for me."—Mrs. PEARL HILL, 418 Jacksboro St., Knoxville, Tennessee.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

If you are ill do not drag along and continue to suffer day in and day out but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills.

WHAT NEIGHBORS SAY
Troubled with Dyspepsia Stomach and Liver

New Orleans, La.:—"I could not eat anything greasy for it would make me so sick at my stomach that I could not do my work. It would make me dizzy, and I had to sit down and wait until the spell passed. Then there would be a sour risings from my stomach. I was told to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which I did, and I must say that it cured me. I have not felt any of this trouble ever since. I would recommend the 'Medical Discovery' to all who have dyspepsia."—JULES GERVAIS, 2740 Frenchman St.

Vicksburg, Miss.:—"When I had the Influenza my head pained me a great deal and I would have frequent sick-headaches. I tried various remedies recommended to me but did not get any relief until I took Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, which the druggist advised. They gave me almost instant relief. I also found them excellent as a laxative and they were very mild and easy to take. "I take pleasure in recommending Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets to every person suffering with sick-headaches or in need of a laxative medicine."—CHARLES RUSE, 801 Adams St.

Belle Rose, La.:—"I want every one to know how deeply I regard Dr. Pierce and his 'Golden Medical Discovery Tablets.' This is the only medicine that I could say did me good from the very first bottle I used. I had been suffering for 20 years and tried all the doctors around here but didn't get any relief.

"The 'Golden Medical Discovery Tablets' are the best in the world; I'll never be without them as long as I am able to get them, and will always recommend them. I am glad to have this published."—MRS. L. LAMBERT, Box 44.

Less Meat if Back and Kidneys Hurt

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys If Bladder Bothers You.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, of if bladder keys aren't acting right, or if bladder Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.—Adv.

THE COUNTRY CHURCH.

Dear Brother Carley: Please indulge me a little in behalf of our rural churches. For at least thirty-five years, the tendency has been to focalize our forces on the towns and cities, to the neglect of our rural population; and the result has checked our progress. But since we are combining our forces for the conquest of the nations through the Centenary and the Interchurch World Movements, I hereby make an appeal to the ministry, the younger brethren especially, to give more attention to the country churches.

My early recollections cherish the memory of a circuit rider (R. Parvin), who often, before preaching, called the children to the front seats and taught them to sing. I also remember his naming certain places where he had preached—Lick Skillet, Buck Snort Hollow, Nip and Tuck, Opossum Walk, and The Regions Beyond. The last three places were in the bounds of my second charge, in Union Parish, Louisiana, which I served in 1890-92. Since that time some of the leading men of our State have come from that same section, including two of our governors, and one of our supreme judges, the latter having been reared at Opossum Walk. When he was making the race for his present position, he said to me, "You are the preacher who taught me to sing 'Happy Day.'"

It so often happens that when a preacher who, perchance, was dug up near the Regions Beyond, and a few successful farmers from near Buck Snort Hollow, or Nip and Tuck, get together in a little town, they decide to make it a station, as the other appointments of the charge don't pay very much; therefore Brother B, who often has the larger family, and has the extra expense of a conveyance and of being away from home much of the time, is placed in charge of the rural section, while Brother A serves the station with two or three times the salary.

My first charge paid $300 the year before, and one of the churches paid $200 of that amount; but at my first quarterly conference, in order to make an adjacent town a thousand dollar station, the $200 church was taken, and a $50 church added. While my receipts that year were less than $300, it was one of the greatest years of my life. I received the experience of perfect love, held two of the best meetings I was ever in, and won the heart of my life companion. Don't neglect the churches in the country.

My present charge consists of two good towns—Columbia and Grayson—and one country church—Boeuf River. From the latter I returned at noon on the 9th ult., having spent four days and two hours. During that time I crossed Ouachita River twice, Boeuf River four times and Lafourche four times; traveled eleven miles in Ford cars, two in a wagon, two in a buggy, three and a half in canoes, twenty on horseback, and walked seven, having used six horses, one wagon, one buggy, two saddles, two canoes, three Ford cars, and six flatboats, at a cost of $2.10. I visited thirty homes, conducting worship in twenty-three of them, held one church conference, conducted a Good Order League mass meeting, and preached three times. If I live until March 21, 1920, I shall be 59 years old.

Recipe For Gray Hair

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix at home at very little cost. Full directions for making and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off.—Adv.

OUCH! LAME BACK

Rub Backache, Lumbago, Soreness and Stiffness Away—Try This!

Back hurt you? Can't straighten up without feeling sudden pains, sharp aches and twinges? Now listen! That's lumbago, sciatica or maybe from a strain, and you'll get blessed relief the moment you rub your back with soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil." Nothing else takes out soreness, lameness and stiffness so quickly. You simply rub it on and out comes the pain. It is perfectly harmless and doesn't burn or discolor the skin.

Limber up! Don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle from any drug store, and after using it just once, you'll forget that you ever had backache, lumbago or sciatica, because your back will never hurt or cause any more misery. It never disappoints and has been recommended for 60 years.

THE OWL TONIC

Acts better than calomel or pills and does not gripe. Especially beneficial for colds, chills, fever, malaria, and lagrippe. Five or six doses will positively stop any case of chills and if then taken as a tonic the fever will not return. Excellent as a tonic for that tired, achy feeling caused from malarial colds and lagrippe—troubles so common among Southern people. Sold on its merits under a money back guarantee by all dealers.

NUXATED IRON

"Say, Doctor, This Prescription Works Like Magic."

Physician Says Nuxated Iron Quickly Puts Astonishing Strength and Energy Into the Veins of Men and Brings Roses to the Cheeks of Nervous, Run-Down Women.

Ask the first hundred strong, healthy people you meet to what they owe their strength and see how many reply "Nuxated Iron." Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital Outdoor Dept., New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, says: "Thousands of people suffer from iron deficiency but do not know what to take. There is nothing like organic iron—Nuxated Iron, to enrich the blood, make beautiful, healthy women, and strong, vigorous men. To make absolutely sure that my patients get real organic iron and not some form of the metallic variety, I always prescribe Nuxated Iron in its original packages. Nuxated Iron will increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous and run-down folks in two weeks' time in many instances."

Manufacturers' Note: Nuxated Iron Recommended above by Dr. Sullivan can be obtained from any good druggist with or without a physician's prescription on an absolute manufacturers' guarantee of satisfaction or money refunded.

TO RELIEVE CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy, and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial. For sale by all druggists or sent on receipt of price 90c by Chas. A. Smith Drug Co., Atlanta, Ga.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THERE IS NO DOUBLE STANDARD.

There is no double standard of morals. For ages the world has tried to believe that there is, and it has wickedly allowed men to do things for which it damned women. The standard has not been too high for women—nobody would be willing to defend that position—but the standard for men has been too miserably low. Gradually the world is beginning to learn that the God of women is the God of men, too, and that He judges them by exactly the same law. It would be a strange thing if He did not; the eternal principles of truth and justice make no distinction as to sex—what is sin for a woman is sin for a man. The sordid stories of unfaithfulness that pollute the pages of the secular press teach at least one lesson—for every fallen woman, there is a fallen man. The mission of the gospel is to save both.

A LOW PERCENTAGE.

According to a recent announcement of the Department of Justice, the efforts of the Government to check profiteering have resulted in 1046 prosecutions under the Lever act, but there have been only 107 convictions. The presumption, of course, is that those acquitted were innocent of the charges against them; but it would seem strange that the evidence to indict should be insufficient to convict in so many cases. We have no disposition to charge the officials of the Government with incompetency or lack of sincerity in their efforts to correct the evils of the money-mad age in which we live; but it is very evident that the profiteer is as able to beat the law as he is the people. After all, public opinion is about the only thing that will affect the situation at large. A few weeks of doing without on the part of the people generally would very likely bring down prices more quickly than a court-full of prosecutions.

BETTER HURRY.

Unless the brewers want one of their strong arguments for the continuation of their business swept away before their very eyes, they will have to hurry in their efforts to have the Eighteenth Amendment rendered null and void. Their plea at one time was that thousands of helpless men would be thrown out of employment and that millions of invested capital would be confiscated by the adoption of prohibition. But the dire result does not seem to have materialized. We quote the following headlines from a recent issue of one of the leading daily newspapers in New Orleans: "Breweries prospering In New Role of Soft Drink Factories. Great Industry Springs Up in New Orleans with Advent of National Prohibition—Employ More Men Now Than During Wet Times." These lines tell their own story—prohibition is an economic blessing. More buildings erected, more capital invested, more men employed, greater profits reaped—the brewers really ought to become heavy contributors to the Anti-Saloon League.

A GREATER SOUTH.

Our pride in the South is based, not upon sectional prejudice or provincial narrowness, but upon a fair appraisement of its contribution to the life of the nation in the past and of its resources that hold such promise for the future. It is well known that this section is freer than any other part of the country of the forces that are opposed to the institutions of our Government; that the bitter antagonism between capital and labor is not so manifest as in other sections; that pure democracy finds its fullest expression here; and that strict adherence to simple religious faith is characteristic of our people as a whole. With these things in its favor, and with the possibilities of material and intellectual development that are so evident, there is every reason to look forward to a greater South that will rival in its achievements the most brilliant period in the history of any land. Its responsibilities, however, are commensurate with its possibilities. We are not so presumptuous as to say that the future of the country is dependent upon the line of progress that is followed by the South; but a tremendous influence from this section will help shape the destiny of the nation. Perhaps in no other part of America has the church such an opportunity to mould the thought and life of the people as it has here. To the church, therefore, we have a right to look for a statesman-like comprehension of its task, a business-like marshaling of its resources, and a Christ-like exercise of its powers. If the church fail, little hope is left.

TOO SILLY TO BE SERIOUS.

A distinguished "capitalist," of New York, was a visitor in New Orleans a few days ago. While here he found occasion to express himself concerning horse racing. His opinion might be discounted in advance, since it was stated that he is a member of the New York Jockey Club, but his argument in favor of racing is so puerile as to fall of its own weight. His own words, as quoted in a daily newspaper, were: "The importance of cavalry was shown during the war; without thoroughbred horses there can be no cavalry, and without the races there would be no thoroughbreds." If anybody seriously supposes that a great Government is dependent upon those whose business it is to supply gamblers with a necessary part of their equipment for an important branch of its military forces, he is welcome to his opinion; but he must not become offended if an ordinary citizen smiles at his fatuity. To the best of our knowledge and belief, the value of racing to the Government is a subject that is never stressed except when race track followers are hard put to it to find a defense for their "sport." Anyway, if the Government is dependent upon racing for its supply of cavalry, it is high time for it to find some other source of supply. It is no more right for the Government to encourage gambling than it is for an individual to do so; and racing as an institution is inseparable from gambling.

QUAINT, BUT CORRECT.

We recently came across this bit of wisdom, quaintly but correctly expressed: "When in a fix, sweating will get you farther than swearing; let mules do the kicking." Profanity and complaint never helped anybody to overcome a difficult situation—the best remedy is hard work intelligently directed. Wasted energy is a dead loss—and profanity is the quintessence of such loss, considered even from the standpoint of economics, to say nothing of morals. It is interesting to note in this connection that one of the great railway systems of the country has lately posted an order prohibiting the use of profanity by its employees while on duty. Doubtless the moral element entered into the prohibition, but it was good business sense, nevertheless. Less swearing and more sweating would make better business—and better men.

A SIGN OF PROGRESS.

A press dispatch from Orange, Texas, announces that the congregation of the Mt. Zion Baptist Church, colored, has undertaken to raise $50,000 for a new building. We look upon this as a distinct sign of progress in the history of a race that has accomplished wonders within a generation. The time was when the Negroes had neither the desire, apparently, for splendid temples of worship, nor the means with which to erect them. Now they have both, and we may look for even greater progress in the future than in the past. It is encouraging to note, also, that the white people of Orange are lending sympathetic assistance to the colored people in their laudable undertaking.

WHAT ARE NECESSITIES?

The mother of a fifteen-year-old boy has declared that her son requires $7500 annually for his support. This declaration was made in an application for this allowance from trust funds left by the boy's wealthy grandfather, and among the specifications to establish the claim was the item of $24.50 a month for gasoline for her son's automobile. This brings up the interesting question as to what really are necessities. It certainly must be a relative term. For example, we know several people who manage to get along fairly well without spending thirty cents a month for gasoline—except when they want to do a little cleaning of the family wardrobe; and an automobile is beyond the wildest imagining of luxury. But the people we have in mind had no millionaire grandfathers. The necessities of life are, after all, very few and very simple. The more we have, the more we want—and it is very easy for us to translate our wants in terms of need. When we have done that, the only limit we like to place upon ourselves is in what we can get, and most of us chafe under that restraint. The "simple life" is good for people of simple means and simple minds—all others like the "trimmings."

THE THRONE ROOM OF PRAYER.

(Matt. 18:19-20)

By Mrs. A. F. Calloway.

Will you meet me in the throne room,
Next our Savior's loving heart,
There to give Him praise and homage
From the depths of grateful hearts;
There to honor and to thank Him
For the blessings He imparts?

Will you meet me in the throne room
Where the Savior's always found,
With His ear inclined to listen
To the faintest, humblest sound,
From the lips of faltering children
Who would fain in grace abound?

Will you meet me in the throne room?
Oh, the joy of meeting there
With our gracious Heavenly Father,
And to tell Him all our care,
All our losses and our crosses,
Which His great heart longs to share!

Oh, ths blessed, blessed throne room
Fitted up for you and me,
Where our souls are always welcome,
Where we meet on bended knee
'Round our Father's loving footstool,
While He honors every plea!

Yes, this glad and glorious throne room
Is the trysting place of saints,
Jesus loves them, never fails them,
Gives surcease from all complaints;
And His promises, sweet and tender,
Refresh those whose hearts are faint.

In this tried and trusted throne room
We may find, oh, joy complete,
Knee-prints made by our sweet mothers,
Near the blessed mercy seat,
As they praised and plead and worshiped
At the dear Redeemer's feet.

May we not then, Christian mothers,
Make this throne room our retreat
From the problems, sore and vexing,
Lay them at the Master's feet,
Trusting Him to crystallize them
Into blessings pure and sweet?

Take our children, kindred, friends, dear,
Leave them there safe in His care;
He will keep them, He will mould them,
Make them jewels, rich and rare.
For His gladsome, glorious Kingdom
In which all who will, may share.

Will you then, dear friends, I crave it,
At the sunrise hour each day,
Meet me in this blissful throne room
Where we'll worship, praise and pray,
Where we'll keep sweet tryst with Jesus,
Who will never say us nay?

Oxford, Miss.

OUR KING SHALL SURELY COME.

By Wm. C. Allen.

But who shall abide the day of His coming? and who shall stand when He appeareth?—Malachi 3:2.

Many Christians of diverse communions are to-day asking one another, "What do you think about the second coming? Will not the Lord soon personally appear?"

History indicates that the early Christians believed that Christ came according to His promise when the Roman armies enveloped Jerusalem in the agonies of war. The signs of His coming, as He had assured them, were then literally fulfilled. When He ascended into heaven the angels told the little band of disciples who sorrowfully saw Him disappear, "this Jesus who was received up from you shall so come in like manner as ye beheld Him going into Heaven." For this reason many devout Christians are to-day believing that at some future period He may again personally come to earth for the deliverance of men.

But whilst men and women argue regarding the nature of the "second coming" of our Lord, we may forget or minimize His spiritual appearance in our hearts. Whenever we are convicted of sin or recognize an inward or outward call to righteous acts and living, there is a veritable advent of Jesus Christ. Shall we at present leave theories which at times seem somewhat debatable, and regarding which we dare not be too dogmatic, and acknowledge the supreme value of His visitations to our souls? Is this not of primary importance? Is not the solace and the strength of the interior work of the Divine Spirit lovingly taught throughout the New Testament in terms that we can not misunderstand? The Incarnation and Calvary are not complete without it. Does not this tired old world, which in so many ways rejects the Crucified One, sorely need to emphasize a spiritual version of the coming of its Lord?

But, asks the sacred writer, "who shall abide the day of His coming?" Are we willing to be purified by Him—as the prophet declared we must be—"with a refiner's fire?"

Other thoughts intrude. How often are we saddened when remembering the forms and faces of loved ones whom we shall see no more on earth. We recollect our delightful association with them and how their counsel and courage have helped us on our way. Their laughter was our laughter and our tears were theirs. The handclasp, the look of recognition, the exchange of sympathy and thought have for the moment ceased—we say that they have died. Some of our choicest friends have passed beyond our view, sainted parents have stepped out into the future, darling children have left our homes forever and sometimes the tenderest tie has seemed too rudely severed. To all of these Jesus has come. But what about ourselves? When shall the inevitable course of nature apply to us? How soon shall the angel of death fly over the mountain wall or across the sea and knock at our doors? We cannot stay him if we will—shall we be ready when he appears?

A splendid optimism is the heritage of those who really love their Savior and who with mingled faith and awe accept the soul-visitations of their Lord. If we are obedient to His calls to righteousness, may we not with quietude and trust safely leave all the problems of the future with Him? Shall we not be very tender of the sincere opinions of others who may view this wondrous subject from a different angle from ourselves? Then, if to-morrow our Christ shall come with all the panoply of heaven, with the triumphant shouts of the seraphic host, or if He shall once more appear in the humble form of a little child, or if to-day He wins us with the whispers of the still, small voice—all will be well. Whatever may be our finite explanation of His messages, or how long soever He may seem to tarry, we are very confident that to us in some way or other our King shall surely come!

THE UNIFICATION OF METHODISM: THE REGIONAL CONFERENCES.

By Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon.

The proposed plan for the Unification of Methodism is built around the Regional Conference. The idea of the Regional Conference originated with Southern Methodists. Our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church have yielded this point for the sake of unification.

For years the Joint Commission on Federation had been feeling its way toward a plan of unification by re-organization. Here are the essential features of the plan as suggested by this Commission at the Chattanooga meeting in May, 1911, in so far as this plan deals with the White Regional Conferences:

"We suggest that the governing power in the reorganized church shall be vested in one General Conference and three or four quadrennial Conferences, both General and Quadrennial Conferences to exercise their powers under constitutional provisions and restrictions, the General Conference to have full legislative power over all matters distinctly connectional, and the Quadrennial Conference to have full power over distinctly local affairs.

"We suggest that the Quadrennial Conferences shall be composed of an equal number of ministerial and lay delegates, to be chosen by the Annual Conferences within their several jurisdictions, according to an equitable plan to be provided for.

"We suggest that the Quadrennial Conferences shall fix the boundaries of the Annual Conferences within their respective jurisdictions, and that the Annual Conferences shall be composed of all traveling preachers in full connection therewith, and of one lay representative from each pastoral charge.

"We suggest that the Quadrennial Conferences shall name the bishops from their several jurisdictions, the same to be confirmed by the first house of the General Conference."

The whole church should be gratified to see how closely we have adhered to this plan and how successful we have been in working under those instructions. It is not claimed that this plan is perfect. It is not doubted that many wise men will be able to point out serious defects in it. But it is claimed that the plan is in harmony with our instructions and that it is a workable plan for the unification of American Methodism. No instrument of this kind was ever made perfect in advance of its being put into actual operation.

We make now a brief study of the proposed plan of unification in so far as it has to do with the Regional Conferences:

1. The General Conference endorsed the Chattanooga suggestion of three or four Regional Conferences. We present to the church a plan for six Regional Conferences. We found that the idea of the Regional Conference could not be successfully worked out in a Region as large and as populous as, for instance, that part of the country where the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is now most numerous. To save the idea—to live up to our instructions—we were under the necessity of increasing the number of White Regional Conferences in the United States to six, as follows:

(1) Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

(2) Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, North Carolina and that part of Tennessee now embraced in the Holston Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

(3) South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, and that part of Tennessee not included in the Holston Conferences.

(4) Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin.

(6) Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico and Arizona.

The more carefully one studies this arrangement, the more it commends itself to one's judgment. In some quarters the objection is heard that we have cut the Southern Methodist Church into three segments, and have put in different Regions, States as similar in ideals and interests as, say, Texas and Georgia. If the Regional Conferences had all the powers of the General Conference—if the Regional Conferences were just little General Conferences—this would be a valid objection. But the Regional Conference is to legislate only concerning matters which are distinctively Regional, while a strong General Conference is to hold all the Regions together as one undivided church. There will no longer be any Southern Methodist Church, and there will no longer be any Northern Methodist Church. There will henceforth be one united Methodist Church. We have laid down a plan, not for the division of Methodism, but for the unification of Methodism.

In drawing up the plan for the six Regional Conferences named above, an attempt was made to have the membership of the church as nearly equal as possible in each of the jnrisdictions. The membership in the six White Regional Conferences is as follows: In Region 1, 1,050,827; in Region 2, 890,639; in Region 3, 832.298; in Region 4, 1,135,970; in Region 5, 744,645; in Region 6. 811,624. Note once more, that three of these Regions are Northern or predominantly Northern, and that three are Southern or predominantly Southern, and that there are common interests in each Region. The States of the United States were not grouped together in these Regional Conferences In order to keep sectionalism alive. There is no place for sectionalism in our united country, so far as sectionallsm may grow out of the history of 1844, or the history of the sixties. Because of a homogeneity of interests, the States naturally grouped themselves in these Regional Jurisdictions. Confessedly the great Northwestern Region is unsatisfactory; but that part of the country Is for the most part sparsely settled, and as one commissioner said, it requires "a great deal of geography" in the West to furnish large enough population for a Regional Conference.

In order to satisfy our people that this will not be a merely temporary arrangement, which, at the whim of a Northern majority in some General Conference, may in a few years be upset, the stability of this plan of Regional Jurisdictions has been given every reasonable guarantee. Observe: (1) The Constitution provides "that the boundaries of a Regional Jurisdiction shall not be changed without its consent for a period of three quadrenniums succeeding the adoption of this Constitution." This gives stability for twelve years at least. Observe (2) that the Constitution provides also that the General Conference "shall not take away territory from any Regional Jurisdiction without its consent, save by the concurrent vote of two successive General Conferences." That is to say, if any General Conference votes to take away territory from any Regional Jurisdiction and the Regional Conference objects, it will have four years to discuss the whole matter before the church, and it will require the vote of the next General Conference before the change in boundaries can be made. And observe (3) the Constitution also provides that "whenever a majority of each of two Regional delegations in the United States shall so request, a vote shall be taken on any pending motion or resolution by Regional delegations, and it shall require the concurrence of two-thirds of the Regional delegations in the United States, the members of each Regional delegation voting as one body, to adopt said motion or resolution." If these three provisions do not guarantee all the stability that this plan of Regional Conferences ought to have, it would be difficult for human ingenuity to find a way by which such stability could be guaranteed.

2. It was orlginally planned that there should be two sets of delegates to the Governing Conferences of the united church—one set of delegates to the General Conference and another set of delegates to each of the Regional Conferences. But grave difficulties arose in the way of making this a workable plan, and objections offered were which we were not able to overcome. We were not able to make progress until the suggestion was made that In each Regional Jurisdiction the same delegates represent the Annual Conferences both in the General Conference and in the Regional Conference. The proposed Constitution, therefore, provides that "each Regional Conference for White Membership In the United States shall be composed of the ministerial and lay delegates elected to the General Conference by the Annual Conferences within the territory of the said Regional Conference." The reasons which led us to adopt this plan are as follows:

(1) It was agreed that bishops were to be elected by the Regional Conferences and confirmed by the General Conference. If a Regional Conference were to meet two years, or one year, or six months, before the General Conference, and elect several men to the office of bishop and have them suspended In mid-air, so to speak, for the months intervening before the session of the General Conference, that would create an awkward situation fraught with all kinds of possible embarrassment. So the happy suggestion was made that the Regional Conference delegates and General Conference delegates be one and the same. Then the bishops for each Region could be elected by the Regional Conference delegates during the session of the General Conference. The General Conference could then confirm them and the bishops ordain them. (2) it was feared that if the Annual Conference should be represented in the General Conference by one set of delegates, and in the Regional Conferences by another set of delegates, the General Conference and the Regional Conferences might tend to pull apart. it was feared that there might be a tendency to develop a group of little churches in a Great Church. This fear may have been groundless, and the writer thinks that it was; but the fear was there, nevertheless, and had to be reckoned with. And since what we all desired was not a partition of Methodism into groups of little General Conferences- which would have been ruinous—hut the unification of Methodism under one strong General Conference, we acquiesced in the suggestion that the delegates to the General Conference be also the delegates to the Regional Conference. And as a matter of fact there are many advantages in having the same men in both the governing Conferences of Methodism. The strongest men ought always to be elected to the General Conference, and the strongest men ought also to be elected to the Regional Conferences. if two sets of delegates had been determined on, it might have come about that sometimes the men who failed of election to the General Conference would be chosen as delegates to the Regional Conference. All these possibilities had to be considered. According to the arrangement agreed upon, men of experience in Regional Conference affairs will be better able to attend to their duties as members of the General Conferences; and men who have had experience in General Conference affairs will be better able to attend to their duties as members of the Regional Conferences.

It may be in order to notice briefly one or two objections which have been urged. It is objected (1) that the members of a Regional Conference are only ex officio members. Ex officio is a Latin phrase. If one could find a little longer Latin phrase, it might look a little more dangerous. Does the fact that the president of a bank is ex officio a member of all important committees appointed by the board of directors, give him any less importance as a member of these several committees? Does the fact that the bishops of our church are ex officio members of the Board of Missions and the Board of Church Extension, cause them to take their membership on these boards any less seriously? The fact is our having determined that the delegates to the General Conference shall also be the delegates to the Regional Conferences, insures a stronger and more representative membership in the Regional Conferences. It is objected (2) that this is very much like one of the States of the Union doing away with its own State legislature and having its senators and representatives in Washington constitute its State Legislature. If there were as many Regional Conferences as there are States in the United States, there might be something in this objection. But the Regional Conference is to have its regular time for meetings and its place of meeting within the bounds of its own territory. I look forward to seeing the Regional Conference become a mighty force for good—a great inspirational and administrative Conference, as well as legislative in matters distinctively Regional. So necessary is some such Conference that certain men of light and leading have been heard to say that if by some lamentable tragedy the two Methodisms should at this time fail to come together, a system of Regional Conferences ought to be developed for the good of the church.

3. it remains that we call attention to the powers of the Regional Conference. These powers are, of course, subject to the limitations and restrictions of the Constitution of the church. "No Regional Conference shall make rules or regulations contrary to or in conflict with any rule or regulation made by the General Conference for the government and control of the connectional affairs of the church." The General Conference, that is to say, has to do with matters purely connectional, binding the whole church together; the Regional Conference has full power over all matters which are distinctively Regional, dealing with matters in which the Region as such is interested. The powers of the Regional Conference may be classified as: (1) Legislative, (2) Administrative, and (3) Electoral.

(1) The language of the Constitution is perfectly plain and satisfactory. It cannot be misunderstood. It reads as follows: "Each Regional Conference shall have full power over all distinctively Regional affairs within its area, including the power to fix the boundaries of Annual Conferences," etc. This is in exact conformity with the plan approved at Chattanooga In May, 1911.

(2) Nothing further need at this time be said touching the administrative powers of the Regional Conference.

(3) The Chattanooga paper contained the suggestion that the Regional Conference name the bishops and that the same be confirmed by the General Conference. This suggestion has been incorporated in the proposed plan for the reorganization of the church. Possibly the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has been more interested in the electoral powers of the Regional Conference than in any one other thing. Our interest grows out of our history. Ours is still an episcopal church—a church having bishops—vitally interested in who they are, in what they have to do, and in how they are dealt with. It is the writer's opinion that episcopacy has nothing to fear from the rank and file of our ministers and members. An efficient episcopacy always vindicates itself. Only the bishops can destroy episcopacy in Methodism. Methodists believe In the episcopacy, and this is seen in the very structure of this Constitution, built as it is around the idea of the Regional Conference. Note carefully several things: (1) The bishops are elected by the Regional Conference and must be confirmed by the General Conference, unless two-thirds of the members of the General Conference shall object to said confirmation; (2) a bishop cannot be retired without the concurrence of the Regional Conference In which his official residence is fixed, except by a two-thirds vote of the General Conference; (3) a bishop shall be assigned by the General Conference for residential supervision to the Regional Jurisdiction by or for which he was elected.

These provisions certainly give adequate protection to the rights and privileges of the Regional Conference in its relation to the bishops.

But from the beginning of our history Methodism has been connectional. The bishops, as general superintendents, have had much to do with creating and preserving the spirit of connectionalism in Methodism. It is important, therefore, that the bishops should still be general superintendents. A purely diocesan episcopacy would certainly tend toward the breaking up of Methodist connectionalism. It is, therefore, provided that "any bishop, except as herein otherwise provided, may be assigned by the general superintendents to any Annual Conference for presidential supervision, if a majority of the resident bishops of the jurisdiction to which he is assigned shall concur in said assignment." And it is also provided that "the General Conference may assign a bishop to any jurisdiction for residential supervision with the consent of the delegates of the jurisdictions from which the bishop is to be taken and to which he is to be assigned." The importance of these provisions is immediately evident. There must be one Methodist Church In America.

It will, of course, be understood that no reference is made in this paper of the relation of the colored bishops to the church. Colored bishops are elected only by and for the Regional Conference containing the colored membership In the United States.

Let me be perfectly frank. The writer of this article is an advocate. He believes In unification. He favors unification on any plan that will not be hurtful to Methodism and to the cause of Christ. He believes that the best interests of the Kingdom of God demand a united Methodism. He believes that before we yield to the temptation to waste our Centenary money in border warfare, we should settle the matter of the unification of American Methodism. He believes that it is the will of God that Methodism, which, from the beginning of American history, has had the first day of our opportunity has now come, and that if we are wise to know what Israel ought to do, we shall go forward to a place of larger influence in the nation and in the world. Let me make the words of another my own: "As one thinks of the world today, shaken as in an earthquake that brings clattering down about our ears the dearest dreams our hearts have cherished, it does seem that religion should grow great to meet her crisis and opportunity, and casting aside the littleness that in calmer days might find excuse, ought to speak great words about God and the Kingdom, lest men's hearts turn to water in them and their strength be gone."

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

S. A. Steel.

I take it all back. I said that I favored the Interchurch Movement. I read the "Constitution" of the "Movement," and the first article safe-guarded the denominational title to property, which was such a contrast to the amazing folly of the Unification "Constitution," which surrenders all our titles to the Northern Methodists, that I was deeply impressed with it. But since they have selected Abraham Lincoln as the godfather of the Interchurch Movement, it lets me clear out. Carley, I'll go to heaven hy my lone self, and go through the woods, before I will tramp with a multitude who call Lincoln a Christian. If he was a Christian, my preaching for fifty-three years has been a lie, for I have from the first declared that faith in Christ is essential to he a Christian, and that we must confess him before men. And with Paul, I say now, "though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed!"

Lincoln made no pretension to be a Christian, did not believe in the deity of Christ, never belonged to any church, and was killed in a theater. But he was an honest man, with a wholesome hatred of just such lickerish hypocrisy as this rot that makes him a saint. Taking him for the patron saint of the Interchurch Movement means that at the heart of the Movement there is a false ideal. It is simply putting darkness for light. It is indicative of spiritual anarchy. Every year, along in February, the North breaks out with this repulsive disease of Lincolnitis, and the Northern Methodists have it in its most virulent form. The whole South honors the memory of Mr. Lincoln as a man and as a patriot; but there is no greater lie gallivanting about this planet than that he was a Christian. They are short of saints up that way evidently. No mixing with them for me. They are wasting their literature when they send Interchurch pamphlets to me. I'm out.

WHY PAY THE CENTENARY PLEDGE.

By Rev. E. G. Mohler.

The small percentage of the Centenary pledges paid of the first installment, tabulated in our Conference minutes should make us blush with shame. Where is the trouble? Is it that we preachers are not wholly committed to the Centenary program? If not, why not? It was ordered by our General Conference. Are we not a loyal part of a great whole? I am sure we desire to keep step with the onward march of our great church, that we believe in connectionalism and stand ready to obey the commands of our constituted authorities. I am committed to the entire program because of what it is, what it stands for and for what it has done and will do. Most assuredly God was in the movement from the beginning. He inspired it, therefore it is a sacred and vital movement. To go counter to it, fail to support it to the end, would be a calamity both to ourselves and to our church. Allow me to give a few reasons why we preachers should insist upon our people's paying their Centenary pledges.

1. It is a moral obligation, an honest debt to God made in good faith. The non-payment of same would react hurtfully upon the moral character of our people. To repudiate the contract would be dishonest and irreligious. The man who can pay his pledge, even though it entailed self-denial, and fails to do so, looks as if he considers his contract with God and his church to be no more than "a scrap of paper." Religious apostacy is bound to follow.

2. Our General Mission Board, a creature of the church, is depending upon us to finish the job. On the hasis of our subscriptions it has moved forward, advanced its firing lines, opened new fields, built new missions, enlarged old ones and projected larger plans. Shall we fail and embarrass our Mission Board at this stage of the game? God forbid! Personally I would just as soon fall down on my Conference collections. The preacher who will allow or encourage his people to squirm out of paying the Centenary pledge will have anything hut a dependahle constituency from which to get his support or Conference collections. We have been praying that God would raise up more men and women for the mission fields. Should God answer our prayers, are we sure we have done our part in making it possible for our General Board of Missions to equip and support them? Otherwise, we should stop praying for more missionaries and pray God to forgive our selfishness and short-sightedness. Pay our honest debt and then pray for the much-needed revival.

3. Church pride alone should make us desirous that every penny subscribed be paid. I do not want to he a part of a dismal failure, or admit to the world that Southern Methodism hasn't sense. unity and religion sufficient to make a success of the great movement. If we make a failure of this great program, in the future what right will we have to ask our laymen to join us in another great undertaking?

4. This is a selfish reason or motive. Ten per cent of the Centenary askings is to be returned to the several Conferences to be used to supplement the support of our underpaid preachers on the mission charges. Our Conference Mission Board can pay out only what it receives. All of us owe it to our hard-pressed preachers on the firing line to do our best to have the pledges paid.

5. We should urge and insist upon the payment of every cent of the pledges through gratitude to Almighty God for what the movement has done for our church thus far. As a result of the movement our church has received a larger vision and a great impetus. It has gone forward hy hounds and leaps to greater and nobler achievements never dreamed of before. Where the plan was honestly and prayerfully worked hy pastor and his people, to that pastor and church came a blessing.

THE SUPERANNUATE.

By Mrs. Robert Kemp.

A long time ago, the General Conference authorized the raising of an Endowment Fund for superannuated ministers. How my heart rejoiced! I felt sure a ready response adequate to their needs would do justice to this neglected clan. Year after year slipped by; contrihutions came slowly, while the tired worker laid down the burden of active service, finding rest, at last. in eternity.

When the Centenary Drive came on, how loyally and enthusiastically all Methodism joined to "put it over the top!" Again our superannuates were forgotten; great benefits came to every branch of our work, hut none to them personally. Year after year, he went to any work assigned, his wife loyally following, till that sad time came when he went home from Conference to tell her. "No appointment." The time they dreaded, but were never in a condition to avert, is upon them. They take up this burden as loyally as any in the past.

I hear our Conference is to raise a conference Superannuate Endowment Fund. I say "I hear," for it is too little advertised for me to be sure. I am glad to see the North Mississippi Conference is organizing for this work. Maybe the older brethren are too modest or too busy with other work to push this. To the younger, age seems too far away for a realization that some day this will be a vital matter to them.

It seems just the other day, but years ago, at a church conference at Canton, my husband was stating facts and figures very plainly; Brother Hollomon feeling sympathetic, I suppose, because of the embarrassed faces before him, said, "I did not know it was that bad, Brother Kemp." My husband replied, "Probably you did not, but I am sure your wife did, for I am the son of a Methodist minister and know parsonage secrets."

All ministers would provide for this time, but it is impossible; so let us make this Endowment Fund, a prompt success—a big one—so that no minister need ever fear the deprivation of superannuating—as some have in the past. Methodism—considered the best organized body ecclesiastically—is weak at this point. May we right the wrong to our veterans by making this one of the strongest points in our organization!

A few years ago, the Episcopal Church made a drive, to be raised in twelve months, for a sum sufficient to pay every rector $50.00 per month on his retirement. I could not share the optimism of a good friend of that denomination, who spoke of it as an accomplished fact, from the beginning. They succeeded—why can not we?

"UNIFICATION—WHY NOT."

By Rev. W. D. Bass.

Dear Brother Carley: In your columns of February 12, I read the letter of my friend, and good evangelist, Rev. W. M. McIntosh, under the above caption. Please allow me space to say a few things. There is not anything so stirring the church at this time as the question of unification. Good people are in favor of it, and good people oppose it. I have done evangelistic work among the people and heard them talk until I desire to put in print what I know the minds of preachers and people to be in many Southern States. If unification is ever accomplished it will not be unanimous in Southern Methodism.

When I was a boy, it always made me feel sad to see bees swarm; sometimes they seemed determined to go, regardless of the blowing of horns and ringing of bells. They would fly up in the air and go round and round and then take a straight course north or south. Those remaining in the old hive would go to work and soon regain what they had lost, while those that went away would find a lodging place in some far-away tree and engage again in their loved employ.

Did we pursue the right course in 1844? The Lord would not have been our friend, and blessed our labors so abundantly if we had been on the wrong course all these years. God is not a party to wrong-doing. A great number among the clergy and laity are not possessed of any "prejudice" born in the early sixties. The war was 16 years after the church divided. We love our brethren of the North, and also our Southern Methodist Church is as dear as life to multiplied thousands. By trying to do things after the fashions of the world, we have lost our old-time spiritual power to an alarming extent. Our Lord commended the unjust steward for his timely precaution, foresight, and care, about the things of this life, Luke 16:8. Our duty is in the direction of the unsaved millions, who are not members of any church. Yes, "In unity there is strength." That is the "unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace," Eph. 4:3. God has never heen dependent upon large numbers to carry on His work. He told Gideon, "The people that are with thee are too many for me to give the Midianites into their hands, lest Israel, vaunt themselves against me, saying, Mine own hand hath saved me," Judges, 7:2. The Lord reduced Gideon's thirty-two thousand men to only three hundred. God has not become weak and had to change His plans, "For I am the Lord, I change not," Matt. 3:6. The trouble is, the soldiers God has are not at work as they should be. The God of Joshua still liveth, "One man of you shall chase a thousand; for the Lord your God, he it is that fighteth for you as he hath promised to do," Jos. 23:10. According to the Bible, which we preach, if we are willing to let God calculate for us, five good workers ought to save one hundred souls. (I must be allowed to say here, that the pastor and myself and only three other workers began a meeting in Wagoner, Okla., several years ago, and had one hundred additions to our church.) "And an hundred of you shall put ten thousand to flight," Lev. 26:8. If God is, indeed, with His workers, they can do greater things than that, "one chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight," Deut. 32:30.

Brethren in the Lord, please hear me a word: I love everybody, North and South, East and West, and all over the world, because I love the Lord Jesus Christ. Our need to save the world is not more numbers, but our need is God with the numbers we have. The Lord has enough soldiers in either Methodist Church, North or South, to evangelize the population of the globe if there were no other branches of the Christian church in existence.

It is foreign to the design altogether, but the unification agitation now on is seriously hindering the work of the Holy Spirit. The Lord appointed only one hundred and twenty to begin the greatest revival of the ages—Pentecost. That was by prayer and preaching the Word. In the strength of the Lord we can take three Christians who will truly pray and work, and hold a successful revival anywhere. Common sense teaches that it is right and proper to plan intelligently for great revivals. We must be very careful, however, that our plans are such in the light of the Word that the Holy Spirit will approve, for without Him we can do nothing.

Mr. Editor, of course, I am aware of the fact that wiser men than I have had this matter of bringing the two churches together under prayerful and painstaking consideration, and will do whatever they think best in their godly judgment. I do not think that what I say in my humble way will turn the tide either way. Therefore, I do not see how it would do any harm for you to let me say in conclusion, that, judging by what I know about the minds of many people, I will utter the prophecy that when unification is accomplished there will remain a goodly number of bees in the old Southern hive, in some form. Too many bees in one great hive will not make honey in proportion; too many drones.

May the Lord direct all to His glory in the future as He has in the past and give us a world-wide revival, is my sincere prayer.

THE INTERCHURCH MOVEMENT.

By Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

I have been much concerned for some time about the Interchurch World Movement, which seems to be coming down upon us with such a voice of authority and such mighty tramping of armies as almost to overwhelm us. I do not ask what the movement is, but I am rather concerned about the method by which Southern Methodists seem to be committed to it. In the first place, there has been no action of the General Conference on the subject of our denomination's affiliating with such a movement. In the second place, it has never been before our Annual Conference for Conference action. Certainly the Boards at Nashville have no power to commit our church to the Movement, and the money raised by the Missionary Centenary certainly does not belong to that Movement.

Personally, I am afraid of it. It is so broad that it is thin. As a Methodist, I cannot see my way clear to co-operate with every one who is a member of some church organization. The Interchurch Bulletin of February 21 has the following paragraph:

"What the Interchurch World Movement will be in practice is illustrated in the case of Fargo College, of Fargo, North Dakota." The article goes on to state that said college has two Christian Scientists, an Episcopal bishop, a Presbyterian and a Baptist on its Board of Trustees, and that it will soon become a union college, and hopes to shut out all other colleges in its field.

The same issue has a statement from Dr. Jeremiah Jenks, with the evident approval of the Movement behind it, that "The churches are selling the Christian religion to the world." The Interchurch World Movement is preparing a world-wide selling campaign."

When the great conference of women was called recently and two women from Louisiana were to attend, the Movement called a Northern Methodist woman and a Unitarian woman to go and represent Christian womanhood in this great Interchurch program.

So, you see, the ideal worked out is an educational system governed by a mixture of Christian Scientists and the rest of us. We are going out to "sell" Christianity to the world, and when it comes to deliberating and planning executively we want brains, even if they be those of Unitarians who deny our Christ.

Our denomination has published its affiliation with the Movement in the Survey. Many of our preachers are swallowing the movement, hook and line, and there has gone out the impression that Methodists are among the leaders of the Movement. I am not yet ready to yoke up with Christian Scientists, Mormons, Unitarians and the like. There are appalling conditions in the world, but nothing to compare with the condition that will prevail when any movement makes bedfellows out of all the denominations quoted as co-operating in the Interchurch World Movement.

"THE MINUTES OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE."

Brethren of the Conference: As one of your Statistical Secretaries, I wish to say that I am not responsible for the discrepancies that appear in the Journal for the year 1919.

If you will carefully note the totals in Table No. 1, relating to membership, you will find a very substantial increase in membership in each district and also for the Conference as a whole.

The preachers did not report that way, and I took their reports as being as near accurate as could be gotten. To be explicit, instead of the figures as they appear in the Journal for the several districts, the following are the figures as reported by the preachers and will be verified by a little time at an adding machine:

Brookhaven District	9323
Hattiesburg District	8814
Jackson District	9130
Meridian District	9403
Newton District	9015
Port Gibson District	6804
Seashore District	7085
Total	59,574

You will note that this is a smaller membership than appears as the total in the Journal.

I call attention to this at the present time because, if we continue to add errors, the time will come when the error will be more noticeable.

It is easy to see how the large figures were brought in: Add the "Additions on Profession of Faith" to the column "Additions by Certificate and Otherwise," then deduct the number appearing in the column marked "Removals" and add that sum to the total of the preceding year and you have the large figures. That is all right in bookkeeping, where all figures may be checked and verified, but it won't work in dealing with the figures that come to us. I fail to see that we have authority to assume one column to be correct and the next column incorrect. As one of the Statistical Secretaries, I must assume that the preacher in charge of a work knows how many members are on that work, and when he reports 59,574, I cannot report for him 62,017.

Yours for greater accuracy,

GEO. P. McKEOWN.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

The regular date for the meeting of the Board of Missions fell this year on May 5. Accordingly, that date has been set for this meeting.

The closing out of the second year of the Centenary, with all that is involved for the present and for the future, will make this meeting one of the most important and interesting in the history of the Board. Add to this the unprecedented conditions that confront us at home and abroad, and the enlarged vision of the church as to its responsibility, and the call for a full meeting to give adequate time for the consideration of the many questions that will arise is emphatic.

It is a matter that should command the earnest prayers of the church, that this historic Annual Meeting of the Board may be one in which divine wisdom may guide to such conclusions as will be in accordance with the mind of Christ for this great hour. W. W. PINSON, Secretary.

DO YOU WANT TO GO TO COLLEGE?

A NOTE FROM DR. MEEK.

Dear Brother Carley: As Dr. T. N. Ivey saw fit to involve me in his reply to Rev. V. C. Curtis in your issue of March 4 by publishing a private communication that he had written me, I ask the privilege of making a statement in your columns that your readers may understand fully what took place. Why the Doctor saw fit to draw me into his controversy, as I had had nothing to say in the public prints, when a simple impersonal explanation would have made his position equally clear, I do not know. In view of the fact that he has done this, and that he seemingly would have it appear that he has been entirely fair and impartial, a backward glance at his course is, in my opinion, in order.

In the Nashville Christian Advocate of December 12, Dr. Ivey printed the action of the North Mississippi Conference concerning the standardized evangelistic campaign by request of Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, along with a private note from Brother Lipscomb, which I think plainly bore marks that it was not intended for publication. The brief note referred to did not at all discuss the resolutions which it accompanied, nor the principles involved. In the same issue of the Nashville Advocate the paper adopted by the Mississippi Conference was printed, along with an extended discussion of the controverted points by Rev. J. L. Neill, who had helped to formulate the so-called Standard Plan, and who had led in the effort to get it put into operation by the Mississippi Conference. Brother Neill's article was in effect an arraignment of the administration of Bishop Kilgo and the course taken by his Conference in dealing with this issue; and he ventured also to comment upon the action of the North Mississippi Conference as well as his own. Dr. Ivey, furthermore, delivered himself editorially, defending the Committee on Evangelism and discrediting the pronouncements of the Mississippi Conferences.

Believing that these Conferences had been misrepresented in some respects by the utterances of Brother Neill and Dr. Ivey, I felt that they were entitled to a hearing in the General Organ of the church in which their critics had spoken; so I offered Dr. Ivey an article reviewing the whole movement to put the Standard Plan through the Mississippi Conferences, including the proceedings of the meetings at Grenada and Jackson last October (at which Dr. Goddard was present), and in which I sought to give what I conceived to be the view-point of the Conferences as to the principles involved. My discussion was dispassionate, and there was not a harsh or unkind word in it.

As Dr. Ivey has stated, he returned my article, as I had requested him to do in case he could not print it soon, along with the note to me which he gave out in his reply to Brother Curtis. If the reader will recur to that note, he will see that the Doctor gave no sort of promise that he would publish my article later, but only that he would "consider" whatever might be sent him by members of the Mississippi Conferences after the proposed Jackson meeting had materialized or failed to do so. What did Dr. Ivey have to do with the Jackson meeting, no reference to which had been made publicly? Was not that a private matter involving only the Joint Evangelistic Committee, Bishop Kilgo, and the presiding elders of the two Mississippi Conferences? Does not this circumstance show how closely the Doctor was in touch with those on the other side of the matters at issue? Moreover, whatever might have been the outcome of a meeting such as was contemplated at Jackson, the Mississippi Conferences were justly entitled to be heard concerning the questions that Dr. Ivey and Brother Neill had raised in the Nashville Advocate. Having been publicly attacked, only by giving them an opportunity for defense in the same forum in which they had been arraigned could these bodies have been shown the consideration that was due them.

Following closely upon the date that had been suggested for the Jackson meeting, which did not "materialize," Dr. Ivey published a communication which was in part a reply of the Joint Committee on Evangelism to the Mississippi Conferences, and in part a belaboring prologue by Dr. Goddard. In the same issue of his paper Dr. Ivey also printed a statement that any replies to the Evangelistic Committee must "adhere closely to the specific points involved in what had lately appeared in the Christian Advocate." If he had read the article which I had offered him for publication, the Doctor must have known when he laid down this condition that it would thereby be excluded. Of course, I might have mutilated it and offered him a part of what I had written, but this my self-respect would hardly allow me to do, especially as the gentleman who was fixing the metes and bounds beyond which I should not range in the discussion (not as to my spirit, but as to the facts and the significance of them), had already shown himself to be a partisan on the other side.

Besides this, the Doctor had just permitted the Secretary of the Joint Committee on Evangelism to lug in matters not originally involved in the controversy, as for instance the offensive statements made concerning members of the Mississippi Conferences in connection with the Jackson meeting—a new and late development. Nor did he impose a restriction upon any except those replying to the Joint Committee. Why did he not make his restraint one of general application to both sides?

I desire also to say a word concerning the suggested Jackson meeting which Drs. Goddard and Ivey have brought to the public attention. It is not true that Bishop Kilgo and the Mississippi presiding elders were notified that they would be given an opportunity "to withdraw their charges," and that if they did not do so they would have to take the consequences, or words to that effect. We did receive a respectful communication from Dr. Goddard in which it was suggested that our attitude was due to a misunderstanding of the Evangelistic Committee and its work, and that the matters concerning which we were at variance might be adjusted if we could have a confereuce at Jackson. There was no intimation that we were expected to make a confession or a recantation. Nor was it the fault of the Bishop and presiding elders that the Jackson meeting was not held. It is my understanding that Bishop Kilgo most courteously offered to call it, but that he very properly reminded Dr. Goddard that the resolutions complained of were the pronouncements of Annual Conferences, which a bishop and presiding elders had no power to reverse. This, it seems, was what put a quietus on the get-together meeting that had been proposed.

It does not behoove me to answer for Brother Curtis, who is abundantly able to take care of himself. But this much I will say: The minute men episode was before the committee serving the North Mississippi Conference at Aberdeen, and, though not specifically mentioned in the resolutions adopted by that body, it furnished in part the basis for the action which it took. It was not in any sense a new and irrelevant matter lugged into the debate. It was a striking illustration of the objectionable methods that were being used in the evangelistic campaign which the Mississippi Conferences were being strenuously pressed to adopt.

From the foregoing recital of facts, the readers of the New Orleans Advocate may judge to what extent Dr. Ivey has been "fair and impartial."

"THE WORLD AT COLUMBUS."

Centenary Motion Picture.

The Centenary Commission is now releasing the six-reel motion picture made at the Centenary Celebration, entitled "The World at Columbus." This is the first motion picture ever sent out under the auspices, and with the endorsement, of any religious denomination.

This picture covers Methodist history and the origin of the Church, giving views of Oxford University, Wesley's Chapel in London, early meeting houses in America, and all the home and foreign fields. It covers the entire Centenary Celebration, including scenes of all the buildings, exhibits, parades, life plays, and the wonderful pageant "The Wayfarer." It also shows personal close-ups of such distinguished visitors as Mr. McAdoo, ex-President Taft, William J. Bryan, Secretary Daniels, Sergeant York, and Commander Reid of the N C—4.

The Paramount Screen Educator says that "The World at Columbus is probably the most pretentious film ever produced by a non-theatrical organization."

The purpose of this film is entirely religious. It aims to contrast paganism with Christianity, to show the supreme need of giving the gospel to all the world, to visualize the mighty Centenary program all over the earth, and to give a glimpse of the great Christian pageant "The Wayfarer."

Musical suggestions from the world's greatest music, especially the Methodist Hymnal, are included.

The Centenary Commission is now booking showings for this film. It will be rented to any church, organization, or person at a rental rate of twenty dollars for the first showing and ten dollars for each subsequent showing on the same shipment. The user pays all transportation charges both ways.

When desired arrangements can perhaps be made for exhibitions on a mutual basis, the Centenary Commission furnishing the films, musical suggestions, and advertising material, and the local organizations providing the building, projecting machine, screen, and operator. When such an arrangement is made the gross proceeds are divided equally between the Centenary Commission and the local organization.

All churches are urged to present this picture, either in the church building or by arrangement with a moving picture theatre. Southern Methodists should obtain the film only through the Centenary Commission at Nashville, as the films sent out from Nashville have been edited especially for the M. E. Church, South, by the Secretary of the Department of Publicity.

The Centenary Commission has no moving picture machines for rent. These must in all cases be provided locally. Adequate arrangements must be made for protecting the film and all local laws must be complied with before showing.

NOTHING TO DO.

I know a little girl
About as big as you,
Who sighs ten times a day,
"I don't know what to do."

She has new toys and games,
A baby brother, too,
And yet she still complains,
"I don't know what to do."

The baby likes to romp,
And mother's busy, too;
Now, can't you think of something
That this small girl could do?

WHEN KATHLEEN COLLECTED THE RENTS.

The telephone bell rang, and Kathleen hastened to answer it.

"I have found that I shall have to leave the city this evening on business, Kathleen," her father's voice came over the wire, "and I wish you would attend to the rents for me to-morrow. Jackson will be away."

"Oh, father, my garden party's the next day! I really couldn't do it. I haven't a minute's time. I don't want to, anyway," she ended weakly.

"You will have to do it, Kathleen. The car is at your service, you know. But I can't talk longer, only be sure to collect all the rents."

When Mr. Grayson spoke in that tone, his young lady daughter knew that he must be obeyed. But why had father asked her to do so unusual a thing? He must have some object, Kathleen reflected.

The next morning Kathleen arose with the birds, and at an early hour she was on her way to the tenement district. As her chauffeur drove through the squalid streets she forgot all about the garden party in the unaccustomed sights and sounds that met her on every hand. The people she saw were not like any she had ever known, and what a rank odor the dirty, ill-kept buildings gave forth as they passed them! What a terrible thing it was to be poor, she thought. At last the car stopped at her father's tenement.

"Such a contrast to my garden!" she mentally exclaimed, as she looked up at the great bare walls, relieved only here and there by sickly little pots of flowers in the windows.

At the first door Kathleen was met by a wrinkled, dried-up, but gentle-faced old woman.

"Will you come in?" was the greeting uttered in a quavering voice.

Kathleen entered a dreary room furnished with a table, a cot and a chair. The old lady offered the chair and seated herself on the cot.

Some way, as Kathleen looked at the geranium blooming in the narrow window, she did not have the heart to speak about the rent, and the old lady evidently regarded her as one of those kindly-disposed society girls who are wont to visit slum districts.

"I think you must like flowers the way I do," the girl said, somewhat embarrassed at first.

"I just love them!" the old lady said, "for they make me think of the time when I was a girl and had a wild garden of my own."

"Oh, isn't that funny?" Kathleen said—"I have a wild garden. Do tell me about yours."

"Why, it was a garden near a castle in the Old Country, where I used to live when I was a child. The birds had planted the seeds, and I used to call the place mine because I visited it oftenest. It was so beautiful!"

The old lady seemed to forget everything in the memory of that far-away place, and for some time she talked rapturously of the past. As Kathleen listened, she decided she would rather make up the rent from her own allowance than to ask this poor old soul for any money.

She knocked at the door across the hall, and a child timidly opened it a little way.

"Please, sir," she whined—"Oh, lady, I mean—and if you want the rent—mother's been sick—and—"

"Gretchen, let him in," a weak voice called.

The child threw the door wide, and the next moment Kathleen found herself in a sick room. A pale, emaciated woman was lying on a bed in the corner, covered with a ragged old blanket.

"I am sorry my child spoke as she did," came feebly, but in well-modulated tones. "I suppose you have come for the rent."

"Yes," said Kathleen, somewhat taken aback by finding here a woman of evident refinement, even culture.

"I have been ill for several weeks," the woman explained, "but I hope to be able to return soon to my work, then the rent will surely be paid. I have nothing at present."

"Where are you employed?" asked Kathleen, deeply touched.

"In the mills," the woman replied.

"Did your work make you ill?"

"Yes. You see, my lungs became so filled with the dust that it is almost impossible to breathe. I wish I were stronger," she sighed.

As Kathleen left the dreary place, she thought, "I can well afford to take her rent, too, from my allowance."

The next door was opened by a cheery-voiced old man.

"Come in," he piped. "I've had a little extra cobbling, and I'm happy as a clam. If its the rent you're after, I'm here with the goods."

"That is my errand," replied Kathleen lightly, "but I'd like to know the secret of your happiness, for I'm sure it doesn't depend upon chance cobbling."

"No, dear lady, it does not—it's just this: though I live poorly, I enjoy my work."

"Tell me about it," Kathleen said, taking his proffered chair.

"Well," the old man replied, his eyes twinkling, "it's not altogether my work—I mean, I find lots of pleasure in thinking about the folks who wear the shoes I mend. I get to wondering what they do and where the shoes are taking them from day to day. Sometimes, when the shoes belong to the little feet—like this pair—I hope that they are going to spend a while in the country among the violets."

"So you are another person who likes violets!" exclaimed Kathleen.

"Like them!" the old man cried; "I always bring home a bunch on Saturday night to have on this work bench. They last nearly all week, so I most always have them."

Kathleen wondered, as she sat there, what she would have to show for her forenoon's work; but she was having too good a time to care.

There were other places that she visited—some where sour-faced people met her with dark looks; some where the rent was paid, and others where only pitiful excuses were given.

At the last door she was met by a red-eyed little girl.

"Please," the child said timidly, "mother has just left brother and me. Daddy's gone away, and—"

At this a tall, handsome young man came forward—a man whom Kathleen greeted with joyful surprise. It was Jack, one of the guests invited to the garden party to-morrow.

"I suppose you didn't expect to find me here," he said, "but I read in the morning's paper of this sad case, and I thought it was worth investigating. The poor kids certainly need help. Let me pay their rent."

"I should say not!" returned Kathleen proudly. Jack vainly insisted. Kathleen was firm.

"I have an idea!" Kathleen suddenly cried. "Instead of the garden party I was going to give, I'll turn it into one for all the poor people I've seen to-day! They would love my garden; the rich ones wouldn't."

"That will be fine!" Jack agreed. "And I will see that your tenement guests get to your party in my car."

When it was all over, Kathleen knew that she had never given a party like that one.

There was the quavering-voiced old lady enjoying to the full the brilliant nasturtiums and geraniums; the sick woman, who seemed suddenly to grow strong in the shade of the big elm as she watched her little girl and the other children flitting from flower to flower, like so many butterflies; the old cobbler, who spent the greater part of the afternoon among the loved violets. And everywhere was big-hearted Jack, now explaining about the different kinds of flowers, now picking nasturtiums for the old lady, now telling stories to the children.

"How glad I am that father insisted upon my collecting those rents!" mentally reflected Kathleen, as she surveyed her happy visitors. "Oh, I just know he did it to get me out of my selfishness. Well, I've learned that there's no joy like doing for others."—Sylvia Thomas, in the Union Signal.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise, use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least an inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

TO OUR PASTORS AND PRESIDING ELDERS.

Our campaign for an increased circulation of the Advocate was to have closed on March 15, as per plan; but from conference with some of our pastors I have learned that many things have interfered, and that some of our men have not had, thus far, a suitable time to put on the campaign.

If you have not had your campaign, brother pastor, do not let the lapsing of the date cause you to desist, but go ahead and push the campaign to a successful close.

Your people need the paper in order that they may be intelligent Methodists; and our paper should have an increased and an ever-increasing field of usefulness. We must not cease our efforts until the number of subscribers has reached the ten-thousand mark—and then go beyond it.

JNO. F. FOSTER,
Chairman of Campaign.

HEALING—BODY, SOUL.

Perhaps never before in the history of New Orleans has there been such widespread interest in any event as is now being manifested in the deeds of one who calls himself "Brother Isaiah," but who is commonly referred to as "The Miracle Man." More space is being given by the daily newspapers to the record of his daily work and to discussion of his power than we have ever known to be devoted to any other local topic, and literally thousands of people, rich and poor, high and low, learned and ignorant, are talking about him and thronging to the river bank to see and, if possible, to hear him.

The reports indicate that "Brother Isaiah" has been able to accomplish marvelous results in supposedly incurable diseases by the laying on of hands and by prayer. According to the testimony of those who have been ministered to by him, the blind have been made to see, the lame to walk, the dumb to speak and the deaf to hear. Other diseases also are reported to have yielded to his power. We are not asserting that positive cures have been effected in the cases cited, but are simply giving the facts as they are reported day by day by the newspapers and as they are given currency by word of mouth.

There is, as a matter of course, diversity of opinion as to what is actually being accomplished. Eminent physicians, distinguished clergymen, prominent business men, well-known psychologists, as well as thousands of the "common people," have expressed their views publicly or privately. Some hold that veritable miracles are being wrought; others maintain that the cures are the result of the operation of certain psychological laws, well recognized as to their influence in the treatment of certain types of disease; still others incline to the view that a kind of hysteria, growing out of sincere motives, but hysteria nevertheless, has seized upon the people, causing them to imagine that they have been healed, although no real change has taken place. We are glad to note, however, that there has been no flippant or uncharitable criticism by anybody. There has been, in fact, a spirit of reverence—almost of awe—in all the discussions that have come to our attention.

Under no circumstances can "Brother Isaiah" be accused of mercenary motives. He is an old man, with long white hair and beard which give him a patriarchal appearance. He dresses in the coarsest garb, eats only the simplest food—abstaining from meat altogether—and lives in a tiny houseboat moored to the bank of the Mississippi River. He claims no merit of his own, but insists that all the power he possesses comes direct from God. He absolutely refuses remuneration for his work, and it is with difficulty that he can be induced to take enough rest to meet his physical requirements. All day long and far into the night he ministers to such as are brought to him, regardless of their age, color, wealth or social standing—and people of all classes are going to him, or urging him to come to them.

Personally, we are absolutely unable to express a definite opinion of the work of "Brother Isaiah." We would not dare say that it is not of God. In the light of the New Testament we are prepared to believe that God may manifest Himself in miraculous ways through those who have faith in Him; but thus far all the facts involved have not been clearly enough defined for us to declare that this is such a case. We firmly believe, however, in the sincerity of the man, in the purity of his motives, and in the beneficent effects of his labors.

Two or three lessons come to mind in connection with what has taken place that many of us, perhaps, need to learn anew. In the first place, it is the very nature of people to believe in God and in His power to work wonders. When the report that "Brother Isaiah" could heal diseases began to spread abroad, the report was accepted as true by thousands of those who were afflicted, and all praise was given to God. There was no question of His ability to work wonders. The lesson we need to learn is, we do not have to argue with people to convince them of God's omnipotence—most of them believe it already. A miracle, even in modern times, is not a difficulty to be overcome in the faith of the average man—the difficulty does not exist.

In the second place, we need to learn that we cannot keep people away from the place where they believe a real work of God is being done. "Brother Isaiah's" houseboat is in a rather out-of-the-way place—far uptown, away from any prominent street or avenue, reached only with considerable difficulty and inconvenience. Yet on last Sunday many thousands of the people from all sections of New Orleans found their way to that spot on the river bank where they thought the power of God was being made manifest. Many of them, of course, went through mere curiosity—but they were there. One of our problems is to get people to go to church; it is due, perhaps, to the fact that they are not thoroughly convinced that anything worth while is going on.

In the third place, "what shall a man be profited if he gain the whole world and lose his soul?" The body is important—tremendously so—but the soul is of transcendent value. If people can be so moved concerning their bodily welfare, is it not possible to bring them to a realization of their spiritual needs? We need to learn the lesson that sick souls need healing, and that people need to be taught that their souls are diseased. When we have done this, the great revival for which we are longing will be well under way.

A REQUEST.

We are exceedingly anxious to publish in the Advocate the results of every revival meeting held in our churches in Louisiana and Mississippi this year. In addition to the news value of these reports, there will, we believe, be a distinct spiritual stimulus to all our work. We earnestly request, therefore, our pastors to furnish us with a brief statement concerning these meetings, giving only the facts in connection with each. All the necessary information can easily be put on a postal card—the date and place of the meeting, name of the helper, number of family altars established, number received on profession of faith, etc. Some meetings will, of course, deserve more space than this, but we want to secure the facts concerning all of them. We hope that every preacher within the bounds of our three Conferences will comply with this request as the meetings are held.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"Everything is moving along nicely," is the good word that comes from Rev. Geo. P. McKeown, of Edwards, Miss.

Rev. J. F. Campbell writes that the outlook for this year at Madison, Miss., is encouraging, and that he is happy in the work.

We expect to publish in the near future a series of articles by Bishop Collins Denny, giving his views in opposition to the plan of unification.

The Arkabutla circuit, North Mississippi Conference, is making rapid progress, according to an encouraging report by the pastor, Rev. D. R. McDougal.

The American Bible Society is preparing to issue an edition of the Bible in the Revised Braille system, which is the latest development in a reading method for the blind.

We are glad to learn from an exchange that Dr. Hoyt M. Dobbs has resumed his work at Southern Methodist University after an absence of about a year on account of sickness.

Bishop Collins Denny, secretary of the College of Bishops, has announced that the College of Bishops will hold a three-days' session at Nashville, Tenn., beginning May 1.

It has been announced that Dr. C. C. Jarrell has resigned as Director of the Correspondence School at Emory University, and that Dr. W. J. Young has been selected as his successor.

Rev. A. H. Williams, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, but now pastor of Oxanna Methodist Church at Anniston, Ala., began a meeting, with Bob Jones assisting, on March 14.

Rev. A. M. Shaw, who came to Louisiana from Arkansas last year, is meeting with encouraging success in his work at Trout, La., and he records himself as well pleased with the Pelican State.

Rev. C. M. Ray, of Longview, Miss., has fallen in love with the people and the work of that charge. The weather conditions have interfered considerably with his plans thus far, but the outlook is encouraging.

Rev. J. R. Murff, of Mathiston, Miss., writes very appreciatively of the recent visit of his presiding elder, Rev. W. L. Duren. The new church at Providence will be dedicated by the presiding elder on his next round.

The Pastors' Conference of the Interchurch World Movement was in session in New Orleans this week, with a fairly good attendance of the ministers of the State. We go to press too early to give any account of the proceedings.

At a meeting of the presiding elders of the New Orleans District, the Seashore District, and the Mobile District, held on March 11, it was decided to hold the annual camp meeting at the Seashore Camp Ground as early in July as practicable.

The work in many of our churches has been greatly hindered by the prevalence of influenza. In some places the churches and schools have been closed, and pastors, when not sick themselves, have been kept busy ministering to those who were ill.

Brother Marcus D. Herring, of Byhalia, Miss., had a communication in a recent issue of the Memphis Commercial Appeal strongly urging the repeal by the Mississippi Legislature of the law prohibiting the leaving of property by will to a church enterprise.

We learn from the St. Helena Echo that Mrs. L. E. Crooks, wife of our pastor at Greensburg, La., has been called upon to mourn the loss of her mother, Mrs. Z. E. Richardson, her death occurring at Colfax, La., on March 4. We extend sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

The South-Reporter, of Holly Springs, Miss., in its issue of March 12, gives an interesting account of the work of the Methodist Sunday school at that place, under the superintendency of Mr. L. G. Fant. Special mention is made of the splendidly organized Young Men's Bible Class.

Rev. J. C. Price gives a good account of the work at Coushatta, La. Special efforts are being made to get ready in mind and heart for a great revival this year. Accompanying Brother Price's report, was a list of 18 subscribers to the Advocate. "I really had an easy time getting them," he says.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, Louisiana Conference, dropped in at the Advocate office for a few minutes on Friday of last week. He stated the Baton Rouge District Conference will be held at Franklinton, La., June 22-24. Rev. F. B. Hill, of Jackson, La., will preach the opening sermon on the evening of June 22.

The Centenary Commission desires to obtain all the facts possible concerning the evangelistic campaign in each district in the church immediately after Easter. Every presiding elder is urged to fill out the report cards, which will be furnished, as soon after that date as possible, not later than April 10, if the data can be secured by that time.

Mr. J. M. Kennedy, of Washington, D. C., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate takes occasion to say that our Representative Church in Washington is the most beautiful church building in that city, and that those who contributed to its building fund have made a fine investment. It is necessary to go early to be sure of a seat at the regular services.

The Methodist Reminder, published weekly by Rev. L. P. Wasson, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Water Valley, Miss., is an attractive and helpful little paper—little in size, not contents. One interesting item of information is that there are eighteen tithers enrolled in the membership, with others who have not given in their names. A tithing church will succeed materially and spiritually.

At the ninth biennial meeting of the members of the Methodist Benevolent Association, at Nashville, Tenn., Dr. R. S. Satterfield, assistant editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, was elected to a place on the board of directors. This Association was formed primarily for the benefit of Methodist preachers, their widows and orphans, and it deserves the cordial support of all our people.

Our church at McDonoghville, La., under the pastorate of Rev. S. D. Roberts, is making splendid progress in all lines of work. The church building has recently been repainted and papered. Members are being received with gratifying frequency. The prayer meeting is well attended, 31 being present last week. A revival meeting will begin next Sunday, in which the pastor will be assisted by Rev. R. W. Tucker, of Crowley, La.

The Executive Committee of the Alumni Association of Millsaps College, consisting of Hon. J. T. Calhoun, Rev. J. R. Countiss, and Prof. G. L. Harrell, is making vigorous efforts to enlist the active interest of the more than four hundred graduates of that institution in the welfare of the college. A special department is being maintained in the Purple and White, the college publication, in the interest of the movement, and the paper is being sent to the alumni throughout the State.

CENTENARY DISBURSES $4,655,413.40.

Askings Will All Be Paid In Full This Month.

The Finance Department of the Centenary Commission has disbursed $4,655,413.40 to the various departments on the askings as passed by the General Conference and published in the World Survey. Each item on the budget received its share pro rata, including the home and foreign fields, war reconstruction and Conference Boards of Missions. The checks were distributed last week by the Centenary Treasurer, Col. John E. Edgerton.

This amount did not cover the Askings in full, but the treasurer announced that 100 per cent would be paid to all departments before the first of April. The first payment made was an item of $400,000, which went to the various Conference Boards of Missions for the purpose of increasing the salaries of underpaid preachers. This will be distributed by the Conferences, and the balance of the vast fund will be administed by the regular agencies of the Board of Missions and the Board of Church Extension.

Never before in history has such a fund been placed at the disposal of any agency of the church. The Centenary Commission is thus making good in the mighty undertaking which was laid upon it by the General Conference. The amount now turned over is all "new money," and does not include any of the regular income of the Boards known as "credits."

ORPHANAGE SUNDAY.

Dear Brother: As you know, Easter Sunday, April 4, is Orphanage Day by Conference resolution—the only day set apart by the Conference for the purpose of helping your Orphanage this spring. Since we send out no collectors and have no agents, or paid solicitors, this affords us the only opportunity your people will have to help our cause through the spring and summer. You can readily see how dependent we are on this day for the necessary funds to meet our obligations, and how important it is that every church and Sunday school take collections for our work. We have 130 children dependent on the church for this help.

We look to you to keep this matter before your people, and to urge them to make as generous offerings as possible. We will send you another lot of envelopes very soon that you can use as you judge best.

Grateful to you for your past help, and praying that God will bring to you and your people a gracious outpouring of His Spirit, I am,

Cordially,

ROB'T W. VAUGHAN,

Superintendent, Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.

A CORRECTION.

The Journal of the last session of our Mississippi Conference, 1919, is in error as to one item touching the statistics of the Seashore District.

The amount assessed for the preachers in charge was $25,620, instead of $28,062 as shown by the Journal, page 116.

This statement is not made in the spirit of criticism, but in justice to the Seashore District.

THE THIRST FOR GOD

However rampant godlessness may seem to-day, no day has given more evidence of a human thirst for God, a longing of minds disillusioned by the pursuit of unblest goods to find him who is the strength of the soul. The supreme achievement, peace, glory of our humanity, is just this, to come consciously home to our Father God. Only in finding him we find our true self; only in knowing him whose we are we know what we are.

In far dimmer light than ours man's instinctive quest for him was rewarded with the great discovery that uttered itself in the prayer of Moses: "Lord, thou hast been our dwelling-place in all generations." Long afterwards, Jesus' utterance of the still higher consciousness of God which he had reached, "I am in the Father, and the Father in Me," set the mark of his disciples' endeavor, "that they may also be in us." For one who will devote some moments of every day to the same discovery, how would the light that never was on sea or land irradiate and divinize the modern world with the glory of him in whom we live!

"Speak thou to Him, for he hears, and spirit with spirit can meet.
Closer is he than breathing, and nearer than hands and feet."

J. W. WRIGHT, son of Jack and Julia Wright, was born, January 13, 1849. In early life he made a profession of religion and joined the Methodist Church at New Hope, in Montgomery County, Mississippi. He lived a faithful and consistent Christian life in the same church until his death, which sad event occurred at his home three miles north of Winona, Miss., December 20, 1919. He first married Miss Lenora Rohinson, December 26, 1876. To this union were born five children, four of whom still live to mourn the loss of a good and an affectionate father. His second marriage was to Miss Clemmie Hightower. To them were born seven children. The writer was his pastor when we were both young; and while he was then prospering in business, he always found time to attend and meet his obligations to the church he devotedly loved and which was to him an institution that could not be dispensed with, with safety to the community. Says one who was associated with him in the same church through all the years, "I have never known any one more charitable to the poor, more loyal and liberal to the church than was Brother Wright." Old New Hope Church of long and favorable history, will miss him greatly. But the bereaved wife and children will miss him most. But how comforting in this sad experience that he walked humbly before the Lord in life, and died in the faith of a Christian.

A. W. LANGLEY

Cedar Bluff, Miss.

On Monday evening, February 23, 1920, the death angel called and took the spirit of our dear mother to dwell with God, aged 68 years, 1 month, and 4 days. MRS. MARIE McINTOSH was born in Alabama, January 19, 1852, afterwards removing to Mississippi. She was married to Daniel W. McIntosh. To this union were born 11 children, two of whom died in infancy. She united with the M. E. Church, South, in early life. She lived a Christian life. She was a devout companion and affectionate mother. Her whole life was spent in trying to make some one happy and to rear her children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. She was taken sick in 1915, and was on her bed 5 years, 4 months, 7 days, when the Lord said, "It is enough—enter into the joys of the Lord." Her remains were laid to rest by the side of her husband at Liberty Cemetery, near Stringer, Miss. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. G. C. Vandevender, of Ellisville, Miss. Sleep on, dear mother, in peaceful sleep, with Jesus, our Savior, on those golden streets to wait for us when time is no more; to beckon us home on that beautiful shore, where all the angels will rejoice to see an unbroken family in heaven.

Her son, DANNIE.

MR. J. H. JONES, one of the greatest Christian characters we ever knew, crossed the river in full triumph of his faith. How fortunate to have known him! Who will take his place? Fifty years of faithful service, half century a steward! He prayed as though he stood face to face with his Maker. He held up his pastor's hands, and never turned his back. His smiling face, his great faith—oh, what a legacy he left us! The penetrating blaze from his ever-trimmed candle will shine on through the lives of those who knew him, and terminate in many hearing the glad welcome at the Pearly Gates, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." When the monuments of earth have crumbled, his life will bless the earth. "He that doeth the will of God abideth forever." God bless his loved ones.

His pastor, H. H. WALLACE.

E. V. BRIDGES was born, August 30, 1848, and for more than 50 years he lived at one home in the northeastern portion of Copiah County. He was married first to Eliza Sistrunk, and there were born to this union three sons, all of whom survive him. He was next married to Miss Lula Ramsey, an excellent lady who proved herself to be a good and faithful wife and mother to his orphan children. God blessed this union with two children; the eldest girl is now well into her teens. On Sunday morning, February 29, Brother Bridges fell on sleep. It can be said of him, as of one of old, "He was a good man, full of the Holy Ghost." For a half century, he lived a consecrated Christian life and was a faithful member of the M. E. Church, South. To know him was to love him. His disposition was sunny, joyous and happy. He always had a kind word for every one. The community always feels the loss of such a man as he, and when we gather to worship at old Mount Pleasant Church, the inestimable loss will be felt the more, for he was interested in every department of church life. On Monday, March 1, the funeral was conducted by the writer at the home, and the body was laid to rest in the family cemetery, within a stone's throw of the house in which he had lived so long. A large company of sympathetic friends were present to speak words of comfort and consolation to the sorrowing ones. Mourn not, dear ones, for when "Mortals cried 'A man is dead,' Angels sang 'A child is born.'"

Try Making Your Own Cough Remedy

You can save about $2, and have a better remedy than the ready-made kind. Easily done.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

SAGE TEA BEAUTIFIES AND DARKENS HAIR

Don't Stay Gray! It Darkens Hair so Naturally That Nobody Can Tell.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.—Adv.

GREAT EVANGELISTIC CONFERENCE AT CLEVELAND, MISS.

Thirty-five Methodist ministers from the Greenville and the Winona Districts met at Cleveland, Miss., during the past week in a unique conference; no routine business of any sort was indulged in—the entire meeting was devoted to preaching and prayer. Preparation for the great country-wide revival of religion was the sole object of the meeting and the only topic discussed, that the revival fires might be kindled to greater proportions and the will of God done in the hearts of his servants.

The services were under the direction of Rev. V. C. Curtis, presiding elder of the Greenville District, and Rev. S. L. Pope, presiding elder of the Winona District. Rev. H. C. Morrison, of Louisville, Ky., one of the greatest preachers in America, did most of the preaching. He was assisted by C. C. Rinebarger, a gospel singer without a peer. These two men performed a work that will linger long in the memory of all who attended.

The people of Cleveland will never regret having opened their hearts and homes to the men of God who came to seek greater power from him who is the source of all power, for the town has never had a greater blessing to come to it than has come from these four days of study and prayer.

The following were in attendance: S. L. Pope, Winona; R. N. Evans, Carrollton; W. N. Duncan, Drew; J. J. Brooks, Dublin; C. D. McGehee, Indianola; H. N. McKibben, Lambert; L. W. Cain, Minter City; S. H. Caffey, Moorehead; W. S. Shipman, Ruleville; H. G. Roberts, Winona; A. S. Brisco, Winona Ct.; B. P. Jaco, Winona; V. C. Curtis, Greenville; W. V. Shearer, Benoit; C. A. Northington, Boyle; E. N. Broyles, Clarksdale; T. M. Bradley, Cleveland, W. G. Carlisle, Coahoma; J. A. Coleman, Duncan; C. P. Moss, Friars Point; D. R. Wasson, Glen Allen; E. S. Lewis, Greenville; E. E. McKeithen, Gunnison; J. A. George, Hollandale; W. C. Galceran, Jonestown; W. M. Young, Leland; S. A. Brown, Lula; L. A. McKeown, Merigold; J. W. Robertson, Rosedale; W. W. Jones, J. M. Wyatt, Shelby; J. H. Bell, Columbus; C. A. Parks, Tunica; Robt. Selby, Jackson; A. C. McCorkle, Durant.

ON WITH THE REVIVAL.

As a mighty army, the thousands of pastors in the Methodist Church are moving forward. There never was a mightier force marching together, in my opinion, in the history of the world, than there is now, with all Methodism pulling herself together for a mighty DRIVE for the salvation of the lost.

This is not a campaign for church members; if it were, we should hide our faces and ask the good Lord to forgive us. Methodism has never had to campaign for members, but, somehow as we go marching on, Methodism accumulates a goodly number of new born. It is true that we are to do all we can to re-enlist all Methodists who are practically lost to the church, but this is not a campaign for new members.

The Standard Plan is not a new thing to a wide-awake pastor-evangellist, for he has been working at the same task in almost the same way as is laid down in the Standard Plan all the time; and if you will look up his record, you will find that he always had accessions.

I do not find a single thing in the Standard Plan that Dr. O. E. Goddard has not worked for years in his congregations. I was with him in Galveston, and in his own church he worked it successfully. So let no one get the idea that this is a new plan, for it is one that has been already worked successfully.

Brethren, preach the OLD TIME GOSPEL and work your plan as you go and the good Lord will give you a harvest.

NUXATED IRON

A DRIVING FORCE

BEHIND KEEN SUCCESSFUL MEN AND WOMEN

When you think of the successful men and women you know—people who are doing things worth while—you will find that they possess force, vim and energy—the kind that simply brim over when the blood is filled with iron. Nuxated Iron by enriching the blood and creating new red blood cells, strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened tissues and helps to instill renewed force and energy into the whole system. Three million people use it annually as a tonic, strength and blood-builder.

MAKE THIS TEST

See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired; next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while have most astonishingly increased their strength and endurance simply by taking iron in the proper form.

Piles Cured in 6 to 14 Days

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Centenary fund from the Sunday schools in the Mississippi Conference amounts to date to $4,711.26. While this is a nice sum, it is to be hoped that the Sunday schools will do better this year than last.

Bloxi, Main Street, has reorganized its Sunday school, electing superintendents for each Department and forming three new classes. A director of Teacher Training has been appointed, and books have been ordered for the Elementary Departments.

The Junior Department of the Capitol Street Sunday school gave forty-eight Honor Certificates for February, and the Intermediate of the same school gave seventy. I have not heard from the other Departments.

The school at Pass Christian is growing steadily. This bids fair to be a Standard school by the District Institute.

As yet I have received no offers to help in the rapid tour in the interest of the Dstrict Institute.

Please report items of interest; anything that you are doing successfully let us know it.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,
JNO. C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

If you have finished your campaign for new members, write the results to the Advocate. Such an item would be good news.

If your teachers are being profited by the study of the literature on Evangelism, write and tell us. We want to know what effect such study is having.

Are you reading the Bible with the prayer that your prayer-life may be deepened and enriched and made more effective? You need not write about that—it will be discovered right away.

Three of the teachers at Tie Plant ordered books to study. They also ordered the graded lessons for Beginners.

Rev. J. Mark Guinn has organized a teacher-training class at Crenshaw with an enrollment of thirteen members. This class is studying The Pupil. Such work means much for the future of the church.

A goodly number of our schools are taking Missionary Specials this year. We have several fifty-dollar specials that will be of interest to your school. Write me for blank application. Some other Conference will get these offers if we fail to take them.

Write to me for the number of Sunday School Day programs you need. There will be two programs this year, one for small schools and another for the large schools. I can send you a sample if you care to have it.

The teacher-training class at Grenada, under the drection of Miss Lizzie Horn, is enthusiastic over their work. They ought to be; for several of them have received their incomplete diploma recently. The Grenada school is working for first place in the Conference. Brother Woollard is building the kingdom on an euduring foundation. The man that teaches teachers is doing one thing that the Master did.

It is true that we have multiplied Sunday school machinery. But you must remember that it takes a big machine to do a great work. The preacher has not been born that can preach so as to reach all the children, all the young people, and all the adults with the whole gospel they need as they need it. The gospel must be taught by parents and other teachers to every individual constantly. If we do not put more machinery to work and pour more life-giving power into that machinery, we will wake up to the fact that multiplied thousands have slipped out into darkness.

FROM TOCCOPOLA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: For some time I have been thinking I would have just a few words to say about our work here. We are among some really good people. The charge is very badly scattered, covering a district of 20 miles north and south, 12 miles east and west.

I am making the survey, putting on the every-member campaign. We have a live Sunday school at each church. At Tula we are adding five new rooms to the church for Sunday school work. We have organized a missionary society there of late, which bids fair to do good work.

At Oakdale, we have on foot a new church building, work to begin at once.

At Toccopola, we are repairing the church building, making room for our Sunday school work.

At Salem, we have bought a new parsonage. This bids fair to be one of the best rural churches in North Mississippi. The people have some of the best land in the State to back it, and a fine consolidated school. They see the possibilities of a great church, and within the past thirty days have bought 75 acres of land for a parsonage; when completed, it will be an honor to any rural church. We raised two-thirds of the money to purchase and equip the property there; it will be a treat to some man to occupy this home another year. A new charge will be formed, and an extra man placed in the field, which is needed very greatly.

Pastor's and presiding elder's salary paid up to date. We are hoping and praying for a great year.

R. M. PAPASAN. P. C.

A LETTER TO THE ADVOCATE.

Dear Advocate: Please pardon a little reminiscent note. Out acquaintance began away before the "civil" war, when I was a small girl and you a rather young paper. In my mother's home I watched with a child's eagerness for your weekly coming, naturally to seek the "Children's Column," on the fourth and last of your big pages.

With the passing years, through girlhood, wifehood, and now through the long years of widowhood, I have kept in touch with you as my friend. Several of your editors and many of your contributors I am honored to have numbered as my personal friends.

So long as my life and yours shall last, you will find my name upon your mailing list. Wishing you, and all you represent, great prosperity, I am,

Very truly,

Fifteen Years of Black-Draught

Black-Draught Highly Recommended by Illinois Man for Liver and Stomach Disorders.—Used It for Fifteen Years.

Singerton, Ill.—"For fifteen years we have used Thedford's Black-Draught, and have not as yet found anything that could take its place," writes Mr. W. F. Rister, of this town, "I have used it for indigestion a number of times, and it gives relief," continues Mr. Rister.

"For sour stomach, a heavy, bloated feeling, it is splendid. And when the liver gets torpid, so that when you stoop and raise up suddenly you feel dizzy, a few doses will set you straight.

"We keep it and use for constipation and the above troubles, and find it most satisfactory. I can recommend it to others and gladly do so. For the number of years I have used Black-Draught now, I ought to know."

In its 70 years of usefulness, Thedford's Black-Draught has relieved thousands and thousands of persons suffering from the results of a disordered liver. And, like Mr. Rister, many people feel that, after using Black-Draught nothing can take its place.

If you haven't tried Black-Draught get a package to-day.

Nearly every druggist keeps it.—Adv.

FROM GALLMAN, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I am glad to state that the work is progressing very nicely on the Gallman charge. There has been a marked increase in the last four years for the pastor's salary; in fact, the pastor's salary has been increased 100 per cent since 1916. I hardly feel myself a "dynamo in breeches," as suggested by Dr. Steele some time ago, but I do feel that the Lord has wonderfully blessed me in the work during these four years at Gallman. There has been a splendid revival every year at each church on the charge, and we are looking forward and praying that this may be the greatest of all the four years that we have served these people.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the checks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS Chill TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

There is no better people to be found anywhere than is to be found within the bounds of this circuit, and the pastor who shall follow me may congratulate himself over the fact that he does have a splendid people to serve.

With all good wishes, I am

Yours very truly,

C. A. SCHULTZ, P. C.

A NOTE FROM TEXAS.

Dear Brother Carley: Would you spare a few lines to one who once was a member of the North Mississippi Conference? I moved to Richmond last December—a $1500 station. We have one of the best parsonages in Texas, situated near the business portion of the county site of Fort Bend County. Richmond is one of the oldest towns in the State. There are about 1500 souls, Americans, white and black, a goodly number of Jews, and a few Mexicans and other foreigners in the city. We have a choice lot adjoining the parsonage, upon which we are arranging to erect a $25,000 church building some time this year. About $19,000 of this amount has already been raised.

Our congregations are the largest they have been for several years (so I am told), and the Sunday school is growing. This is one of the richest spots in Texas. We are being cared for the best ever. After the church has been built, we hope to have a revival.

I read the New Orleans Advocate each week, and am pleased to see the progress that is being made, especially in North Mississippi, where I know so many of the preachers.

I would appreciate a letter from any of my friends. Our Conference last fall did not have enough preachers to go around. Yours sincerely,

A. G. HALL.

Richmond, Tex., March 5.

NATIONAL MUTUAL CHURCH INSURANCE COMPANY.

The fire waste steadily rises with the years in spite of all efforts that are made by insurance companies and state officials to head it off.

Every four or five years the wealth of the nation is needlessly reduced fully one billion dollars, and yet as a people we think little about the destruction. It is possible to save all but about 20 per cent of it by forming the habit of carefulness, taking necessary precaution in the home, church, place of business, etc. Eliminate all possible hazard and then prepare for the disaster that may come anyway by insuring.

It is also well to remember that all materials and labor entering into the construction of buildings cost far more now than formerly and all church and home property should be insured up to three-fourths of their value.

When considering the matter of insurance for church and parsonage property, which is a very important one, for insurance should not be neglected and sufficient amount carried, church officials should look well into the plan of the National Mutual Church Insurance Company of Chicago. The well-merited success of this company continues and it is rendering a greater service than ever. The constant increase in its business from the time of its organization in 1896 until now, when it stands at the highest point ever attained—its last report, the twenty-second, showing a total protection granted of over one hundred and eighty-six millions dollars ($186,000,000) of which amount over forty-six million dollars ($46,000,000) is now in force, is in itself sufficient evidence that it presents a strong and desirable plan of insurance.

Its business is distributed among all the States and Territories in the Union. The plan of this mutual company differs from that of the ordinary mutual in that are no assessments and a reserve fund is provided on the same basis as for stock companies.

Report of Louisiana Conference Corresponding Secretary.

Number of adult auxiliaries, 120; number of adult auxiliaries organized, 16; net gain in adult auxiliaries, 8; number of members of adult auxiliaries, 3177; gain in adult members 565; number Y. P. auxiliaries, 25; number scholarships supported, 9; number Bible women supported, 7; number day schools supported, 2; number missionaries supported, 3; number auxiliaries observing Week of Prayer, 104; total amount sent Conference Treasurer, $18,063.53.

We are asked to take as our guiding thought for the year 1920, "That in all things He might have the preeminence." Col. 1:18b,c. Out of many experiences of the past year we feel that we are face to face with Isaiah's words in the promise of God, "I will do a new thing, I will make a way in the wilderness." Thrust here and there in our battle-time days, doing undreamed-of new things in helping to gain peace, we've been led into so many new paths that we feel grown up all at once. God uses all these things to show us His love and will, larger and greater than any vision of ours. That there is a new day ahead—that we do not know just what it is, nor yet how it is coming—I believe all our hearts do testify. We are hardly willing to face the question of what we must be ready to do because of God's moving upon the face of the earth. Putting first things first in our lives, and truly making Christ preeminent in our lives, is our one needed preparation.

Looking at the work of this year just closed, we feel sure that many of our women have gone from their knees to do the impossible things. His reward is to these. "If a thing can't be done, only faith can do it." The greatest year of our history is this one we have just closed—not only as a Conference, but the church as a whole. From our Home Base Secretary we learn that instead of reaching a 15 per cent goal of increase, the Council and Conference increase in finances reached 26 per cent, making our Conference totals run over $18,000, while the Council reaches $844,000. 5,000 Adult Auxiliaries in Southern Methodism with a gratifying increase in membership. Noting figures, we find a gain of 16 Adult Auxiliaries, or 126, though because you and I failed somewhat in the Big Sisters movement, we have to close the year with only 120, or a net gain of only 8. The membership increase is 565. Our lesson in conservation has not been quite well enough learned at this point. We will get these 8 back in due time, but it is discouraging to the women when we do not give them the right help at the critical times. It may be that all of the 126 are alive in some branch of missionary work, but that just an officer has failed in that essential matter of reporting. 105 Adult, 12 Y. P., 31 Junior Divisions reported to the Treasurer for the fourth quarter in time to be included. About six came too late. But for some form of activity, 120 Adult, 18 Y. P., 36 Junior Divisions and 12 Baby Divisions have reported during the year.

As heretofore the gain in organization and membership is not commensurate with the splendid financial increase. We always find folks more willing to give of their money than of themselves. It is the easiest way out of a need realized. But we must really, to be disciples of Christ, enter into his fellowship, to the point of sacrifice, surrendering the highest loves and motives of life, that He may have the preeminence. As Dr. Campbell Morgan puts it, we must invest our finances and life in the Kingdom interests until we know it because of the sacrifice we must make of something we have a lawful right to.

We just missed our goal in organization, but the membership gain of 21 per cent cheers our hearts immensely. We are to set our own goal of increase for 1920. I hope your faith may reach out even further than mine has as the goal below is suggested: 150 Adult Auxiliaries with 4,000 members; 25 Y. P. Auxiliaries with 500 members; 50 Junior Auxiliaries with 2,000 members; a financial budget of $25,000; 60 per cent more auxiliaries observed the Week of Prayer than ever before, with an increase of 100 per cent in offerings.

It was our good fortune to have a few hours in the Scarritt Bible and Training School, which served to intensify appreciation of the value of a period of training there for every girl, whether there is a thought of special service in her mind or not. Every Sunday school teacher should have this training for a term if it is at all possible, and we usually find a way to do the things we really want to do very much. I was happy to meet Miss Ruby Louden, of Zachary, a student at Scarritt at her own expense and rejoicing in the priveleges there.

Of the young women who have begun training for definite work, Lake Charles is happy in Miss Julia Reed, and Glenmora in Miss Audle Reynolds, both of whom are at Mansfield College. Two high school students have volunteered and three teachers. We pray that God may guide them and us that together we may labor for the strengthening and carrying out of these life purposes. Because of her teaching work, our dear Miss Clara Chalmers who goes out into service after another year of teaching experience, could not get to this meeting as we had hoped.

President Wilson says, "We have too long accepted the phrase Brotherhood as a substitute for the fact of it." In larger measure though than ever before we have responded to this need in the ministrations of the institutions within our Conference. St. Mark's Hall, with the backing of the new City Mission Board, made up of an equal number of men and women, has entered into the day of larger life. While the money for the needed permanent building is assured through the Centenary, the hight cost of material makes it wise to delay for a time the building projects. The needs of the French fields are now being cared for by the new MacDonell Wesley House and School. Blessings and joys are ahead for those who enter into the life of that home in the marvelous possibilities for good that will go out from it.

The Centenary held our minds and hearts and activities throughout the first half of the year. Blessed fellowship was ours as we met in the luncheons that preceded the Big Drive. Our visions were broadened and our purposes deepened to let our lives burn out if need be, even here in our land, that the gospel might be proclaimed acceptably on every hand. Let us lend our whole lives to our leaders in the still greater movement of evangelism. What we need is not more caution, but more daring; not more money but more loyal devotion to Christ; not more activities, but more worship; a greater venture into faith in the power of our God to lead us in a new way through each wilderness experience and on to the promised victory in His name.

Foley's Honey and Tar
COMPOUND
AN OLD RELIABLE FAMILY REMEDY, recommended for coughs, colds, tickling of the throat, spasmodic croup, whooping cough, la grippe, and bronchial coughs, hoarseness, etc.

The First Dose Gave Relief

C. E. Summers, Holdredge, Neb., writes: "Some time ago I contracted a very severe cough and cold due to exposure. My cough got so bad I could hardly sleep for two or three nights. A friend of mine recommended Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, and I got a 60c bottle. The very first dose relieved me. I took a second dose before going to bed and can truthfully say I did not cough once all night. By using as directed the next two days my cough was entirely gone, and I give Foley's Honey and Tar full credit for my speedy and permanent recovery."

For more than thirty years Foley's Honey and Tar has been used with satisfaction and success.

Salts If Backachy and Kidneys Hurt

Stop Eating Meat for a While if Your Bladder Troubles You.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

A Healing Spring at Your Door

Here is a very unusual and peculiar offer—one that you rarely meet with. It evidences the greatest faith on the part of its maker and inspires confidence. It is made by an earnest and enthusiastic man who not only thinks but knows from personal experience that he is right. He proposes to give you the equivalent of a three weeks' visit to a Mineral Spring of most remarkable restorative powers and make no charge if you are not benefited. His offer has been accepted by over a hundred thousand sufferers in all parts of the United States and his records show that only two in a hundred on the average report no benefit.

If you suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, rheumatism, kidney, bladder or liver disease, uric acid poisoning, or other condition caused by impure blood, take Mr. Shivar at his word and sign and mail the following letter:

Shivar Spring,
Box 17K, Shelton, S. C.

Gentlemen:—I accept your offer and enclose herewith three dollars for ten gallons of Shivar Spring Water. I agree to give it a fair trial in accordance with instructions contained in booklet you will send, and, if I report no benefit you are to refund the price in full upon receipt of the two empty demijohns, which I agree to return within a month.

NOTE.—"I have had the pleasure of serving the little church at Shivar Spring as Pastor for years, and am therefore well acquainted with Mr. Shivar and his associates, whom I gladly commend as an honorable business man and worthy of the confidence of the public. I have personally derived great benefit from the use of the Shivar Mineral Water and have knowledge of its beneficial effects in a great number and variety of cases."—Rev. A. McA. Pittman.

FROM FANNIN, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I am serving my third year on the Fannin charge, and I must say that, so far, this year has been the best of the three.

A preacher never served a more loyal people then the people on the Fannin charge. They love their preacher very dearly, and they prove their love by seeing that he wants for nothing.

On the 28th day of last August, I was stricken with typhoid fever, and was in bed thirty-five days. As soon as the doctor pronounced my disease typhoid fever, these big-hearted people said, "He must have a trained nurse at once;" so they employed, I believe, one of the best nurses in the State of Mississippi to nurse me through that awful affliction. And this is not all; they saw that I had everything that I needed. I can't begin to tell you of the many things that were brought to the parsonage in the way of provisions. They paid my drug bill; the good doctor would not charge me anything for his services, but my people made him a present of fifty dollars.

I did not get to visit my churches any more during the year, but on an assessment of five hundred and fifty dollars for the pastor, the salary was over-paid by one hundred and twenty-five dollars, and all of the benevolences were paid in full.

Now do you wonder at my loving such a people as this? The pastor's salary for this year has been increased one hundred dollars.

Brother Morse, our big-hearted presiding elder, has already made his first visit to the Fannin charge for this year. How I do wish that his visits came oftener! For he always comes with his heart filled with the love of God and encouraging words for his son in the Gospel. I say son, because Brother Morse has been a father to me and it will take eternity to tell what his life has meant to me. I am sending you fifteen new subscribers and seven renewals to the Christian Advocate. I will send more as soon as the "flu" epidemic dies down.

Your brother,
M. A. MASSEY.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, it has pleased almighty God to take from our circle our beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. J. J. Stallings, who has been a member of our Aid Society for many years, always willing and liberal in giving assistance, has lived a beautiful and honorable life, leaving many friends to mourn her loss, therefore be it

Resolved, that we the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. Church, South, Grayson, La., with sorrowing hearts bow in submission to our Heavenly Father, believing that He doeth all things well.

Resolved, that we appropriate the faith that this faithful member, loving wife and mother, constant friend and useful helper may prove to be a guardian angel and a daily inspiration to her loved ones and to our Society.

Resolved, that we extend to the bereaved loved ones our most heartfelt sympathy; and while we know that our loss is her gain, may we truly realize that God and Heaven are nearer to us because of our treasure over there.

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy be spread on the minutes of our Society and a copy be sent to the Caldwell Watchman, also a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed by: Mrs. W. W. Lantrip. Mrs. W. F. Humphries, Committee. Mrs. W. R. Broadway, President; Mrs. H. V. Harris, Secretary.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, God has in his infinite wisdom seen fit to remove from our class our esteemed member, Sallie Edith Day, and while we bow in humble submission to His will, yet we deplore the loss of one whose kindly disposition and lovable character made her generally beloved; therefore be it

Resolved, That in the death of Sallie Edith Day the Crusaders' Class of Kentwood, La., have lost a member whose character as a devoted Christian girl contributed greatly to its strength; be it further

Resolved, That as a token of our esteem a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our deceased member, a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and a copy furnished the Kentwood Commercial for publication.

Signed by: Alice Knighton, Winnie Peets, Estelle Williams, Committee.

The Fiftieth Anniversary

Just fifty years ago this winter Dr. Pierce gave to the world his famous "Favorite Prescription" for the distressing weaknesses and complaints of women. For many years he had been in the active practice of medicine and his specialty was the diseases of women. Later he desired to give this to the public, and he received a trade-mark protection from the United States patent office for this medicine which is an herbal, "temperance" prescription with all the ingredients printed on the bottle wrapper. In his every day practice in the early days he also used a tonic and alterative for the blood, which was so universally beneficial that he determined to place this medicine in the drug stores of the United States, where it could be readily procured by the public. This he called his "Golden Medical Discovery," which he had prescribed many years for the stomach, liver and blood. Both these medicines met with instant success, and during the past half century have sold in greater quantities than any other proprietary medicines. Neither of Dr. Pierce's medicines contains alcohol and both are herbal extracts of native medicinal plants. For the past fifty years forty-eight million bottles have been used by the American public, and they are today the standard tonics for men and women. They are now put up in tablet as well as liquid form, and sold by every druggist in the land. A trial package can be obtained by sending 10 cents to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y. Write Dr. Pierce's if you want free confidential medical advice, or a free booklet on any chronic disease.

Biliousness

WHEN you have a bilious attack your liver fails to perform its functions. You become constipated. The food you eat ferments in your stomach instead of digesting. This inflames the stomach and causes nausea, vomiting and a terrible headache. Take Chamberlain's Tablets. They will tone up your liver, clean out your stomach and you will soon be as well as ever. There is nothing better.

ESTHERWOOD, LA., AND ELSE.

Dear Brother Carley: A few lines from Estherwood perhaps would not be out of order. This work was placed with the Gueydan charge at the last Annual Conference and Brother Claude Mayo was sent to us as our pastor. The work along all lines is making fairly good progress. However, Brother Mayo has recently been hindered on account of the serious illness of his good wife, who has just undergone an operation at the Lake Charles Sanitarium. I am glad to report that she is convalescing at the home of Brother A. M. Mayo, her father-in-law. Brother Mayo's appointments during his wife's illness have been filled by Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir and the writer, which work we felt happy in doing.

I had the pleasure of being at the District Conference held at Lake Arthur, last Tuesday and Wednesday, which was a great success, Brother Bowman, the presiding elder, being in the chair. From the splendid reports of the elder and the pastors, the work of the dstrict is in good shape, especially as regards advances in ministerial support. The district has paid nearly 100 per cent on the Centenary pledges to date. The evangelistic campaign was given due prominence on the program, and as a result of this wise and prayerful plannng great revivals are expected over the district.

Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpauir, who located at the last Annual Conference to enter the evangelistic work, was unanimously recommended for readmission to the Annual Conference. Brother A. M. Mayo will, no doubt, give the Advocate a full report of the Conference, as he was the efficient Secretary, so for fear of infringing on his right I will abstain with this.

Brother Carley, my beart is made sad, as I write this—a press dispatch has announced the sad news of the death of Brother J. B. Fulton, our pastor at Franklinton. In the death of Brother Fulton I feel especially touched, as he was admitted on trial in the Conference held at Lake Charles in 1904, in a class of thirteen, the writer being a member of that class. My heart is sad; "a prince in Israel has fallen," and a splendid itinerant minister has gone to his reward. May God's consoling grace be with the dear wife and children, and other relatives he has left to mourn his sad departure.

A. RUFUS HOFFPAUIR.

FROM OAK RIDGE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: If you will kindly grant us so much space in the columns of the Advocate, I shall gladly sound a note from Oak Ridge charge. In beginning, I shall state that we are delighted with the prospects, which are looming; and we are rejoiced to be in the hands of such kindly and appreciative people.

On the occasion of our first quarterly conference at Oak Ridge Church on Saturday, the 21st ult., we had a joyful and eventful season of refreshing; our hearts were warmed and animated by manifest evidences of interest in matters appertaining to the Kingdom of God. For this interest as shown by oneness of spirit and liberality of means, we are profoundly grateful.

Brother J. R. Jones, our honored and beloved presiding elder, came to us with his characteristic magnetic charm and winning spirit. He preached clear-cut, heart-stirring sermons both Saturday and Sunday at the usual hours to somewhat small but anxious congregations of inviting hearts. He faced his audience with a poise which always proves him equal to the occasion, and gains for him a prominent place in the hearts of all those who see and hear, and thus learn to know him.

Due to prospects of inclement weather, and the terrifying fear of influenza, which had already caused the suspension of the agricultural high school at Oak Ridge, many who otherwise would have attended these services were not able to do so, although the intense interest and kindly spirit of those present proved their devotion to the cause.

The assessment for ministerial support, notwithstanding the loss of some of the most liberal church supporters of the charge, shows quite an increase over that of former years. We acknowledge our indebtedness to our well-loved predecessor, Brother J. A. Wells, for the "running start" he has given us in the matter of raising money to be expended on material with which to repair the age-worn parsonage. Our plans are now well under way; and we hope shortly to finish the job of "making over" a nice preacher's home.

For any degree of success, for these generous-spirited folk, and for all kind providences, we hereby announce our gratitude.

TO RELIEVE CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy, and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial. A SERIOUS SITUATION—AND A SUGGESTION.

There is such a stirring in the church as we have never known before. One needs only to read the Conference organs, or engage in conversation with ministers and laymen, singly or in groups, to realize that there is a restlessness, a longing, a vague uneasiness, a yearning, a fear, a hope—we hardly know what to call it—that cannot be localized, no matter what local situations may be cited in explanation.

We are inclined to believe that this situation is due, to some extent at least, to a new sense of the value of spiritual things and to a renewed sensitiveness on the part of the world to spiritual influences. The cataclysmic happenings of the past four years have broken up men's souls, and they are beginning to "look to the hills, whence cometh their help." They are talking about a revival of religion, and countless thousands of devout men and women are working and praying for it with the conviction that it alone can save the world from a moral catastrophe.

But along with this spiritual unrest, if we may so term it, there is a feeling in many quarters that the work of the church in relation to its great constructive program is not properly co-ordinated, and that a state almost bordering on confusion is likely to arise unless a way can be found properly to correlate the interests that are of the utmost importance and that are insistently demanding attention. Especially is this feeling making itself felt in connection with proposed plans to meet the financial requirements of our great church-wide enterprises. Upon sober reflection, we need not be surprised that such is the case. All our people are familiar with the following facts:

By the action of the General Conference, the first two years of the present quadrennium were set apart for the cultural and financial campaign of the Centenary Movement, culminating in the securing of pledges for the adequate support of our missionary work. The history of that campaign is one of the glorious pages in the history of the church. A wonderfully efficient organization was perfected, the opportunity and the responsibility of the church were laid upon the hearts and consciences of the people, their enthusiastic co-operation was enlisted, and the magnificent sum of $50,000,000, in round numbers, was secured, payment to run through a period of five years, for carrying out a comprehensive plan of missionary endeavor.

By the action of the same General Conference, the last two years of the present quadrennium were set apart for a campaign, cultural and financial, in behalf of our educational institutions. Under the direction of the General Board of Education, the campaign is being organized, and a "drive" for $25,000,000 is being planned for next year.

For many years there has been a growing conviction that the church could not be true to itself without making adequate provision for the support of its superannuate ministers. From time to time steps have been taken toward the meeting of that crying need, and some progress has been made; but the goal is still far from being reached, and we cannot afford to put off very much longer a definite movement to secure at least $10,000,000 for this cause.

There are other interests of the church which have not been specifically provided for by any co-operative, church-wide movement, but for which we must make provision in the near future if we would keep pace with the legitimate demands that are being made upon us as representatives of a great body of Christian people. Hospitals and orphanages are peculiarly church enterprises, and they must be included, sooner or later, in some comprehensive plan for their support; the circulation of the periodical literature of the church is properly a subject for connectional provision; the work of religious education through the Sunday school is assuming proportions that would seem to demand in the near future ample financial backing. There are probably other connectional activities for which money must be provided.

With these facts in mind, let us glance at the situation as it exists in the minds of a great many of our people to-day. In the first place, the Centenary collections still have four years to run. While it is probably true that our people still have ample financial resources to meet all the just claims that may be made upon them, it is a fact, nevertheless, that a great many of them feel unable to make additional pledges until they have met the obligations already incurred. It is unthinkable that the Centenary pledges should not be paid; and the Centenary Commission, very properly, is going about the work of collecting these pledges in a very business-like and efficient way. We are not going to be allowed to forget, as we ought not to be, that we must pay what we owe.

In the second place, there is in immediate prospect a campaign for $25,000,000 for our educational institutions—no insignificant sum. This, of course, is in addition to the amount already pledged for the Centenary Movement, and the pledges to it will, presumably, run through a period of five years. This money, if secured at all, must be secured largely from those who are now paying their Centenary pledges.

In the third place, a campaign for the Superannuate Endowment Fund is inevitable. It ought to be made—it must be made—and the amount cannot conceivably be fixed at less than $10,000,000. The appeal for this fund will be made to those who have not finished paying the Centenary pledges, perhaps, and are still paying their pledges to the Educational Campaign.

In the fourth place, the other interests mentioned above will, sooner or later, make their appeals for support, and a succession of "drives" will inevitably follow.

In addition to the foregoing the benevolent collections are going on all the time—collections which are not included in any of the special pledges made or to be made, and which are of sufficient amount to loom large in the minds of many who, measured by any test, are liberal givers.

The psychology of the situation is evident. It is already affecting the mind of the church, and it is becoming more serious every day.. There are other considerations which will make exceedingly difficult the success of any great financial campaign at the present time. We believe the situation is serious enough to warrant the most careful consideration before any campaign is actually launched.

The Suggestion.

We venture to offer the following suggestion in view of the whole situation as it appears to us:

1. Postpone all financial campaigns until after the next General Conference, which will meet in May, 1922.

2. Let the General Conference appoint a commission under instructions to include in one campaign all the causes of the church which have a right to connectional support, the proceeds of the campaign to be shared upon an equitable basis to be agreed upon.

3. Consider the advisability of consolidating the collection of Centenary pledges with the collection of the pledges in the unified campaign, so as to avoid the duplication of collecting agencies.

4. Since practically all the connectional causes will be included in the campaign, eliminate the assessments for benevolences and provide for the support of our work in the future by systematic but voluntary offerings.

IN CONCRETE FORM.

We have, more than once, called attention to the alarming fact that our educational system is passing through a most critical period in its history because of the scarcity of teachers, brought about by insufficient salaries. It may be that our words have been passed lightly by, as an expression of opinion based upon vague rumors and unauthenticated statements; but we give herewith some figures, issued by the United States Bureau of Education, which more than bear out all we have had to say: "Based on returns from State school officials, on February 13, there were 18,279 schools closed because of lack of teachers; and 41,900 were being taught by teachers characterized as 'below standard, but taken on temporarily in the emergency.' Greater shortages are shown to exist in the Southern States than in any other part of the country." We have thus, in concrete form, a presentation of the problem that ought to cause us to give serious consideration to steps for an immediate solution. It is possible for us to continue our neglect of the education of our children and maintain our material prosperity, perhaps; but it is as certain as anything can be that we shall have to pay a heavy price in the deterioration of our citizenship in the future. If we confessedly and persistently think more of our money than we do of our children, very well; but we ought to know that we are "sowing the wind" in allowing our schools to remain closed because we are not willing to pay adequate salaries to those who are qualified to teach them. Unhappy the days when we "reap the whirlwind!"

BINDING AND LOOSING PRAYER.

By Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook.

This day we are called to prayer by the great leaders of our church, to spend much time alone with God in importunate prayer, praying and expecting a genuine revival of the old Methodist type, to follow our prayers which have been shot through with implicit faith and love in the Almighty God. If there were a revival of heavenly, fire-baptized prayer among the children of God, there would soon be a "revival" of old-time religion in our great church. We understand very little about praying intelligently to God for the thing wanted. It is opening out to many as a very specific work, as much as a "work" of preaching the gospel. Jesus never taught his disciples how to preach, only how to pray. He did not speak much of what was needed to preach well, but much of praying well. To know how to speak to God intelligently is more than knowing how to speak to man. Not power with men, but power with God is the first thing needful. Jesus loves to teach us how to pray. "Lord, teach us to pray." I heard Bishop Hendrix say at one of our Conference sessions, in his talk on prayer, that "prayer was preaching swapped around." For one to know how to impart God's message of full salvation to others, he must stay apart and alone with him in the prayer realm. Turn then to James 5:16, "The supplication of a righteous man availeth much in its working."

There are two aspects of answered prayer mentioned by James in connection with Elijah, to which Christ made reference when he was here on the earth, i.e., the binding and loosing of things on earth by prayer (St. Matthew 18:18). Elijah closed the heavens, and then he opened the heavens. In speaking of this power of specific prayer, the Lord Jesus said, "Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." The context clearly shows this to be the binding and loosing of prayer, for the Master went on to say, "If two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven." Then, too, "Ye have not, because ye ask not. Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your pleasures." He admonishes us to ask for what we want. "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you; for every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." "Ye shall receive, ye shall find, it shall be opened unto you," if your prayers are fraught with unfeigned faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. It is the earnest prayers of the saints which are as fire cast into the earth. Yes, and the prayers which "availeth much" are the prayers of righteous people. The reason for defectiveness and non-answered prayer is because we have not kept his commandments and done those things which are pleasing in his sight.

There is a work accomplished by prayer, but it must be the "supplication of a righteous man!" Not only righteous by imputed righteousness, but righteous in his attitude to sin, and in the personal life. This, I think, is an absolute condition for the prayer that works. The one who prays must live constantly in personal contact with God. The first question, therefore, is: If you want to understand and know prevailing prayer, are you living in personal contact with God? Do you want to live the victorious life? Then, you must live in personal contact with God.

We have come to the now in service, where as workers together for the Lord Jesus, we must get to a place of knowing Him fully; and knowing this kind of prayer will bring us where we can have audience with God. We have not yet reached that high pinnacle in the prayer-point that will meet to-day's need. "Elijah was a man of like nature with us," and "he prayed that it might not rain, and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months". He had power to close the heavens, yet he was a man of "like nature with us in this world of mutation." "He prayed that the heavens should not give rain, and it rained not." Then, simply, it is said, "And he prayed again, AND THE HEAVENS GAVE RAIN." I would have you to notice just at this point that that is all James says about such a tremendous thing. He does not eulogize Elijah. There is no trace of exaggeration or excess of language in the Holy Bible, but sober statements, with a calm, majestic omnipotence. When God does vast things, He does them quietly, just as He did in answer to the man who "prayed, and the heavens were opened, and gave forth rain," as much as to say, "What is possible to Elijah, is possible to you and to me." "Lord, teach us how to pray, in this age of rush and hurry."

From this brief glimpse at Elijah, let us look at another beautiful picture of the work of specific prayer, or rather, the prayer that really "works." Let us glance at Moses, and his "binding and loosing" work in Exodus, Chapter 17. Israel is in desperate need of water, and in that need they begin to upbraid Moses, saying "Moses brought us out of Egypt, now let him give us water to slake our thirst." What did Moses do at this crucial moment? Moses went to God with it. "He cried to the Lord" for the needs of the people, and then the Lord told him what to do, just to go out to a certain rock, and "I will stand before you, and you shall strike the rock, and it shall bring forth water." Moses did it, and there was abundance of water. In this aspect of prayer to meet the people's need, I would have you note especially Moses' cry, and God's ready response. "Ye have not, because ye ask not."

In the same chapter we have another aspect of specific prayer altogether. Amalek came against Israel in an attack. What did Moses do? He did not "cry" to the Lord then, but taking the rod of God in his hand, he went to the hillside, and lifted his hands, whilst Joshua went down in the valley to fight the foe. And it came to pass, when Moses held up his hand, that Israel prevailed: and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed. We might say: "Moses, why don't you go and fight down there?" But he would probably reply: "I am fighting—Joshua is dealing with flesh and blood down there, but I am dealing with something else up here. I have the rod of God in my hand." And in that position of unbroken resistance, Moses had to remain steady and true until victory was achieved. It was not such an easy task as his work of supplication, when he cried, "Lord, give them water:" for it meant prolonged suffering on his part to endure until the victory was gained completely. We note at the end of the chapter the key to Moses' action is given in the words, "The Lord is my banner!" In lifting his hands with the rod of God, Moses was lifting a victorious banner against the unseen foes.

It is a striking picture of the two aspects of the work of specific prayer. In Elijah you see the binding and loosing power of his prayer for a whole land, and in Moses you see the "binding" of the enemy's power, and the loosing of water for the needs of the Lord's people.

We have not fully understood the possibilities of this mighty work of prayer. Prayer to many is something to be done when there is a bit of time free, and even then but rarely. But prayer is a definite work, greater and vaster in its issues, and greater than any other service to be done on the earth, if the soul understood how to pray. "Lord, teach us how to pray effectively."

S. D. Gordon says: "We haven't time. Life is so crowded it must be taken from something else, something important, but still less important than this, the important thing must be sacrificed to the more important." Perhaps had we learned the secret, we would know that prayer is a great time saver, that the more work that any day has to do, the more time must be spent in prayer preparation for the work. We would not lose time by it; we would save time by it. For "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength, they shall mount up with wings as eagles, they shall run and not be weary, they shall walk and not faint?"

We ought to ask great things and expect great things from his hand. God is far more willing to bless us than we think he is. If we really wish an ingathering of precious souls in our own church this year, let us ask for it, and get our people to asking for it; let us expect it and get our people to expecting it. God will honor our prayers and our faith when we put our all in his hands. If we use the means, and do our full duty, it is as sure as God is God and that his word is truth, that we shall never be disappointed in our work. I can think of nothing so blessed as to pray and feel that the heavens are bending low and that, however careless men may be, there is quenchless interest in heaven in our behalf. "Lord Jesus, teach us to pray."

"My God! is any hour so sweet,
From blush of morn to evening star,
As that which calls me to Thy feet—
The hour of Prayer?

"Lord! till I reach that blissful shore,
No privilege so dear shall be,
As thus my inmost soul to pour
In prayer to thee."

Montrose, Miss.

OUR LOSS IN MEMBERSHIP.

By Dr. Frank M. Thomas, Book Editor.

From the statistics reported to our office for the General Minutes it is apparent that our church had during the past year a net loss of between nine and ten thousand members. Knowing the large inaccuracy that exists in our Annual Conference statistics, we might be able to account for such a loss by poor book-keeping, did not a loss of 55,000 members face the Methodist Episcopal Church. In a recent number of Zion's Herald, my good friend, Dr. Blake, attempts to account for this grave loss by pointing out the large death rate of last year through war losses and the epidemic of influenza. But we are faced with the fact that the Canadian Methodist Church in spite of heavier comparative losses through the war and a similar epidemic records a small net gain for the past two years! Unquestionably the fact that our churches were closed for several weeks in the fall of 1918 and the fact that during the spring of 1919 our preachers and laymen were enlisted in the Centenary drive for millions had its effect upon the usual ingathering of members. On the other hand, had both churches been functioning as the body of Christ ought to function as living organisms in close touch with their Risen Head and therefore endued with mighty spiritual power, it is safe to assert that the ingathering of souls would have been marked by many thousands. The Centenary was a great and providential movement, and was accompanied by unusual spiritual glow, but it revealed the fact that the pastor alone is supposed to be responsible for the salvation of souls. In a pastorate of twenty-five years I saw but very few members who seemed burdened with a desire to bring men and women to Christ. Occasionally a church would get stirred to this in a revival, but the stir would soon pass.

Such indifference on the part of our membership to the "dead souls" all about them is sure evidence that our churches are not truly functioning as "the body of Christ." "If ye abide in Me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what will, and it shall be done unto you. Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; this is the test of discipleship."

Now while this fruit bearing refers primarily to their growth in grace and spiritual virtues and power, it also unquestionably refers to the bringing of other souls into contact with Him. "Neither pray I for these alone but for them also which shall believe on me through their word." Every soul truly grafted into the infinite life of Jesus and holding close to Him must needs earnestly desire the same relation for every other soul. Therefore the supreme question for our church to-day is whether our vast membership of more than two millions is grafted into Christ. Now the art of grafting in the plant world is most skillful and interesting. There are single apple trees that have been so grafted that they bear several different kinds of apples, and trees fruit through a long season. But the art of soul grafting, or "the cure of souls," is a much more delicate and skillful task. In fact, to become an expert it requires a synthesis of mental, emotional, moral and spiritual energies such as is not demanded in any other profession. The Son of God spent most of His brief ministry in developing this synthesis in twelve men. Yet to take mental energy alone, I was recently told by one of the representatives of the Publishing House that in trying to persuade our preachers to buy good books the common answer is, "I don't have time to read them."
